LSC
336.171

3 1430 02937391 9
a31430029373919b
UNIV. OF MD. COLLEGE PARK

PRESENTED BY
Colorado W. C. T. U.

From the library of Mrs Ursula D. Hurricks
Presented by the Executor of her Estate.

MRS. HISKEY

PRESENTED BY
Colorado W. C. T. U.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 1.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 2, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: A Happy New Year—Eighteen Hundred Ninety—Jamaica Ginger Drunkards 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The New Year, by Horatio Nelson Powers—Why He Signed the Pledge, by Mrs. Harriet A Cheever—Social Progress, by Rev. John Bascom, D. D.—Penny Wisdom, by Felix L. Oswald—Temperance Temple Items, by Matilda B. Carse 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Hillsboro Crusade Celebration—Our Round-the-World Missionary—Labor Convention—Scientific Temperance Books 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The Old Year—The New Year—Grandma's Story—The Child's Rebuke 6
THE PRAYER-MEETING: Topic for the Week Beginning January 5, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The Christmas of My Soul—Busy Women and the W. C. T. U.—Physical Training for Women 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: A Stroll With the Girls 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Jamaica, West Virginia, Iowa, Indiana Missouri, Wyoming, Pennsylvania—News in a Nutshell—Notices 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Department for Promotion of Social Purity—Railroad Department 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Advices from Zanzibar state that Emin Pasha is rapidly recovering.

Fourteen women are elected county school superintendents in Iowa for 1890-92.

The Empress of Brazil died suddenly at Oporte, Portugal, Saturday, of heart disease.

His Majesty, Carlos I., was formally proclaimed King of Portugal, at Lisbon, on December 28.

Disastrous floods in Southern California Christmas day, destroyed railroad bridges and delayed trains to a very inconvenient extent.

Governor Larrabee, of Iowa, is presenting strong arguments in the large cities of his state in favor of the maintenance of the prohibitory law.

Hon. William E. Gladstone celebrated his eightieth birthday very quietly on the 29th ult., notwithstanding the fact that congratulatory telegrams and letters poured in upon him from all parts of the world.

Dr. Norman Kerr, of London, testifies to the enormous decrease that has taken place in the consumption of alcoholic liquors in workhouses in England, which, on the whole, has been accompanied by an increased length of life and better discipline and health.

The Brewers' Journal published a list of thirty-three American breweries that have been bought by English syndicates at a total cost of $45,000,000. These transfers, if they have any effect upon prohibition, will be favorable to it, since voters, legislators and judges who might hesitate to coöperate in the destruction of the traffic if the loss were incurred by their own countrymen, will hardly be so sympathetic toward foreign capitalists.

THE death of Henry W. Grady of the Atlanta Constitution, deprives American journalism of one of its brightest stars. Possessing talents rivaling those of George W. Curtis, he was, at thirty-eight, far up the path of fame. As an orator he was not less gifted than as a writer. His speech at the New England dinner, two years ago, took Boston by storm. The annual feast was this year turned into an occasion of mourning by the telegram announcing his death. He was found upon the right side of every reform. His speeches for prohibition during the local option campaigns in Atlanta, are among the most convincing ever uttered. North and South mourn together for this brilliant young man of letters.

WE have purposely refrained from giving space to any opinion of Judge Brewer's fitness or unfitness for the Supreme Bench, until confirmation by Congress should make his appointment certain. It is a remarkable selection, unless the object be to revolutionize the Supreme Court, as his decisions have been overruled by the higher judiciary almost as often as appeal has been made. His attitude toward prohibition in his own state cannot fail to excite distrust among Prohibitionists. It is safe to say his appointment is no more acceptable to the country at large than was that of Judge Lamar, for which the Cleveland administration was so severely censured. It is to be fervently hoped that it may prove as satisfactory, and that Judge Brewer may break his previous record by casting his vote, as the occasion offers, against the greatest enemy of law and order.

A CHRISTMAS dinner that was thoroughly enjoyed and ended in good resolutions, which, if kept, will be the means of redeeming many a sin-sick soul, was given in Faneuil Hall, Boston, by George Parker, whose "varying fortunes" have acquainted him with the common dreariness of Christmas day to the unfortunates of life. Upwards of a thousand were bountifully fed, and afterward listened to the reading of the "prodigal son" and a strong temperance address, which induced three hundred and thirty of the outcast men to sign the pledge for a year. It was a literal going out into the highways and hedges, and the response to the spiritual part of the menu shows these outcasts not wholly lost to better influences, and should encourage more such effort.

IT was a group of happy Prohibitionists that assembled in the office of Governor Miller, of North Dakota, on the afternoon of December 19, to witness the new governor's signature to the Prohibition Bill. The bill was signed at three o'clock with an eagle-quill pen expressly prepared for the purpose. Those present were Charles D. Pollock, president of the state non-partisan Prohibition Alliance; Mrs. Linda W. Slaughter, state superintendent of press work; Senator Rowe, chairman of the Senate Committee on temperance; Senator Smith and Representative Haugen, chairman of the House Committee on temperance. With such staunch friends to protect and support the new bill, we may confidently expect its thorough enforcement.

EVERY year finds the old world rising toward that sense of universal brotherhood which must characterize the promised reign of good will. A happy illustration of this was furnished last week by Rev. Dr. Gray of the Interior, who "made a feast," and went out into the highways and hedges of Christian journalism and compelled the editors to come in. The dinner was a great success. The after dinner was greater. Such electric display of wit rarely, if ever, brightened the press heavens as that produced by these Northern lights of religious journalism. It is impossible to give any idea of the good things said. THE UNION SIGNAL was represented by Miss Julia Ames, on the topic assigned her, "Woman's Signal Service."

HON. HENRY W. AUSTIN, of this city, the Christian gentleman, the noble philanthropist, the stanch Prohibitionist, is not, for God has taken him. We sit dumb before the Lord in this hour of our great loss. We say our loss, for the W. C. T. U. had no warmer friend, no more generous helper than this royal brother whom we mourn. The Central Union of Chicago received from him about two hundred dollars a year for the support of its various lines of work—and he also paid $100 toward the local expenses of our last National W. C. T. U. Convention. He joined the Prohibition party during the campaign of 1884, and was to the day of his death an earnest defender of the principles embodied in that party's platform. In 1886 he ran for state treasurer, and in 1888 held the position of chairman of the Prohibition State Committee for several months. At the time of his death he was treasurer of the Central Committee, and also a member of the Executive Board. Our prayers and tenderest sympathies go out to the bereaved and invalid wife, and to the son and daughter so terribly stricken by this awful sorrow.

Do not be afraid of agitation. A famous preacher was once remonstrated with for his proclivities in this direction, when he turned to the objector with: "What good was ever done in the world without agitation? We cannot even make butter without it!" A homely but forcible illustration. History records the deeds of famous agitators, and the fact that we live to-day in such a wide-awake condition of things in civil and religious affairs, is due largely to those heroic souls who never consented to the death of anything but sin, for stagnation is death. Emphatically is this true of our advanced temperance workers. Their war cry is, "Prohibition of the liquor traffic"—and, as ever of old, the faint-hearted take fright and deprecate this "undue excitement." In the midst of the commotion during the evolution of thought and the revolution of forces, heads will bump against heads, hearts will jostle hearts, and good people will seem to be at cross purposes, but fear not; let the "churning" go on. Out of the captured cream of public thought will come the golden gleam of condensed public opinion to give relish and flavor to the many dishes of the mental bill of fare of the president, or to the dry crust of ideas of the peasant. There is nothing more to be dreaded than stagnation, nothing more hopeful than agitation.

THE organized robbery known as the Louisiana State Lottery, is receiving richly deserved attention from the present administration. President Harrison began to receive petitions and memorials in regard to it immediately after his inauguration. Mr. B. F. Joubert, an ex-treasurer of Louisiana, explained the character of the concern, its enormous profits, and its influence in local politics. It became a topic for the pulpit, and finally there came a petition signed by every clergyman in New Orleans, setting forth the injury caused by the lottery, and appealing to the national authorities for relief. We are glad to see that the President's message called attention to the evil and invoked the aid of Congress in suppressing it. Pursuing this recommendation, Senator Wilson, of Iowa, has introduced a bill denying the use of the mails to any newspaper containing any notices or advertisements of lotteries. The keen lance of the Post-office Department is set for attack, Postmaster-General Wanamaker having given warning in his report where he should strike; and now Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, brings forward another bill providing for forfeiture of charter of every National Bank in New Orleans which is mentioned in the lottery advertisements, or on their tickets as guaranteeing the payment of prizes. The argument in support of this bill is that the banks being national institutions, by their participation in the lottery, implicate the government in a gambling scheme. This ground is well taken and we trust the fifty-first Congress will wipe off this blot upon the civilization of Louisiana.

AND now we await most hopefully the action of this Congress toward the perennial petition of the National Temperance Society, which is sure to be presented during the session. We shall expect to see it supported by congressmen of North and South, by cabinet officers, and by the President himself. What else can consistently be done? Certainly there can be no doubt about the suppression of the saloon being a national issue, since the national authorities are becoming concerned in the depravity of a single corporation, having at most only state license and protection. Nations follow the same line of reform as individuals. When a man renounces dice and the jack pot, wine and the beer mug must go, too, for it is well known that gambling and drinking are allied vices. The government cannot consistently refuse "a hand" in the Louisiana lottery, and at the same time share the profits of every saloon in the land.

THE first anniversary of the Nationalist Club excited much attention, even in Boston, where a new movement never fails to get a hearing. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, the president, in his address, cited the old proverb about the best government being the one which governs least, and defined Nationalism as "purer government in cities, stronger government in states, and the omnipotence of the people in the nation." Mr. Edward Bellamy made the great speech of the occasion. For arrangement of facts in such sequence as to show the "logic of events," it was a masterpiece. He pointed out the way in which concentration of wealth is closing the avenues of business advancement; so that the only place for the aspiring young man is in the party of social reform. His argument for the nationalism of the telegraph and telephone, upon the ground of their being agents for the dissemination of intelligence, was unique. It will readily be seen that this places them in the category of "educational institutions," to be not only fostered but controlled in the interests of all the people. Upon temperance, Mr. Bellamy commits nationalism to no middle path. He said: "Nationalists believe that the evils of intemperance have their roots in the brutalizing conditions of existing society, in the poverty of the masses, their gross ignorance, their misery and despair, in the slavish dependence of women and children upon men, and in the interest of a large class of tradesmen in the sale of intoxicants. They believe that the abolition of poverty, the universality of the best educators, the complete enfranchisement of women, with a system of distribution which will destroy all motive for stimulating the demand for intoxicants, are at once the most radical and the most promising lines of true temperance reform."

NL7985

Contributed.

THE NEW YEAR.

BY HORATIO NELSON POWERS.

A flower unblown; a Book unread;
A Tree with fruit unharvested;
A Path untrod; a House whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes;
A Landscape whose wide border lies
In silent shade 'neath silent skies;
A wondrous Fountain yet unsealed;
A Casket with its gifts concealed:—
This is the Year that for you waits,
Beyond To-morrow's mystic gates.

Oh may this Flower unfold to you
Visions of beauty sweet and new;
This Book on golden pages trace
Your sacred joys and deeds of grace.
May all the fruit of this strange Tree
Luscious and rosy-tinted be;
This Path through fields of knowledge go;
This House with love's content o'erflow;
This Landscape glitter with the dew
Of blessed hopes and friendships true;
This Fountain's living crystal cheer,
As fail the springs that once were dear;
This Casket with such gems be stored
As shine in lives that love the Lord.

WHY HE SIGNED THE PLEDGE.

BY MRS. HARRIET A. CHEEVER.

Capt. John Appleton was a large-hearted, jovial man, generous, honest, and with a will like an adamantine wall. You might coax, entreat or storm, but once Captain Appleton had determined on a thing or "got his will sot," as his old Aunt Cynthy used to say, you might as well spend your coaxing, entreaties or storming on the kind of wall just referred to, as to try turning the captain from a set purpose.

It was toward the close of the year, and the captain was taking special satisfaction in frequent allusions to the near approach of the New Year's Day, when it was his custom to give nice presents to the beloved members of his household. He used to say that other folks might make all the presents at Christmas time they chose to, but for his part he thought it was a grand, good way to begin a New Year by giving things around to make other people happy.

For the last few years Captain Appleton had given up following the sea although still retaining shipping interests of considerable importance, being part owner of one vessel and interested in the trading operations of one or two others.

His family consisted of himself and wife, one son, a bright young collegian, and Aunt Cynthy Appleton, a kind old auntie who had befriended him in earlier years and really brought him up; now, in turn, he acted toward her the part of a filial son.

For some years back, Mrs. Appleton had felt an increasing anxiety concerning her easy-going husband, with his pleasant, determined disposition, and for the last two years in particular, she had experienced growing solicitude lest one strong, dominant habit should eventually master the man who had ably lorded it over many a rough ship's crew and sailed without fear over many a stormy sea. For rarely could a fine ship enter the harbor of the seaport town but there would be a jollification on board, and Captain Appleton, popular with all his large circle of sea-faring friends, would come home very late at night, or very early in the morning, in a condition which it became his wife's constant study to conceal from Jack's gay glance or Aunt Cynthy's shrewd observation. It was the one consideration which reconciled her to having her precious boy away, as it put off the evil day when he should learn of his indulgent father's deplorable failing.

Mrs. Appleton felt that her strongest argument had failed her, when after having implored her husband time and again to break away from his fatal habit and sign the pledge for Jack's sake, he laughingly declared that a good drink of good liquor hurt no man, and he didn't care anything about having a brave boy like Jack turn out a mere milk sop. "Water's a very good thing to sail ships in," he would say, then smack his lips and add, "but I like the concentrated strength and flavor of foreign vintages altogether too well to drink utterly tasteless stuff. Catch an old salt like me sipping Adam's ale—bah!" and up would go his features into an expression of ludicrous contempt.

Two days before New Year's, and the "Ocean Queen," the partly owned vessel, was lying at the dock already unloaded, the outgoing and incoming passages having been attended with great success.

That afternoon, Captain Appleton was to receive a large sum of money, his share of the profits, and was also to dine in the ship's cabin with the captain and several special friends. He went about during the morning multiplying hints of the rich gifts so nearly forthcoming; he told himself gleefully that Aunt Cynthy—bless her soul—should greet Jack when he appeared on New Year's morn in the most astonishing cap and shoulder shawl to be found in the great, wide city, to say nothing of a neat little bag of pin money stowed away in her deep pocket.

Jack, dear boy, should have the gold watch and chain, long promised. As for wife,—well, wife should have a big, fat check, and she might go and roll herself in seal-skin from neck to heels if she wanted to, and the captain chuckled aloud at the pleasing reflection.

But all that morning, Mrs. Appleton was nervous and uneasy.

"Mattie's got a fit of the fidgets," said Aunt Cynthy, with a kindly, side-long look at the restless lady. "I s'pose she kind o' aches to see Jack, now the time's so near."

After dinner, Mrs. Appleton took occasion to see her husband alone.

"Oh, John," she began, her voice changed with tearful earnestness, "I beg of you to be prudent to-day. If you receive the money you expect to, won't you please bring it home and let me put it away before you go aboard the 'Ocean Queen'? It isn't that I care so much for the money only," she hastened to add, "but you know the hours are usually very late when you dine aboard ship; there are waiters and deck hands around, and you grow careless after feasting; I know this from what you have told me yourself. We are not rich enough not to feel the loss of so large a sum of money, and I am not only afraid you might be robbed, but think how often men are injured seriously, and even fatally, for the sake of what they carry.

"Oh my dear!" she broke out impetuously, "if only you would promise me to sit down and let the captain's wines alone just this once, I would never forget to thank you—oh, please, John, just this once!"

Mrs. Appleton knew well that her husband regarded a promise as sacredly as his own honor, and once exact any kind of a sober assurance from him in the right direction and she could set her heart at rest. Hot tears had rushed into her eyes as she concluded her urgent appeal, but the captain only patted her shoulder caressingly as he replied lightly,

"Come, Mattie, don't be foolish, my girl; just you wait until I come home to-night and see what a jolly New Year's we'll have."

"But won't you bring the money home first?" persisted his wife. "I'd feel so much easier for you if you would, if any one should rob you—"

Her husband interrupted her, just a touch of asperity in his tones: "I don't admit yet, my dear, any inability to take care of myself and guard my own earnings; and as to any one being smart enough to rob me with impunity, if any one can get my wallet away without my knowing it, he's welcome to it, but when that time comes I shall be perfectly willing to go for an idiot and sign the temperance pledge."

He paused a moment as if debating whether it was a safe thing to say, then he repeated with his accustomed tone of determination,

"Yes, I promise you, if ever I'm imbecile enough to let myself be robbed, I'll go sign the temperance pledge forthwith! So don't worry about me, little woman, you see I'm all correct."

And he was gone. All the afternoon Mrs. Appleton was oppressed with a sense of foreboding. Aunt Cynthy's keen senses led her to suspect something was troubling her, and she tried in her brooding, motherly way to say little reassuring things. As evening came on, Mrs. Appleton felt more depressed than ever, but did her best to assume a cheerful air, in which effort she partly succeeded.

Aunt Cynthy went as usual early to bed. The plantation songs which Clemmis, the rollicking black cook, had been trolling out all the evening ceased, as the contented creature went lumbering to her room. Then Mrs. Appleton sat alone, resolved not to retire until her husband was safely housed.

The hours wore slowly away until the little deep-toned French clock struck twelve. Another half-hour crept away, during every minute of which a goading desperation was gaining strength in the poor wife's heart. At length as the half hour chime struck she arose, saying to herself in a suppressed tone, "I cannot and will not bear this strain any longer."

Outside, the rain was falling steadily, but going softly to her room, Mrs. Appleton donned a heavy rubber coat, then covering her bonnet and face with a thick veil, and taking her latch key, she slipped out into the wintry night. Despite the rain and slush it was a relief to be going somewhere. Like many other persons of a nervous temperament, physical fear was not one of Mrs. Appleton's characteristics; she felt no sense of danger as she walked rapidly along the well-lighted streets towards the docks. Her way lay through a little park, and when about mid-way across, she saw a man enter from the farther gate, his steps unsteady, and his head bent down. In another direction she saw the high helmet and sturdy stride of a policeman. Involuntarily the lady felt a sudden inclination to conceal herself, and as a long iron bench was close at hand, she stooped behind it, glad of its seeming shelter. The heavy steps of her husband came doggedly on until on reaching the bench he sank heavily down as if unable to go farther, and in a moment more the loud, peculiar breathing of an inebriated man, told of the deep slumber into which he had fallen.

Mrs. Appleton got slowly up, and as she did so, she noticed the outside pocket of his great coat had sagged as he sat down, and there plainly visible in the gas light, lay his wallet, bulging at the sides with the fullness of its contents. Without stopping to think for an instant, she obeyed a sudden impulse, took the wallet and transferred it to her own pocket, then watched breathlessly a moment to see if the sleeper stirred. But the thick, noisy breathing went steadily on.

What should she do next? Perhaps it helped her, that on turning her head she saw the helmet and brass-buttoned coat of the policeman close at hand. She walked deliberately towards him, paused as he came up, and said in the voice of a cultured lady,

"I wish, sir, you would induce the gentleman yonder to go home; his friends, I know, are very anxious about him. I hardly dared to arouse him,"—and she was off and away.

Mrs. Appleton, in dressing sack and slippers, was arranging her hair for the night, when she heard the familiar sound of some one fumbling with a latch key at the front door. She went quickly down and admitted her husband who she thought looked as though something might have sobered him considerably.

He looked very grave as he said, pensively,

"Evening, Mattie; sh'd think respec'ble folks be'n bed by thish time." He seemed to feel a slight desire to retrieve himself and clear his thick speech as he added, "I'd like a tumpler of Adam's ale, if you pleash!"

Mrs. Appleton went good naturedly to the dining-room and brought a tumbler of water, and setting it on the hall table left her boozy lord to help himself as best he could.

Next day, the one before New Year's, Captain Appleton was shockingly depressed. He always slept off the effects of drinking in a few hours, so his wife knew it was no after effects of the late feast which tried him. To her kindly inquiries if his head ached, he came more nearly snapping out a savage reply than ever before, as he informed her his head was all right, she needn't worry herself about him anyway.

A little later, Clemmis informed her mistress with sundry mysterious nods and winks that "Mas'r done got a mis'ry somewhar; 'pears like to me it's took him in de heart," she added with a lugubrious sniffle.

Aunt Cynthy was very quiet, a sure sign she sighted something wrong and didn't know what to say. Truth was, the unhappy captain was twisting and casting about in his mind how he could get out of having lost such a sum of money without his wife's finding it out. Not for anything would he have her know it. And yet, what could he do about Jack's gold watch and chain, and other expected New Year's gifts.

More than a dozen times during the quiet morning, Mrs. Appleton felt inclined to confess the whole affair, but the time had not quite come, the captain must say something first to lead up to it.

Soon after dinner, Mrs. Appleton went to her room to dress for the afternoon, and her husband followed her. "Wife," he began, "what do you think of my taking money from the bank with which to get Jack a watch and chain? I've led the lad to expect he would have one to-morrow, and I hate awfully to disappoint him."

"Why, I thought," answered his wife, quickly, "you was to receive your portion of the 'Ocean Queen's' profit yesterday. I surely wouldn't take money from the bank if that has failed to come to hand."

"Well, things haven't come out as I expected," he replied. "I hardly know where I am."

"Then I should postpone getting the watch," she answered promptly.

"There were other things I'd set my heart on doing," added the captain, dejectedly; but he failed to add in his iron way,—and I can not give up what I've resolved upon.

"Oh, well," began Mrs. Appleton, stoutly, "you know we're not rich, and if the money fails to come for a while, it certainly would be very impolitic to take anything from the bank for mere presents." Then she went on, not quite as stoutly, but speaking cheerily,

"I'm very happy in informing you that I've a wonderfully fine present for you; and I've decided to give it to you to-day."

"Oh, don't, pray, give me anything, Mattie," he al most groaned; "don't give me a sou's worth; I really should not want to accept it."

"Oh, but you must. I couldn't think of keeping it myself or of giving it to any one else," she said brightly, slipping open a drawer, and handing him a large package in white paper neatly tied with a pink cord. A short letter accompanied the gift, and opening it the captain read with bewilderment a few quoted words—

"If any one can get my wallet away without my knowing it, he's welcome to it; but when that time comes, I shall be perfectly willing to * * * sign the temperance pledge. Yes, I promise you, if ever I'm imbecile enough to let myself be robbed, I'll go sign the temperance pledge forthwith!" Then he slowly unwound his wallet.

"Wife, where did you get this?" he asked, his face such a ludicrous picture between shame and curiosity, that Mrs. Appleton laughed outright in spite of herself. Then she told him the whole story.

"Who knows these things beside yourself?" he asked.

"No one alive," she answered, her honest eyes looking straight into his. "Whether the policeman suspected who I was," she added, "I cannot tell."

"No," he replied, "I discovered my purse was gone before leaving the park, and the policeman thought you were some smart rogue who had made off with it. He started at once in pursuit, but took a direction opposite from our house, of course. I shall simply have to tell him it is found; I did caution him not to make any talk about it."

"Yes, but about the temperance pledge?" inquired Mrs. Appleton, a hopeful twinkle in her eye. "You know," she went on, more of pathos in her voice than she knew of, "it's hard for a true woman to go out alone after midnight and turn thief and spy and all that; it seems to me I ought to have protection, John, against such things, it really does."

"Great Heavens! You shall have it!" roared the captain, as if afraid to trust his strong voice to ordinary tones. "I never half realized before," he added in gentle tones, "to what straits strong drink would let a man bring himself and a good, brave wife; you know I've got a will like—an adamantine wall;" his wife smiled—"but I can get set it in a right direction as well as a wrong one, and I will sign the temperance pledge, little woman, this very day!"

And he did. The large check was duly drawn and presented to his wife the next morning, but better still, it was accompanied by a pledge stanchly signed by the youthful captain.

Aunt Cynthy looked almost young again in the amazing cap and shoulder shawl she received, and her pocket was heavy with a little steel bag full of change. Jack, bright, breezy and full of life, felt rich with the elegant gold watch and chain he sported.

Clemmis, with three new bandanas of orange and turkey red, with a dress of cashmere in colors to match, observed that she guessed "all dat ailed Mas'r de day before was tinkin' ob de money he'd dun parted wid;" and the captain with a merry chuckle whispered to his wife that the old servant had unconsciously hit the exact truth.

SOCIAL PROGRESS.

BY REV. JOHN BASCOM, D. D.

We cannot be too often reminded that the Kingdom of Heaven is to be built up on the earth, and must involve many changes of external relations in society, and also a profound renovation of its spirit. The two can proceed prosperously only together. Most good men are occupied and without criticism on our part—in maintaining and extending the lines of order already established. More purely, and with higher intervention of the divine Spirit, are these lines themselves reformed.

Two movements, indicating real renovating power, are conspicuous in recent years. Some tendencies looking to the overthrow of society and the loss of general organic force, as, for example, the rapid accumulation of wealth and social power in a few hands, have disguised progress and alarmed the philanthropic spirit. Yet, in compensation, there has been this distinct assertion of fresh constructive energy in two directions.

The first of these is what is known as the labor movement. It has awakened much opposition, fallen into some errors, and been looked on as anarchial by some good men; yet it is one of the most promising manifestations of new social force: one of the most needful assertions of rights, of the present century.

The Kingdom of Heaven must combine all in its universal prosperity. There is no more certain indication of weakness and wickedness than extreme poverty, extending well up into the working classes. The Kingdom of Heaven will drive back this darkness which so intermingles the elements of mischief, spiritual as well as physical. The most important renovating agencies usually arise beyond the conventional methods of doing good, and outside even of religious fellowship. They may be none the less a part of the work of the spirit of truth. The labor movement looks to a larger fellowship of men in the gifts of God, and prepares the way for a still higher fellowship in His grace. The world has been quite too easy in asserting a fellowship of grace, while making no provision for one of gifts. The inner and the outer, spirit and letter, can never be prosperously separated. Especially does the spirit perish if robbed of the forms which express it. It becomes, in the higher regions of faith, a doubtful form of words which beguile those who use them even more than those who listen to them. The labor movement, though much occupied with the letter, tends to re-invigorate the central precepts of faith, the love of God and the love of man. As a renovating power, therefore, full of intellectual correction, of social reconstruction, and, ultimately, of benign spiritual impulses, it marks a stage in the unfolding of the Kingdom of Heaven, and that far more than any progress of churches whose gains are expressed simply on their register rolls.

The second movement, wider and more reconstructive than the first, and in a large way concurrent with it, is the new position of influence which women are securing. Its most extended and visible expression is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The spiritual force of the race has, for a long time, been accumulating in the minds and hearts of women; but their restricted power rendered it only in a second degree valuable to the world. This relation is being changed. A true social reconstruction is rapidly taking place, for which many years of growth have prepared the way.

Women needed this wider experience, this more direct sense of power, for the completion of their own spiritual life. It is not too much to say—if we interpret wisely what we say—that religion itself has lost estimate somewhat, from being so closely associated with women. The feeling is natural, inevitable, and exactly that which falls to goodness in a world still ruled by force. Men are slow to apprehend the majesty and power of Christ. But, as a matter of fact, women were injured in the tone and compass of their spirituality by the narrowness and conventional character of their duties. We may magnify these duties as much as we please, we may dilate on the superior organic force of woman exercised in and through the household, yet, like all other duties, they require spontaneous expansion; they cannot be lined in successfully by dead limits. They are not to be transformed into window plants whose roots are crushed into pots, and whose blossoms adorn only the window-sill. A wider and more controlling experience was demanded, that women might understand all the out-goings of faith, all the conditions of influence, and might mingle in the public mind fear and reverence with affection. The least sense of weakness, the slightest feeling of contempt, are a sore abatement to the hold which women have and should have, by virtue of faith, on the minds of men. It is well to govern children, but the government soon lapses unless it unites itself to the government of men also. The ideal of womanhood has lacked strength. There must be tenacious, woody fibre in a plant that is to be sturdy as well as beautiful.

Still more did and does the world need the treasures of purity and affection—the honey in the flowers of society—which has been gathering for years under the peculiar experience of women. It has been a grievous loss, that the moment one stepped over the threshold, leaving the home behind him, he left with it so many of the more just and gentle sentiments which the world calls for in the business of life, and in its civic construction. We may set what formal value we choose on these domestic treasures, the market in which they purchase social salvation is the public square.

No great social movement has been more healthy and justly ordered than this one represented in the great organization of women, rapidly extending itself over the civilized world. Women have learned the need of more power by using beneficently the power they already have. They have been made ambitious of influence by seeing the infinite need of it. They have gathered various lines of control into their hands because they were lying unused about them. This is being led of God.

Especially do we think that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has done wisely in so quietly yet firmly affirming and maintaining its own counsels. It has not allowed current sentiment—the moment a reform yields itself to current sentiment it is caught in the wind—to decide for it what is partisan and what non-partisan action; what are wise ways and what are foolish ones in reform. They have struggled independently with their own sense of duty, and have, therefore, readily corrected mistakes and turned successes into victories. It may be doubted whether there is anywhere a more fresh, distinct and renovating power looking towards the kingdom of heaven than that represented in this movement of women, knit together in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The moment it shall allow the web of conventionalities, which so many are ready to cast, to be flung over it, its roarings will henceforth be those of a lion caught fast in a net.

Initial movements in the Kingdom of Heaven are never generally recognized. They cannot be from the nature of the case. They are too remote in their agencies from familiar means; too subversive in their tendencies of ordinary measures. One who, with the eye of a loving critic, overlooks the progress of society, will often attach most importance to efforts of whose utility the mass of men are still doubtful. The ingenious inventor gives little heed to the parts of the complicated machine which play smoothly. Pushing it forward to a better performance, he inquires which are the wheels that still bind, where is power expended to least advantage.

The two movements of which I have spoken are corrections under the Master's eye. One looks to the reduction of friction; the other, to a new application of force in the Kingdom of Heaven. Both are widening the fellowship of man with man, which is the outward expression of that kingdom; and deepening the sense of rightfulness, which is its inner force.

PENNY WISDOM.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD.

Among the strange chronicles of the Past, the historians of the Future will find no stranger tale than the account of a visit to the land of the Demon Worshipers. The natives of that remarkable country were blest with a fertile soil, and a climate so diversified as to suit immigrants from all parts of the globe. Their national territory was almost surrounded by seas that favored commerce, and at the same time protected them against the invasion of foreign enemies; but all those natural and political advantages were offset by the absurdities of their national infatuation.

Near the center of their land there was a cavern forming the gate of a bottomless chasm and exhaling clouds of noxious vapors potent enough to impair the vigor of the stoutest constitutions, and the clearness of the brightest intellect; but from immemorial times that cave of horrors had been the goal of countless pilgrims. Day and night they arrived from every part of the mania-stricken country, and to propitiate the demons of the nether world vast quantities of their best farm-produce were flung down into the insatiable gulf of the poison-pit. Multitudes of devotees tarried at the brink of the chasm, eagerly inhaling the nauseous fumes, while others tottered away, sickened in mind and body, but still regretting their inability to continue their acts of homage. The priests of the cavern collected the tribute of those votaries. Grain, fruits and grapes were poured over the brink of the pit in a continuous stream, gold and silver were flung down by sacksfull at a time, pennies snatched from the hands of starving children were flung in with the rest, and though a portion of the contributions was reserved for the support of the priests, the perpetuity of the sacrifices constituted an enormous drain upon the resources of the country, which in addition to the heavy tithe of the poison-worship, had to disburse large sums for the support of the wretches whose devotion had resulted in the total destruction of their health.

In spite of a fertile soil and a number of profitable industries, that land of infatuation could never attain a degree of prosperity sufficient to silence the clamor of numberless malcontents. Disease, vice and poverty claimed their victims by tens of thousands, and their laments stimulated the ingenuity of manifold reformers. Some of those plodding philanthropists proposed to relieve the distress of their countrymen by confiscating every acre of land, and collect the ground-rent by a host of government-stewards. Others wanted to modify the system of international traffic; one regenerator of the human race seriously proposed to subject every man, woman and child to the control of a government workhouse, and a large party clamored for the confiscation of all personal property and its equal distribution to all citizens regardless of the degree of their industry and intelligence. All those would-be redeemers demonstrated that the adoption of their plans would result in the saving of a certain quantum of pennies, but few troubled themselves about the countless pounds of gold, silver and farm produce that continued to be poured into the abyss of the poison-cave.

Yet is penny-wisdom and pound-folly not carried considerably further at this very era of the nineteenth century, in our own land and many other countries of Christendom whose scores of poison-caves yawn in every larger city and where the ministers of the poison-god collect his tribute at every cross-road? How shall we answer for the absurdity of wasting our time on by-play reforms, how can we hope for the dawn of a golden age as long as that monster-curse remains unabated? Land-tax? Agrarian amendments? Will it much matter if a government steward or the agent of a real-estate owner collects the rent of the land that pours millions of bushels of its best produce into the gulf of the poison-pit? Socialistic and financial equality? Will it benefit the Nation to equalize every citizen's ability to contribute to the support of the poison-vender or pay a nominal fine for kicking his wife and his helpless boy? Tariff-reform? Phenomenal increase of exports and imports? Well enough, after we have settled the question what proportion of those exports will be required to pay our national drink bill, or what percentage of the increased imports will consist of Bavarian lager beer and Jamaica rum. Gymnastic training-schools? First, please to explain if they are going to supersede beer-gardens, or if they will merely enable the votaries of Gambrinus to carry home a barrel of lager without the assistance of a drayman. National reform on the universal work-house plan? Will it make much difference if the sovereign citizen pays his rum bill with a "certified credit card," or rolls in a gutter constructed by a national committee of street improvements? Will hell-brot' distilleries do less mischief if managed on a joint-stock plan by a government inspector of scientific machinery?

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

Here is a plucky union, and its moving spirit is Mrs. M. E. Tifft. She writes that the Madison Avenue W. C. T. U. of New York City, numbers but eight or ten members. She has just sent a check for $18, of this $10.50 is for a Baby Band, which numbers 105. The balance is from mite-boxes. In a few months (for the union has not been organized but a short time), they have sent $61 towards a gift of $100, which they are determined to send to the building fund. Part of this money has been raised by the sale of fancy articles made by the loving hands of these women.

A letter has been received from Mrs. Marie Gaston, Deadwood, South Dakota, in which she sends an order for mite-boxes for her union; besides, she writes, they are adopting several other of the plans put forth in the Temple bulletin for raising $100 for the building fund. She says: "We hope to have the name of our little union somewhere in the Memorial Hall."

***

"Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel!" So may we in all truth exclaim in regard to the death of Hon. Henry W. Austin, of Chicago, the leading Prohibitionist of the state, if not of the West; a man of spotless character, high aims, indomitable perseverance, strong convictions of right and with courage to stand by his convictions. Some years ago, after becoming the possessor of a comfortable fortune earned by his own industry, he had the rare good sense to retire from business when in the prime of his powers, in order to devote himself to his family and the good of his fellowmen. We will leave to others to tell what this genial, generous man accomplished in his sixty rounded years. It pertains but to us in these items, to speak of his connection with the building of the Temple, in which he was much interested. After the incorporation of the Woman's Temperance Building Association, he was one of the first to subscribe for stock; he was also elected one of the directors. In the first inception of the work he was fearful it was too great an undertaking to be carried through; later, however, he became convinced of its feasibility, and only a few weeks ago he largely increased his subscription to the stock; he pledged, besides, to the building fund a gift of $1,000, thus becoming a member of the Thousand Dollar Band. It was but a few days ago, when in conversation with him about the Temple, that he expressed his admiration of the grandeur and importance of the undertaking, and of all it meant for the advan ement of the temperance cause. Alas! how little thought we then that the kindly eyes that looked into ours should never behold the great edifice completed, but who can doubt that from the glory of the Temple not made with hands, he will look down with deep sympathy upon the progress of the work he so kindly fostered by his influence and generous aid. Truly, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

***

We wish a happy New Year to all the dear readers of the Temple Items. We are sure it will make the year a happier one if all interested in the Temple will send to us for a mite-box, and between themselves and friends (if they feel it is too much for them to do alone) drop in a penny a day during 1890. A great many are now writing to us for mite-boxes for this purpose. Let our friends remember that it is the tithe they each can give that is going to build the great structure.

Here is a good brother that has the right spirit about the matter, Mr. James M. Parker, of Elkhart, Ind. He writes: "Please find inclosed postal order for $1.65, it represents the amount contained in Temple mite-box—result of putting in the pennies received as change; shall surely do more. If I live I want to have the joy (pleasure does not express enough) of knowing as I look at the great monument to woman's endeavors—the completed Temple—that there are a few dollars of mine built into its stone and mortar. God will bless you, and is doing so." Mrs. O. E. Hosford, of Sedan, Kansas, writes right to the point on the same subject; her example is one worthy to be followed in all Sunday-schools where there is a W. C. T. U. woman to speak for the cause. She says: "I have long desired to do something for the grand Temperance Temple, and I have now hit upon a plan that will help a little, I hope. In our Sabbath-school (Presbyterian) I requested that the collection taken on Temperance Sunday be given to the temperance work, and it was so decided by the school last Temperance Sunday; the collection was seventy-seven cents, and now I propose to send for a mite-box and put the collection in it each quarter for the Temple. In the course of the year it will amount to something, and I know every little helps. I do feel as though I wanted to have some part in the Temple, and although I cannot give a hundred dollars, I want to give my mite and help along the glorious cause."

***

The following letter shows the interest the children are talking in filling the mite-boxes. Mrs. E. T. Blackman, of Moosic, Pa., to whom several mite-boxes were sent, writes in regard to the disposition of them; we will only give that part of her letter which refers to her own family. She says: "The Temple mite-boxes received. I pledged three cents a day when I sent for them: one cent for myself and one for each of my little boys. When the boxes came the boys were rejoicing over a little baby sister, and they wanted to give a penny a day for her, too. I told them we could not afford four cents a day (for we are poor people), but Frank, my oldest boy, said, 'When sister is a big woman like you, and goes to Chicago and sees the beautiful Temperance Temple, she will be very sorry if she didn't help build it with her pennies;' and then he asked, 'How many days is sister old?' and when I told him five days, he ran away for his money, and put five cents in a box for little sister. Instead of using four boxes we put two cents a day in each box." We return Frank our hearty thanks, and hope there will be many more such little benefactors raised up for the Temple.

***

Mrs. H. N. I. Newton, of Kelseyville, Col., who is a teacher, in sending for a mite-box says: "Please send circular telling all about the Temple; I want to present the subject to my pupils. I want the Temple mite-box to take to school and keep on my table. I will see that it gets a cent a day or more for a year. It seems to me this will be a standing lesson in temperance, which we are required to teach in our public schools." Our good brother, Albert C. Scott, of the New York Witness, sends for a mite-box. He says: "I want it for my office desk. I'll drop something into it, and try to get others to fill it." These two examples of Christian teachers and editors are worthy of being followed.

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.
145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Correspondence.

THE HILLSBORO CRUSADE CELEBRATION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Sixteen years have passed away since the Crusaders of Hillsboro, Ohio, led by Mrs. Judge Thompson, started forth on their unexampled mission. And here we are in the old church that echoed "Give to the winds thy fears," December 24, 1873. Meetings have been held at the rate of three a day, closing with the tenth meeting on the "Crusade morning" of December 24. Large audiences and the most serious and considerate attention have characterized them all. The key note was set in Miss Scovel's uplifting Bible reading the first morning.

The camp-fire of the afternoon yielded experiences full of pathos and power, among which the most remarkable were those of Mrs. Thompson, who led the first band and made the first prayer in a saloon; Mrs. D. K. Fenner, secretary of that band, whose priceless records must be preserved in our National W. C. T. U. archives; Mrs. Monroe, the earnest-hearted president of Ohio W. C. T. U., Mrs Dr. Runyan, a beautiful and gifted woman, the first who went out by invitation of the public to speak in the church; Miss Willard, who told how she came into the work, and many others. In the evening Mrs. S. M. Perkins made a witty speech and Mrs. Alice Peters, of Columbus, presented a beautiful case to Rev. Dr. McSurely, pastor of the Crusade Church, in which the Crusade Bible is to be preserved. Mrs. Peters is a rich and handsome woman of Columbus, Ohio, whose husband is a leading business man, and whose costly mansion is freely open to all white-ribboners.

Rev. Dr. McSurely responded most happily, stating that for more than sixty years this Bible had been used in the Presbyterian Church of Hillsboro. Miss Willard followed with an earnest gospel talk.

On Sabbath morning Dr. McSurely preached the anniversary sermon, which was one of the ablest efforts of this eloquent preacher, and has been requested, by vote of the audience, for publication. Miss Willard occupied the Rev. Mr. Murray's pulpit (M. E. Church), and Miss Scovel that of the Baptist on Sunday morning. In the afternoon Miss Gordon made a capital address to a large audience of children, and Mrs. Marie Rives, daughter of Mrs. Judge Thompson, who leads the Loyal Temperance Legion of Hillsboro, also spoke to great acceptance. Mrs. Rives is a most refined and accomplished woman, the chief pillar of the Hillsboro Episcopal Church, and a growing power in temperance work. She is the true daughter of a mother blessed for all coming time. After the children's meeting we had a delightful Love Feast, conducted by Mrs. Josephine Bateham, national superintendent department of Sabbath observance, who made an excellent address at night. In the evening, Miss Willard and others spoke, all along the evangelistic line.

The Monday morning Bible reading, by Miss Scovel, drew a large audience at ten o'clock. In the afternoon, Miss Willard opened a question box bristling with tokens that the intelligent and thoughtful people in the "crusade cradle" are wide awake to living issues.

Murat Halstead's paper, The Cincinatti Commercial Gazette, one of the special opponents of the white-ribbon work, published the following which, though not verbatim, gives a very fair indication of leading points:

A question box was opened, the answers being given by Miss Willard:

First.—"What relation has the W. C. T. U. to politics?"

Answer.—"We indorse every man who dedicates his vote to God and humanity, and wherever the Republican party stands as they have in Dakota, we stand by and indorse them. We are only committed to the party that stands by our principles, no matter what name, and this stand only have we taken in our State and National Conventions."

"Has the W. C. T. U. ever been sectarian?"

Answer.—"Catholic, priests, Jewish rabbis and all denominations have sat together on our platforms. We conquer through the cross of Christ."

The next question was: "Will God destroy the gin-shop Himself, or will He work through man?"

Answer.—"As the battery is to the little wire of the telegraph, so God is the power behind, and works to all through agencies for reform."

Question.—"Can a Christian vote for high license and pray, 'Thy Kingdom come?'"

Answer.—"What we license we protect. I cannot see how a Christian can vote for high license unless he is morally chloroformed. It has set back temperance reform one generation. It is the devil's counterfeit. Liquor men say, 'Work for high license: it is our only salvation.'"

Miss Willard, speaking of the outlook for 1890, said: "The outlook is good; the up-look is better. Hannah Whitall Smith says: 'Keep your top eye open; it is the skylight of the soul.' The outlook is cheerful, because we are not looking at the waves around, but to Him who walks the waves. More are being aroused to action and more in earnest than ever before the action of Mrs. Foster. Because these women want to do a different way, we bear them no ill will. We shall still carry our white-ribbon emblem of purity and peace. If we are good natured when we agree, that is easy, but to disagree with perfect gentleness, that is God's spirit acting upon ours. This outlook, with all its contrariety, will only make us give ourselves more to the up-look. As we go on in reformatory work we built better than we know, and all differences will react for good."

Mrs. Bateham, following, said: "We give a 'God bless you' to all those who work for temperance in any way. We are on no party platform. If they come upon ours we are with them, and, not questioning, we will do our duty, trusting God. The outlook for Sabbath observance, both from civil and religious aspects, is encouraging."

In the evening Miss Willard lectured on the White Cross and White Shield.

December 24—the anniversary of the first prayer-meeting held in an Ohio saloon (the agreement thus to go out having been publicly made the previous evening), dawned mild, almost, as May. It was in marked contrast to the snowy morning when the Crusaders first went forth. The meeting was held in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, just as on the first historic morning, and Mrs. Thompson wore the famous "Crusade Shawl," presented by her to Miss Willard at the Chicago convention. She wore it the dark side out, in sorrow, as she said, over the fact that Hillsboro has now the same number of saloons as on the day the ladies started. When asked, "Why she had put the bright side foremost at the Chicago convention?" she smilingly replied, "Oh! that was for the National outlook."

Miss Willard gave an exposition of the Crusade Psalm, and Crusaders who had walked down that middle aisle of the little church just sixteen years before, testified to the grace of Christ, still holding them steady and strong. Passages of Scripture that had been "like telescopes of faith," like the bread of life in some great hunger, or "a cup of strength in some great agony," were called for, and most interesting recitals of personal experiences followed, in which almost all the leaders joined. Mrs. Thompson was especially helpful in her commentary, and her recital of Crusade incidents was thrilling; among them she gave that of General McDowell's conversion—the first trophy of the Crusade. Mrs. Runyan, Mrs. Steveson, and others offered prayer. "Give to the winds thy fears," was sung, also "Rock of Ages." Mrs. Scovel uttered the closing words, which were like a trumpet peal from the mountain tops of faith. She urged Miss Thompson to claim the victory from the God-ward side as already assured in Him "who shall not fail nor be discouraged until He hath set judgment in the earth," and in response to her appeal "the mother of us all" agreed to wear the bright side of the shawl outside in shady as in sunny weather. So the sixteenth anniversary closed with a jubilant strain.

It ought to be remembered, and was repeatedly brought out in these meetings, that Christian men were right at the fore in the Crusade. On the very first evening, (December 23, 1873,) when fifty women arose to signify their willingness to go to the saloons, an appeal was made to men to stand with them in all their work, and fifty men at once arose taking that pledge They helped with the sinews of war; they went to the church; and prayed while the women went to the saloons and in every possible way their faith and works held up the hands of their mothers, wives and daughters Whenever the story of the Crusade is told, this should be told also as a memorial of them. By the way, do we remember that the word crusade means cross-aid? The very word enshrines Christ and His gospel. The thought is at once helpful and sacred.

Telegrams were received from state presidents all over the land, and the ready wit of Mrs. Judge Thompson was never more apparent than in the replies she designated. Mrs. Johnson, of California, Mrs. Holbrook, of Idaho, Mrs. Mary H. Jones, of Pennsylvania, and a score besides, sent messages in more senses than one, electric.

Mrs. A. H. Clevenger, Ohio's corresponding secretary, is a Vassar graduate and puts at our service trained powers and intelligent devotion. She read many interesting letters and incidents. Mrs. Dr. McSurely, wife of the "Crusade pastor," was one of the chief forces in making the meetings a success, and Mrs. Mary S. Murray, president of the Y's, was ubiquitous in labors. Mrs. Anna R. Hussey, state treasurer, a new acquisition to Ohio W. C. T. U. was with us, and the pastors one and all were side by side in every effort to help on the celebration. Mrs. Lilian Bethel, of Columbus, is an on-coming white-ribboner who will be heard on the platform—ditto Mrs. Alice Peters, if she will. Mrs. Millie A. Bell, of Cleveland, sent a beautiful poem on the Crusade which was read the closing evening. It was a pleasure to meet Mr. Henry Thompson who, as a youth, brought to his mother the glad tidings that the women had agreed to go out to the saloons under her leadership. He is one of the most genial young men and accomplished musicians that we have met. Some of our ladies dined at Rev. Mr. Beecher's, whose ideal home, enriched with choice paintings from abroad, may well afford them a delightful remembrance.

Souvenirs of the Crusade Church are often in demand, and we will mention that any one desiring a booklet or bannerette (hand-painted on bolting cloth) with a picture of the Hillsboro Crusade Church, and containing parts of the 146th psalm and the hymn "Give to the winds thy fears," can secure one by sending seventy-five cents to Mrs. E. L. Ferris or Miss M. R. Patterson, Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio.

Judge Thompson, a leading lawyer of Highland county, is a pronounced believer in woman's ballot. He believes it "a foregone conclusion in the American mind" and the sure deliverer of the nation from the liquor thralldom. His zeal is a fitting sequel to his wife's devotion.

The sixteenth anniversary has come and gone—its closing words were exquisitely rendered by Mrs. Henrietta Monroe, and a resolution of thanks to the "visiting white-ribboners," made in most brotherly fashion by Rev. Mr. Murray, Methodist pastor, earnestly seconded by Rev. Dr. Runyan, and adopted by a rising vote of a great audience, attested the deep interest that had been stirred. It was a Pentecostal season; God grant that as here, at the birthplace of this world-wide movement, so throughout the land, its celebration may prove to many a willing heart to have been nothing less than a personal Pentecost.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

OUR ROUND-THE-WORLD MISSIONARY.

(Concluded.)

I had been invited to attend the Congress of "The League," at Liverpool, and no sooner was I engaged to them for a talk or paper for the afternoon, than an invitation came from "The Alliance" for the same day at its meeting in Manchester. I was entertained at the home of Miss Cadbury, a member of the "Board of Guardians." On her first visit to the poor-houses with other members of the board, the carriages were pulled up at a public house on the return, in order that some of the gentlemen might refresh themselves. This did not suit this ardent abstainer, so in her gentle way, she refused to go in the carriage next time, making her way by "train" and "bus." When an explanation of her course was asked, she gave it, and a letter of apology was the consequence, with a promise that there should be no more calling at public houses. Perhaps it is not elevating to have women members of public bodies!

The afternoon meeting at which I was to speak, was in the very handsome Council Chamber of the city of Birmingham, the audience certainly a most intelligent one, the lady Mayoress in the chair, and Lady Seabright, Lady Elizabeth Biddulph and I announced to speak on "Woman's Work in the Temperance Cause." Lady Seabright sent a letter of regret. I had heard her speak in East London, and regretted not hearing her again. The Mayoress did her duties admirably, and Lady Biddulph gave a discursive address.

On the evening of this day six doctors, led off by B. W. Richardson, were to speak. I had asked for a place upon the platform, rather than in the side gallery, to which my ticket assigned me. This I did because of the society whose officer I am, in the first place; and, second, because it was a woman's society. I had a very good position accorded me, and Miss Cadbury was at my side. I enjoyed all the addresses. One little practical point made by Dr. Richardson might well be spread abroad. He said: "Peop'e take a swallow of brandy to keep off infection when going to attend upon sick people; others whose work leads them into sewers and other similar places, do the same. The fact is, that taking the brandy prevents the evil to which they are inevitably exposed, from passing out of the system quickly; indeed, taking the brandy keeps the poison in the system longer than it would otherwise stay."

On Wednesday I held two meetings at Bristol; Thursday, two at Weston-Supermare, and on Friday returned to Birmingham to speak in the afternoon in a meeting upon "The Native Races and the Liquor Traffic." Rev. Mr. Little, a returned missionary from Madagascar, Mr. Caine, M. P., and I were the speakers. We had all of us seen what we were talking about, and this is a great advantage. The meeting was a most earnest and enthusiastic one. Canon Ellison was in the chair. He should be exonerated from all blame in regard to the society of which he is president investing in brewery shares. This action was without his knowledge or that of others like-minded with himself, and as soon as Canon Ellison knew of it he protested against it, and the result is that the shares have been sold and a better investment made.

The evening session of the same day was devoted to Members of Parliament, Mr. Caine being the chief and weightiest speaker. One or two speakers having failed to appear, I was, much to my surprise, called upon to occupy a little time. It will not be amiss if I say in this connection, that all Mr. Caine has said about the drink in India is absolutely correct; but that his deductions about missions were made from quite too small data to have the weight that has been attached to them in some quarters.

On Saturday I journeyed back to London, pausing at Highgate to speak at a drawing-room meeting. I was so weary that there was no power left to resist anything. I sat a few moments near a window open at the top, between the window and a fire. The draught was strong, and the consequence, cold, much fever for three days, and very heavy cough. On Monday I attended and spoke at a farewell to missionaries of the London Society, also at a drawing-room at Mr. Caine's house in the evening. Tuesday evening I went to Fairbury Park to speak at the first anniversary of its branch of the B. W. T. A. The pleasantest thing of the evening, though it was a good meeting, was seeing again Rev. Mr. Sadler, who was my firm supporter in Amoy, China. Mrs. Sadler was with her husband.

On Wednesday I went to the meeting of the ex-committee of the B. W. T. A. in the morning, and in my official capacity as secretary of the W. W. C. T. U. made a few suggestions as to methods and measures, which I left with them in writing, and bade them good-by. All have been very kind and pleasant to me, fully carrying out the spirit of the address upon the beautiful silk banner presented to me when I came.

In the evening of this day came the last meeting, in a lecture-room in Spurgeon's Tabernacle, not the Tabernacle, as I have already seen it announced. The Tabernacle had been refused, nor did Mr. Spurgeon consent to preside. It was a numerously attended meeting, with Rev. Mr. Mottram, a Congregational minister, in the chair, but the people of weight and consequence belonging to the congregation were conspicuous by their absence.

All must have noticed that the drink bill of England decreased steadily from 1876 to 1886. During the earlier years of that decade, great gospel temperance missions, after the same model as the Moody missions, were carried on in most of the cities, under Mr. Murphy and Mr. Booth, and some English workers, and hundreds of thousands, if not millions, took the pledge. The great, easy harvest was reaped, as it was with us a generation earlier. There is now, and has been, a lull in temperance work. Great missions are no longer attempted, and many think they could not succeed again, if attempted. They had their day But the temperance leaders have not utilized this new army as they ought. They have taken up no new fundamental measures of any breadth or power. I predict that they will see a continual increase in drink, as we are doing at home, till all temperance people will unite in a demand for immediate and entire prohibition of the manufacture and sale of drink,—and so shall we. While temperance people can be deluded to vote for high license rather than prohibition, we are not yet sufficiently in earnest to receive a blessing from the Lord without which no victories will come. I thank God for the glorious victories in the Dakotas, while I hang my head in shame for Connecticut and Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Absolute abstinence the best thing for every human being—no need of alcohol as a medicine—no sanction of anything alcoholic in the Bible, no permission to make or sell by the government, are the things we must teach everywhere. The temperance forces as a body in England are much farther from being a unit on these themes than we are in America.

I am about to start upon what many consider a too dangerous journey. I think the exposures in some ways will be greater than they have been, but if there is a work which the Lord wishes me to do, I am sure He will bring me through. I shall use all precautions and take all care that I possibly can, but I cannot get on without your prayers, dear sisters.

Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith had invited me, when returning to London for the last time, to come to her house until I sailed, as she would then have returned from the country. But the very day I should have arrived, Mrs. Smith started for the continent, south of France, I think, with her daughter, Mrs. Costelloe. I had hoped to take counsel with Mrs. Smith upon many subjects, but this being denied me, I must be shut up to the Lord alone again. Written, this sounds as if it were a hardship, but I only feel as if I should have the Lord more fully, when I have also the conversation of one so honored of God as she has been these many years.

I have received many invitations to houses where I should have liked to go, and which I feel honored in having received. Only one of these, the first on the list, have I been able to accept, that from Dr. Benson, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Mrs. Benson, to spend the night with them at Addington Park, Croydon. It was a most delightful visit. Besides Dr. and Mrs. Benson and their daughters, I saw the newly-consecrated Bishop of Corea, who was a guest in the house, and Commander Cameron, of African fame, who, with his wife, was invited to dinner.

I should be very ungrateful did I not say a word of the great kindness shown me by Mrs. Margaret Bright Lucas. After three days' stay at Mrs. Smith's, July 16-19, I came to this house, and here I have been cherished, cared for and honored beyond my deserts, whenever I have been in town until now that I am departing, a space of four months. Had the house been my own I could not have felt freer to do my own will than I have. Mrs. Lucas has also made a donation of £5 to my work. May the dear Lord comfort her as she has comforted me.

Lovingly, your sister,

MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT.

LABOR CONVENTION.

EDITOR UNION SIGNAL:—Some very important conventions have just closed in St. Louis,—the Farmers' Alliance of the North, and the Farmers' and Labors' Union of the South. They control 2,000,000 votes, and are of widespread influence. The meeting of these two bodies was memorable, also, for the attendance of the master workman of the Knights of Labor, Terence V. Powderly, and a committee from his organization, who succeeded in cementing harmonious relations between the Knights of Labo and the farmers of the country.

As the National superintendent of the department of the relation of temperance to labor, I waited upon the two conventions when in joint session. A committee of ladies from their body escorted me to the platform, where I presented the greetings of the National W. C. T. U. to those two grand organizations of labor, and the claims of our work to their consideration. I was received with the utmost courtesy, and President Burroughs, on behalf of the Farmers' Alliance, replied, praising our W. C. T. U. as being, without exception, the best of all organizations with which he was acquainted. The president of the Farmers' and Laborers' Union gave us a cordial welcome also, and then different orators from the North and South were called on to respond.

One of the Southern orators, Stump Ashby, of Fort Worth, who had engaged warmly in the prohibition fight for the Texas amendment, in replying, gave a most touching compliment to woman. He praised us as we would like to be praised. He said: "The same voice that told a dying world that Christ had risen from the dead, calls to poor fallen man in his degradation, ruin and death, to come higher to a plane upon which God intended he should walk; and the same eyes that, swimming in tears, looked upon the quivering body of the dying Christ, through the same mist of tears, looks down upon fallen man to-day; and the great, loving woman's heart that beat in deep sympathy with the suffering Jesus, to-day yearns over fallen man. God bless the noble, true women of the W. C. T. U. for they have ever been first in good works, and the last to let go of suffering humanity."

Mr. Powderly is a masterful man. In every line of his face there is life and power, and especially I was pleased to see in this born leader's face the same finely-cut, firm lines of the cheek and chin that express power, conviction and determination so thoroughly in Frances Willard's face. Purpose and strength are carved on both faces, and we may rejoice that these two leaders are so much in accord in work for humanity.

The Farmers' Alliance passed as one of the resolutions in its platform: "We are opposed to liquor in every form," and the Prohibitionists from Dakota, Nebraska, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, and all over the Union were most outspoken. Powderly spoke for equal rights for all, equal pay for the same work for women, and he expressed himself with the utmost clearness against the saloon in politics; so did all the leaders, and it did my heart good to awaken such expression of cordial kindness towards our beloved W. C. T. U. If we could once get the great body of tillers and toilers, the farmers and mechanics of our country, hand in hand with their sisters of the W. C. T. U., we should see the beginning of the end of all the cruel monopolies, the saloon monopoly among the rest.

ANNA S. CAIRNS.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE BOOKS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In the Cambridge Chronicle of December 14, we find the following, taken from the Christian Cynosure:

"Charles W. Elliot, president of Harvard College, declares that he does not believe in the matter of scientific temperance instruction in our public schools. His ground for such a declaration, is his opinion that much of the teaching is not correct."

We venture to correct the above statement in the words of one of the most intelligent advocates of this measure who has given to it years of earnest labor, carefully studying in our largest libraries the best authorities upon this subject. "In view of the newness of the topic, it is not surprising that there should have been mistakes in some of the early book-making, for the large and unexpected market created by the rapid enactment of scientific temperance instruction laws."

Great care has been taken in the revision of the text books now indorsed by some of the best educators in our country and recommended to the twenty-three states and territories of our Republic where this instruction is made compulsory. This movement asks for the aid of learned men, to shed upon it the full light of science.

The main truths that have been taught and received by the children of our commonwealth, namely, that alcohol is a poison to the body and an injury to the whole being in all its forms, is confirmed by science beyond question and the good already accomplished by this teaching can only be measured by Him "who seeth the end from the beginning."

Those who have observed with interest and regret President Elliot's action, or rather inaction, in reference to the no-license question in Cambridge, will not be surprised at his position in this matter. For four successive years Cambridge has been stirred to its center at each municipal election. The encroachments of the saloon had become so intolerable that the better class of its citizens determined to outlaw it. To this end a strong and united effort was necessary. All classes and conditions of men and women came into a fellowship of feeling and action, which has resulted for the fourth time in declaring our city free from the curse of the open saloon.

During this struggle which called earnestly for the aid which every good citizen could give, we have never seen President Elliot at one of the no-license meetings. We believe his voice has never been publicly heard, or his pen given an utterance for the "no" side. It is well understood that for the first two years of the no-license campaigns he voted for the saloon. The sentiment of the community and the facts given, were at length so strong that the "no" vote became the standard of good citizenship.

These facts are not stated in the spirit of personal censure, but in order to weigh President Elliot's "opinion" upon scientific temperance instruction in the same scale with his regard for the temperance question in general, that we may judge its real value. Occupying a position which he has taken for the purpose of teaching, and thus helping to shape the lives of young men, it seems remarkable that he does not feel a responsibility in reference to this phase of practical influence, especially as sad instances occur from time to time among the graduates of Harvard College, where lives are wrecked by habits formed there. President Elliot also declares that he does not believe in total abstinence or prohibition of the liquor traffic by law. Therefore the saloon, or the wine merchant, becomes a necessity to him.

Citizens of Cambridge who are earnestly committed to the destruction of this evil and who have secured for our University City a unique record, will trust that the impetus which President Elliot could give this beneficent cause—by virtue of his position and his scholarship—may in time be fully and cordially offered by him. We shall continue to hope that he will ultimately adopt the views of distinguished scientists and teachers who are the path-breakers in starting the youth of the country aright.

The testimony of chemists, physiologists and physicians of the first rank in favor of total abstinence is now at our disposal. Safety and simplicity counsel us to accept the views of men who are in every respect equal to those whose personal preferences are for the use of intoxicants.

Our no-license experience in Cambridge the past three years has taught us the power of united action. All that makes for righteousness in the community at large, is promised, we believe, in this blessed beginning.

Cambridge. AMELIA C. THORP.

Our Children.

THE OLD YEAR.

BY MRS. F. M. BUTTS.

If all the old year's days could speak,
I wonder what they'd say—
The snowy days, the blowy days,
The flowery days of May;
The summer days, when shady ways
Were made for children's feet;
Vacation days when for their plays
The country was so sweet!

If all the old year's days could speak—
Just think of it awhile—
Would their report bring bitter tears,
Or the sunshine of a smile?
Ah! could they speak from week to week
Of honest work well done,
Of well-used powers in study hours,
Of fairness in the fun?

Of thankful thought for kindness wrought
Where homes are rich and glad;
Of tender care to give or share
Where homes are poor and sad;
Of pleasant ways in dark, dull days;
Of little, gentle deeds;
Of earnest hours among heart's flowers
In plucking hurtful weeds?

Can the year speak of patience meek
Where grief has stopped a while,
Of courage bold, for the weak and old
A loving word or smile?
Methinks the year must seem most dear
If thus its speech can be;
O'erfull of joys for girls and boys—
A year of jubilee.

—Selected.

THE NEW YEAR.

"I am the little New Year, ho! ho!
Here I come tripping it over the snow;
Shaking my bells with a merry din;
So open your doors and let me in.

"Blessings I bring to each and all,
Big folk and little folk, short and tall;
Each one from me a treasure may win,
So open your doors, and let me in.

"Some shall have silver, and some shall have gold;
Some shall have new clothes, and some shall have old;
Some shall have brass, and some shall have tin,
So open your doors and let me in.

"Some shall have water, and some shall have milk;
Some shall have satin, and some shall have silk;
But each one from me a blessing may win,
So open your doors and let me in."

—Youth's Companion.

GRANDMA'S STORY.

BY A. F. T.

"Listen to the howling of the wind; this is a wild night, my children. Draw your chairs up to the fire and I will tell you what it reminds me of."

"Oh, make it a story, grandma!"

"Yes, a story, a story!" exclaim a trio of other voices.

"What kind of a story?"

"A truly true one; something that happened to you when you were young," pleads the youngest of the group, stealing her soft hand into the other's, so wrinkled and worn with the burdens of many years.

"A story it shall be, then, darling; but can you imagine grandma as ever young?

"Well, it was New Year's day, long ago. Your grandpa and I, with our two youngest children, Henry and Julia, were going to spend the day at the old home. Emma, your mamma, was already there on a visit, and we were to have a family reunion, as had long been our custom. The morning was clear, the sleighing fine, and our good horse sped over the snow, stepping gaily to the sound of the sleigh bells, while content and happiness filled our hearts. As we neared the dear homestead, we could see bright young faces pressed against the window panes, and a few minutes later, cheery voices and loving smiles at the open door gave us a glad welcome. What a roomful we were, grandfather and grandmother, with fathers, mothers, children, and aunts, uncles and cousins by the dozen. And oh, what a day we spent together, with our talk and laughter, gifts, kind words and good cheer. Nothing seemed lacking as we sat around the heaping board that happy New Year's day. We did not realize how the hours were flying until at last the sinking sun warned us that we must leave this scene of pleasure and turn our faces homeward. But hark! what sound was that?

"'The wind is rising and the snow is drifting,' cousin Charlie reported, as he came shivering into the house, having driven our horse around to the front gate.

"'It is certainly growing colder, and you must not think of going,' said Aunt Mercy, going to the door and looking out.

"'Good! you will have to stay all night. Oh, you must; do, do!' pleaded a score of voices as the cousins gathered around us.

"Your grandpa put on his warm overcoat and buttoned it up, saying, hesitatingly, 'I think we can go well enough'.

"'I know we can,' said I. We were young, you see, and feared nothing, and then, besides, I was thinking of my window full of lovely plants, and the poor, timid Irish girl I had left in the morning with the promise that we would return before bedtime. I pretended not to see that a very little urging would reseat your grandpa by the warm fire-place. It did look comfortable, indeed, but we were ready in a hurry, and soon the buffalo robe was tucked in by loving hands, and amid a chorus of good-bys we rode away.

"Again the bells sent out their music, but it came but faintly to our ears, above the howling and shrieking of the wind. The heavy robe was no more than a pocket handkerchief over us. The blinding snow filled our eyes so that we could scarcely see, and talking was out of the question. Our poor horse struggled on, making but little headway, however, and before we had reached the old brick school-house, only half a mile away, I heartily wished we had not started. And now, oh, how we began to feel the cold! I hugged little Julia more closely, hoping to keep her warm. Henry was down in front of us under the robe, but the cruel wind so chilled him that he soon began to cry. We passed one farm-house after another, and my heart ached as I saw their cheerful lights. Darkness was coming on, and a great fear came over me. At last I begged your grandpa to stop at the next house we came to and ask to stay all night.

"'There is a house—I can see a light. Oh, do let us stop. We shall freeze if we go on,' I cried, really alarmed, as we approached another house, but just then the light disappeared. I was sure, though, that the people were awake and would give us shelter. Your grandpa stopped the horse before the door, but instead of helping the rest of us out, he only went and stood by the horse's head in order to shield himself from the wind. You see he was quite benumbed, and hardly knew what he was about. Seeing that he could not help us, I clambered out as best I could, carrying my baby in my arms, and leading my boy, who was now screaming with the cold. As the gate was fastened up for the winter, I crawled through the bars and waded through the great drifts, fairly dragging Henry after me, as it was impossible for him to take a step. You can imagine that by this time both little ones were crying in good earnest. Finally we reached the door, only to find it locked. At my loud knocks and calls for help, a light soon appeared, and in a few moments more an old man, half-dressed, cautiously opened the door to see what was wanted. I was overjoyed to recognize in this person Mr. Green, whom I had often seen at church, and who lived with his wife on this farm, not far from our home. They had gone to bed this fearful night in order to save wood and candles. I shall never forget the feeling I had as I heard him say: 'Come in from the cold, come in, my poor woman and children.' He evidently thought we were some poor creatures lost in the storm.

"I begged him to go and get my husband who was still standing out in the snow, and very soon your grandpa was with us, and the poor horse was in the barn. The people had kind hearts and willing hands, and so the great stove was speedily filled with wood, and erelong a hot fire was burning, while our little family sat around it talking and laughing over our recent distress.

"When we were quite warm we were shown to our room, where we all slept in one bed, there being only one other in the house. The snow sifted in through the cracks around the window and lay in little drifts upon our bed. We were so near the roof that it almost touched our faces, and in the morning the plastering over us was covered with a white frost from our breath, but what cared we? We were all there, father, mother and little ones, and as we listened to the howling of the wind we hugged one another closer and blessed God that we were safe.

"The next morning was calm and beautiful, and after thanking our kind friends we said good-by and once more set out for home, which was now only two miles away.

"On our way we passed many snowdrifts that would have been impassable in the darkness, but in the daylight the feat was easily accomplished.

"We reached home in time for a warm breakfast, and to complete my happiness, I found my plants and the Irish girl both alive. But bless me! what a long story I have made. Well, I am lucky not to find my little audience asleep over it, or nodding, at least."

THE CHILD'S REBUKE.

The pet of the household had overslept,
While breakfast was waiting below;
And his auntie was chiding the little boy
That he was in dressing so slow.

A shoe-string was missing, a button was off,
And everything seemed out of place,
The clouds of discouragement gathered around
The dear little fellow's face.

At length his toilet was all complete,
But the little boy still delayed,
And cried, "Dear auntie, I cannot go down
Till my morning prayer I've said."

"Wait till breakfast is over," his auntie cried,
"For once it will not be wrong."
The little boy, startled and grieved, replied,
"What, keep God waiting so long?"

—Congregationalist.

Seven is the perfect number, and if the following seven rules were faithfully observed, they would do something toward making a perfect man.

Before thou openest thy mouth think:

1. What thou shalt speak.
2. Why thou shouldst speak it.
3. To whom thou art to speak.
4. Concerning whom or what thou art about to speak.
5. What will result therefrom.
6. What benefit it can produce.
7. Who may be listening.—Boston Gazette.

A man may pass good muster as a philanthropist who makes but a poor master to his servants or father to his children.—Maurice.

The Prayer-Meeting.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JANUARY 5, 1890.

BY JENNIE FOWLER WILLING.

WOMAN'S WORK IN THE CHURCH.

Phil. 4: 3. Ps. 68: 11.

The Bible is woman's Magna Charta. Every right that is dear to her heart is based on Scriptural truth. In all Bibleless lands woman is the slave of man's lust or of his greed. Only in Christian countries is she free to live by the law of her life, being and doing that for which God intended her, in exact proportion as the sentiment of the Lord Jesus Christ is wrought into the tissue of society. Every woman ought to love God's Word, and do her best to have it bear sway in every home, from gratitude for what it has done for her, and to please Christ, the Author of her emancipation.

The church is the visible body of our Lord, and the conservator of His truth. Women show their loyalty to the church by constituting two thirds, and sometimes three-fourths, of its membership. Mrs. Van Cott tells of a church on the frontier that called her to evangelistic work. As the services progressed, she asked the pastor where were the officiary. She wanted to call on prominent members to pray for the seekers of Christ, but she could not find them. He made an evasive reply, and she went on with her work, the public exercises being participated in only by herself, the pastor, and one woman. After seventy persons had professed conversion, and she was about to leave, the pastor said, "Now I will tell you about the church; it consists of the one woman whom you have heard pray in the services. She came up here among the hills, and collected money to build the church, looking after every item of expenditure herself. Then she sent to the conference for a pastor, pledging his support; and we two sent for you; she is the entire membership, official board, and all, which under your preaching has been multiplied seventy fold."

I. WOMEN HAVE ALWAYS HAD WORK ASSIGNED TO THEM IN THE CHURCH.

We see this set forth in the Bible, the only thoroughly authentic and reliable church history.

1. They obtain promises.

The first promise of a Redeemer was given to Eve. Sarah shared Abraham's faith, though she was inclined to believe the promise a little too good to be true. Rebekah had also great promises given her, though her heart ran away with her patience; and in trying to secure the blessing for her gentle, mother-loving Jacob, instead of his wild, Arab brother, she confused the plan, so that her favorite had to leave home. Rachel was so lovely that her life stood the test of a seven years' courtship, and the seven years of hard service seemed to Jacob "but a few days for the love he had for her." Jochebed "feared not the king's commandment," but hid her little boy among the papyrus reeds of the Nile, thus saving to the world its law-giver. Miriam made the songs of her people, while her brothers were getting their laws from God. One has said "Let me make the songs of a nation, and I care not who makes its laws." Jael delivered her nation by killing its arch enemy. Deborah administered the laws of the chosen people, the Lord's church, and commanded its armies. David had a good mother, for he asks mercy for the son of the Lord's handmaid. Esther, the beautiful diplomat, at the risk of her own life, saved the church, when its enemy had planned to destroy it by one blow. The obedient faith of Anna, Elizabeth and Mary, figures in the opening of the New Dispensation, like the conjunction of planets that Kepler says was the star that guided the Magi to the manger of Bethlehem. Christ preached one of His greatest sermons to a woman of mixed blood and doubtful life. His first plain statement of Messiahship was made to her, "I that speak unto thee, am He." When apostles fled, women were "last at the cross and earliest at the tomb." They were the first preachers of the risen Saviour.

The women of the Pentecost, the evangelistic daughters of Philip, Priscilla, Phebe, and the rest, are familiar to New Testament readers. The ministrae, or women ministers of the early church, are spoken of in profane history. In St. Prasaede, one of the oldest churches in Rome, we find the tomb of a woman bishop.

In the dark centuries when woman was a toy or a drudge, God used the faith of one to evangelize each country in Europe. In these later days God is using women for the grandest service.

II. THEY MAY FIND THEIR TRUE WORK ONLY BY LOYALTY TO CHRIST.

They may be impatient of God's delays and take matters into their own hands, as Rebekah did, or ambitious of distinction, as the mother of James and John. The only safety is in the surrender of will to the Lord. He only can give the freedom which makes "free indeed," the liberty to obey the "Inner Voice," regardless of the criticisms and censures of the world, and deaf to its flatteries.

III. THEY CAN WORK SUCCESSFULLY ONLY BY FAITH IN JESUS.

That gives steadiness of choice and courage because He must stand by His own cause, and nothing can fail that God has in care. When He gives the word, "kings of armies" must "flee apace."

Let women do well, and for Christ's glory alone, the work entrusted to them, and He will see that they have the broadest opportunity. Our missionary and temperance women did not wait for the church to divide with them the honors and responsibilities. They took the humble, unpaid, neglected service that God would have done, and for love of Him they bent their shoulders to the heavy burdens; and now all good men and true are glad to "help those women."

The Household.

THE CHRISTMAS OF MY SOUL.

MABELLE B. BIGGART.

What wouldst thou do, O soul of mine?
The outer rim wouldst thou make thine?
Yea, thou hast more, still more to gain,
Before thou know'st all end to pain.

Throw wide the door, O soul of mine,
Make glad th heart this Christmas time;
Yea, give to all a merry feast,
In word, or look, or smile, at least.

What wilt thou write, O soul of mine,
Upon the page of fleeting time?
Perhaps a pure and God-like thought,
And some poor wand'rer 'll drink the draught.

O blessed New Year of my soul—
Bring Christ divine, yea, thro' the whole
Of every day, and month and year,
Till my soul shall live without a fear!

BUSY WOMEN AND THE W. C. T. U.

BY MRS. O. W. SCOTT

American women are the busiest women in the world! The field of feminine industry, embracing, as it does, domestic and mechanical pursuits, most of the professions, all of art and literature, and so many philanthropic and reformatory movements as to be the wonder and admiration of all lands, sufficiently proves this. But the women to whom I refer just now, are not only busy in a general, but in a particular sense. They are those whose hands and hearts are full of actual interests and duties; those who, having improved their "five talents," receive in addition that of the idle or unprofitable servant. The sacred parable is being repeated every day, and those who are faithful to their "absent Lord," not only use their own opportunities but have added strength given to take up service which ought to be rendered by others. Temperance work we will call, for the present, an "added responsibility." Its intensely practical character does not commend it to visionary, vacillating natures. Only earnest, persistent women, whose muscles have learned the "grace of endurance," can accept it; by them the burden must be borne, if it is borne at all. Admitting this, as I believe you will after a little thought, we are then led to inquire: Why are not more of our busy women engaged in temperance work? I reply: Because they have not given the subject that serious consideration which it deserves. Shall we not together examine its claims upon us, casting aside for the moment every prejudice?

We take for granted that all sensible women deplore the ravages of intemperance. As patriots we admit the peril of our native land. As citizens we see the blight which falls upon city and town through the sale of intoxicants. As mothers we fear our own children may be slain. As Christians we recognize this evil as the "great Iniquity" arrayed against Christ and His church. But what can we do about it? How can we embody our feelings so as to affect the enemy? It is true that individual effort has done much where a providential combination of circumstances made it possible; but as a rule, one feminine voice in prayer, petition or appeal, carries little weight. For confirmation of this, ask her whose agony has given courage for a personal appeal to rum-seller or municipal authority.

And, still further, we are actually "too busy" to attempt much personal antagonism. All time seems but little when we realize the force of the enemy; and here we are, with all our home duties pending! Then, again, you and I are not wealthy. We can see just what "our town" needs, but we cannot hire eloquent speakers, one after another, to come and arouse the people. We cannot furnish a single drunkard's family with food or clothing; perchance we cannot even afford to purchase tracts for free distribution! Reaching in another direction, we shrink from contests and collisions with laws which are never enforced, and so stand as "lone women," appalled and discouraged by the difficulties which surround us. But just here in our conscious helplessness, we discover an organization which aims to accomplish through united effort the very thing we long to see done. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is an aggregation of "lone women"; it is an embodiment of individual longings and prayers and strivings; it is a protest against wicked and barbarous laws, uttered by two hundred thousand voices! After an acquaintance with this society from the first year of its existence, I fully believe that no congress of women, chosen from the noblest and wisest in our land, could have given us anything half as good for practical purposes as is this great Union, whose fires were kindled by the breath of the Lord, whose methods were formulated in prayer and baptized with tears. Through the years its plans have broadened and matured, until now it covers the territory poisoned by alcohol, using, as efficiently as may be, all remedial and preventive agencies. You and I, then, if we honestly desire to make ourselves "sensibly felt," will find among its "departments" some place for the exercise of our special gift, some place where we may invest our limited spare time, our few dollars, our "ounce of energy."

A lady once said—intending to be sarcastic, "The W. C. T. U. is a great labor-saving machine!" But she spake as one of the wise women, since underlying those words is the economic principle which has helped to make the nineteenth century greater than its predecessors. In my own opinion it was God's thought for busy women; that we might have no excuse for not engaging in the great contest between Himself and the iniquity of our age.

But there are those who say, "We are engaged in other enterprises. Is it essential that in addition to these we join the W. C. T. U.?"

My reply would be, Yes, and for the following reason: Intemperance is a hindrance to every Christian work you may attempt. Turn your attention, for instance, to philanthropy. The charities of this Christian land are largely under the direct or indirect control of women; and a generous public agrees that this is proper.

Homes, refuges, asylums, training schools and even hospitals, depend largely upon the financial planning, skill, sympathy and service of consecrated women. These institutions, with countless untabulated benefactions dot our land. Christ's followers do open wide their hands to relieve misery, and yet there is an unlimited amount of unrelieved woe and wretchedness. And why? Because the drink curse makes misery faster than benevolence can possibly alleviate it. Statistics prove that there are active charities sufficient to meet every legitimate case of necessity, but when it comes to providing for rum wrecks in the shape of crazed and criminal men, forsaken wives, orphan children, imbeciles and paupers, sweet mercy shudders at the task! What then? Are not these objects of pity to be cared for? Certainly, but not as at present. Christian philanthrophy assumes its highest prerogative when it prevents evil; hence, to be consistent, the generous dispensers of charity must help with one hand, at least, to remove the cause of this immense surplus of poverty and woe which now mocks their most earnest endeavors. In no way can they do this as easily as by working through the W. C. T. U., which takes cognizance of their hindrance, and aims to remove it.

Turning from home mission work, in its various forms, to foreign missions, we find this same ugly monster, Intemperance, confronting us. If this so-called Christian nation gave as much to send the gospel to the heathen as it spends on its drink bill, how long would it be, think you, before "earth's remotest bounds" listened to the ringing of Sabbath bells? As it now stands, the drink bill is $1,100,000,000, while home and foreign missions together receive but $5,500,000. That is, two hundred times as much is spent for intoxicants as for missions! Again, what we devote to missions for one year, would not pay the liquor bill for two days! As Christian women we are interested in the uplifting of our heathen sisters. Every evangelical church has its Woman's Board, or Society, busily collecting pennies and dimes for this cause. Isn't it about time we uttered our protest against this foe of all that is pure and holy, this foe which is lying directly across the highway we are helping to build—oh, so slowly—for the coming of the King of all nations? We send out our missionaries and they meet this inquiry: "If your country believes the Bible, and follows Christ, why does it send us this drink of demons to destroy us?" Just at this point the World's W. C. T. U. is being felt, and may it never rest until it brings every government to an active coöperation against this world-wide, soul-destroying traffic. Furthermore, we have our own temperance missionaries, led by Mrs. Leavitt, who, in the name of the white-ribbon sisterhood, are carrying from nation to nation the gospel of Christ and of total abstinence. Here, then, we belong, recognizing and fighting the evil which seeks to neutralize our best efforts as mission workers.

But, again, we ought to ally ourselves with the W. C. T. U., because it is the one organization among women feared by the rum power. One woman's footstep may cross the saloon threshold noiselessly, but when two hundred thousand cross it, there is a trembling behind the bar! It is a blessed indication when brewers inquire, "What are those women going to do next?" It is just at this point that some of you, dear sisters, begin to draw back, fearing that in an open defiance of the saloon we may hit some political snag. What if we do? Are we to blame if the snag persists in getting in our way? What is politics? "The science of government; that part of ethics which has to do with the regulation and government of a nation or state;—the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity; the protection of its citizens in their rights, with the preservation and improvement of their morals." What could be more natural and proper than for women to be interested in this "science." Ah! we know that the great political powers have forgotten this original definition. We know that they are not "protecting our citizens" nor "improving their morals," and because they are sensitive they accuse us of "meddling" when we speak the truth.

Recent developments in connection with very great interests prove that men good and true in ordinary affairs, cannot be trusted to stand for the right when their political leaders order otherwise. They fail to measure up to the demands of the hour. God knows we would be charitable, but we cannot help crying out for a manhood that recognizes the power of ballots and the responsibility of using them!

Let our brethren redeem themselves by turning and overturning, and turning out, until we see the saloon annihilated, and we will take our knitting-work and go home. But as things now are, here we stand! The cause of temperance rests upon our interlocked hands as never before. We must cling together, moving forward without regard to politics, as we have in the past, doing right as God reveals it to us. We need not be afraid. There are those who believe that the present agitation will subside, that God will turn off the light He has been flashing upon all sides of th question, that everything will settle down quietly and comfortably again. But be not deceived. Every great moral reform has an immortal soul. You can no more kill it than you can destroy the souls of those who in the kingdom of our God cry: "How long, O Lord, how long?" And by and by, when prayer and pleading and remonstrance have filled their measure, when consecrated service says, "I can do no more!" the "Hour of Decision" will strike, and God's own right arm will give us a victory! Not for a kingdom would I be among the uninterested ones then. None of us will be too busy in that hour to sing the doxology; but if we would sing it with the "spirit and the understanding," we must seize an hour now and then, in spite of pressing cares and wavering faith, to "practice" with those who are "members of the choir."

Consider, then, for one moment the conclusion of the whole matter. You recognize intemperance as the greatest curse of modern civilization. You also recognize your absolute inability to affect it by individual effort. Will you not, then, give to the great organized body of women pledged to its overthrow, your heart and hand? From my life of constant care and service, I send this appeal to you, my busy sisters. May God help you in your decision.

PHYSICAL TRAINING FOR WOMEN.

PROF. G. W. ANDERSON.

That physical training is an essential part of a man's education is admitted; that women need this tuition seems to be a matter open to discussion. If women admit that such knowledge is beneficial, they are slow to acquire it. Why it is, they alone can tell.

Women speak of their rights. They wonder why their position is what it is; that men seem to be masters, while their own sphere is to raise and rear children, and in many cases to occupy positions that are little better than those of servants.

As a rule, the fathers, and not the mothers, enforce the discipline in the family. Children can more easily "get around" the mother. We do not, of course, advocate harshness in the family. A child will not love his mother less if he is expected to obey the first command rather than the fifth. Children love their parents, but the greater respect is paid to the father on account of his physical strength. If women are willing to remain where they are, they will be left there; if they prefer ailments to soundness of physique, the choice is their own. If they prefer to be more like servants than companions in their homes, who will decide to the contrary? In short, if women will not rise mentally and physically higher than they are, "they won't, and there's an end on't." It may be said "the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." There is the rub; the flesh is too weak.

Few women can do the mental work of a man, because their strength will not permit. The brain requires a large per cent of the blood for its work. If the body cannot give it, there is a failure. The world says women are not men's equals mentally. The brief experience of women in colleges shows that their minds are not only as bright, but that in many cases they excel, but their physiques do not possess the vigor necessary to sustain them in mental work. It cannot be denied that women, in spite of the homage men pay them, are bound down by laws they themselves make, obey, and suffer from. They adopt styles of dress and methods of living that men will not sanction in their own cases. They put corsets on girls, but not on boys; they restrict girls in many of the healthy sports which tend to make boys strong. A girl must, simply because she is a girl, refrain from taking part in certain healthy recreations. They must not forget that they are young ladies. They prefer paint to nature's bloom—social laws first, health second. If women would rise above this, they must seek education, and to acquire this boon they must be stronger and healthier in body. With health, the greatest of all earthly blessings, comes beauty of form and face. Health begets independence, and independence, with a good education, will help them in their choice of a life profession. The women of the present day cannot, perhaps, win all that health offers, but their children should. Train up a child as he should go, physically as well as mentally. To do this, put scientific physical education in the schools and home. Happily the day is past when it was not right for women to be trained in the gymnasium. Our best colleges and preparatory schools for girls and young ladies are not only spending money freely upon buildings for this purpose, but they are employing educated, competent women to teach. At Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr and other leading institutions, much care and attention are being paid to the subject of "training the body."

YESTERDAY little Jack and I took lunch with Mrs. K—, in Brooklyn, and then went to Brighton Beach to hear Anton Seidle's orchestra; it was very fine, and I enjoyed it so much. The whole program was fine. I thought while listening to it, how like an orchestra life is. We each have a part to play that swells and completes the grand harmony of God's plan. We can't all be first violins, nor harps nor sweet-toned cellos. Sometimes we have to wait many measures before we can play at all, but when we do, when our time comes, how complete the whole. We so often think we are doing nothing if we do not play all the time, but God knows the discord it would make, and it is for us to remember the rests in His music, and then there will be no mistake. He is our conductor. He knows every note, and just when it should be struck. I prayed I might fit into my place in His orchestra, and be led by Him.—Excerpt from a letter.

"THE way to elevate men," says Prof. Richard T. Ely, "is to teach them new wants." This is what religion does in an eminent degree. It creates a desire for fellowship with God and with His disciples; a desire for intercourse with Him by prayer; a desire to know His will and to lead a holy life. It creates wants which it is a holy occupation to satisfy, and which teach us how low and selfish is the life of sin, and how glorious is the life of holiness. And so these wants become a means of our elevation from the lower to the higher life; from the earthly to the heavenly life.

Our fathers to their graves have gone;
Their strife is past—their triumph won;
But sterner trials wait the race
Which rises in their honored place—
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.—Whittier.

MRS. ANNA CHAMP, of Greeley, Kan., wife of the editor of the Greeley News, is the author of the Demorest medal contest motto, "From contest to conquest."

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager,
161 La Salle St. - - - - - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President.—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 S. Ashland Av., Chicago, Ill.
Treasurer.—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary.—MISS MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS. CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. S. F. CHAPIN, Charleston, S. C.
MRS. J. R. NICHOLS, Indianapolis, Ind.
MISS E. S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 3: 14.

Yet I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened by the process of the suns.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The desire for happiness is an ineradicable instinct of human nature. It prompted the votive offerings of the old Romans to their god Janus, who was supposed to hold in his keeping peace and war, blight and harvest, hard and easy fortune—the power to make the new year a prosperous and happy one for his votaries, or the reverse. His altars were crowded with worshipers and laden with gifts to secure his favor and insure prosperity for the coming year. In the good wishes and hopes with which we begin the new year faintly survives the sentiment that sought Janus with vows.

"A Happy New Year!" What makes it? How can we be sure of it? Has it wings to fly beyond our reach? or may we hold it with some sure tenure whose secret is within our grasp? What oracle can reveal to us the experiences that lie hidden in the simple characters, 1890? We look wistfully at them, and wonder what joys and sorrows the period they represent has in store for us; whether it will be a year of success or failure, of joy or sorrow; what changes will occur in our families and among our friends, and where the end of the year will find us. We do well to hope for the best and indulge no fears of the future. A cheerful, hopeful spirit enjoys much by anticipation as well as in the present, while a foreboding spirit clouds the brightest present with gloomy moods of evil days to come. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Sufficient, also, is the grace of God to transform that evil, if it comes, into blessing.

"In to-day walks to-morrow." The disposition that can find sources of joy in the present is likely to find them in the days to come. Our best pledge of a happy new year is in making the most of each passing day. Some one has pictured the days as coming to us with veiled faces, bearing only the commonest gifts in their hands, but when they have passed beyond recall, the draped figures become radiant, and the gifts we rejected are seen to be treasures fit for king's houses. No day is commonplace if we only had eyes to see its splendor. If the new year is to be beautiful, all its days must be made to shine. The trouble with our new year's resolutions is that they are made for fulfillment in the future. The present only is ours to enjoy by faithfully discharging its duties. Not the vows made to-day for to-morrow, but the vows fulfilled each day, will make the new year a happy one. Vows broken had better never have been made. Let performance begin with the purpose, and both begin now.

"Trust no future, howe'er pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead;
Act—act in the living present,
Heart within and God o'erhead."

For every one of us the secret of a happy new year is in living it to make others happy. Christ taught us this lesson by precept and example. His earthly years were spent in blessing those about Him; in alleviating their sorrows, supplying their wants, healing their bodies and souls. "He went about doing good"; and we know that He found supreme joy in serving and blessing others. Of Him St. Paul learned that "it is more blessed to give than to receive," and that "He died for us, that they who live should not henceforth live unto themselves." Selfishly sought, in forgetfulness of others, happiness always eludes the seeker. It comes without thought or search to those who live for others.

If, then, we would live this year so that its days will be full of joy for our own souls, we must consecrate them to the service of God and our fellow-men. We serve Him by serving them. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." There is no way to secure the favor of God but by doing good unto all men as we have opportunity. We cannot purchase from Him prosperity or happiness with praises, or gifts of gold, or of the fruits of the earth; but there is ne gift we can bring to Him—the unreserved dedication of ourselves to His service, which will make the coming year the happiest of our lives. The heathen Janus was powerless to shield his votaries from evil, or give them happy years; but our God is a sun and shield, and no good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly. His service insures spiritual joys and consolations so rich and ample as to make all earthly good better, and all trials blessings.

May the new year be to all our readers the best of their lives, the richest in spiritual blessings received and given to others; so that as the passing days and months shall bring them nearer to their eternal home, the goal they seek shall become more distinct and more beautiful to their eyes.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED NINETY.

What shall it bring to THE UNION SIGNAL and its readers? To all may it bring strength to fight the foes of God and Home and Native Land; patience to bear buffetings and reproaches; wisdom to so act that these will be unmerited, and the perfect peace of him whose mind is stayed on God.

What of THE UNION SIGNAL for 1890? Judging of the opening year by the one just past, we believe it will be one of the brightest and best in its history. Going carefully over the announcement for 1889, made one year ago, we find that though it promised large things, not one of its promises has been broken. On the other hand, many grand articles not announced have been given, notably the papers on "Border Line Self-Indulgences," by Rev. George P. Hays, D.D., which have aroused so much interest. The admirable articles by Grace Dodge on "Working Girls' Societies," a number of hitherto unpublished poems and articles by Benjamin F. Taylor, and many other special contributions.

Last year our published list of special contributors embraced over a hundred and twenty-five names; each enriched our pages with valuable thoughts. In addition to these honored names, articles are pledged for the coming months from a large number of distinguished persons, among whom are the following: Elizabeth Stuart Phelps-Ward, Frances Power Cobbe, Edward Bellamy, John G. Whittier, Margaret Sangster, Rev. Joseph Cook, Mary A. Livermore, Lucy Stone, Edward E. Hale, Neal Dow, Mary Lowe Dickinson and Abby Morton Diaz.

The year just closing has been one of bitter attacks upon us and the cause we represent; one of unparalleled misrepresentations by our enemies, but through all we have been enabled to possess our soul in patience, and kept from giving back railing for railing. As we have said before, this is our determined course, while standing "firm for the right as God gives us to see the right," not to allow ourselves, however great the provocation, to be drawn into personal controversy. Our firm purpose is to "wage a peaceful war for God and Home and NativeLand"; to add our full quota of power to the forces battling to enthrone God in government, purity in the home; to usher in that better day when each man's weal shall be all men's care, and when government shall make it "as easy as possible for men to do right, and as difficult as possible for them to do wrong."

To this end, we shall continue to make THE UNION SIGNAL an arsenal of weapons for this peaceful war; arguments, facts, appeals, giving the "thus saith reason, thus saith science, thus saith God," which brings conviction; news from its battlefields all over the world, the clarion notes of its great leaders summoning to the battlefield and to victory; above all, the voice of our Great Commander giving through His Word His will concerning the great movements of the day.

In all this it stands, as it ever has stood, firmly on the foundation—faith in God, love to man, total abstinence, prohibition—advocating

"Mental suasion for the man who thinks;
Moral suasion for the man who drinks;
Legal suasion for the drunkard-maker;
Prison suasion for the statute-breaker."

While temperance is its specialty, nothing which touches humanity is alien to it. Thus the labor question, child labor, legislative protection of women and children, domestic service, bettering the condition of working girls, our public-school system, manual training, dress reform, public charities, prison reform, ballot reform, arbitration, all the questions in social science which are pressing to the front to-day, have claimed and will increasingly claim, attention in our pages. This makes THE UNION SIGNAL an acknowledged power in all philanthropies, as is demonstrated by its increasing circulation among social scientists outside the W. C. T. U. No broader paper, both in the sweep of the interests it represents, and in the circumference of its circle of contributors, exists in America to-day. Its world-wide constituency, and its resultant world-wide outlook, produce a breadth of view nowhere else attainable. Because of these advantages, THE UNION SIGNAL can modestly claim an all-roundedness possessed by few, if any other, papers. It has shown this in the past, it will endeavor to show it in the future.

The nineteenth century is sweeping grandly on to its close; never since creation's dawn were so many mighty movements in progress as now; its last decade may witness mightier revolutions than we now dream of. We would keep abreast of the times in this grand on-sweeping movement, recording it and making our record on each page of its history as it swiftly passes into the press of Time.

Victor Hugo called this the woman's century, and this it is proving to be; for "the ever feminine draweth on." "Woman to the front" has sounded all along the lines, sounded not from her lips mainly, but by the progress of events, the providence that must be recognized as God's voice—woman in the home, prominent as never before, ruling her own kingdom with increased, because enlightened, power; woman in the school, directing its teachings into practical channels to fit the pupils for their life work and make them strong against temptation; woman in the church, recovering her place during the apostolic age as true yoke fellow; woman in the state, looking after the interests of home, of defenceless women and children; woman in prison, trying to lift up those of her sisters who are bowed down; woman in literature, making her impress upon the world's thought; woman in science, in art; above all, in philanthropy, everywhere supplying the missing curve needed to round out man's circle into full completeness. This paper is the woman's Signal, held by hands ready to wave it in glad recognition of every advance movement of women along the line of humanity's good. No less is it the Signal of our brothers, for our work is one, as together we labor and wait for the realization of the Bible ideal: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

As regards material prosperity, no year has opened more auspiciously. During the past year the paper has been increased in size and its price reduced. The W. C. T. U. hosts have rallied to its standard as never before, so that it begins the year 1890 with a subscription list of 75,000. Deeply conscious of the added responsibility which accompanies increased numbers of readers, we shall strive even harder than ever before to make THE UNION SIGNAL worthy to enter a hundred thousand homes, and prove a blessing to every one of them.

JAMAICA GINGER DRUNKARDS.

The sale of Jamaica ginger in prohibition towns has increased so rapidly as to arouse suspicion. The matter has been brought into the courts by prosecution of a grocer in Massachusetts, for violating the ordinance of his town against selling "ales, porter, strong beer, lager beer, all wines and any beverage containing more than three per cent of alcohol." The jury disagreed, and so the defendant went free, but the trial drew attention to a growing danger, and brought out some points valuable as warnings to those who use the ginger ignorantly, and for use in future prosecutions.

State Assayer Sharples testified that the Jamaica ginger sold by the defendant was "pretty good, as Jamaica ginger goes," but that it contained sixty-nine per cent of alcohol, three per cent of purely Jamaica ginger extract, and the rest water. Ordinary grades of whisky, he said, did not contain over fifty per cent of alcohol, so this is twenty per cent stronger than saloon whisky. The Jamaica ginger not only served to increase the strength of the alcohol, but when the whole was used as an habitual beverage, had an effect upon the stomach pernicious in a superlative degree.

Other testimony proved that a taste for this beverage once formed soon became uncontrollable; one case was cited of a woman who sometimes consumed two bottles a day. Medical authorities testified that those who have contracted this habit soon find themselves afflicted with a craving whose intensity none but a sufferer therefrom can imagine.

It is one of the most dangerous forms of inebriety known, hard to break, and if not broken, soon landing its victim in the grave. These facts should banish Jamaica ginger from every home where it has insinuated itself under the mask of a "safe household remedy."

WHITE-RIBBONERS have learned the close connection between drunkenness and non-attendance at school; they have therefore worked actively for compulsory education in many states. As soon as it is secured, they are confronted in large cities with the problem, How shall the miserably poor children be clothed fit for school?

Probably nine-tenths of them are the children of drunkards, as the cases are very rare where the children of sober, industrious men need go ragged. But whatever the cause of destitution, the children are not to blame, and should not be debarred by it from school privileges. Yet how to supply their need without further pauperizing their parents and confirming them in their shiftlessness is a problem. The city might furnish the clothing, but it would require almost superhuman care to prevent such municipal aid from working more harm than good.

In Chicago, the Woman's Club, the leading organization of ladies in the city, was very active in securing the law, and is equally active in solving the problems connected with its enforcement. It works in conjunction with the school authorities; they reporting to its committee, with Mrs. Judge Tuly at its head, cases of actual destitution among children of school age, the ladies undertaking to supply the children with needed clothing.

They have sent out an appeal to churches and various benevolent associations for aid; the school board have given them a school room on the West Side for headquarters, and thither clothing is to be sent. Judicious women receive it, and distribute it to those reported to them by the school agents.

Three hundred and twenty-five cases of destitution were reported during the first two months of the school year. We predict that this work of the Woman's Club will have results more wide-reaching than the clothing of a few hundred children; the knowledge that it brings to the ladies and the influences they bring to bear upon those wretched homes, will help to solve some hard problems in social science.

IT is a well-known fact that physical decay takes place at a much earlier age in the city than in the country. The population of towns and cities is continually renewed from the agricultural class; otherwise they would soon run out. A prominent scientist declares that comparatively few Parisian families survive the third generation. In New York, Boston, Chicago, and other leading cities of the New World, the decadence is less swift, but marked. An observing elderly gentleman who has lived in New York during forty years, states that the children of robust men who were reared in provincial places, grow sharp-featured, pale, and stunted. The grandchildren are still more dwarfed and hatchet-faced; sharp in mind, but small of brain and limb; cunning, given to much pleasure and little thought, the family dies with them or with their scrofulous progeny. "Nine out of ten of the heavy business men of the metropolis," says he, "are country-born and bred. They are head and shoulders above their associates who have been reared within brick walls. Do you ask why?" he continues. "Because the majority of young men live fast, artificial lives. Impure air alone would shorten and weaken children. But add the stimulating conditions which surround them, especially the tobacco habit in which all young men, or almost all, indulge, and you have cause enough for their retrogression. Why, in every walk I take I see young lads of ten or twelve smoking cigarettes. The bootblack and gamin seize the stump of a cigar and greedily finish it. Do you not suppose the blood is tainted, the very fountains of life poisoned through nicotine? They would better be fed on small doses of arsenic. Of course dram drinking follows. They belong together; one paves the way for the other. And so they who are subject to these habits stultify their manhood and poison the lives of their growing children."

IN the single church of the picturesque village of Brookton, N. Y., a privileged number recently witnessed a never-to-be-forgotten scene. Mrs. Annis F. Eastman, a fair, graceful woman, whose face, radiant with inspiration, convinced every beholder that she was divinely called, stood before a Congregational council to prove her fitness for ordination to the Christian ministry. Among those present was the husband of the candidate, Rev. Samuel Eastman, for five years the beloved pastor of the Congregational church of Canandaigua, N. Y. After listening with wonder and admiration to the simple, eloquent testimony of the candidate, and to the clear, original and masterly statement of her theological beliefs, followed by lucid and sparkling answers to the questions of the delegates, the council reported that in their opinion, the church of Brookton had made no mistake in thinking that they discerned the power and presence of the Lord in the ministrations of Mrs. Eastman. Accordingly they concluded by heartily and unanimously calling a meeting for the regular ordination of the candidate. The sermon was preached by Rev. Thos. K. Beecher. It was a striking mixture of Scriptural proof of woman's call to the ministry, of personal application, of happy illustration, and of spiritual power, that could not have originated outside of the Beecher family. But Rev. Richard Davis, who gave the right hand of fellowship, excelled all the others in the reach of his aspirations for woman, and in the power of inspiration with which he forecast her future scope of usefulness. The benediction, pronounced by the Rev. Annis F. Eastman, was a beautiful and fitting close to this memorable occasion. Mrs. Eastman is a member of the W. C. T. U. and a well-known author, her "Pants are Made for Boys" being familiar to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL.

SELDOM has the W. C. T. U. received a testamentary gift, although it is to be hoped that in the future such occasions will be less rare. Mrs. Dinah Mendenhall, of Kennett Square, Pa., died November 22. Among her papers was found the following:

HAMORTON, PA., Dec. 16, 1887.

Six months after the date of my death, for value received, I promise to pay Frances E. Willard the sum of one thousand dollars. DINAH MENDENHALL.

Witnesses { SAMUEL PENNOCK. / DEBORAH A. PENNOCK.

Mrs. Mendenhall was a very earnest advocate of temperance reform, as well as a public and private philanthropist in every sense of that word. Her long life has been full of noble deeds, and her generous gift to our work through Miss Willard testifies to her belief in our measures. When Miss Willard visited Chester county during the recent constitutional amendment campaign, she met this devoted friend for the first time. But this outcome is wholly unexpected. Miss Willard writes that she will consult with the General Officers and the committee on appropriations as to its final distribution.

DR. BOOLE'S new lecture, "The Government Snake Show" is the most unique and striking that has appeared in the lecture field for many years. Its first part is a defence of the government against the aspersions of such fanatics as the W. C. T. U., the Prohibitionists and other enemies of high license; it is made with such a matter-of-fact air, and never a smile on his face when he makes the sharpest hits, that three good sisters actually left the church when he gave it in a western town, because they could not sit still and hear the W. C. T. U abused. Having presented all the arguments that can be brought in favor of high license, in defence of the "government high license snake cage," he throws aside his manuscript, to which he had strictly adhered, turns square around and demolishes those arguments with sledge hammer blows. It is fun for the initiated to watch an audience during his portrayal of the "Great American Snake Show." He begins by asking their most earnest attention, as the subject under discussion is of too grave a character to admit of levity; as he goes on, a puzzled look comes over the audience; then, here and there, one catches the point and breaks into a broad smile, and perhaps receives a reprimand from the speaker for "levity"; but the contagion spreads, until soon the majority of the audience recognize the satire, and feel the force of the reductio ad absurdum. Yet there are always some who, if their faces tell the truth, never discover the point until he turns from the first part to the second.

DO THE friends in Nebraska realize the anomalous position of their state as the field of impending conflict with legal iniquity? Do they realize that the liquor banditti are going to stake their all on the defeat of prohibition in that thrifty commonwealth? Take down your map and note your clean surroundings—Kansas, Iowa, Dakota, prohibition on three sides. To-day Nebraska is a black island in the sea of progress; every unclean, criminal thing the three flanking states will not have, becomes a barnacle on her shores; the saloons, driven out of three states, take out a new license of life in Nebraska—many of them. And at the same time the "James Brothers" in the liquor trade make Nebraska their ambush for clandestine, illicit raids into prohibition territory, trying to halt and plunder the train of peace, safety, purity, and prosperity. As a lawful, high-license swamp for such freebooting against its redeemed neighbors, Nebraska is of great value as a "city of refuge" to outlaws; and all the liquor interest is going to fight the hardest battle in history to keep it so. In view of the situation, therefore, the Nebraska temperance hosts do well to take possession of the field at once. It is so much easier growing good votes before adverse thought is rooted. Let all helpers in adjoining or distant states also feel that they have an interest in rescuing Nebraska. This champion battle-ground between prohibition and high-license must be made the grave of the enemy.

THE cause of prohibition is to have a daily paper in New England. It will soon be published in Worcester.

The Watch-Tower.

But well I know
That unto him who works, and feels he works,
This same grand year is ever at the doors.

***

Miss Mary J. Stille, the newly-appointed secretary of the department of expositions and fairs, a Chester county, Pa., woman thinks we should call our handkerchief salute the white-ribbon salute, and wave above the heads, instead of reaching forward with the handkerchief. This seems to be a good thought.

***

It is a good sign of the times that the mothers of great men are coming in for a share of the hero worship which is nowhere more manifest than in this land where all men are born free and equal. Illustrating this, Mr. Frank Halton, formerly Postmaster-General, a few weeks ago came out with a protest against the carelessness which has neglected the grave of Mary Washington, until it is almost unknown. In response, a fund has been started for the purpose of raising a monument to her memory. In this tribute to motherhood and womanhood, we are all interested, and trust it will be consummated more swiftly and creditably than was the monument of her son, which for years stood unfinished until newspaper derision at home and abroad did what patriotic appeal had failed to do. The enthusiastic treasurer of the fund is Florence Huntly, Washington Post, D. C.

***

The hotel Fredonia in Washington, D. C., was the scene of a brilliant reception on Thursday evening, December 19, the occasion being the presence of several distinguished W. C. T. U. workers in the capital city. The ladies thus honored were Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, the legal adviser of the National Union; Mrs. J. C. Bateham, of Ohio, National superintendent of Sabbath observance; Mrs. Major J. H. Pickler, wife of Congressman Pickler, from Dakota; Miss H. Beach, of the evangelistic work in Colorado, and Mrs. E. S. Cameron, of the Sabbath observance department of Northern California. Among the prominent guests were Senator Blair, Congressman and Mrs. Kerr, of Iowa, Judge and Mrs. Moulton and Rev. Drs. Baldwin and Power.

***

The first annual report of the ward and precinct committee of the Illinois Woman's Alliance, Dr. Fannie Dickinson, chairman, tells of good work done and better work begun in the city of Chicago. Let philanthropic women of other cities organize for the purpose of securing "justice to children"—the Alliance motto—or this progressive metropolis will score another head mark, by taking first rank for cleanliness and the form of godliness which is proverbially next to it. This committee has a cabinet containing as many pigeon holes as there are precincts in the city, 503 in all. Into this cabinet is distributed the name of every woman according to the precinct in which she lives, who desires to aid in securing to all children their constitutional right to pure air and water, proper care and industrial education. Literature upon public sanitation and hygiene is sent to these women, and they are kept posted in city ordinances passed at the instigation of the Board of Health. They in turn report to the headquarters of the Alliance if public service for which taxes are pledged is neglected about their homes; if school accommodations are insufficient in their district, or if children are on the streets during school hours; if the garbage is not collected as often as the Board of Health requires, or if any other ordinances fail of execution in their precincts. This is practical philanthropy which cannot but result well.

***

One white-ribbon leader's practical work is illustrated by the following excerpt from a private letter: "I think I have written you somewhat of the history of Baby Burr. He was a child of unfortunate birth. His mother was a young girl of nineteen who had never been cared for,—her mother dying when she was three years old, and she left to grow up in absolute ignorance and negligence. They came to our W. C. T. U. 'Temporary Home' when the baby was three weeks old. He was seven months old when we took him and the poor mother into our home. His frailness of body and pathetic sadness appealed to me, rather than any beauty or brightness, though from his picture you might think he was such as a little baby. We did not expect he would live or ever be strong, but he is well and happy now. We kept the poor girl-mother until she was thoroughly reformed. She begged me from the first to take her baby. She united with the M. E. Church before she left us, and is truly redeemed, but oh, it is real social purity work to keep such a girl until her feet are planted upon the Rock. I have long held the belief that our homeless children ought to be taken care of right in our own happy homes, and thus saved for God and humanity. This baby has more than confirmed my belief that environment may be more than heredity."

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

A STROLL WITH THE GIRLS.

BY BENJ. F. TAYLOR.

It is a melancholy sight to see a man set forth like one "on business bound" to take exercise, as he calls it, for it betrays a melancholy ignorance. The idea of one stalking off alone, like an African lion by moonlight, for the purpose of recreation!—carrying all his thoughts with him, and returning with wearied muscles, but a mind no more unbent than an Apollo's bow before it was broken! We are sorry for the man who has too much dignity even to kick up his heels or execute a "pigeon'swing," or laugh when there is nothing funny at all.

A game of blind man's buff with somebody's children would have saved many a valuable life early lost to the world, merely because people persist in having the immobility of so many "brown stone fronts."

Here at the West we have few real recreations, whatever pleasant fancies we may indulge on the subject. True, there are steamboat excursions where a pair of strange elbows are playing tattoo on one's ribs, while your own are abroad on the same errand. Then there are railroad excursions when you get ready to die, so far as swallowing the immortal "peck of dirt" will aid in a preparation of an event so momentous. There, too, are the picnics in groves and courtyards, where you cannot lie down without wearing green on your immaculate unmentionables, if not on your coat, as somebody is forever doing in the old song; and where you get a cold in your throat, and something, you don't know what, in your ear; and perhaps, if you are a bachelor, "the mitten," but that one is liable to get anywhere.

A leaky old boat that keeps one body busy bailing, while his companions throw out the line, even if the catch be nothing more ponderous than a sunfish and minnows, with the occasional excitement of an apprehended capsize would do more for the mental health than the whole round of popular recreations; and in snowy winter we should be delighted to see the ladies out-of-doors, with real boots on, making temples as fair as themselves of the willing flakes, or even a snow man, "that counterfeit presentment" of the sort of people who are as careful of their dignity as a market woman with a basket of eggs. There would be the true rouge in it, and faces full of beauty, and a grand frolic withal.

We respectfully submit that it would be a tonic for soul and frame, and vastly superior to the recreation of working green cats in worsted, or putting their own eyes out with an embroidery needle.

If there were a little more of "young America" among the girls, and a little less among the boys, I think it would be an exchange that nobody would have occasion to regret. But by this, I do not mean I would have them your daring, flashing "Lady Di Vernons." Of course not; they should be the very pink of propriety and perfection, but not demure—almost everybody is afraid of a demure woman—one thinks of a devoted mouse; cats are demure; but we should have them out-of-doors, in the free air, not "shopping" or "calling," but breathing and living; pulses tingling with health, hearts burning with happiness. There would be fewer of the little screaming, fluttering, fearful things, so like young chickens on a rainy day, that want to be put up in fine cotton, as if they were cameos and carried in a wicker basket; young ladies who can see a brook without drowning, and leap it, if necessary, as gracefully as so many chamois.

They should not be afraid of a little summer rain, neither should a March wind, that sometimes, we are told, "does" fair cheeks "brown," be as terrible to them as the sirocco.

There is a class of people in the world who have noted these absurdities, and have set off like a troop of horses to reform the world of women; and if we may be permitted to judge, they have made deplorable work of it, going on the principle, it would seem, that if a woman makes a poor woman, she may be manufactured into a tolerable man.

A real live girl in the house must be a very pleasant thing indeed; one who does not wear her hair "done up in combs"—and it is done up, beauty and all—though she is just turned of seven; who has springs in her heels, no guile in her heart, nobody to tell her she shouldn't laugh, and never saw a "fashion plate"; who dances about like a ray of sunshine in a breezy maple, and sparkles all over the house like a globule of quicksilver. But she should have something to do all the while; she should have occupation, the want of which has slain more beauty than consumption, that insidious monster of the North. She should learn to appreciate a fair stitch, and to grow a little enthusiastic over a light, white loaf of homemade bread, but she should never be allowed to call it "lovely," and beggar the language over a baking.

But while her fingers were busy, her heart should be busy too; people are too much afraid of the play of that delicate, irritable, little organ; we would have girls "fall in love"—we have always doubted the cascade part of expression, for the tendency of true love ought to be ad astra, altarward—but we have no doubt as to this, that girls ought to be in love very early,—with their mother first of all; with home and its surroundings; with the old mossy roof, be it ever so lowly; with the trees of pleasant shadows; with the hills that wall the world out; with nature everywhere. If anybody should study the natural sciences, it is the girl. She cannot be too much with nature; that she may be too little, many a fashionable parlor could furnish melancholy and abundant testimony.

How pure, how beautiful the excursions the girls can make in their own fair realm, whose tesselated floor is the strata that geology names and numbers, and whose bounds are that azure field where blaze and watch fires of the starry camps of God!

There, too, is mineralogy, with its wealth of wonder; ornithology with such marvelous beauty, that it makes us think that birds are free-comers of heaven; entomology, (the names are shocking!) for it seems far better that a girl should chase a butterfly than be a butterfly; and then the beautiful monthly, bearing the imprint and damp, from the press of the Almighty, with its embellishments of flowers—what round of thought, of research more beautiful can woman's heart desire? This study of nature seems to us like the toil of the diver for pearls in India seas; though he may not come up pearl-laden, he emerges purified. No print of soiled finger mars nature anywhere; there are no interdicted spots, no "flue closets" in all her borders.

The girl who thus becomes as a pilgrim of beauty, may know less French, perhaps—though, to say the truth, less than the million know are "finished"—what a word for such an abdication—is hardly possible, but she will know more of the living language of the world around her; she will have themes for thought, and thought for words, that, like the old spring in the clefted rock, never fails; she will be simpler, in its sweetest sense; she will be purer, wiser, happier and more beautiful. Than such a being, should she be brown or fair, there is none other more beautiful; the world does not hold it, neither does the imagination create it, nor does it tarry anywhere out of heaven.

Well, setting forth on a thought stroll, we find ourselves in excellent company at last. Beginning without a purpose, we end with being all in earnest; if we have said nothing wise, at least we have said something true, and with a wish no less ambitious than the happiness of the girls of this world.

News from the Field.

JAMAICA.

A VOICE OF APPEAL.

The temperance work here is in its infancy, and the results have not yet shown themselves. The work has been done through the different churches working separately. There are Blue Ribbon armies and Bands of Hope in different parts of the island, but all are working separately. I do not know of any W. C. T. U. organization in any other place than here at our mission. Our union is small, and I fear is not doing what it should do. The people are very ignorant; but some are earnest and faithful in doing what they know how to do, but we need more intelligent workers. When I organized the society, I was not well enough acquainted with the people to do it justly, and have found that "haste makes waste."

The people, as I have said, are ignorant and degraded, but are being lifted up by the gospel. They are negroes and mulattoes. The children are brought up in dens of sin and iniquity, instead of in homes. They never speak of home, but of "our yards." Most of the parents are unmarried, and one woman will have children by different men. Those who are married have been, as a usual thing, living together as husband and wife for years before. There are a few exceptions, but they are very few. There are but few virtuous women in our midst. Living in adultery as so many are, all self-respect is lost. The children run about naked along the road, and we very often see girls and boys nine and ten years old bathing in the rivers together. Women do their washing at the river near the road with only one undergarment on their bodies. The children are taken to the river and let run naked while their clothes are washed. Men and women go half clothed, dirty and ragged. When traveling along the road, you will see young women, or almost so, bathing in the river, and men standing around, and the reverse is true also. The houses and house furnishings are very rude,; often a house has no bed, and we find the sick lying on a few poles with a banana mat spread on them. The rum shops are many, scattered along the road. There is one within almost a stone's throw of our mission. There were two, but one has thought best to leave and put his den in another neighborhood. The men, and a great many of the women, like their drams and pipes. Smoking is universal. Women smoke and drink their porter, ale or beer, while the men drink rum, brandy and other strong drinks.

With the two great evils of impurity and drunkenness in a community, all other sins exist. A great work needs to be done here, but there are very few to do it. There are but few whites in this part of the island, and some of them are living as bad lives as the blacks. We are told that we are in the worst part of the island. The west part is more enlightened and better informed. I have not had the opportunity to visit the west yet, as I am very busy in our school here. If we had some good W. C. T. U. woman to put into this field to organize and have an oversight of the work, a vast amount of good might be done. We need to scatter literature on social purity, temperance, tobacco. and such subjects, so that the people will get a more thorough knowledge of the evils of these things. I have a Band of Hope of forty children, and give temperance instruction in the schools. I would be very glad to answer any questions you might ask, and would thankfully receive any suggestion you might make about the work here. Remember me and our work before a throne of grace.

MARY DILLON.

WEST VIRGINIA.

GLEANINGS.

Quite a number of our unions held public meetings with appropriate programs on November 7, to celebrate Miss Willard's fiftieth birthday anniversary and the fifteenth anniversary of the organization of the National W. C. T. U. All of the local unions have been requested to observe Crusade Day, and to follow. as closely as possible, the program of exercises as mapped out in THE UNION SIGNAL.

The Demorest medal contests are becoming popular in West Virginia, and several have been held lately.

A course of study adapted to the needs of our unions has been prepared and sent out with the hope of increasing our knowledge of the work, and thus strengthening and building up our numbers. Many of them have taken it up, saying it is just what we needed.

Our state organizer, Miss Minnie Hutchinson, has gone South for the winter months, so active missionary work will probably cease until the early spring. She spent two of the autumn months in our interior counties, where very little has been done heretofore. From Nicholas Court House, a union organized on the trip, comes the following cheering news: "Our membership has now increased from the thirty-three who joined when Miss Hutchinson was here, September 8, to forty-five active and forty-three honorary members. Besides this, twenty-six have signed pledge cards." Their honorary membership amounts to a great deal, as they proudly wear the white ribbon, and encourage and assist the regular members in the work.

The union at Centreville, has recently organized a Loyal Temperance Legion for the children, and has arranged to have a temperance reading circle for the honorary members.

The Grafton union is tempting the public to learn temperance truths by means of the eyes. A copy of our scientific temperance instruction law has been placed in the rooms of the public schools; a bracket for literature and a picture of the "Mill and Still" in the waiting-room of their depot; and they expect to have some of the same pictures framed for the barber-shops of the town. May wisdom find entrance through their eyesight!

MAUDE MONTGOMERY.

IOWA.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

In speaking for the minority of Iowa, at Chicago convention, Mrs. Carhart modestly gave the honor of the prohibitory amendment work to others.

This official letter, clipped from the Iowa column in an old copy of THE UNION SIGNAL, will show your readers that high honor is also due Mrs. Carhart for her wise leadership during that successful campaign.

Please note the faith in God which shines so brightly through her instructipns to us.

AN EXPLANATORY LETTER TO ACCOMPANY AMENDMENT PETITIONS.

DEAR SISTERS:—You will please make a thorough and immediate canvass of your town with the inclosed petition. Although we cannot cast our ballot in favor of the amendment, yet we can petition every man to cast his ballot for God and the right, and also show how we would gladly vote for prohibition, had we the privilege. After having made a thorough canvass of your town, have small slips printed containing the petition, inserting the number of signatures before the words "wives, mothers," etc., thus: "We, two hundred wives, mothers," etc. On election day, in your free lunch rooms, and with your best and bravest women at the polls, put one of these slips, with the ballot "In favor of the Amendment," into the hands of every voter. Also have a large poster, a copy of the small slip, posted at every polling place.

Let us baptize all this work with earnest prayer, and, like Jehoshaphat of old, while we are doing all we can, let us give continual praise to God, in faith for the victory He will give us.

Let us not fear to ask great things of our God, "who is able to give us exceeding abundantly above all we are able to ask or think." Read II. Chron. 20.

Yours truly,

MRS. L. D. CARHART,
Pres. W. C. T. U. of Iowa.

May 10, 1882.

DALLAS COUNTY QUARTERLY CONVENTION.

This convened at Dexter, December 4 and 5. Six unions were represented and good reports from the various departments presented. Especial attention was given the evangelistic work; the state superintendent, Mrs. N. M. Arnold, of Des Moines, was present, and conducted the Bible readings and consecration service, all of which were very helpful. Wednesday evening after Bible reading by Mrs. Arnold, Miss Addie M. Estey, of Des Moines, gave a short address. Mrs. Ida Tracey Eppstein read an appropriate selection, in a manner pleasing to all. The program was interspersed with charming music. Thursday a. m., the convention visited the normal school during chapel services. Mrs. Arnold led the devotional exercises, and also addressed the students. President Monroe and his able corps of assistants gave us a very cordial welcome and extended an invitation to the convention to hold evening session at Normal Hall. This was accepted, and Miss Estey addressed a very bright and appreciative audience upon "Home Protection." President Monroe then spoke upon equal suffrage. Miss Estey proved a very acceptable speaker, and completely won our hearts by her earnestness, and the clear, logical way in which she presents prohibition principles. We would commend her to all temperance people, and especially to all our W. C. T. Unions wanting a speaker. The convention was very harmonious throughout. The vexed question, "non-partisan," was neither discussed nor resolved upon; was quietly ignored, as it should be. The publications from the W. T. P. A. and THE UNION SIGNAL were presented by Clara Stephens. Mrs. E. S. Jackson, county president, is an earnest and efficient worker, as this convention testified.

WHITE RIBBONER.

INDIANA.

WARREN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Warren county W. C. T. U. had a rare treat during the first and second weeks of December. On the 7th ult. the semi-annual convention was held at Marshfield, where satisfactory reports and reëlection of officers set the county organization on foot for another year; but the treat was the highly acceptable service rendered by Mrs. L. S. Rounds, W. C. T. U. president of Illinois. She helped us by wise suggestions and plain answers for difficult questions during convention hours, and we felt so much at home with her, that actually we forgot that she was not a native born Hoosier.

Mrs. Rounds spoke on Saturday evening, preached on Sabbath morning, and addressed a large audience again on Sabbath evening, upon the subject of "Social Purity."

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Rounds visited the West Lebanon union, and at night addressed a good audience upon the subject of "Capital and Labor." Tuesday afternoon she went on to Williamsport, our rock-bound, self-satisfied county-seat. Tuesday evening, the address treated of "The Origin, Growth, and D velopment of the W. C. T. U.," an excellent preparation for the speech to follow on Wednesday, "Our Attitude Toward Political Parties."

The W. C. T. U. has been as carefully misrepresented in Warren county as was possible, but since Mrs. Rounds' forcible, irresistible logic, has won an unmistakable victory over prejudice. Thanks to Illinois for her president, and if we borrow sometime again, we hope she will cheerfully lend her. We have had a goodly number of our leaders visit us, and wish to say that none have served us more acceptably than Mrs. Rounds. Our prayers will follow her as she travels up and down her magnificent state, that she may bring it up to her highest ideal.

SADIE B. WHISTLER.

MISSOURI.

FIRST CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The convention was called to order December 12, at Palmyra, by the district president, Mrs. S. L. Tatlow. "Blest be the tie that binds," was sung as an opening hymn. The devotions were conducted by Mrs. Mary Moore, of Palmyra. The roll call of officers was responded to by the district president, secretary, and four county presidents. No work had been done by the presidents of Adair, Putnam, Shelby or Marion counties, though a Y. W. C. T. U. had been formed in the two last named, and Shelby county expects to begin a temperance revival soon. Lewis county reported a new colored union in Canton, a new Y union in the same city, and a good convention held there the 10th ult. Schuyler county reported some good work done by its president. Among other things, she had secured scientific temperance instruction in several schools, (furnishing books for teachers to use,) obtaining space at county fair for temperance literature, and other things which brought our work before the people who were in attendance. Mrs. Alice Williams has recently formed Y unions in Memphis, Canton, Hannibal and Shelbina. Mrs. Blodgett, superintendent of communion wine, had reports from forty-four churches; of these twenty-eight use unfermented wine, sixteen use fermented. The reports of Mrs. Dobyns, superintendent of parlor work, and Mrs. Bosworth, superintendent of UNION SIGNAL and press work, were very meager, as few of the unions had reported. Mrs. Linville, superintendent of social purity, sent an interesting paper, but no report of work done. Mrs. Sickles, superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, gave a very encouraging report, showing that one or more grades were pursuing this study in Hannibal, Palmyra, Kirksville, Macon, Memphis, Lancaster, Unionville, Shelbina, Brashear, and four schools in Clark county. The noontide prayer service was conducted by Mrs. Allen, of Hannibal.

The afternoon session was opened with music, and prayer by Mrs. Tucker. Mrs. Newman, of Canton, favored the convention with an interesting and valuable paper on "The W. C. T. U. a Help and not a Hindrance to the Church." The president requested Mrs. Bosworth to answer the questions placed in the question box. Mrs. Vaughn, of Palmyra, gave a talk on "Local Option," answering many objections to the law, and showing great advantages accrued to cities and towns where the law had been passed, and not been pronounced void. A short talk to the children was given by Mrs. Bosworth.

In the evening, after the devotions by Rev. Mr. Harris, the children sang Anna Gordon's "Welcome Song," and Mrs. La Fon, president of the Palmyra union, gave us a cordial greeting. Mrs. Dr. Hickman, of Hannibal, responded briefly and appropriately, on behalf of the delegates; and then five of the resident ministers gave short, spicy, pointed talks. All heartily indorsed the W. C. T. U. and prohibition, and it is seldom our good fortune to hear so many good things said of our organization in one evening as were said by the Revs. Bond and Lampton.

The devotional exercises the next morning, were conducted by Mrs. Lampton, of Palmyra, who also read an article on "Bible Wines." Mrs. Hoffman was then introduced and gave a brief, but instructive talk, and later a talk on work among colored people. Reports of district officers being next on the program, the convention listened to that of the district president, which was an excellent address. She stated that ninety copies of the state minutes were taken by the unions in the district, and one hundred and ten copies of THE UNION SIGNAL. The treasurer's report showed that $155.59 had been received since May 23, 1889, and that $39.14 still remained in the treasury.

In the afternoon, after a song and prayer by Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. Hickman gave an interesting report of prison work in Hannibal. Mrs. Lundy's report showed that she had taken about fifty subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL, (many names had been secured in Texas and Kentucky,) and had enrolled seventy in the "Baby Band." Miss Minnie King, of Shelbina, read an excellent paper entitled, "What Can I Do?" Mrs. Hoffman gave a talk on the THE UNION SIGNAL and the Temperance Temple. A report of flower mission work in Hannibal, showed that its superintendent, Miss Mary Knighton, had given out nearly four hundred bouquets, crosses or wreaths in the past four months, sending them to the poor invalids, to prisoners, and also to be used at the funerals of the very poor, who have no flowers furnished for such occasions. This work of love performed by one who is herself blind, is doing great good, and Miss Knighton, her little secretary, and flower girls belong to those who shall surely hear the Master's "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these," etc. Mrs. Lundy told of a recent visit to Jennie Casseday, our National superintendent of this department, and the report from this loyal worker who has been confined to her room in Louisville, Ky., for fifteen years, added to what we have just heard of Miss Knighton's work, made us feel that we who are strong and well are doing only a small part of what we ought and could do. On motion, the former district officers were reëlected (as their term of office had but half expired,) for the coming year. Pledges for district work were then taken, but as most delegates were not instructed by their local unions, only about fifty dollars was pledged, three unions and a few individuals giving this amount, and all unions in the district were (are hereby) urged to write the district treasurer, Mrs. S. A. Brown, of Edina, telling her what they will give for district work, and to give an entertainment for that purpose. Invitations for the next convention were received from Shelbina and Edina, and the latter was accepted.

REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE.

Resolved, That, as our organization is a Christian one, we recommend all local unions to use the Bible and Responsive Readings, also the Social Purity and Mothers' Leaflets.

Resolved, That as the future of our country lies in the youth of today, we recommend more active juvenile work to the unions of our district, and that they insist—as the law gives them the right—on scientific temperance instruction in the public schools.

Resolved, That it is the imperative and Christian duty of all active and well established unions to aid in the mission work of organizing unions in our own district. This work means effort and money, which should be given without stint. God loves a cheerful giver.

Resolved, That it is of the utmost importance that the W. C. T. U. push the organization of the society among the colored people. We recommend that every white union shall have its complement in a union among the colored sisters. Humanity and expediency demand this.

Resolved, That we learn with sorrow and amazement that the Vice-President of this great nation has gone into the business that causes crime, disorder and demoralization. We hereby enter our indignant protest and condemnation.

Resolved, That we deprecate the use of alcoholic wine in any of our churches. That which becomes a temptation and "cup of cursing" is not a fitting type of our Lord's shed blood. We urge members of the W. C. T. U. to refuse fermented wine at communion, and to demand its removal from the Lord's table.

Resolved, That as the use of tobacco is harmful, we ask that in church and school this scientific truth be enforced, by right example of preachers and teachers. We also ask that physiology be taught our daughters until they learn that they are not cud-chewing animals.

Resolved, That we condemn all license of the liquor traffic, high or low,—a thing that is morally wrong cannot be made legally right—we condemn all organizations or parties that by advocating the license system, perpetuate the liquor infamy.

Resolved, That as impurity is twin sister to intemperance, we recommend that our women work vigorously on this line, until public opinion recognize the same code of morals for men and women.

Resolved, That the visiting delegates of the first district W. C. T. U. hereby tender to the Palmyra union heartfelt thanks for the cordial welcome they have given them, for the pleasant homes they have provided for them; to the church officials for the use of their church; to the pastors for their friendly co-operation; to the little ones for their song of welcome; to one and all who contributed to the success of the convention, and pray that God will bless you all.

The above resolutions were adopted seriatim. The vote on the following was a tie:

Resolved, That in a government whose "political power inheres in the people," and is derived solely from the "consent of the governed," it is the baldest contradiction and a continued injustice to deprive one half of the people of voice and consent in this government.

The Friday evening session was held in Opera House. Rev. Mr. Vaughn conducted the devotions, and Mrs. Hoffman gave one of her characteristic addresses, logical, masterful, convincing. At the close of the session she was requested to repeat the lecture the next night, but other engagements prevented her from doing this, had she wished so to do.

JULIA M. BOSWORTH,
District Secretary.

WYOMING.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AT ANNUAL MEETING.

As we came together to review the work of the year, we find nine local organizations of the W. C. T. U., and one Y. W. C. T. U. These are at Evanston, Green River, Rock Springs, Laramie and Cheyenne, along the line of the railroad, and at Sheridan, Manville, Douglas and Big Horn in the outlying territory. The Y's are organized at Evanston only.

The Loyal Temperance Legion reports bands at Laramie, Green River and Evanston. Of these organizations, Cheyenne reports fourteen regular members, Green River eight, Sheridan twenty-one, Manville nineteen, and Evanston thirty-six; a total of ninety-eight. The treasurer has sent dues to the National treasury for eighty paying members, and there are fourteen more for whom the dues are about to be sent. Big Horn and Douglas organized with ten each, but from these two points as from Rock Springs and Laramie, we have no report of present membership. The Y's number twelve, and the total honorary membership so far as reported, is thirty-six, thus distributed: Evanston W's, twenty-two; Evanston Y's, six; Manville, six; Green River, six; Cheyenne, six, making 140 in number in some way connected with our work in local unions.

The Loyal Temperance Legions report ninety pledged members at Laramie, fifty-three at Green River, and thirty-two at Evanston, 175 in all. There has been good work done at each of these places, and the numbers who can be interested promise well for the future. The indifference of the W. C. T. U. members in general with regard to this branch of the work, is thought by the territorial superintendent to be the greatest obstacle in the way of its success. Remembering that the hope of every good work is in the right training of the young, we urge greater attention to the organization of children's and young people's societies.

Work has been done within the territory during the past year in the following departments: Prison work, very successfully carried on at Laramie under Mrs. Boyd, territorial superintendent; at Evanston, under Mrs. Kingsbury, and at Cheyenne under Miss Northrup; juvenile work, ably supervised by Mrs. C. C. Donaldson, of Green River; evangelistic work, with Mrs. Granger, of Cheyenne, as superintendent, has been carried on at Evanston, Rock Springs and Green River, with the aid of a little special work from Mrs. Emma Smith, of California, and with substantial aid from Major Hilton, at Laramie and Evanston. The flower mission has been taken care of at Laramie, Cheyenne, and Evanston by the Y's. The distribution of appropriate literature has received attention from most of the unions, and Green River, Evanston, and the Evanston Y's have reading-rooms, with good libraries of books, besides newspapers.

There has been special work in other departments in some unions, and an adaptation of effort to the emergencies of the local work has been sought after. No doubt there has been much good and efficient work done which not only has not been reported, but cannot be. May the year upon which we now enter see an encouraging advance all along the line, and may we come up to our next meeting with such work done as we can present before the Lord with the prayer, "The work of our hands—establish Thou it."

CHARLOTTE FISHER, Cor. Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

DELAWARE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The semi-annual convention of our county was held in the M. E. Church at Linwood, November 21, the president, Mrs. Thos. McCanley, presiding. A very cordial welcome was given by Miss Isett, of Linwood, which was responded to by the president. An excellent paper on "Sabbath Observance" was read by Mrs. Miller, of Media.

The devotional meetings, in the afternoon, led by Mrs. Agnes Ochletree, of Chester, was a very spiritual meeting, inspiring all with a greater zeal for the work which we have to do. Miss Carrie Wilson, our delegate to the National Convention, gave a most interesting report, which was accepted with thanks. The evening session was very pleasant, the choir of the church furnishing some excellent music, the hymns sung being exceedingly appropriate to the addresses which were given. Our president delivered an able address, which was profitable to all. Mrs. Fulton, of Chester, read a paper on "Social Purity," elevating to those who heard it, and showing that the subject was near to her heart. Mr. Isett, the pastor of the church, made a few remarks relative to the late campaign, which were well received. The convention closed with the universal feeling that it had been a day well spent, and with the determination to not "weary in well-doing."

MRS. ELLA L. HANNUM,
Rec. Sec.

CHESTER COUNTY CONVENTION.

The first quarterly convention held in Chester county since the break in our W. C. T. U. was held at Phœnixville on Thursday, December 5. Songs of rejoicing and praise are heard from every quarter. The convention was the finest quarterly one ever held in the county, so the oldest members say. There were thirty-five unions represented, and over two hundred delegates and visitors assembled in the Central Lutheran Church. All the state officers were present except the treasurer, and word, of counsel and cheer from our brave little state president. Mrs. Mary H. Jones, were a source of strength and hopes Other distinguished visitors present were Mrs. Olive Pond Ainies, state recording secretary; Mrs. H. H. Forrest, state corresponding secretary; Mrs. Oberholtzer, state superintendent of narcotics, and Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, of Massachusetts; all of whom addressed the meeting, to its pleasure and benefit. It was truly a wonderful gathering. One woman said, "I have wept more tears of joy to-day than ever I shed in sorrow." We are convinced that the work will go on with more energy and enthusiasm than ever before. The new county president, Mrs. Ella M. Gordon, successor to Mrs. Richard Darlington, presided for the first time and won the hearts of all by her gentle, fervent spirit. A very full report of the National Convention was read by Miss Harriet McIntire, and one from the state by Mrs. Elma M. Preston. The music was plentiful and inspiriting. The delicious hot lunch furnished by the Phœnixville union was beyond description. Literature was liberally distributed, committees appointed to carry out new and enterprising projects, and resolutions were passed testifying to the loyalty of Chester county to the National; condemning the White Ribbon, which has heretofore been our state organ, for publishing "several articles of an objectionable character in the November number of its columns, at which we are pained beyond measure, deeming its introduction unprofitable in our homes"; and extending hearty thanks to the women of Phœnixville union for their entertainment.

The out-going trains bore away a happy, earnest band. One car was filled with white-ribboners, and the time to Frazer was spent in singing "Blest be the tie that binds," "Rescue the Perishing," "My Country 'tis of Thee," etc., etc. The railroad officials declared that they were sorry to part with the happy passengers and the music. Peace and harmony reign among us once more, and we believe Chester county, in spite of her trials, will still continue the banner county of the state.

W. C. T. U.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MISS WILLARD writes:—"Mrs. C. T. Cole, of Mt. Pleasant, Ia., has been made associate superintendent of the department for the promotion of social purity. Mrs. Cole has developed unusual power as a speaker, and has built up the work in Iowa into encouraging proportions.

She will go out to speak as invitations indicate, and all state presidents and superintendents are urged to write her, asking help. They will find the financial phase of her plans not at all burdensome. Among the subjects of lectures by Mrs. Cole are the following: 'Happiness, and How to Find it'; 'Danger Marks'; 'The Child as a Factor in Society'; 'The Bible — How it Meets the Deepest Need of To-day'; 'Helps in Mother-Work'; 'Address to Young Women.'"

MICHIGAN CITY, Indiana, W. C. T. U. is doing active work this year. Thanksgiving Day was observed by the public schools as an occasion for contributing to the relief of the city's poor. By special request the W. C. T. U. took charge of the distribution, and gave out great quantities of provisions and clothing. A dozen ladies and several teams were kept busy supplying over fifty needy families. December 22 was observed as Crusade Day, a service being held in the Methodist Church in which a number of leading members of various churches took part in short addresses, readings and music.

A CORRESPONDENT writes as follows, December 9: "We had such a treat this afternoon at the regular meeting of the Boston union. Our dear Miss Willard was with us, and our hearts burned within us as she talked of the new and sweet way which had opened before her, because of a deeper consecration of self—body, soul and spirit—to Christ; tender, loving words, full of longings for all the white-ribbon women to be more fully in the Spirit, and rich in that grace which ever pervades the speech of our beloved National leader. "Nearer, My God, to Thee," sung by our own sweet songstress, Mrs. Alice Osborne, together with the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," all joining in the chorus, prepared us for the spiritual feast in the Bible reading by Miss Scovel. The latter, with that earnestness of manner and assurance of faith in God's truth which belongs to those who have tested these truths, spoke of the joy of that liberty "wherewith Christ hath made us free," together with the blessings which must come to those who seek a personal and intimate acquaintance with God the Father. It was a meeting long to be remembered, the influence of which must be felt for time and eternity. I know that I shall be able to do better work because of the strength gained in those precious moments."

THE present address of Mrs. Cornelia B. Forbes, president of Connecticut W. C. T. U., is 152 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford, Conn.

STRONG resolutions, breathing the utmost loyalty to the National W. C. T. U. and its president, and to the prohibition of the liquor traffic, were passed by the Du-Page county, Illinois, convention in recent session.

ONE of those happy things which now and then brighten the editorial sanctum, came to THE UNION SIGNAL office, not long ago, in the form of a photograph of a baby whose very looks bring sunshine to the heart, so sweet and bright and lovely is this little namesake of the National president, "Frances Willard Groo," of Middletown, N. Y., born October 19, 1888, the day of the opening of the National Convention in New York City. All good be with the dear little maiden, now and forever!

THE president of Arkansas W. C. T. U, Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, sends loving words in regard to the death of Mrs. Emma J. Rice, the superintendent of mothers' meetings, and a most interested, faithful worker. The society is filled with sorrow at her loss. Appropriate resolutions were passed by the union. The funeral services were conducted under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. They carried her tenderly to the State Headquarters, accompanied by her family, where they were met by a large company of sympathizing friends. The Rev. Dr. C. B. Besse conducted the service. After the singing of "Jesus keep me near the cross," which was a favorite hymn of Mrs. Rice and was often sung by her when about the Master's business, he spoke of her life and work. He commended her example as a wife, a mother, a friend and a citizen, also her work in the W. C. T. U. He told how, by her influence, one town had been rid of the rum curse, and thanked God that in that blessed home to which she has gone her heart will not be made to ache because of sin and misery. Her life was a daily witness to the gospel she taught.

THAT must have been a delightful meeting which was planned for to be held on Crusade Day in Tremont Temple, Boston, at which Mrs. Livermore, Mrs. Barney, Mrs. A. J. Gordon, Dr. Brodbeck, and Dr. Arthur Little were to speak, and Mrs. Alice J. Osborne was to sing. May its echoes reach the readers of this paper in a fuller record, and inspire every heart to better service!

MRS. S. M. I. HENRY writes, December 12, of her recent evangelistic trip in Missouri: "The work has been blessed. Have attended three conventions in Missouri, beginning in St. Louis, November 19; Arrow Rock, the 26th, and Fayette, December 5th and 6th; have given twenty-four addresses at different points in the vicinity of their conventions. On Sunday last, at Fayette, I addressed a splendid audience of young men in the afternoon, and felt that it was an occasion worth traveling a thousand miles to find. They received my message in a way to warm my heart for a long time."

STILL later, word comes from the corresponding secretary of Kinmundy, Ill., where Mrs. Henry has been holding a series of meetings, concerning which she says: "Our people were delighted with her, and all enjoyed the services. We have long felt the need of evangelistic effort in our W. C. T. U. work; and now feel that as a union we have been built up and made stronger by Mrs. Henry's visit. Would that all our unions might have just such an uplift in thought and work as this earnest worker's soul-stirring words will give!"

The Crisis is a bright little monthly paper, published by Mrs. I. N. Taylor, at Edinburgh, Erie county Pa., at the wondrously small subscription price of five cents per year. It is full of truths about high license, the labor question, and all current topics that interest temperance people, and THE UNION SIGNAL wishes it success and a large circulation among W. C. T. U. women everywhere, [illegible] in Pennsylvania.

WILL the authors writing under the nom-de-plume of Kit Clover and A. Tourmaline, send their address to this office at once.

THE W. C. T. U. of Clear Water Harbor, Fla., mourns the loss of a beloved member, Mrs. S. S. Woodruff, who passed away December 6, 1889. She went there from Hannibal, Mo., in 1885. Soon afterward she organized a union here, of which she was made president. She has been the leader and a most efficient worker in the union, and it has suffered an irreparable loss by her death.

NOTICES.

The prison and jail department of New York state W. C. T. U. is publishing a calendar with twelve monthly leaves in the center. The card is headed "With Greetings from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union." "So teach us to number our days," etc., and the Lord's Prayer is below. On the back of the card are the Commandments. I failed to secure funds for the daily leaf calendar, but can issue the present, with monthly leaves, to supply the three prisons of my state. The card is to be handsomely engraved, from a design by one of our best articles, and the selections are suitable not only for penal institutions, but also for the home, the school-room, offices, steam-boats, railway stations, barber's shops, hospitals, asylums; wherever a calendar is used, we would like to take our "Greeting."

I will send specimen calendar to any address for ten cents in stamps; twelve for one dollar, postage prepaid; fifty or more at the rate of seven dollars per hundred, express charges to be paid by the receiver. The money must accompany all orders, either in postal-notes, express-orders or bank drafts on New York. Address Mrs. R. H. Bloom, 52 Clark street, Auburn, N. Y.

A Bible, Bagster edition, was found after the National Convention, which must be a serious loss to its owner, being marked in the most careful manner, as if by one of scholarly habits, one passage being compared with another. It is in safe keeping at Rest Cottage, and any one writing to Mrs. Mary Hayes Jones, Evanston, Ill., care Miss Frances E. Willard, can receive full information about this Bible, which, it is hoped, may lead to its recovery. Mrs. Mary H. Jones, president of Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., lost a diamond ring during the convention, and Mrs. Mary J. Stille also of Pennsylvania, a good knife. If any information is to be had concerning these articles, it may be left at 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

Official Communications.

DEPARTMENT FOR PROMOTION OF SOCIAL PURITY.

It is intended to give a series of brief suggestions under this department from its different workers, and the following is from Mrs. C. T. Cole, of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, the new associate superintendent. Another will follow from Mrs. Dr. Kellogg, superintendent of mothers' meetings (under this department), from Dr. Kate Bushnell, evangelist of the department, and so on. These general announcements will then be collected in a leaflet for 1890. FRANCES E. WILLARD, Nat. Supt.

En route in Ct., Dec. 16, 1889.

SUGGESTIONS BY MRS. COLE.

What can we, as women, do to coöperate with the White Cross Army to promote its work?

We need a clearer comprehension of the fact that women are everywhere the queens of society; that social standards rise or fall just as women in united ways raise or lower the social scepter; that men will always respect and follow the standards that women combine to hold. Women need to be educated to a realization of this great responsibility.

White Cross work can hardly be started in any community without certain preparatory work that can be most effectually done by womanly effort. There must be an arrest of thought, an awakening from the fatal lethargy that pervades society, and even the Christian church, concerning this double standard of morality, and all that grows out of it; there must be the creation of sentiment in favor of higher standards and nobler ideals. This can hardly be accomplished without the spoken word, a trumpet-call from pulpit or platform by some of the accredited speakers, some man or woman called and anointed for this difficult work. This is precisely what our unions everywhere can do. Through this chain of organization all things are possible. However remote the speaker desired, and however hopeless to secure for a single place, a line of consecutive appointments may be arranged, thereby insuring comparatively easy terms for each place, and the almost simultaneous awakening of a whole district or state.

When the ice of indifference and reserve is thus successfully broken, the work can be still further forwarded by the distribution of literature; by holding other public meetings addressed by local speakers, by wise selections or original articles in the local newspapers. When this introductory work has been sufficiently strong and thorough, it is quite possible and most desirable to hold a special Sunday meeting for men only, addressed not only by the clergy, but by elect laymen, including a physician when possible. After the earnest, direct appeals possible only at such a meeting, the White Cross pledge may be presented for signatures, placing in each signer's hand a copy of the pledge and one or more of the carefully prepared White Cross leaflets to read himself, and loan to his friends. Such meetings may be followed by organization and the noble work of spreading these principles; of protecting the weak; of redressing wrong; of cleansing the moral atmosphere, and making life easier for all.

The White Shield stands for all forms of purity work for and among women; rescue work wherever possible, preventive work everywhere. In this last, every woman can lend a hand; and it ought to be understood that there is no place, however small, or sheltered, where it is not needed—that all children and all young people need it. To be effective, we must have a strong, united effort. And to this end we urge,

1. A thorough canvass of every community with the beautiful, significant White Shield pledge for all women over sixteen. Leave always a card copy of the pledge and a helpful, awakening leaflet. Keep a record of the number of women who decline to sign it, with a memorandum of the reasons they give. Let each signer clearly understand that by this signature she does not necessarily join any organization or agree to pay any fees, but that she thus lends a hand to this great world movement, that she thus falls in line with the New Crusade.

2. Make an earnest effort to introduce the juvenile pledges into schools, Sunday-schools, Loyal Temperance Legions, and Societies of Christian Endeavor. The White Shield pledge for girls, "Daughters of the Temple," and the Silver Cross for boys.

3. Establish a series of mothers' meetings for all women who can be induced to attend. Make out a list of vital topics for, at least six months in advance, with carefully selected leaders. Publish those programs in neat and attractive form, with a cordial invitation to all who receive them to attend, and a request that they extend the same invitation to their friends and neighbors. The leadings on each topic should be carefully prepared, never covering over thirty minutes, to be followed by a discussion which must be strongly guided and held strictly to the topic, and far above all hint of gossip.

Send to the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, for programs, literature and helps for these meetings.

4. Take The Philanthropist and circulate on the Magazine Club plan—making each number reach ten families.

5. Try in every way to awaken new interest in our public schools and in superintendents, teachers and janitors. Try to secure competent women with mother-heart and mother-eyes, on every school-board. Insist that school premises, especially play-grounds and out-houses, shall be kept as free from everything that defiles the heart or imagination as our family sitting-rooms.

6. Use all possible effort to secure better protection and better wages for working women. Encourage "Working Women's Associations" and "Travelers' Aid Work." Cultivate a deeper interest, a more Christian spirit toward domestics, "the strangers within our gates." Realizing that as women, in a very deep sense, we are both our brothers' and our sisters' keepers, and that we cannot afford to offend or even neglect "one of the least of these little ones."

7. Work for improved legislation for the protection of both girls and boys. Try to secure in every state a home, similar to "The Benedict Home" in Iowa, which shall stand for saving the poor girls who everywhere stretch out appealing hands in the baptism of their first motherhood. Work for reformatories for women, where vagrant and incorrigible women and girls may be isolated from society, with all possible means of reform. Open in cities and large towns such institutions as the "Anchorage Mission" of Chicago, "The Florence Mission" of New York. "The Bethany Home" of Minneapolis, and, in connection with these the "Life-Saving Service," heretofore explained and urged.

RAILROAD DEPARTMENT.

MY DEAR SISTERS:—Since the National Convention we have had much encouragement in the railway department, and hope we shall soon be able to begin the work of organizing the Railroad Temperance Associations as the cards and badges will soon be ready. We hope there will be earnest work done along this line; the blue ribbons will take the place where badges are not at hand. We greatly desire that special effort shall be made to hold a noon meeting on the first Tuesday of the New Year, January 7, 1890, at some office, shop, or wherever a convenient place can be secured. We want all to remember Tuesday as the railroad day. Let our railway men know that they are remembered. We attended the noon meeting held in Chicago & Northwestern shops, by Secretary Cook. He had a little organ, kept there for these meetings. I found the influence of that meeting in Nebraska; also met another who was converted through the noon meetings held in the L. & N. shops, by Mrs. Soule, of Louisville, Ky.

We had some work in Creston, Iowa; good attention at noon meetings, also at Plattsmouth, Neb., where we enjoyed a lively county convention. The Y's secured the opera house, where all met together, marched two by two from their various schools, and we had a children's meeting, over one thousand strong. We had an all-day meeting with a number of others in Omaha. In the W. P. carpenter shop we were surprised to find a large platform erected for a number of visitors; then seats for employes. A number of the state officers of the W. C. T. U., railroad officials, ministers and their wives, with others attended these meetings, and all felt it was good to be there; much has been accomplished through this means of grace. We held a good meeting on short notice in the freight office at Lincoln.

We had a grand railroad mass meeting in the opera house at Omaha; also one of unusual interest at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where several hundred railway men and their families were gathered. A blessed work commenced here through the faithfulness of two or three consecrated railroad men. Oh I find so many hungry hearts everywhere. My dear sisters do ask the Lord to help you! Get good, suitable cards or tracts for the New Year, and if you can't do any more than to have a few singers (take books, and you will find "boys" in every shop that can help you sing) and distribute your literature.

Let me hear of your efforts. We hope soon to have literature in foreign languages; let me know what you discover is most needed in your community, make special inquiries about this on the 7th. Where practicable do hold the cottage meetings.

We have a large supply of "wall posters"; can fill orders now, prepaid at one dollar a dozen; by mail, ten cents apiece. JENNIE SMITH, Nat'l Supt.

Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Publisher's Notes.

Now For 1890!

The spirit of bitterness against the W. C. T. U. is abroad, there's no doubt about that. Shall we then say and do nothing till it quiets down? Hardly. In the first place there are some well meaning—possibly—folks who won't let it die down, and in the second place the leaven will go on and on, unless the remedy is applied. The very best thing to do, of course, is to get the people we think to be misguided to reading THE UNION SIGNAL. Surely, but How? How?

How does it come that over 70,000 get the paper now every week? Somebody had to ask somebody else to take it and they took it! "Well, but we find so much more bitterness than there used to be; people will not subscribe." Well, get them to to take it five weeks on trial, then. Some will refuse even that, but not many. One friend in Massachusetts last fall obtained 250 ten-cent names for us, and writes us December 21: "I have already secured some names for 1890.

Not One Refusing

who is a trial subscriber. All say it is the best paper they have ever seen, and some ask 'When are you coming to take my name?' "

This is a good record, but one that any one can duplicate. We write now to specially urge our friends to get short-term subscribers. We pay well for the work, and if we could get 1,000 workers to agree to canvass for short termers, would offer cash prizes well worth receiving. Write for circulars regarding this work. Let us buckle on the armor, there's a lot of hard fighting to be done yet, and every subscriber you get for THE UNION SIGNAL helps in the battle for right. The great truth now needed to be discerned in this country seems to be that the hope of the country lies in brave and independent thought and action, rather than in any one political party. To help this discourse to be practical, we make two good offers, viz:

No. 1.

To send THE UNION SIGNAL for five weeks, together with a copy of Conklin's Handy Manual, for the price of the Manual alone, viz., 25 cents.

No. 2.

To send The Home Magazine one year, (price 50 cents) and THE UNION SIGNAL five weeks for only 40 cents for both! This offer is a wonderfully generous one. The commission offered to short-term workers holds good in both these offers.

In Prison—Behind Bars

Are the men who have learned because others have a license to sell liquors is no protection whatever to them, that they are the dupes; the government has a part of their money, the city or village another part, and the man who sold the fiery stuff that stole their brains has the largest part, while they have the experience—behind the bars. If ever men do have a good chance to see what exceedingly great fools they have made of themselves, it is when they learn there is one place where even the government of the United States cannot sell a license; where that money, so desirable to have, according to some who bear Christ's name, cannot be paid in by the accommodating distiller, brewer, or saloon-keeper. Let us help these men "to come to themselves" in this their time of enforced prohibition, by sending them THE UNION SIGNAL and our other papers. We are told by all the prison officials, that THE UNION SIGNAL is most eagerly read by these unfortunates. To help on this truly philanthropic work we will agree to receive subscriptions during January only for papers to be sent to prisons, almshouses, jails, workshops, reformatory institutes, etc., at the following low rates:

THE UNION SIGNAL, Young Crusader, and Der Deutsch-Amerikaner all one year each, only $1.

THE UNION SIGNAL alone, only 50 cents.

You are not so situated that you can do jail visiting, perhaps, but here is an opportunity to send an evangel in your place. We cannot, however, hold the offer open more than through the month of January. One month should be time enough for action, surely?

Worthy Your Support.

The Deutsch-Amerikaner is a paper which appeals for support to every intelligent German in the country who believes in temperance. It has greatly improved in appearance and literary merit during the past year, so that a Chicago gentleman who is a judge of such things said he felt that it was a paper of which Germans might well be proud. To sustain such a paper requires labor and money. The editors are giving the former and doing their utmost to make it worthy of patronage, and it ought to be generously sustained by all who appreciate such an instrument as this is for promoting a healthy moral sentiment. The paper is now a semi-monthly and is offered at the exceedingly low price of fifty cents a year, or if taken in clubs of ten at forty cents or four dollars for the club. There are two columns in English edited by Mrs. Grubb who gives an idea of the purpose and aim of the paper to those who do not read German.

The Young Crusader.

Have you considered his claims? May he come to see your folks during 1890? Especially your young folks? Beautifully illustrated, full of good stories and good talks with numberless ideas for self-improvement—with exceptionally good special exercises—Flower, Fourth of July, Harvest, etc., etc. Where can you find a better use for fifty cents than in sending the journal to your own children or to some home where no such paper ever by any chance comes? Specially good attractions are under way for next year. We want you to help the young man to a firm subscription foundation.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB., ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A Great Book For Agents.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's new book, "My Story of the War," is booming. Rev. George F. Magoun, D. D., President of Iowa College, recently wrote:—

"My experience as secretary of the Iowa Sanitary Commission had so prepared me to appreciate this rare story that after opening it I found it difficult to lay it down, even for a moment. Every word of the 700 handsome pages had to be read. It was largely done with swelling of heart and not a few tears. Did ever a gifted and eloquent woman have such a tale to tell before? Did ever a tender-hearted, patriotic, and right-loving woman of any land do such a work as is here recorded? Were there ever such memoirs of courage, sacrifice, great-heartedness, and love 'stronger than death' to be gathered up and enshrined by the heart and mind of one who was so largely a part of it all? Until sensibility to what is most affecting in real life and real woe is dead in men, Mrs. Livermore's book will be a noble one, a moving one."

This grand work is published by Messrs. A. D. Worthington & Co., Hartford, Conn., and is sold only by subscription. They offer great inducements to men and women agents on this justly popular book.

A Visit To Washington.

So much has been said of Washington organs, that this paper has sent one of its representatives to visit the world-renowned Organ factory of Cornish & Co., and to examine in person the splendid $50 organ which they offer in a large advertisement in our paper this week.

Our representative found the organ to be precisely as represented in their advertisement; strictly first-class in every particular, and the guarantee which Messrs. Cornish & Co. give for ten years is as good as gold; because they are an entirely responsible firm, and do precisely as they agree to do.

We have no hesitation whatever in strongly urging our readers to take advantage of the extraordinary installment offer, which they make in this issue; it is a bargain not to be had every day in the week. Their large Catalogue, with special terms of payment, can be gotten free by addressing the manufacturers, Messrs. Cornish & Co., Washington, N. J.—[Editorial from THE CHRISTIAN AT WORK.]

The new Singer machine with its large drive-wheel and the Pearl—both favorites with the ladies. Prices low. Write to M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 Lake St., Chicago, for circulars.

"A New Administration."

A new administration is wanted in many a household, but this desire will vanish if the head of the house will provide the laundry department with the Empire Wringer, made at Auburn, N. Y. Its excellencies save more than half the labor with better results than the ordinary wringer, outwear two, hence economy and satisfaction are both obtained.

The Annual Nutmeg Plant.

This valuable plant is not like the trees that bear our nutmegs of commerce, but is an annual, growing in a short time to a height of from 2 to 2½ feet, with branching habits and beautiful, finely-cut foliage. As will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere in this paper, Samuel Wilson, seedsman of Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa., offers a few seeds of this valuable plant in connection with other choice and beautiful flower seeds at a price so reasonable that every one should give them a trial and raise their own nutmegs.

CATARRH
HAY FEVER
CATARRHAL DEAFNESS

A NEW TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been discovered which permanently cures the most aggravated cases of these distressing diseases by a few simple applications made (two weeks apart) by the patient at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free by A. H. DIXON & SON, 337 and 339 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

PAINLESS BEECHAM'S PILLS EFFECTUAL
THE GREAT ENGLISH MEDICINE
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

For Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES. This is no fiction. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one Box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be a Wonderful Medicine.—"Worth a guinea a box."—BEECHAM'S PILLS, taken as directed, will quickly restore females to complete health. For a

WEAK STOMACH; IMPAIRED DIGESTION; DISORDERED LIVER;

they ACT LIKE MAGIC:—a few doses will work wonders upon the Vital Organs, Strengthening the muscular System; restoring long-lost Complexion; bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are "facts" admitted by thousands, in all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PATENT MEDICINE IN THE WORLD. Full directions with each Box.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN & CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York.
Sole Agents for the United States, who (inquire first), if your druggist does not keep them,

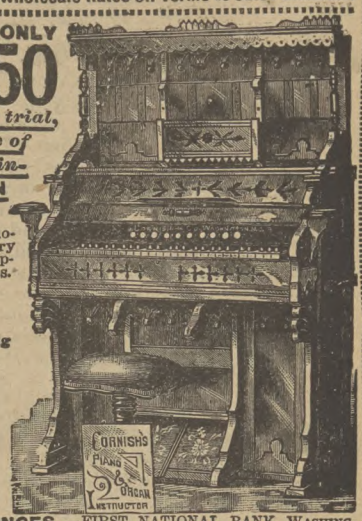
WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS ON RECEIPT OF PRICE, 25 CENTS A BOX.

CORNISH'S (OLD ESTABLISHED AND RELIABLE) ORGANS AND PIANOS!

THE ONLY FIRM OF MANUFACTURERS IN AMERICA selling direct to Consumer. From Factory to Family at Wholesale Rates on Terms to suit Purchaser.

$75 ORGAN (EXACTLY LIKE THIS CUT) FOR ONLY $50
$15.00 CASH SOLD FOR After ten days' trial, and the balance of price, $35, to be paid in 7 monthly installments of $5 each. OR IF CASH IS SENT WITH ORDER, WE WILL SPECIALLY ACCEPT $45.00.

CORNISH'S Specially designed Cabinet Organ, Style "Canopiletta," No. 10,000, contains 3 sets Orchestral toned Resonatory Pipe Quality Reeds; 5 Octaves; 10 Solo Stops; 2 Octave Couplers (Bass and Treble); 2 Knee Swells and all late improvements."
Dimensions.—65 in. high, 48 long, 21 wide.
WARRANTED FOR TEN LONG YEARS.
SOLID WALNUT CASE, HIGHLY FINISHED.
Handsome Stool and large Instruction Book, making a Complete Musical Outfit.



HOW TO ORDER. Send a reference as to your responsibility from any Banker, Postmaster, Merchant or Express Ag't, and Organ will be shipped at once on Ten Days' Test Trial, and if not, after trial, satisfactory, you can return it and we will pay freight charges both ways. YOU RUN NO RISK.

REFERENCES.—FIRST NATIONAL BANK, WASHINGTON, N. J., any Commercial Agency in the U. S., and thousands of persons who for the last 20 years have purchased instruments of our manufacture.

CORNISH'S GRAND, SQUARE AND UPRIGHT PIANOS

Magnificent New Designs, finest materials, wholesale prices, upon terms to suit all purchasers. Shipped to any part of the civilized world, on free test trial.
NO MONEY REQUIRED UNTIL YOU ARE SATISFIED!
We want every reader of this paper to WRITE TO-DAY for our 20 pp. Illustrated Catalogue. YOU CAN SAVE MONEY. WRITE whether you want to buy now or not. Our Catalogue will interest you and you can get it for nothing.

Address: (Mention Paper.) CORNISH & CO. (OLD ESTABLISHED AND RELIABLE,) WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

BURPEE'S BEST SEEDS FARM ANNUAL (WB)
handsomely illustrated with colored plates painted from nature, tells all about the RARE NOVELTIES of sterling merit, including which cannot be obtained elsewhere. It is mailed FREE to all who want really first-class Warranted Seeds.
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

HOME LEAFLETS.

1. Mothers' Meetings—Past and Present. Mary Allen West.
2. Children in the Church. Rev. C. C. Harrah.
3. Jesus Christ the Emancipator of Women. Rev. C. C. Harrah.
4. Food Suggestions. Mary G. Underhill.
5. Mothers and the Public Schools. Mrs. D. Beatley.
6. Obedience. Henry Ward Beecher.
7. Temperance Training in the Home. Mary Allen West.
8. A Mother's Experience in Non-Alcoholic Medication. Mrs. Joel Swartz.
9. Mrs. Klyne's Life Work. Alvira M. Irish.
10. "Let us Live with our Children." Mrs. C. R. McCartney
11. Reverence. Mrs. C. R. McCartney.

Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... 1.50
Per 1,000 ..... 10.00

Frances Raymond's Investment; or, The Cost of a Boy. By Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. A touching story bringing out a great truth ..... .50

The Year's Bright Chain. Compiled by Alice M. Guernsey. A beautiful Willard gift book printed in two colors, and prefaced with a new and elegant steel plate portrait of Miss Willard ..... .50

TALKS WITH A CHILD.
FOR MOTHERS ONLY.

1. The Body, and How to Protect it. Mary A. Lathbury.

This series, in the most beautiful and interesting way, sets forth the talks of a mother with her little child, concerning the right and wrong uses of our bodies.

Price, each ..... $ .03
Per 100 ..... 2.00

LEAFLETS FOR MOTHERS' MEETINGS.

1. Letter of Ellice Hopkins to the Women of America.
2. Predisposing Causes. Kate Lindsay, M. D.
3. Early Perverting Influences. Irma A. Jones.
4. Danger to our Girls. L. Anna Ballard, M.D.
5. Dress and Vice. Frances E. Willard.
6. Pitfalls for our Boys. J. H. Kellogg, M. D.
7. Narcotics. Lida B. Ingalls.
8. Aids to Impurity in Both Sexes. Rose W. Bryan, M. D.
9. Bad Hygiene vs. Virtue Bessie V. Cushman, M. D.
10. Literature and Vice. Anna Garlin Spencer.
11. Responsibility of Parents. Kate C. Bushnell, M. D.
12. Some Legal Aspects of the Question. Martha K. Pearce, LL. B.

Price, each ..... $ .02
Full set ..... .10
Ten numbers and over, at the rate of 50 cts. per 100 (½ ct. each).

MISCELLANEOUS LEAFLETS.

1. What Shall be Taught the Children? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

Price, each, 1c.; per 1,000 ..... $4.50

2. Alcohol and Health.

Price, each, 1c.; per 1,000 ..... $3.75

3. { Our Bondage. Frances E. Willard.
   { Mat-Women. Frances Power Cobbe.

Price, each, 1c.; per 1,000 ..... $6.00

4. An Appeal to Mothers. Frances E. Willard.

Price, each, 1c.; per 1,000 ..... $6.00

5. Bible Talk—"The Master Calleth for Thee." Frances E. Willard.

Price for 5 ..... $ .10
Per 100 ..... 1.50
Per 1,000 ..... 12.00

Platform Voices.—By Julia Ames. A book of popular temperance recitations. - - - - - $ .25

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Dep't.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Der Deutsch Amerikaner (semi-monthly) German temperance; single copy 50 cents, in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Ways of Working.

Here is one method practiced with good results by Miss I. C. DeVelling in her organizing tours. She sends to us and gets a good variety of our leaflets—Timely Talks, Signal Lights, Mothers' Meeting Leaflets, etc., and during the day puts them up in packets, giving a good variety of reading. At the close of her address in the evening she introduces the subject f literature, tells about the publishing interests and offers the packages for sale at five cents each. The result is invariably good—those who take enough interest in temperance and what has been said to step up and buy a package are always a goodly number, and are the ones that will look into the question further. Miss DeVelling knows of many wonderful results directly traceable to this line of work. It is absolutely true that free literature misses the aim nearly every time, just as we have found that to give away The UNION SIGNAL does not do the paper nearly as much good as to get people to pay 10 cents for a trial of it. The moment you get people to invest ever so little of their much-loved money they propose to see if they are getting the worth of it.

ANOTHER.

Miss Helen Walker, superintendent of UNION SIGNAL work in Illinois, writes: "During this month I have been trying a new plan. Have asked for a meeting of the union in towns I have visited and presented my work, asking that every union appoint a superintendent of this work and that the town be thoroughly canvassed—house to house visitation, in the interests of our publications and the W. C. T. U. work generally. The women, as a general thing, have received the plan very favorably. Of course in some places where they wished it, I helped do some of the canvassing, but left the names for them to send in, so throwing all responsibility on them, and bringing them in direct communication with the workers in the office. Mrs. S. M. James, county president of Macoupin county, wrote to every union in her county asking them to call a meeting for me, and gave them the date of my coming. It made the work very pleasant. I know you have already heard from some of the unions I visited in this county, as well as Green and Jersey counties."

We urge these two methods of work now in successful operation upon your attention. We also urge our readers to send us items like the above, giving methods used in different places. These columns cannot be put to a better use than to give the workers in California a chance to read how the friends and co-laborers in Massachusetts succeed, and vice versa. We fully expect to get a great many responses to our call for work who want to be "salaried assistants," and through them to develop the best plans and best workers the UNION SIGNAL has ever had. If you have not yet sent in your application do not delay about it—the new year has opened.

GOSPEL LIGHTS.

(A new series, note-book size, printed on one side only, designed especially for distribution at Gospel temperance meetings).

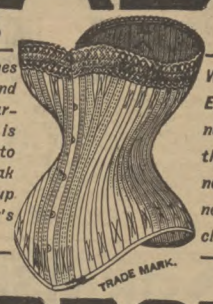
1. What is a Temperance Pledge? Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
2. Why Should I Sign the Pledge? Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
3. A Message for You.

Per 100, ... $ .15
Per 1,000 ..... 1.30
By express, the same as Signal Lights.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of immitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

FOR CUTS, URNS, BRUISES, CATARRH, ALL PAIN AND ALL INFLAMMATIONS.
POND'S EXTRACT
IS THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE CHEST, AND THE COMFORT OF MOTHERS. BE SURE TO GET THE GENUINE.

KABO CORSET


No more bones to break and hurt the wearer. Kabo is warranted to neither break nor roll up with 1 year's wear. With new soft Eyelet which never breaks, the lacer will never pull out nor stain the clothing.
TRADE MARK.
BALL'S CORSETS Are Boned with KABO.
FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.
CHICAGO and NEW YORK.

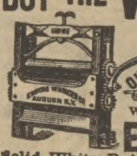
MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Best terms. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

A $60.00 Sewing Machine For $14.90.
Sold low to advertise us and win new customers. Large stock; other goods very cheap. This is the Singer Model, (original Singer). None better. Warranted for 5 years. (Registered guaranty.) Walnut top; drop leaf; 3 drawers. Full set nickel plated attachments. A. T. EVANS & CO., 182 State st. Chicago.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer SEWING MACHINE 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO. ILL.

$16 FREE TRADE PRICES
No Protection! No Monopolies!
$45 SEWING MACHINES | NOW ONLY $16
We are now selling our Western Improved Singer Sewing Machine—same as cut—complete with all attachments and warranted for five years for only $16. Send for circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

BUY THE WRINGER THAT SAVES THE CLOTHES.


OUR MOST LABOR SAVING PURCHASE GEAR
Saves half the labor of other wringers, and costs but little more.
EMPIRE Does not GREASE
Solid White Rubber Rolls. Warranted. Also "Daisy" and "Volunteer" Wringers, Clothes Drying Bars, etc. Agents wanted everywhere. Empire Wringer Co., Auburn, N. Y.

The Ladies' Friend WASHER
is not given away. To introduce it I will sell at cost where there are no Agents on ten days' trial. If it does not excel in quality and quantity of work, it will cost you nothing. Circulars free. WRINGERS AT COST. AGENTS make $5 to $10 per day. Address
B. F. ARNOLD, M'f'r,
DAYTON, OHIO.

Dr. T. B. Myers of David City, Neb., writes:
"DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER! is the best remedy for Whooping Cough and Measles I ever saw."
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

BANKING IN ALL BRANCHES. BONDS and other 4 to 8 per cent securities. Send for Investment Lists. Special Department for Ladies
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS.
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway

MONEY In Building Lots in the new towns of the West, so as to yield 100 to 1000 per ct.
Loss Impossible. Send 10c. for 100-page book. Prudential Trust Co., 1305 Arch St., Phila. INVESTED

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus. East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A. A. Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N. Y. City.

We claim to be one of the largest growers and importers of Flower Seeds in America. In order to introduce them as widely as possible we make this UNPRECEDENTED OFFER. For 25c. in postage stamps or money we will send by mail one pkt. each of the following Valuable Seeds: New Diamond Aster, very handsome colors; Mixed Balsams, immense size, double as a rose; Calliopsis, Golden Wave, new, very showy; New Hybrid Gaillardia, unrivaled for beauty; Phloxdrumundii Grandiflora Splendens, 15 distinct shades; GIANT SHOW PANSIES, immense size, rich and velvety; New Mammoth Verbena, 12 choice colors; New Giant Zinnia, largest in the world; 10 Seeds of ANNUAL NUTMEG PLANT, great value, never before offered; Amaranthus Gibbosus, highly ornamental; one Beautiful Everlasting Flower, 11 full-size pkts., with directions for culture, for 25c., 5 Collections, $1.00. Catalogue with each order. SAMUEL WILSON, Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa.

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS! $35. ORGANS!

Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.

FLAVOR YOUR
Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with
BELL'S SPICED SEASONING
Directions for Making a Nice Dressing: Take one pint of soaked bread, and season with two teaspoonfuls of salt and BELL'S POULTRY SPICE to suit the taste (on account of the purity, not more than a tablespoonful of the dressing for an eight pound turkey), also one tablespoonful of butter or fat salt pork cut up very fine. An egg well worked in will make the dressing cut up nicely. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT.
WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs, Boston, Mass.

Come, come, now! let us be sensible for once in our lives, and have warm feet this winter, and a cool, level head. If our feet are warm our blood will circulate freely, and all the processes of Nature will go on while we are at work.

Don't you know your feet are the two extreme poles of a great Magnetic Battery? Your body is held together and kept in motion, that is life by MAGNETIC POLARITY. You change the Magnetic Polarities of your being by your thoughts. You intensify the power of your blood by applying MAGNETIC BATTERIES to your feet. This vitalizing Substance called magnetism is Life manifest. Without Magnetism we could not have Life. Can't you see at once that if you redouble the Life Potency at the extreme poles of your body, that is your feet, you intensify the Life principle just where it is necessary to have it? Why put on an overcoat to hold warmth where it is not needed, when you can get what you desire at once, by applying the life energy to the very point you need to intensify the living, vivifying essence of power. Come, e sensible once, and let us speak to you through your feet! "With all thy getting get understanding." To begin this work place our genuine Magnetic Foot Batteries under your feet; one pair will convince you, $1.00 a pair or three pairs for $2.00, any aize, by mail, postpaid. Order to-day, and be happy all winter. Catalogue free.
CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
6 Central Music Hall, Chicago.

DEAFNESS CURED by Peck's Pat. INVISIBLE TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable. Successful where all Remedies FAIL. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y.

ASTHMA CURED
SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE
Instantly relieves the most violent attack. No waiting for results. Its action is immediate, direct and certain, and a cure is the result in all curable cases. A single trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, of druggists or by mail. Trial package Free to any address. Dr. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn.

WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY
DELAVAU'S
Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

TAR-OID
A new method of compounding Tar.
SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID Co., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

"DOWN WITH HIGH PRICES."

A $65.00 Sewing Machine,	$18.00
A 500-lb. Platform Scale,	10.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy,	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale,	40.00
A $40.00 Road Cart,	15.00
A $15.00 Buggy Harness	7.50
A 240-lb. Scoop and Platform Scale,	3.00
A 4-lb. Family or Store Scale,	1.00

Catalogue of 1000 useful articles sent FREE. Address
CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

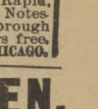
WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS ORGANS
$150 to $1500. $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co.,
285 East 21st St., N. Y.



MUSIC SELF TAUGHT. PROF. RICE'S SELF-TEACHING SYSTEM. All can learn music without the aid of a teacher. Rapid, correct. Established 12 years. Notes, chords, accompaniments, thorough bass laws, etc. Ten Lessons 10c. Circulars free. G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 248 State Street, CHICAGO.

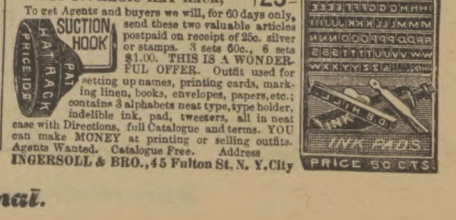
SPECIFIC OXYGEN.

It contains a Germacide and Disinfectant which kills the microbes or germs, and disinfects the membranes in the nose, throat and lungs. It QUIETS cough. It softens tubercles and heals the lungs. It purifies the blood. "IT IS THE BREATH OF LIFE." It is a Natural Narcotic, giving rest & sleep. It revitalizes the nerves. Send for 100 page manual, free.
SPECIFIC OXYGEN COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to agts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.

An American Watch
Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18,000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it. When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W. G. Morris,
Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c
To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 50c., 6 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address
INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St. N. Y. City



Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Whose Business is It?

In 1886 we formulated a plan for having our literature brought before the members of the unions as fast as it should appear. Of course this could not be done without the co-operation of some one in each union. As fast as possible W. T. P. A. Representatives (as they were called) were appointed, whose work it was to show the samples to the members of the union, and, wherever possible, to effect sales. The plan worked well for awhile, and does yet in a great many places, but there must inevitably be changes and resignations, and we have not pushed the work as vigorously during the past year or two, because sending out so much literature free, and giving the privilege of returning any unsold at our expense, caused our ledgers to grow very large with accounts, so that we preferred giving the plan a good trial. We are more than satisfied that the idea is a good one, and we now again urge it upon the attention of the unions. We have not changed the offer, except that we require a deposit of twenty-five per cent of the list value of the packages as ordered. We now have eight packages from which to select, on all which a special profit is allowed the Representative.

Suppose we tell you exactly what we want done, and then you answer the question at the head of this column.

1st. Get up before your union, and say or read that the W. T. P. A. wants some one in your place to represent it, and that you move that Mrs. —(naming the brightest woman you can think of for the place) shall be elected to the office. Go on to say that the W. T. P. A. will send out carefully assorted packages of its literature, and that it will be the duty of its Representative to show the books and effect sales, etc., to the members of the union, and, as far as possible, to others in your place.

2nd. Say, in addition, that the W. T. P. A. will pay a percentage on all sales to the Representative, keep her posted as to new goods coming out, supply her with full instructions as to best goods to show, when and how to do it; and, in short, do all it can to help build up the feeling that should grow constantly—the personal relationship between the publishing house and those for whom it does the publishing. All we require is that the representative shall agree to faithfully endeavor to follow instructions, and that twenty-five per cent of all purchases shall be paid in advance. At the recent National Convention, Miss Willard (who heartily approves of the plan of having Representatives) recommended that each union should have a reader who should be in correspondence with the National, and whose duty it should be to regularly read extracts from our publications, which should be educational along the lines of W. C. T. U. work. This work, whenever possible, should be given to the W. T. P. A. Representative for obvious reasons. Now is the time to bring this whole matter before your union, and we trust you sufficiently see the great importance of it to take it out of the realm of everybody's business, to where it can be discussed and acted on in your own keenly intelligent way. You are our public, and in times like these, your need of intelligence as to what is being done at headquarters, is doubly great. There is no better plan than the above, and if it is not altogether clear to you in all its details, we hope you will write in to us at once, and ask all the questions you want to. It is not necessary to order a full line of all our publications; any selections best suited to your local needs can be made. Shall we hear from you, and soon?

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

TAKE MONON ROUTE
for all points South.

Hull's Ladies' Hair Store; 20 years established. Best goods, lowest prices. Illustrated Catalogue free. 113 State St., Chicago, Ill.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a weak stomach

Japanese Ware Suitable for Church Fairs.

We have Imported a Special Line of JAPANESE WARES, suitable for sale at Church Bazaars, Fairs, etc. Assortments $10 to $50 sent, with privilege of returning unsold goods. Payment of bill when Fair is over. Send for Circulars.

THE FORMOSA.
Importers of Fine Teas and Japanese Ware,
86 State St., CHICAGO.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.Or. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

MILLER'S HOTEL N. Y. Turkish Baths. New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

Family Shoes! FARGO'S $2.50 Calf Shoes for Gentlemen. Fargo's $2.50 Ladies' Boot for Ladies, and "Box Tip" SCHOOL SHOES for Boys and Girls. Ask your dealer for them. If he does not keep them, send to us for the size and style you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Or send to us for a full description of the Fargo shoes. A Pocket-Mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2. 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS! Samples mailed on receipt of 6c. Lowest prices and best goods. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Chicago Silk Dress Goods Co., No. 200 Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

SICK HEADACHE can be CURED

in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.

FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim." Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.
Mention this paper.
Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Health Calendar, -FOR '90.-

Edited by MRS. G. E. DAVIDSON, superintendent Health Department, Vermont W. C. T. U.

The Health Calendar has SEVEN distinctive recommendations:

1st. A carefully prepared menu for every day in the year. These are so selected as to give a large variety at a small cost, and at the same time insure the health and comfort of the household.
2nd. There is a golden thought for every morning, a helpful, happy thought that will be an uplift to the daily cares.
3rd. Nearly every day's program has its choice recipe, tested by practical housekeepers, thus furnishing a valuable cook-book in itself.
4th. Over Three Hundred Quotations on home topics fill the spaces left from the menu, recipes and daily thoughts.
5th. Some pages are devoted to "Diet for the Sick," and "What to do in Emergencies."
6th. It is a "Thing of Beauty." A handsome wall book of 60 pages, 9 x 12 inches, fastened to a natural wood rod and tied with lavender cord. The cover of lavender and embellished with a handsome engraving.
7th. Its marvelous cheapness. It will be sent postpaid by mail for 30 cents; 4 to different addresses $1.

MRS. HOUSH'S LEAFLETS.

The Mission of the White Ribbon. (Just the the thing to give out at the close of a meeting.)
Why Should I Belong to the W. C. T. U.? (Very helpful in organization. Over 300,000 sold.)
Charity and Politics. A woman evangelist's way. (A true story containing a practical sermon.)
Pictures. (Five pen photographs showing the influence of the Home, the Church and the High License Saloon.)
"Why Don't the Christians Help?" A plea for more workers in the Temperance Army.
Lifting. A leaflet for the Y's.
Wells. An argument for the fathers.
Price 25 cts. per 100; $2. per 1000, sent postpaid.
FRANK E. HOUSH & Co., Pubs.
Brattleboro, Vt.

DR. WARNER'S

CAMELS HAIR HEALTH UNDERWEAR
FOR MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN.
A new Fabric for Underwear superior to Silk or Wool. A protection against Colds. Sold by leading Merchants. Catalogues sent on application.
Warner Bros., 203 & 205 Jackson St., Chicago

Educational Dep't.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,
Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping. Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by MAIL. Circulars free. BRYANT & STRATTON'S, 433 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

AT MT. CARROLL (ILL.,) SEMINARY. There are many helps given students who could not otherwise have the privileges of such an institution. No earnest young woman of good ability, though with small means, need despair of securing a Normal, Collegiate Art or Musical education. "Oreads" free. Give particulars.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

The Portrait of the President of the ALABAMA W. C. T. U.,
Mrs. M. L. Stratford, appears in DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for January, now ready. Every member of W. C. T. U. should have it.

LADIES Write us if you want to make money; every hour will count. H. E. GROSH & CO., Richmond, Va.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR MY STORY OF THE WAR By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

PLAYS Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers, for School, Club & Parlor. Best out. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

AGITATION LEAFLETS.
A series of seven leaflets with blank spaces for the name of the town in which you live. We will print in the number of saloons and the town's name, so that a local agitation can be aroused. Send three cents for a sample package. They have been tested and found good.
Price per 1,000, specially printed, $2.00.

HOW OFTEN DOES YOUR UNION MEET?

Do you have good lively meetings? Could they be improved any?

Yes, but You don't Know how?

See now—send to the address below given for samples of the Monthly Responsive Readings; also of Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith's Bible Reading Leaflets, and you will know how. Try this—all it costs is a postal card, and the rest of the bill isn't much more. They constitute the cheapest and most effective W. C. T. U. teaching that we know. All the departments are discussed by the folks that know how to do it.

THEN

Address:

Woman's Temperance Publication Ass'n
161 La Salle Street,
CHICAGO.

SURELY

YOU Want to keep up with the procession. Want to know the latest from the front. Want to choose paper bullets that mean business.

HOW Can you do this without The Union Signal? Can you withhold—at most—the 3 cents a week it calls for?

SEND	SEND	SEND
for FREE COPY of the	10 cents for three - months' trial of	10 cents for five weeks' trial of
Bulletin of Publications	The Young Crusader.	The Union Signal,

White Ribbon Birthday Book,
$1.00.
$1.25 Gilt Edged—Have you seen it?
Books, Music, Cheap Leaflets,
WORKERS' LEAFLETS, &c.

Every Phase of the work shown up. Surely you want a free Bulletin?
Address:

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
161 La Salle Street,
CHICAGO.

Signal Notes.

WE believe that a little prayer in politics isn't going to hurt us as far west as we live.—Major Pickler, South Dakota.

THE Commissioner of Internal Revenue estimates that about 8,000,000 gallons of alcohol are used in the arts and manufactures.

THE Free Baptist General Conference, and also the Universalist General Convention in their recent sessions, adopted resolutions taking the most uncompromising attitude toward the liquor traffic, and boldly proclaiming that total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the states, is the only wise and effectual method of dealing with the drink problem.

IN Hungary the state has acquired ten thousand public houses and inns, a very large number of which are to be closed, and thereafter re-opened as schools.

THE prohibitory proviso, submitted separately in North Dakota, called forth more votes than the constitution as a whole. The votes on the constitution were 35,548, and on the prohibition clause 35,945.

THE recent state convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Connecticut at New Haven, was attended by over two thousand delegates, with audiences of three thousand to four thousand. On the temperance question, the convention committed itself "unreservedly to the cause of total abstinence," and pledged its influence toward the accomplishment, "at the earliest possible day, of the utter extermination of the liquor traffic."

OF the eighty thousand Swedes in New York, not one runs a saloon.

KANSAS has built 1,591 schools during last four years, and employs 1,591 teachers more than at the beginning of this period.

JAMES CLEMENT AMBROSE, of Evanston, Ill., is just home from Nebraska, after six weeks of both reform and popular platform work there, and believes that hard work will carry it for prohibition. Toward the end of January he will go east, and thence southward, as far as the Carolinas, at least.

IT is intended to lay before the International Anti-Alcoholic Congress, to be held next year in Christiana, Norway, a proposal to form an International European Temperance Union, with the object of promoting the consolidation of the movement in other countries, the headquarters being in London.

A CO-OPERATIVE distillery at St. Helens, California, is said to be turning out one thousand gallons of grape brandy, daily.

THE Rev. Dr. Talmage has secured in Athens a corner stone for his new church from Mars Hill, where St. Paul preached to the Athenians.

NEAL DOW'S testimony is to the effect that in the old rum days Maine was the poorest state in the Union; now it is one of the richest. In 1884, the people put prohibition into the constitution by a majority of 47,075, the affirmative vote being three times larger than the negative.

INDIGNANT resolutions were passed by the Good Templars of New York City and county, repelling the insinuation contained in the Union League Club's report on high license to the effect that "Prohibitionists share the responsibility for the present state of intemperance, crime and poverty resulting from the liquor traffic," and consider this as an unwarranted reflection upon this order which is "uncompromisingly opposed to license in any form or for any consideration, high or low." Another resolution earnestly condemns the appointment of Judge Brewer to the Supreme Court on account of his well known anti-prohibition views and decisions, and regard his appointment as an obstacle to the cause of prohibition.

WORD comes from Kansas of the very excellent work done there by Rev. George H. Vibbert since he addressed the state convention in September. He has delivered eighty-eight public addresses, besides addressing the children of the public schools on the tobacco question, and holding afternoon prayer-meetings with the W. C. T. U. at many points. In many instances after delivering the single lecture for which he was engaged, he has been recalled for a series of meetings, the pastors uniting with the W. C. T. U. in the invitation If there is "anything new under the sun" to be said on the temperance question, he is sure to present it. His enthusiasm is contagious.

A CONVENTION of colored religious associations lately in session at Indianapolis, Ind., demanded of the next Congress an appropriation of $100,000 to promote a project for the permanent colonization of the colored people in the West.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

Gold Thimbles as Premiums.

They have been called for by the dozen, and we repeat the generous offer made in October, viz.: to send a thimble free for every name at $1.50; or to send one for fifty cents, providing you will agree to get up a club of ten subscribers at $1.00 each, the 50 cents to be deducted from the $10 when remitting. These thimbles are made practically of two gold thimbles with a stiffened wall of steel between them. They are warranted to outwear thimbles that are solid gold throughout. How easy it would be to wear one in asking for subscriptions! The lowest retail price of the thimble is $1.00, and it makes a wonderfully attractive premium. Number eight is the size we send, unless otherwise directed.
Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Business-like?

It would be just that to be provided with the answers to the many headed statements given out nowadays about the W. C. T. U. How dreadfully and fearfully some few were abused in the convention; what a tempest of hisses, groans, etc., there were; what vast falsehoods Miss Willard told about Vice-President Morton (don't hear quite so much about that somehow, lately!) how she threw an inkstand at Mrs. Foster, and other misleading statements. You can easily get folks to read the other side; in fact, a lot of them don't know there is another side, unless you tell them of it! How can you better do so than to put Miss Willard's annual address (DAILY UNION SIGNAL No. 1) and the Convention Number of November 21 in their hands?

The prices are the same for both papers, viz:

100 copies.....$ 1.70
1000 copies (either paper) 14.00

Be business-like!

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

PROVIDENCE, R.I.

I received many weeks ago, while too much prostrated to reply, a W. C. T. U. pin. I wish now to express my satisfaction with it. It is the only thing I have ever seen that seemed even allowable in place of the real ribbon. It is an admirable device and most convenient for those who either like variety or who sometimes wish something more substantial than the ribbon. Yours for the right, E. S. B.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

RIDGE'S FOOD
The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

RICHES If you desire them, no use fooling away time on things that don't pay; but send $1, at once for magnificent outfit of our Great New Stanley Book. If book and terms not satisfactory we will refund your money. No risk. No capital needed. Both ladies and gentlemen employed. Don't lose time in writing. "Step in while the waters are troubled." Days are worth dollars. Address B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

THE WHITE ROSE PIN.
More than 30,000 sold. Modest but effective. It means you believe in pointing "right straight" at the saloon and don't believe in any side-tracking toward high license.
PRICE, EACH, $0.10.
PRICE, PER DOZ. 2.00.

STEVENS DRESS SILKS NEW SILKS FOR ALL.
WRITE FOR SAMPLES.
Over 70,000 Lady Customers who buy nearly all their silks direct from us through the mails, will greet the announcement with pleasure that our
New Fall Lines of Dress Silks
ARE NOW READY
AND
Samples Ready for Mailing.
We are enthusiastic in our statement that it is by far the most attractive and most extensive line of Silks in the country and comprises many shades and Weaves exclusively confined to us, being originated and brought out by us.
Send 8 cents in stamps for over 100 samples. You will thereby have before you the finest stock in the country to make your selection from, and positively save from $4.00 to $8.00 on each dress pattern.
CHAS. A. STEVENS & BROS.,
69 State St., Chicago, Ill.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE"
CORDED CORSET WAISTS
are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them.

SEEDS 6 pkts of my choicest Flower Seeds, 10c. Beautiful catalogue free.
F. B. MILLS, Thorn Hill, N. Y.

BOOKS—96 Page Catalogue of popular and standard books sent free on request. Lowest prices ever known. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York; 242 Wabash Avenue, Chicago; 73 Whitehall Street, Atlanta. Agents wanted.

BAILEY'S
Light Spreading, Silver Plated, Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS!
A Wonderful Invention for Lighting Churches, Halls, Etc.
Handsome Designs.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
Catalogue and Price List Free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa.
FOR GAS. FOR GAS, OIL OR ELECTRIC LIGHT. FOR OIL.

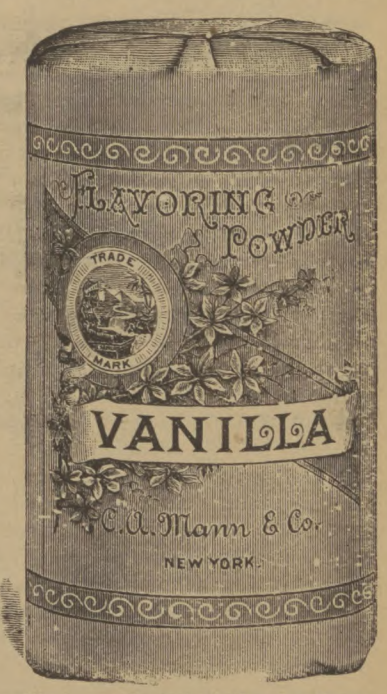
Flavoring Powders



It was Sydney Smith who once referred to a lady as "the Vanille of society." A pretty and suggestive fancy, and a compliment which could not fail to please.

Pure Vanilla is concentrated, yet delicate. Its effects seem almost imperceptible, yet its omission is instantly noticeable. Who would not like to resemble this flavor? But with us, as with Vanilla, other and coarser ingredients are frequently mixed with the real stuff. Perhaps on the idea that a good thing must become better if intensified, a stronger, heavier quality of flavoring is often added, making it rank, bitter and disagreeable. It is cheaper, to be sure, but nobody wants it. The pure and unadulterated is always in demand. Everybody appreciates this. We would all like to be the real true flavor, but to many of us the process seems too difficult. The winds must blow and the sun must beat down upon us before full strength and sweetness can be attained. Even then, only the best part of us can be used, and that which already seems to us so very small, must be made still less by subjection to different temperatures, and much time before it has obtained full value. Green vanilla beans do not yield a fine flavor. They do not sell readily in the markets. They must be subjected to the curing process first, and it requires a large stock of patience. The New Year is here, the time of all good resolutions. Chimes are sounding from bell towers and steeples all over the land, and "Ring out the false, ring in the true," finds an answering thrill in every heart. Even prosaic duties of every-day life seem easy and pleasant to us now in the time of merry-making which is not quite over. We are ready to lay in new supplies, and to plan new systems if the old ones have not been satisfactory. Have you been using our Flavoring Powders during the past year? If so, you know their superiority. If you have not, begin the year by making a trial of them. Ask your grocer for them, and if he does not, and will not keep them, we will mail you a 1-ounce package each of the Lemon and Vanilla Flavoring Powders to try. (Also Powdered Perfumes in Satin Packets, sent by mail for 30 cents).

C. A. MANN & CO., 48 Murray St., NEW YORK

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol XVI.—No. 2.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 9, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: The Battle for Bread—Law and Order. 8, 9
SPECIAL DIFFICULTIES: Industrial Homes 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, "Entered Into Rest," by Helen G. Rice —An Old-Time Temperance Reform, by Mrs. George Archibald—Re-Submission in Kansas, by Rev. Geo. P. Hays, D.D. —The Relation of Intemperance to Idiocy, by A. C. Rogers —God in Government, by M. A. Gault—Temperance Temple Items, by Matilda B. Carse 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Our Second Round-the-World Missionary —A Crusade Experience—Corner Grocery Saloons—"High" Schools in Omaha—India's Curse 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The New Year's Welcome—Nobody's Child 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning January 12, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, All Things New—Boycotting a Butcher—Sunday-school Temperance Teaching—The Ethical Problem of Tobacco—Where Much is Given, Much Shall be Required 7
DIRECTORY 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Florida, Michigan, Maine, Iowa, Michigan, News in a Nutshell, Notices 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Scientific Temperance Instruction—Work Among Colored People of the North—Woman's Lecture Bureau 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Woman's Temperance Publication Association will be held at the office, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Wednesday, January 15, 1890, commencing promptly at ten a. m. Reports from officers and the business manager will be received, a number of directors for the ensuing year elected, and other important business transacted.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Alfred Tennyson, the poet laureate, is seriously ill.

Fifty per cent of Boston's school pupils are sick with "La Grippe."

Reported defalcations in the United States during 1889 amounted to $8,562,753

Chicago's fund towards the World's Fair in 1892, reaches the grand total of $3,634,780

An ordinance has been passed at Frankfort, Ky., prohibiting the sale of cigarettes within the city limits.

New York spent last year $17,000,000 on her public schools, employing 31,987 teachers to instruct 1,803,667 pupils.

Italian anarchists are posting placards calling upon Italians to follow the example of Brazil and overturn the monarchy.

The shops of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in New York, were burned on the 3rd inst., causing a loss of $100,000.

M. Paul Blouet, whose familiar nom-de-plume of Max O'Rell will readily introduce him to American readers as the author of "Jonathan and His Continent," arrived in New York January 5, for the purpose of giving a course of lectures throughout the country.

Mr. Gladstone is said to be more interested just now in the new library he is building at Hawarden, than even in the "Irish question." Some sixteen thousand volumes are to be arranged, besides many papers, and such of his correspondence as can be read by the public. The house will be of iron, containing, besides the general library, a number of small rooms for the use of those who wish to study without interruption.

SUCH action as that of Frederick Krupp, at the head of the great metal and gun foundry, does much to reconcile the differences between capital and labor. He has lately established a fund of $100,000 to assist his employes in building homes of their own. Workingmen with homes never recruit the ranks of anarchy.

IT was strangely inconsistent that no woman's name appeared in the enrollment of that guard of honor assembled in Westminster Abbey, as witnesses, when the revered form of Robert Browning received the highest degree of immortality in the world's power to bestow. Mr. Browning had more than poetic apprehension of the "divine" in woman, he recognized the homely human in her, and advocated her enfranchisement upon the ground of clear judgment, and capacity for good statesmanship, yielding her the best tribute of the best manhood—hearty respect.

THE great hope which undergirds the true worker in any reform movement is this: that some day the conscience of a nation will be summoned to make its laws! First, in the quiet home life, the morning glory of which will be a sure prophecy of a midday sunlight, with strong, direct rays, radiant and redolent with "good will to men" expressed in purer social laws and customs. Next, at the ballot box, where it will intelligently meet the great questions of the day, and weave into delightful harmony vox populi and vox Dei in the song of "peace on earth." Lastly, in halls of legislation, conscience will complete and crown its work by the enactment of laws, not as now upon the low plane of present demand, but upon the higher plane of a nation's need, and at this "meeting of mercy and truth," "righteousness and peace shall kiss each other," and "glory shall dwell in our land."

TAKING it upon the basis of local taxation, the saloon is an economical factor of singular blandness. The first cost of the whisky in a "drink" is a third of a cent. This pays the farmer for the grain, the distiller and all his employes, the cooper for the barrel, and everybody who has managed to dip so much as the tip of his finger in the dreadful broth, from the time the innocent ground was ploughed until the vile liquid was "rectified" for drinking. Allowing a liberal estimate for the expense of "aging," principally done upon paper, we may take the value of the whisky itself in a "drink" at one cent. Take the license taxes of all sorts, national and municipal, at two cents, and we shall not be far out of the way. The national tax of ninety cents a gallon is a cent and a half a drink, the bartender's estimate giving sixty drinks to the gallon. This leaves seven cents as the profit of a ten-cent drink, at least nine cents for a twelve-cent drink, and eleven or twelve cents for a fifteen-cent drink. Mixed drinks pay as well as any, for only half as much whisky is put into them as in plain ones. The whisky saved more than pays for ice, sugar, etc. The saloon, therefore, takes more and gives less than any other form of commerce.

STATISTICS show that the drinking portion of every fifty-seven adult males, in some communities, (Chicago, for instance,) supports a saloon. This means that a certain number of families are impaired in their resources to precisely this amount, which must be equal to absorbing the total earnings of at least six families out of the proportion of fifty-seven actively engaged in supporting the saloon. These six families have to be supported by the sober element of the group, and therefore the saloon is the pecuniary enemy of all families in communities tolerating them. The pecuniary damage is not lessened if we choose to regard the expense as apportioned upon the average among the whole number. For in any case it means that the saloon subtracts that part of the communal resources, out of which savings and the more ornamental part of the expenses would otherwise come. The saloon therefore tends to restrict all families within its influence to a mere struggle for existence, on the lowest and barest plane.

THE failure to incorporate a prohibitory clause in the constitution of New Hampshire, has made the liquor-selling element bold to violate the limited statutory prohibition, which has been operative there for many years. The people are not blind to the relation between such violations and the recent increase of crime. Last week Gov. Goodell issued an appeal which the secular press pronounces an extraordinary proclamation. In our opinion it attests his fitness for the executive office of the old Granite state:

In view of various heinous crimes which have been committed in our state within the last few weeks directly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors, in the sale of which the criminal laws have been flagrantly violated, now, therefore, I warn all persons engaged in this illegal and deadly traffic to desist therefrom immediately, and I call upon the Attorney-General of the state, the solicitors and sheriffs of the counties, the mayors of the cities, and selectmen, and all other officers throughout the state, and upon all good citizens of every party, to unite in one supreme effort to close up and suppress every liquor saloon of every description within our borders. "Let no guilty man escape." Numerous decisions of our Supreme Court attest the constitutionality of our prohibitory liquor laws. Let them be vigorously enforced, that our people may enjoy the great benefits which are sure to follow. And I cannot refrain from urging all churches, temperance organizations, and all persons who desire the best good of our commonwealth to redouble their efforts to promote personal sobriety and temperance among our people.

Last Sunday the campaign was opened by enthusiastic mass-meetings in Keene and other cities. New Hampshire still has law enough to secure the best results. The validity of its enactments has been affirmed by the Supreme Court, and all that is required is enforcement.

Our National President has sent the following letter to Governor Goodell:

HONORED FRIEND:—On behalf of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, I send you the assurance of high appreciation and profound gratitude. By your recent message urging the enforcement of laws against the liquor traffic, you have given an impetus to every blow struck for the protection of the people's homes and gladdened every heart that loves humanity. Our fifteen years of honest hard work against the saloon have taught us that the officer behind the ordinance, the law-enforcer back of the law, is the final factor of success. Your earnest and helpful words have emphasized this truth so vital to the future of our beloved land; you have asked the co-operation of all good people in the sacred work of making prohibition prohibit; and may God's richest blessing rest upon you in this high endeavor is the prayer of Your friend and sister,

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

THE Sioux chiefs demand the fulfillment of the promise made them in 1868, of free schools on the reservation. Their arguments against distant institutions seem well taken. The United States Commissioner of Indian affairs confirms the statements of great mortality among the students after their return from the schools at Carlisle and Hampton. One of the chiefs said, referring to the fogs at Hampton: "The breath of the earth rises up and poisons our children." Certainly the death rate among them is high. The exposure incident to wigwam life after having been housed for years, induces pulmonary diseases, of which a large percentage are fatal. The chiefs, however, believe these diseases are contracted in the damp eastern climate, and would be obviated by locating the schools in the reservations. "Give us the schoolhouse at home where our children will be well and strong in the free air and the Great Spirit's sunlight," prayed American Horse. "I want a school big enough for six hundred pupils, where our children can have white children's education, where we can see them every day strong and well, growing up to be useful men and women, and all the time we shall be learning from them the ways of your people.' Surely the world moves toward the millennial age at quickening pace when the Indians are willing to learn from the children, demanding not more blankets and rations, but more educational advantages and better opportunities for working out their own civilization.

THE Central W. C T. U. of Chicago gave a reception on New Year's Eve at Bethesda Mission, 406 S. Clark St., where for years their nightly gospel temperance meetings have proved the power of God unto salvation to hundreds of lost men. There were songs, Scripture reading and prayer; short addresses by Mrs. Carse, Miss Hood and Mrs. Rounds in the cordial manner characteristic of those great-hearted women; a recitation by Miss Leavens; and an experience meeting in which men told briefly the story of their great deliverance weeks, months, or years ago, "blessing God for the W. C. T. U. and this Mission." The appeals to drinking men, many of whom were present, were most earnest, and full of encouragement and faith in God to save and keep. The supper, which was substantial and abundant, gave opportunity for many unexpected manifestations of unselfishness on the part of the guests in the generous serving of others before themselves. One stalwart German, converted last summer, passed plates until every one was helped, and the choicest of the food had been served, before taking anything himself. It was afterward learned that his last meal was breakfast of the day before. During the singing of "Home, Sweet Home," tears glistened upon some of the most hardened faces, showing that the deep well of tenderness in their sin-scorched souls still holds living water. Before closing the meeting, Col. George Woodford, with burning zeal, urged upon them the gospel, which had been equal to his own case. When the pledge-book was opened, the whole audience seemed to press up the aisle, among them was the young policeman on duty there. More than half of those present remained to the inquiry meeting which followed, and at the final close—just as 1889 was dying—twenty-five men stood up to signify their determination to lead sober, Christian lives.

Contributed.

"ENTERED INTO REST."

BY HELEN G. RICE.

Oh! not alone above the silent sleepers
Whose feet have touched the everlasting shore,
Whose hands are folded from their patient toiling,
Whose lips respond to love's caress no more;
But on the heads of some who walk beside us,
By whose dear presence all our days are blest,
May we pronounce that peaceful benediction
Of heavenly sweetness, "Entered into rest."

To those whose waiting ears have heard the Master
Say, "Peace, be still!" to every anxious care,
And dropped their burdens, like an out-worn garment
Which they no longer need, or wish to wear,
In sure fulfillment of His word of promise
The peace that passeth human thought is given;
And on their hearts they bear the seal of pardon,
And on their tranquil brow the stamp of Heaven.

Fiercely the storms of life may rage around them,
But no rude tempest shakes their sure repose,
While God in His Pavilion safely hides them,
Secure from every adverse wind that blows.
Their willing hands cease not from earthly service;
Not rest from toiling does the Master give,
But rest in labor is the sweeter portion
Of those who die to self, in Him to live.

Bravest of leaders! On your brow unclouded
We place the crown yours is the right to wear;
Its fifty polished gems of rarest lustre,
We weave with shining threads of love and prayer.
As from the East and West, and North and Southland
Your loyal subjects rise and call you blest,
Upon your head we breathe that benediction
Of heavenly sweetness, "Entered into rest."
Boston, Mass.

AN OLD-TIME TEMPERANCE REFORM.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

"Do come and see us," wrote my friend Maggie, "we are beautifully situated. Our house is old-fashioned, and I know you will like that. And there is a cemetery with over a thousand graves just across the road."

I read the above queer postscript several times, with varying emotions. I knew it was written in simplicity as a real inducement to the visit I had so often been urged to make. Yet I objected to the opinion evidently held that my love for graveyards would make me eager to tarry next door to one. I objected so much, that my intended trip to Maggie's came near being, at least, postponed. Yes, I seriously thought of writing to say I would have come, had she but bought a house in a more cheerful neighborhood, But I didn't! For my trunk was partly packed before the letter came.

The house was really beautifully situated in the village of Brookton, and, strange as it may seem, the cemetery added to its advantages. It was an old square cemetery which no longer was used for interments except that once in a long time some former inhabitant, dying away from the scenes of his youth, was brought back to lie among his fathers. The later citizens of Brookton buried two miles away in a larger, grander spot.

The old cemetery was full of shade from the beautiful, great trees within it, and on the bright spring morning after my arrival in Brookton, there was such a chorus of song from the branches as would delight any true lover of music. Looking out, I determined that my first walk should be in the cemetery.

"I knew you would want to go to the graveyard, the first thing," said Maggie, tying on her slat sun-bonnet. How natural it looked! She had worn that sun-bonnet on all sun-bonnet occasions ever since I could remember, and the gingham parasol which she next proceeded to raise, had accompanied the sun-bonnet whenever gingham parasols were proper.

To get into the cemetery we had to go up a flight of steps outside the fence, and down a flight inside. This brought us into a grass-grown road through which the mournful funeral trains used to pass. Now, only foot passengers traveled this way. But though disused, the burial place was well kept, as village cemeteries go. The thick grass was not overlong, and the creeping Charlie and myrtle on the old mounds was not over-riotous. Here and there in discarded crockery from many pantries, were bouquets. They were fresh enough to make the passer-by sure the dead were not forgotten.

From childhood I have never neglected to look at old headstones wherever they were accessible, and many a quaint tale have I heard of the long dead. Perhaps none quainter than the tale told that morning by Maggie. She told it while we sat on a rough seat near two strange brown stones erected in memory of Nathan Bruce and Jemima, his wife. The stones were precisely alike. They bore urns, against which leaned, presumably, lachrymose mourners, whose countenances were draped with roomy handkerchiefs held to place by long and genteel hands.

The stories told by the inscriptions were fuller than modern tombstones give, and informed the reader that Nathan was born before and died after Jemima, though he survived her but one day. I do not remember the date of her death, but Jemima was born in 1793.

Here is the story of the pair, told to me by Maggie. Maggie—straight, tall, black-haired, keen-eyed, swift of speech, and sixty-five years old:

Nathan was the founder of the best and richest family in Brookton, and, like most founders of good families, he had worked hard and made a fortune by hard work and honest methods. Honest! He was so honest that it was not uncommon to hear folks say, "As honest as Nathan Bruce." By the time Nathan was a man of forty he had come to be a power in his community. Not another man for miles around sent so many thousand feet of lumber down the river when the water was high, as did he. Not another had so many good dollars stowed away!

All his neighbors and acquaintances everywhere were proud to know him. He was generous, big, and good-looking. But alas! like many another old-timer, he loved at uncertain intervals to indulge in the liquor of his age. And when Nathan Bruce was on one of his periodical jollifications he was a changed Nathan. He swore, he tore, he broke his wife's dishes, he spent his hard-earned savings with a lavish hand. Then for a long time he would again go clothed and in his right mind.

This fault of Nathan's by no means affected his standing in the community. It was not an uncommon fault, and then he was rich! Even in those primitive times, money atoned for many shortcomings.

Jemima was Nathan's second wife, and she was courted in strange fashion. One year to a day from the time of his first wife's death, Nathan called on his brother Hosea.

"Hosey," said he, "I never asked your advice about nothing. I never needed it, that's why. But judging from your experience, you know how to pick out a second wife. I think it's high time I took one. If you can think of anybody likely to prove as good as your'n, why mention her."

Hosea was nonplussed for a few minutes. "If 'twas me, I wouldn't hesitate," he said, "for if I made a mistake nobody'd suffer only me. But for you it's different. However there's the Widder Ketcham. She's unimcumbered, an' she's got plenty of means."

"The Widder Ketcham'll never do," replied Nathan. "She's too bustlin,' an' she talks too loud."

"Well, there's the Widder Langford. She's got a good home an' only one boy, an' he's of an age that's handy to have around."

"I won't have her, neither. She ain't none too good tempered. I want a pleasant woman or none."

"What do you think of Susan Baker? Have a good bit of money bimeby, of her own, an' savin,' besides. Good worker, young, pleasant an' pretty."

"No," replied Nathan, "I ain't one o' them men as wants a seckont wife young enough for a daughter."

"I guess you'll have to stay single, then. There ain't any more widders, an' not an old maid except Jemima Comfort, an' she's poor as poverty."

Nathan jumped up. "Much obliged. Hosey," said he. "I'll go right down an' ask her. Queer, I didn't think of it myself."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed the surprised brother. "She ain't got a cent——"

But without waiting to hear expostulations, Nathan jumped into his wagon, started up his team and rode furiously down to Farmer Jackman's. Jemima made her home there. Mrs. Jackman was Jemima's sister, but Jemima had to work pretty hard. She was at work in the wide hall when Nathan drove up. She looked out from the door and bowed.

"How are you, Jemima?" called Nathan. "Just run down to the gate, won't you?"

Jemima ran down, neat as a pin in her drab gown. Jemima was a Quaker in speech and dress.

"Good-morning, Nathan," she said in a pleasant voice, looking at him inquiringly.

"Jemima," said Nathan, "I drove around to see if I could get you to do me a little favor. I'm ruther lonesome lately, an' I'm thinkin' of marryin'. It strikes me you'd suit exactly, and if it strikes you I'd suit, why just say so."

The clear eyes of Jemima were dropped a moment in reflection. A red color, that might have belonged to a worldly maiden, leaped to her cheek. Through her mind ran a thought of her dependent position, so often irksome, and another thought of the comfortable home of which Nathan Bruce would make her mistress. He had his faults, she knew, but he was kind and generous. He was ruddy and well looking, too. She raised her eyes, and said gently: "I guess thee'll suit, Nathan."

And it was but a week later when Jemima Comfort became Jemima Bruce, and was installed the neat and capable mistress of the best house in Brookton.

The first six months of married life passed happily. And then Nathan went to election. He stayed all day. He stayed all night. And next day, when Jemima had just seated herself to her solitary noon-day meal, he came noisily into the room. His face was flushed, his step unsteady. He sat down sullenly.

"Thee's just in time," said Jemima pleasantly.

It took no more than that to set Nathan roaring when liquor was in. And he began to roar. Not loudly at first, but with increasing volume. The election had disappointed him. He walked across the floor and kicked Jemima's cat viciously. Jemima's eyes flashed in a most unquaker-like way. She remonstrated.

This was Nathan's opportunity. He would not bear to be remonstrated with in this condition. He lashed himself into added rage; he swore, he tore, he knocked a chair over, he threw a tea-cup at the terrified cat. Jemima had heard years before of Nathan's "spells." She knew that they resulted in broken furniture and dishes, and that these things were generously replaced when all was over.

She resolved that the first scene of her married life should be the last. So when the pieces of tea-cup lay shattered upon the floor, she stooped to the wood-box, took up a stout stick of wood, and dashing it into the middle of the table, scattered the dishes far and wide. Then without pausing she flung another stick against the window, shattering a dozen panes.

Nathan was thunderstruck. His first wife, twice as big and three times as noisy as Jemima, had always sat breathlessly by while he let his temper exhaust itself. But the quiet Quaker woman who had so meekly gone to the gate to receive her proposal, so sweetly accepted it and so gently filled her place in her husband's home, was changed into a fierce destroyer. Was she made crazy by the excitement?

Sobered at the spectacle, the astonished husband cried: "What's the matter with you, Jemima?"

"Nothing, Nathan. I was only sharing thy spree with thee. A wife should enter with good heart into her husband's pleasures."

The astounded Nathan was not displeased by his wife's spirit. Perhaps, too, he was fearful that "sprees" shared by a woman might prove too expensive. At any rate, immediate reform began in that long-ago family.

Under the care and good management of Jemima, Nathan at last became a perfectly steady man, a devout church member, and when he died, too lonely to stay after her departure, he left four hardy, God-fearing, temperate sons, an honor to his honored name and to hers. From these are descended all those Bruces who, foremost in good word and work, have wrought so well in their generations, and, remarkably enough, there has never been a drinking man among them.

When Maggie finished her story it was time to return. I had in my hand a few flowers plucked in her old-fashioned garden. These I left upon Jemima's grave in token of my heartfelt approval of her energetic methods of temperance reform.

Maggie said there was no use of such a ceremony, as Jemima was perfectly unconscious by this time of praise or blame, but someway it made feel better acquainted with her.

RE-SUBMISSION IN KANSAS.

BY REV. GEO. P. HAYS, D.D.

The agitation for re-submission in Kansas is not intended for any effect it will have in Kansas, but for its effect on the prohibition campaign in Nebraska next fall. This product is not for "domestic consumption," but for the "foreign market." While the friends of prohibition in Nebraska are talking about the hard fight they will have next autumn, and how earnestly and systematically they must go at it, the breweries are now scientifically at work. This scheme is not the profound invention of the saloon-keepers themselves, but of the brewers who furnish capital and brains for their stool pigeons, who bear the public gaze and do the dirty work. As in Cincinnati, so here, the saloons are not outfitted by those in whose names they are, but by those who pose before the public as men of high principles,—who are striving to prevent the evils of excessive drinking by promoting the moderate use of harmless and healthy beverages.

Whoever supposes that these gentlemen are not smart, and cannot by their money hire smart men and women to do their thinking for them, is greatly mistaken. They have watched the past campaigns with care, and have measured every argument that has been brought into the field. They have seen that nothing has been more constantly hurled in their faces than the effect of prohibition in Kansas and Iowa. Every possible advantage, therefore, has been, and will be, taken to make the success of the Democratic party in Iowa seem a revolt against prohibition; while they very well know that the Iowa quarrel about the railroads was the real secret of the change of the votes. Whoever expects all the Democrats elected to the Iowa Legislature to vote for liquor may have in store for themselves a very notable surprise. It has been so in the past, and it is believed in the future many Democrats will refuse to stoop to do the corrupt work supposed to be wise as a political movement.

So everywhere Kansas has been quoted to prove that a state once blessed with temperance by law will not go back to drunkenness by authority. To break the force of that Kansas illustration, heaven and earth are to be shaken with a great clamor for re-submission. All sorts of people who can join in a fama clamosa are to be subsidized to add to the racket. Then amidst the uproar we will all be told just to look how these Kansas people are divided on the subject. It will be claimed that after years of testing it, there is just as much sentiment in favor of the saloon as there ever was. Already the parade of figures to show that the amount of tax that might be gathered from the saloons is begun, and interviews (which were never held) are written out in the editorial rooms of newspapers working in that interest, to show the widespread opposition of the people to the present law. It is all intended for effect on Nebraska. It is true Nebraska is near enough to make one think that no sane voter would believe these self-evidently false reports against the evidence of his own senses; but this furor is not intended or expected to influence the intelligent voter who travels abroad, but that narrow fellow who neither travels nor reads any newspaper but his own side of politics.

Is it not time for some one "to rise to a point of order"? All parliamentary rules of procedure require that the motion "to reconsider" must be made by some one who has voted with the majority. If the defeated minority could move to reconsider, they would be eternally bringing up the old subject,and nothing would ever be settled. Now the present advocates of re-submission are the very same people who opposed prohibition with might and main when it first carried by a large majority. Of course they are opposed to prohibition. They always were. That is no new discovery with any of their acquaintances. Whoever heard of the Kansas City Times having anything good to say of total abstinence except in the abstract and in the penitentiary. When now these quote their own views, and those of their old friends who have always been on that side, we submit they are "out of order." They never were on the side of the majority.

But it is not hard to find those who have changed their opinions. There are plenty of those in public life who opposed the prohibitory amendment who now say they still think it improper to interfere with private wishes in the matter of what a man shall drink, but that there is no doubt that prohibition has been a great benefit to the state, and is quite as well enforced as other legislation. If the results were not so serious, it would be ludicrous to see a paper berating men like Senator Ingalls as mere politicians and time-servers without any principles in their advocacy of prohibition, and then in the same column find it declared that the great majority of the people are opposed to prohibition. If Senator Ingalls is so devoid of principle as they would have us believe, and controlled only by a desire to retain his place in the Senate, is he so foolish as to thus alienate the very majority by whom he must be reëlected? They may talk as they please about Senator Ingalls lacking moral principle, but nobody but a fool would say he was not smart. If he is controlled only by a desire to stay in the Senate, after he published his articles in favor of prohibition you may be sure that the people are in favor of it. Another politician has vividly set forth his opinion of the people of Kansas by saying, that "they will not go back on prohibition till cats go back on rats and hawks quit eating chickens."

Just now the Kansas City Times in its advocacy of re-submission, has taken up that old cry of the Cincinnati Gazette before the saloons were closed there on the Sabbath. It has been daily repeating the assertion, that all the power of the state of Kansas cannot close the "joints" in Wichita, Topeka, Kansas City, Kansas, and Leavenworth. The population of Kansas are not untried people. Many of them "have been through the wars" and have seen the smoke of battle. The Kansas troubles of 1855 to 1865 were not such as to invite a sickly set of people without any spinal marrow in their backbones. Whoever will recollect those days of the Kansas and Nebraska controversies will see that neither side was to be trifled with. If it shall now come to a defiant challenge to abandon the law or submit to bloodshed and riots, as was the challenge in Cincinnati, then I think the bloodshed will come. If lawbreakers out West are thus to defy the law, there is a far more serious question to settle than that of prohibition. The question of all law and any law is first to be settled. It will be definitely settled when that time comes.

Whatever may be said of the prohibitory law of Kansas, it can hardly be more inefficiently enforced than is the law against murder in Missouri. The same paper that reports such open violations of the prohibitory law in Kansas, and therefore urges its repeal, will have in the same edition reports of two or three murders in Missouri. Shall we, then, repeal the law against the taking away of human life or undertake to regulate murder by selling license to gratify our revenge for a price? Will these papers and politicians count up for us the loss of revenue sustained by a failure to offer a price for blood that this red money may be put into the school fund? The other day two men went to murder a third. The murdered man killed one of his assailants. But to-day an enraged girl killed her father's hired man for assaulting her and teasing her about her lover. Elsewhere a man kills his paramour in his jealousy and then kills himself. Shall we ask Nebraska to prohibit neither liquor nor murder because Kansas cannot suppress the one nor Missouri the other?

THE RELATION OF INTEMPERANCE TO IDIOCY.

BY A. C. ROGERS,
Supt. of Minnesota Asylum for Feeble-Minded.

"Do you not find intemperance the most frequent cause of idiocy and imbecility?" is the substance of numerous questions which the medical officers of schools for feeble-minded are frequently called upon to answer.

The best information which we have upon the subject teaches us quite conclusively that intemperance is a potent influence in the causation of idiocy, but it is not so generally the cause as has been thought.

The principal sources of information upon this subject are the statements of certain commissions which reported respectively to the Massachusetts and the Connecticut Legislature, some years ago, and the investigations of superintendents of institutions for feeble-minded.

The fact must be borne in mind that the whole subject of the etiology of idiocy is, in our present state of knowledge, involved in uncertainties and conjectures.

In the first place, the pursuit of this study necessitates an invasion of the realms of domestic privacy into which the most enthusiastic student hesitates to enter, and from which is obtained but little that is relevant and direct.

In the next place, the study of objective traits and obvious family or individual history, if it reveals anything, very seldom reveals, alone, any one of the many factors which by the concurrent and almost universal testimony of observers may be sufficient to produce this condition. The evidence in most cases must, at best, be circumstantial. Our reasons for believing intemperance a prolific cause of idiocy are:

1. There have been well authenticated instances where the action of the alcohol upon the unborn child was direct and marked. The case often quoted from the writings of Dr. Edward Seguin will illustrate:

Mrs. D., a very refined woman of temperate habits, before the birth of her fourth child began to drink one quart of brandy a day and continued to do so, her head being never affected, until her son was born. Though she and her husband were remarkably swarthy, her child was pearly white; she has never touched brandy since. It is needless to add that the child was idiotic.

2. Again, from the psychical view alone, the fact of inebriety itself evidences a lack of will power and a vascillating disposition which become marked just in proportion to the degree of inebriety. Alienists now recognize that this condition is really a disease, and the courts have begun to rule upon this basis in the trial of inebriates for crime, holding that, expressing it broadly, a man who has not will power enough to prevent his becoming a confirmed inebriate, is insane. By the laws of heredity the child would not only become possessor of the naturally weak volitional powers of the parent, but would also be affected in some measure by the mental habits which both parents have acquired, unless offset by a fortunately strong faculty of one parent. One of the prominent characteristics of idiocy is this lack of will power, especially in its exercise to follow a fixed purpose. The hereditary tendency is evident.

No very valuable mathematical statements as to the importance of this factor as a cause of idiocy can be given, for the reasons at first suggested.

3. In 1848, in Massachusetts, a commission appointed for the purpose, prepared a report which became a state document, representing an examination of five hundred and seventy-four cases of idiocy. In the report, I understand, forty-five cases were fully tabulated, and of these, eleven were children of intemperate parents.

In 1856 a commission reported to the Connecticut Legislature embodying information concerning five hundred and thirty-one cases. Of this number, seventy-six were reported as having intemperate parents. In thirty cases both parents were so addicted, while in forty-six cases this sin was laid at the door of one parent only—the father being guilty in forty-three instances and the mother in three.

At the Royal Albert Asylum, Lancaster, England, an examination of the antecedents of three hundred inmates showed that sixteen had intemperate parents, while at Erlswood, England, a similar examination of eight hundred cases announced only six in which the condition was ascribed to intemperance.*

Dr. I. N. Kerlin, of Elwyn, Pa., in a very carefully prepared tabulation of one hundred cases, found thirty-eight in which there was recorded intemperance of parents.

Dr. C. T. Wilbur, of Lincoln, Ill., found eight cases resulting from abuse of drink by parents, out of three hundred and sixty-five in which the supposed cause of idiocy was recorded, but there is no statement as to the number of cases in which there were intemperate antecedents.

The writer, while serving as medical assistant at the Institution for Feeble-Minded at Glenwood, Iowa, examined the antecedents of five hundred cases and the causes ascribed for the condition. Of this number, in one hundred and fifty-six cases, no cause was given, but intemperance of parents was found in nine cases. In the remaining three hundred and forty-four cases, twenty-three had intemperate parents, while in only two cases was the cause ascribed to this habit.

There are two errors to be guarded against in the study of this subject, (1) The full acceptance of statements of parents and friends; and (2) The hasty assumption that any one unfortunate antecedent or condition is alone responsible for the mental deficiency of the child. The former is liable to underestimate the cause, and the latter to overestimate it, and both to obscure it. The former are of value only when the parents are intelligent and sincere, and the latter only as considered in connection with its associated infirmities.

In the tabulations last cited, while intemperance of parents existed in thirty-two instances,there were twenty-nine instances of feeble-mindedness in the family histories; eight of insanity; forty-six of scrofula; forty-nine of phthisis; twenty-five of kinship, etc. In many instances two or more of these factors existed in the same family.

The results of these investigations while disappointing to enthusiastic temperance workers, and while they are not as definite as would be desired, are sufficiently conclusive to have made those who have given the subject any study recognize intemperance in the use of alcoholic beverages as one of the important causes of idiocy. The teaching is certainly obvious, and any disappointment experienced results from an impression which has been quite general for a number of years that the majority of idiots were born of intemperate parentage. Loose expressions of those who would have been good authorities, may have, in a measure, been responsible for the view. We find in the writing of no less an authority than Dr. S. G. Howe the following, referring to the Massachusetts report before alluded to:

"Several striking truths are seen to be the result of these inquiries. One of the most important is, that eight-tenths of idiots are born of a wretched stock; of families which seem to have degenerated to the lowest degree of bodily and mental condition. This condition of the body is the result of intemperance, or of excesses of various kinds, committed, for the most part, in ignorance of their dreadful consequences." While there is much truth in this sentence, it is easily misunderstood. Intemperance in its broadest sense—the habitual over-indulgence of appetites, habitual over-exercise of mental or bodily functions, the constant submission to nervous strain and mental anxiety from whatever cause—these disqualify people to beget healthy offspring; and, alas! how much "liquor" has to do directly or indirectly in these matters.

Faribault, Minn.

*The information concerning the Massachusetts report and the examinations made at Lancaster and Erlswood, is taken from "Intemperance as a Cause of Idiocy," by Dr. G. E. Shuttleworth. Proceedings of American Association for Feeble Minded, p 46, session of 1878.

GOD IN GOVERNMENT.

BY M. A. GAULT.

The year of 1863 was memorable for inaugurating the God in government, or national reform movement. It was born at a convention that winter at Xenia, Ohio, representing eleven denominations and seven states, and called for prayer and conference over the state of the country. It was at a time when the smoke of the civil war hung like a black pall over the nation, and patriotic men were trembling for the fate of the Republic. The nation's sense of dependence upon God was so deep, that it even found expression on our coins in the words, "In God we trust." Simultaneously all over the North, the pulpits and platforms and press began to call attention to the fact that, as a nation, we had no moral anchorage, that we recognized in our National Constitution no law higher than the popular will.

This convention at Xenia, crystallized into the form of a movement designed to press the agitation of the question, Does the higher law, or the civil statutes of the Bible, rule men in the sphere of politics? The next convention, which represented eight denominations, met in Pittsburg the following spring, and sent a Commission to present the claims of the movement to President Lincoln. After hearing the petition, the President said, "The general aspect of your movement I cordially approve." Afterwards, he said, in conversation with Dr. McAyeal, and several other members of the Commission, "You have gained one of the reforms you have sought during my first administration (referring to the abolition of slavery), and I hope you will gain this before my second expires." But Mr. Lincoln little dreamed of what momentous issues were involved in this question. It not only involves the overthrow of the liquor traffic, but the triumph of every other moral reform.

This reform movement has now for twenty-six years been steadily but surely blazing its way through the wilderness of prejudice and misrepresentation, until it has enlisted the best cultured brain and heart in the churches. It has a thorough organization with half a dozen lecturers, three of them constantly in the field, and an ably edited sixteen-page weekly organ, the Christian Statesman, of Philadelphia.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

We are writing these lines for next week's paper, on the first day of 1890. Sitting here in the dawn of the new year, and also, the dawn of the tenth and last decade of the century, a holy hush seems to fall upon us; we are trying to scan with prophetic eye what this new decade may bring of good to the world through the temperance reform. It is only given to mortals, however, to surmise what the future may be, by the history of the past. Sixteen years since the Christian womanhood of the land commenced the crusade against the liquor traffic, and what a change it has wrought on the whole face of Christendom. To say the least, it has caused an arrest of thought that will not cease until this mighty wrong of the centuries has been righted. Under God, one of the strongest weapons of the W. C. T. U. has been the literature sent out by its publishing house. Scores of eloquent tongues can but reach a few thousands, but their burning words can be taken up and voiced through the printed page to hundreds of thousands.

***

It was just in the dawn of the last decade, January, 1880, that the Woman's Temperance Publication Association started on its career. Most of the friends of the cause, and in fact the leading women of the W. C. T. U., looked upon the undertaking as very risky, and as most likely to end in disaster. So they held aloof from it, but God was in the enterprise,—it could not fail,—and to-day it is acknowledged by the very women that looked askance at it and refused it a helping hand to be the strong right arm of the W. C. T. U. in its battle for God and country. Starting with one employe, an editor, and desk room in the W. C. T. U. headquarters, for which no rent was paid, it now has one hundred and twenty employes, including several editors, and requires such an amount of room that it is paying a rental of $9,000 per year. THE UNION SIGNAL, which is only one of its publications, has a weekly circulation of over 75,000. The Association has been paying dividends on the stock for five years, and it looks now as though the W. T. P. A. was entering upon the most successful year of its existence. So, as we look backward over the decade which has just closed, we cannot but exclaim, "What hath God wrought!"

***

Would it be presumptuous, in the light of what has transpired, to prophesy as great a success during the next decade for the Woman's Temperance Building Association in the erection of the Temple as that which has crowned the W. T. P. A.? We think not. The one enterprise is as God-given as the other and as greatly needed, only it was necessary that the publications should come first. Now that money is needed to scatter this literature broadcast, the income from the Temple will accomplish this, and push on to success every line of work originated by the National Society.

Let the doubting and fearful ones lose all hesitancy and fear and come forward and do their part, feeling assured that God has set His seal upon this enterprise, which is to be a prominent factor in sweeping the W. C. T. U. into the twentieth century on the high tide of a God-given success.

***

Mrs. M. A. Tunis, of Somerville, N. J., sends a couple of photographs of Grandma Heath, of that place; she is the oldest W. C. T. U. woman living, having attained her hundreth birthday the 24th of last July; she is still in vigorous health. These photographs, Mrs. Tunis has had taken in order to sell them to defray, as she says, the expenses of the W. C. T. U. work in her department. The photos are twenty-five cents each. Mrs. Tunis writes: "My postage amounts to a large sum in the course of the year; I must either make money to meet it or drop the work, as I have not myself the means to carry it on to my satisfaction." We quote what she says in order to show the great need there is in every department of national and state W. C. T. U. w rk for money to aid each superintendent in the development of her department. And this shows how much it will be for the benefit of each state to encourage the unions within its borders, to send as much as possible towards the erection of the Temple, for all moneys sent by a state towards the building fund of the Temple will receive a pro rata of the income from the building, thus enabling the state officers to supply the needed funds to superintendents of departments in every county in the state, besides furnishing literature and speakers with which to arouse the people to a sense of the enormity of the crime of strong drink.

***

Mrs. F. D. Peck, of Muskegon, Mich., sent a beautiful plaque, painted in white water lilies, to be sold for the benefit of the Temple; it was worth $5, but we were offered $2.50 for it. and sold it, at that price.

***

Mrs. E. R. Steadman, of Evanston, Wyoming, an old lady in very poor health, sixty-six years old, sends a pretty pin-cushion she made herself, to be sold for the benefit of the Temple. We will sell it for $1, which is very much under price. Mr. C. T. Darwin, of Decatur, Ind., a photographer, sends half a dozen pictures of St. John hung in effigy, to be sold for the benefit of the Temple, they are twenty-five cents each. Miss Mamie Wheery, of Chester, Ill., sends two handsome gold rings to be sold for the Temple, one is a heavy plain gold band, the other is handsomely chased; she also sends gold sleeve-buttons. A good Quaker friend, Elison Brown, Winchester, Va., sends a bunch of peacock's feathers, from her favorite pea fowl, Dick. They sold for fifty cents.

***

Our late secretary, dear Willa Cox, has had sent one dollar as a Christmas memoriam to her memory, by her cousin, Miss Lizzie White, of Lebanon, Ohio. Last spring Miss Rosa Bennett, one of the earnest and loving workers for the Temple, was called home suddenly to the Temple not made with hands; in her mite-box her mother found $2, which she forwarded to us with the promise that though Rosa was in heaven her mite-box would be daily supplied with pennies. And now another $2 comes from Rosa's box; as her mother in a beautiful note truly says, "She rests from her labors, but her works do follow her."

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.
145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Correspondence.

OUR SECOND ROUND-THE-WORLD MISSIONARY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I started out from Adelaide on a sixty days' tramp, going as far north as Port Augusta. This is a seaport some hundreds of miles north of Adelaide, situated on a beautiful bay that divides the city into two parts, East and West Sides. We reached the different parts of the city by means of what they term a "ferry boat," not such as ply between San Francisco and Oakland, but simply a "skiff" propelled in a most primitive manner by oars.

This is a very warm country. Snow is never seen nearer than on the summits of distant mountains. The whole outlook is very much like some parts of California. Seven miles from the Port is the largest ostrich farm in the world, where may be seen between five and six hundred birds. The feathers are prepared for market at this place; many natives are employed, and such articles as dusters and feather fans are manufactured from the waste feathers. The proprietor told us the birds thrive quite as well there as at the Cape from which they were removed.

There are many things of deepest interest in the country. The natives are seen in the North and West only. Like our own natives they have been crowded further and further to make room for civilization, till they are no longer seen in the centers of population. Their country is in Western Australia where they till the soil and engage in various occupations. I have been told that comparatively little is being done to bring them within the influences of the gospel.

Many strange people can be seen in this cosmopolitan part of the world. Natives of India are constantly on the streets selling their wares. They wear their native dress, which varies according to the station of the person. There are also large numbers of Afgans, who are employed in driving camel caravans across from one colony to another. They travel from Hergot Springs to Queensland and New South Wales, as well as the Northern Territory. These caravans move very slowly, not more than a hundred miles a week, resting nights, and carrying from five to six hundred pounds to each camel. They usually take provisions and wire fencing to the North, returning with wool and ore. It seems they are used with profit in transportation. Six years ago there were but sixty camels in the whole colony; now there are twelve or fourteen hundred in use. They are valuable beasts, valued from four to five hundred dollars, and endure heavy work for about twenty years.

I journeyed to all the largest places, organizing unions in every place visited, with a membership of from thirty to one hundred and twenty. I was very much surprised to know of the large numbers of people who had never heard of the work, and the names of our leaders were altogether strange to them. Forming unions was very difficult. No one seemed to know anything about our methods, aims or lines of work; often our afternoon meeting continued for more than two hours; everything had to be explained, the whys and wherefores entered into at length, until I was very much tired out when the tramp was over. My line of travel took me to Broken Hill—this is the great silver mine of Australia. I held meetings there for the better part of a week. We had crowded houses, and formed a union with a hundred members. While there, I met Mr. and Mrs. Patton, Americans. It was a great pleasure to see them, for we had many mutual acquaintances and had journeyed to many of the same places, they had even been away up to Alaska. I was taken down into the mine. It is not very deep; I should say not more than three hundred feet, but the tunnels branch out in every direction. I never saw such a sight in my life, and I have been down into some of the largest mines in the world. In many places native silver can be seen and the manager, who is a mining expert, told us a hundred years would fail to dig out all the wealth. Most intense excitement prevails at the hill over "stocks and shares" and nearly every one in the place, save the ministers, have fallen to speculating.

The whole place has a strange look, one could easily imagine an American cyclone had just passed over it. Everything is in a state of the wildest confusion. One house faces the street and the next faces the alley. All premises are supposed to be fenced, as posts have been set into the ground about six feet apart, but this does not prevent fowls, goats, and even cattle wandering about, inspecting their neighbors' premises; wagons, carts and drays are driven, without regard to intrusion, into back or front yards; the mailman rides horseback up to the back door and cries "Post."

The houses are nearly all made of corrugated iron; scattered here and there can be seen miners' tents. Many times whole families live in one room, and in this new city only four years old, with thirty thousand inhabitants, home comforts are comparatively few. In this camp we find the characteristics that are noted in all mining communities—large numbers of young men without home or home influences, drinking, speculating, gambling and prize fighting. A physician told me while I was there that he was attending seven men with "black eyes," who had been thus adorned in trying to reach the highest standard of manhood based upon the principle of brute force.

The journey to and from Broken Hill was very hard, there are, as yet, no sleeping cars; when travel is heavy one is obliged to sit bolt upright all night. On leaving the Hill, I visited a beautiful spot, which was reached by a drive of twelve miles over hills and through glens, among green pastures and beside murmuring, flowing waters, passing dense growths of native trees, called wattle, which is a small, unshapely tree, but in this country, where there is comparatively little shrubbery, it was restful to the eye to see the smooth, shining leaves and buds nearly ready to burst into flowers of a light canary color. The bark of this tree is used for tanning purposes, and in the fall, as the tree begins to shed its bark, the natives gather it for market. After an hour and a half's drive (most refreshing after the night's fatigue), we reached a quiet town nestled in the foothills. The landscape before us was so beautiful I wondered how sin had ever entered that sheltered spot, but, as in every other place, there could be found the "trail of the serpent." We held a very successful mission, which resulted in the formation of a union of sixty members.

For the accommodation of travelers, that their slumbers may not be disturbed in the middle of the night, the stage never leaves this place till five o'clock in the morning. I had to sleep that night with one eye closed and the other on my watch, and in the gray dawn of the early morning move toward the next place of appointment. I reached there about three o'clock that afternoon. Having met with an accident, we were delayed some hours. The overworked horses gave out, and refused to go another step. It was the mail coach, and as the driver was obliged to reach town at a given hour, he mounted one of the horses and galloped off to the city, leaving coach and passengers by the wayside. As I saw the horse and rider disappear in the distance, I began to think of the evening meeting, but as the news of the breakdown reached town, a good brother drove to the scene, and I was rescued bodily. A union was formed, and in due time I departed.

My next appointment took me away off to the coast again, to a mining country, and a most enthusiastic time it was. The place did not begin to hold the crowds that came night after night. I shall never forget my visit there, such grand women were unearthed. About a hundred and twenty joined the union, and in less than two weeks they had formed another union in the nearest place. The city has two districts, Moonta and the Mines. At the latter, where there are several thousand inhabitants, no liquor is sold or allowed on the grounds.

The mines are very wonderful, and as they desired very much I should see something great in Australia, I was taken into them. I wish I could describe this "trip to the center of the earth," few ladies have ever ventured down, less than half a dozen, and it is regarded as quite a feat. First, I had to don male attire throughout. Talk about "women wanting to be men!" No, thank you. I greatly prefer dresses. Some one had kindly furnished me with a new suit throughout, from miners' shoes to the hard hat to hold the candle. In company with a minister and one of the managers, we started for the mine in a carriage through a driving rain. At the mouth of the mine we stepped into a very primitive affair called a "cage." This was a little more than six feet high, just the width of my shoulders one way, and about twice as wide the other; three of us crowded into this small space; a signal was given and down we went. The passage through which this cage descends is made like the old-time corduroy roads, and the cage being of iron, it goes bumpity-bump, with a most deafening noise. It seemed at first we were being whirled into another world. We went down perpendicularly to a depth of two hundred feet, when the cage struck an incline which tipped us to an angle of about forty-five degrees, and in that position we were taken down more than fifteen hundred feet. When we stepped out of the cage and started on an exploring expedition, I seemed to have some difficulty in managing my feet, not that there is so much of me on the ground, but the borrowed shoes were not only of great length, but of great weight.

We were conducted through tunnels that branched out in every direction. At one point the vein seemed to take a downward course. The miners had followed this to a depth of a hundred feet below us, and as we peered into this dark abyss all that could be seen was the dim flicker of the candles in the hats of the miners. Soon a signal was given, a valve was turned, and some machinery, worked by compressed air, began to wind up a roller of heavy chain. Then a man's head appeared, and in a moment he stepped beside us, having been brought up the distance of a hundred feet in an iron pail. As he stepped out, another man placed one foot in the bucket, grasped the chain, the machinery unwound, and he went down and down, and was lost to sight. This last man went down for the purpose of blasting; three holes had been drilled in the rock, and filled with giant powder, the fuse was lighted; the man was pulled hastily up and we all retreated about a hundred and fifty feet into the tunnel. Then came the thundering report—one, two, three, perfectly deafening. It seemed to shake the very rocks. Our candles were blown out, and there we stood, in the very bowels of the earth in the midst of a darkness known only under the ground. The whole earth trembled, and the situation seemed truly awful; the reports dwindled down to a dull, heavy sound, and it was some time before I regained my hearing. When our candles were again lighted, I was quite ready to go another story higher and see what that was like.

This tunnel was very much like the one below it. I was surprised when the manager told us there were more than thirty miles of track under the ground, laid through the different drives and shafts. Over these tracks the ore is brought in small cars to the opening of the mine, whence it is taken to the surface. It is a very wealthy mine and has been in operation for some years. In this part of Australia are many large copper mines; one was worked for years at the Burra Buraa, the latter was, long ago, worked out and the whole city has fallen to decay. I took a drive along the creek and saw where in early days the miners and their families lived in "dug outs" on the banks of the creek. Later, the company built long rows of miners' cottages for the comfort of their workmen. These are now vacant, and the prosperity of the town is a thing of the past. JESSIE A. ACKERMAN.

(To be continued.)

A CRUSADE EXPERIENCE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Most vividly do I recall my advent into Ohio in the spring of 1874, when I went to be pastor of St. Paul Church in Cincinnati. The Crusade movement was under full headway and some of my own people were actively engaged in it. I had been but two or three Sundays in my pulpit when some utterances of mine concerning the delinquencies of the officers of the city in regard to the enforcement of liquor laws, called out an "open letter" from the mayor of the city addressed to my humble self. That gave me a capital opportunity to reply, and, as the mayor was wholly in the wrong, and the position I had taken was entirely right according to the law of the state, he found himself in an unpleasant attitude. After that I frequently had occasion to meet and confer with the mayor and other city officers, touching matters pertaining to the Crusade movement.

My wife was going out almost daily with the Crusaders, visiting the saloons where the elect ladies did most effective work. The mayor of the city issued a proclamation forbidding this Christian service. He told me of his purpose and asked my opinion concerning it. I told him that the ladies would not obey it, because it was unjust and unreasonable; but he was relentless.

That afternoon I concluded to accompany the ladies, which I did. They were arrested at the corner of Ninth and Baymiller streets while engaged in their religious devotions, kneeling in the gutter, a wide sidewalk between them and the walls of the building. There were forty-three of them, as I remember, my wife among the number. They were marched off a long distance across the city to a station house. I took the liberty of accompanying them. When the station house was reached the officer in charge, who possibly owed me a grudge, put his hand upon my shoulder and said to me, "We don't want you in there, sir."

I looked him sternly in the face and said, "That is my wife that you are taking to prison; I go with her, sir."

He relented. Our only child, a young lad, had accompanied me. The officer seeing him, rudely caught him by the shoulder and said, "You cannot go in there." I gave him another look of decision and said, "That is my son; this is our whole family; we all go together, sir." And we did.

The station-house into which the women were thrust was not a particularly attractive building. There were all sorts of rough people, vagabonds, and criminals inside its walls. No sooner had the women entered than they struck up and sung "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," to the tune of "Old Hundred," with a volume of sound that made the building tremble.

The officer behind the counter struck his gavel to silence them, but in vain. After singing, they marched up and each one wrote her name, nationality and age on the slate with criminals. Then came the question what to do with them. The mayor was sent for. After an hour's waiting he came. When it was whispered that he was approaching, he was met at the door by the ladies, and one of them said: "Mayor Johnson, this is a serious matter. We are accustomed to engage in all our business with prayer; let us pray," whereupon two sisters, Mrs. Whitridge and Mrs. Fee, knelt and prayed, and such prayers it seemed to me I had never before heard. They told the Lord all about their persecutions, about the holy work in which they were engaged, about the opposition of wicked men. They told Him, also, about the dear, good mother of the mayor, who stood there reverently listening to their pleadings. They plead with the Lord to interpose in their behalf.

After the prayers were over, standing immediately by Mayor Johnson, he turned to me and said, "Well, Doctor, this is a serious business."

"Yes," I said, "I told you it would be."

"But," said he, "I didn't think the ladies would go out against my proclamation."

"I knew they would, and told you so, Mr. Johnson," I replied. "They are women who fear God and get their authority from a higher power than yourself; and besides they have violated not a single law of this city, for they have not obstructed the sidewalks, but it is the miserable rabble that your officers have permitted to gather round them, and the beer-kegs and whisky casks of liquor dealers that are permitted to obstruct the sidewalks."

Finally, the mayor determined to parole his prisoners, and ordered them to appear at the police court on Monday morning. While yet in the station-house I was asked if St. Paul church could be had for an indignation meeting the next day. I replied that "It was not my province to say who should occupy the church, but for once I would assume the authority," and granted the permission. The meeting was held. It was a massive and magnificent one. The large structure was packed to repletion. It is not too much to say that the whole city was stirred as it had not been before. Nor were Cincinnati and Ohio alone stirred. The whole country was aroused. The Boston preachers' meeting, Monday morning, sent Mrs. Payne a stirring telegram, expressing sympathy and good will.

Monday morning found the ladies promptly at the court, but the court was not ready, and was adjourned until Wednesday morning. Again they were assembled, noble and pure Christian women—many of them from the best homes in Cincinnati—were packed in there with the vilest vagabonds of the city to be tried. The whole thing was a miserable farce. Nothing was done to the ladies, nothing could be done. They had really committed no offence. They were ordered to go and keep the peace. They were the real peace-makers, and deserved the thanks of the city officers and of the inhabitants rather than their condemnation.

The movement did not continue long after that in full force. It was not intended by Providence to be permanent, but it sowed the seed from which has sprung in Ohio and over this country abundant fruit. It was the inspiration of manifold forms of temperance labor that have blessed the whole world from that day forward.

I am grateful for having had the opportunity in God's providence of sharing some humble part in this great Temperance Crusade. May God be with you all, and may that most dreadful enemy and fearful crime of modern civilization, the liquor traffic, be soon banished from our fair land. C. H. PAYNE.

CORNER GROCERY SALOONS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It may be that California is the only state in which it is hard to find a town where a very large majority of the groceries do not sell more beer and whisky than anything else. But I have found it as true now as ever, that "Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together," and this loathsome, putrefying carcass, the liquor traffic, is found in almost every place where man is found, and the eagles are thicker than applicants for office at the White House. That you may know that we are beginning to realize our perilous situation in San Francisco, I send you a resolution passed at our recent county convention.

"Resolved, That as members of the county convention, we pledge ourselves to withdraw or withhold our patronage from all groceries where liquor is sold; that we also secure the names of temperance groceries, and publish them in the secular and religious press."

Now, I am anxious to awaken universal thought on this subject that is of such vital importance. It seems to me a very grave matter when parents send their children to any place where they must inevitably come in contact with a class who barter in want and shame. I know from personal observation, that many good mothers, and even members of the W. C. T. U. have given this subject little or no attention. Said a fond mother to me not long since, "I have been trading at B's grocery. He is so accommodating, and sells cheaper than almost any one else. But the children have been telling me lately what they have seen and heard, and I shall never enter his doors again, nor allow the children to go near the place." And yet this store is one of the most respectable (?) of its kind in the city.

Dear mothers, could you know how much your children see and hear and become familiar with by going to these places where the main business is carried on under a cloak of deception and sin; first, sinful in itself, and second by trying to evade the law, you would shudder at the thought of the possibility that the purity and innocence of your child may have already been sullied. You may bid them beware; but ten to one, they will be more anxious to know what is behind the screens; and the saloon patois, that screens cannot conceal, is making impressions on the plastic minds of your children that prayer cannot obliterate nor tears erase.

But there is a sadder and darker side that should arouse the most careless and indifferent. The dregs of the vile decoctions that are prepared in these vile places by viler men and women, are often given to children, either with a fiendish purpose, or without design of wrong, but in either case the way is opened for their ruin. Read the following from the Call, a leading secular paper at San Francisco, and then judge whether or not we should bestir ourselves in this matter:

"A boy nine years of age, who attends the Sanchez-street school of this city, was found senselessly drunk yesterday afternoon in a vacant lot on the corner of Nineteenth and Collingwood streets. He remained away from school on account of temporary illness, and at noon entered a corner grocery near his parents' residence. While there he was given some luncheon and a considerable amount of whisky by a person in attendance. He soon became very ill from the effects of the drink, and staggered forward, falling down helplessly drunk within a short distance of his home. A lady, with the help of some boys, carried him there, and were met with frantic demonstrations of grief on the part of the boy's mother when she ascertained the true state of affairs. He was placed in bed, where he remained unconscious a long time. This matter deserves investigation in the interests of little children who are exposed to such perils as may overtake them in a family grocery store."

We owe a duty to our temperance grocer. Many an honest man has failed, when doing a strictly temperance business, solely from the want of the patronage that should have been given him by temperance people. W often hear it said, "I am just as strong on the side of temperance as you are, but I must trade where I can buy the cheapest."

The temperance grocer is selling just as low as he can, and live, but the liquor-selling grocer can outbid him, for as he makes eighty per cent on his liquors, he can afford to sell his groceries below living prices, and thus get a class of customers that give an air of respectability to his business. It is little wonder that our enemies laugh us to scorn when they see their friend, the bloated parasitical liquor-selling grocer, fattening on the spoils of temperance people, while the honest grocer is starved out.

Let us agitate and ventilate this subject till the liquor-selling grocery has not only become unpopular, but is proven disreputable, as it really is. And may I ask through THE UNION SIGNAL for answers to the question, "How many states, counties, or unions have taken action in regard to patronizing groceries that sell liquors in any form?"

Also, may I ask for some facts to be sent to me to prove the magnitude of this evil, that we may put them in leaflet form for distribution? We may have sufficient for a volume already, but desire to have a symposium from all the states that will make the leaflet more effective. MRS. L. M. CARVER, Co. Pres.

934 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, Cal.

"HIGH" SCHOOLS IN OMAHA.

EDITOR UNION SIGNAL:—Between the popular and the reform platforms, I closed at Christmas a six week's engagement in Nebraska. One day I sat down in Omaha, and beside me sat one of the oldest and ablest attorneys, as familiar with the cost and carnival of the liquor traffic there as one may be and lead a sober life; yet, withal, a devout Republican. He said he would cipher out the cost of keeping school in that city the past year with the saloon as school-master. I said that was the education I was sighing for, and he put the figures thus:

290 saloon licenses	$290,000
290 livings for keepers @ $1,500	435,000
580 barkeepers @ $1,000	580,000
290 saloon rentals @ $75 per month	261,000
290 porters @ $40 per month	139,000
290 net incomes, (average)	290,000
290 fixtures—repairs and interest @ $300	87,000
Total direct annual payment by Omaha to the saloons that keep her schools	$2,082,000

Now all familiar with the extravagance of metropolitan saloons know that most of these items are placed low. The omitted figures, too, are almost equal to those set down as liquor's increase of the city's expense for police, jail, court, penitentiary, poor-house, plus the waste in gambling and prostitution due to liquor.

Then I called on the city treasurer, and found the total city taxes for the current year to be only $994,881; on the county treasurer, and found the total county and state taxes to be only $555,277; a total taxation of $1,550,158; and a thick slice of this is liquid. So, to run the public schools of Omaha by high license costs that city a half-million more this year than all other expenses, including large public improvements, and all county expenses, and the county's quota of state expenses. One might well get a gamin to cry, "How's that for high!"

Yet Omaha, by her same high-license attorney, pledges 18,000 votes to place license in the state constitution. And he estimates that the saloon expense is paid by one-fourth of the people, or 7,000 families, that is $300 to a family. So 18,000 men will vote a neighbor drunk and the family ragged and hungry just to make him pay $300 of the taxes laid on by the high-license humbug! Distribute the $300 among the 18,000 even, and each gets less than two cents! Isn't the meanest man in Omaha the fellow who will vote a neighbor and a family into crime and crusts to save himself two cents!

It is legitimate that such a city send four students a year to her state university, eighty-one to her state penitentiary; and that high-license Lincoln should, last year, find sixty-one criminal indictments, prohibition Topeka (of similar size and people) only one. How many eyes wear scales for spectacles! JAMES CLEMENT AMBROSE.

INDIA'S CURSE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Your live paper has been coming to our Mission reading-room in this Hindoo city for the past year, and it must have done good. There is great need of strong words for temperance here, where the habit of drink is increasing, being pushed by a Christian government, and where the fatal opium habit spreads more and more. It is said that now one-half of the people in the Balasore district use opium. The opium license is given to the man who will pledge to sell the largest amount. Then, by fair means or foul, he sells it, or feeds out part of it to children, creating in them the appetite that shall soon make them paying customers. One of our preaching stands is opposite an opium den, and Mr. Griffin often sees the heartless dealer giving opium to the children crowding around. Then mothers in India feed this drug to their babies to keep them still, especially if the little one is not well and is worrisome. English women and missionaries' wives must always watch lest the native nurse quiet their children in this way. It is too often done.

The man at the opium den near our preaching stand has fingers rotting with leprosy. It is sickening to think that those who eat his opium must some of them take, too, the seeds of slow-torturing death by leprosy. And I have wondered why the English government allows lepers to sell what people eat. But then I have thought again how small is the curse of leprosy compared with that of the opium habit, which in this land means disease as slow, as sure, as incurable, as full of pain. And the fear of the leprous opium dealer has changed to fear of that other poison that is beyond pollution by even his touch. "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul, but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

Balasore, Orissa, India. LIBBIE C. GRIFFIN.

Our Children.

THE NEW YEAR'S WELCOME.

BY MARY D. BRINE.

Ring, bells, ring! for the King is here;
Ring, bells, ring! for the glad New Year.
He mounts his throne with a smiling face,
His scepter lifts with majestic grace.

Ring for the joy his advent brings;
Ring for the happy songs he sings;
Ring for the promises sweet and true
With which we gladden our hearts anew.

The new-born year is a happy fellow;
His voice is sweet, and low, and mellow;
With the Christmas holly his head is crowned,
With the Christmas blessings we'll wrap him round.

Then ring, bells, ring! for the joyous day—
The past is silent, the present is gay;
Ring out your merriest, cheer after cheer,
To welcome the birth of the Happy New Year.
—Exchange.

NOBODY'S CHILD.

A NEW YEAR'S STORY.

"I never saw the house look quite as pretty before as it does now," said little Daisy Mount delightedly to her big sister Carrie.

Summoning all the dignity of her seventeen years, Carrie replied, "No, of course you have not, for I have never prepared to 'receive' before."

"And I'm to tend door! Oh! won't it be fun? I wish the first caller would come now."

Daisy laughed merrily while she talked; but Carrie answered, seriously, and just a trifle crossly, "Well, then, I don't. Supposing the bell should ring, do you suppose I would receive calls in this dress?" looking disdainfully down at her blue worsted morning-dress.

"You might; I don't believe the young men would care. You look pretty in anything," Daisy said, admiringly.

Carrie laughed, and then answered, "Never mind any flattery now, but help me put the finishing touches upon these rooms."

A half hour later the rooms were "all ready," and Carrie ran to her room to dress in the pretty wine-colored silk made expressly for the occasion.

Daisy, being already attired in her prettiest dress, an embroidered blue cashmere, called in her mother to admire the "receiving-rooms"—that is the two parlors, with portiere curtains hiding the sliding doors and the dining-room in the rear, separated from the back parlor by another portiere curtain.

The Mount house was on a corner. and the parlor and dining-room windows faced the street, so that every one passing by that day had a full view of the prettily arranged windows. Many stopped to admire the vines winding up to the tops of the casements, the sweet hyacinths smiling into their faces, the waxy begonias and brilliant geraniums, the gorgeous scarlet lilies, and the stately callas towering over all.

The flowers, and the birds singing in their pretty gilded cages were all passers-by could see, unless it was an occasional glimpse at a smiling face peeping outward over the buds and blossoms.

Daisy was kept very busy from eleven to three letting in and out callers. After three there was a short lull, and the family were left alone a little while.

"I'm most starved," Daisy said, eating a sandwich in a manner quite suggestive of a famished condition, "and, oh, mamma, I never tasted turkey so good as this."

"That's because you are decidedly hungry," Carrie said. "Everything tastes better than usual to-day. I never tasted such delicious salad, or oysters, or jelly, or coffee, or anything before," laughed Carrie; and with the laugh came another ring at the bell.

Daisy, who had thrown down her sandwich to attend the door, came back with a strange expression, half-comic, half serious, upon her face.

"There's a queer little girl at the door, mamma, all rags as to clothes; and she looks about as cold as a cake of ice."

"What does she want?"

"I don't know."

"Whose child is she?"

"That I don't know, either. But she'll freeze to death if she stands there long. Can I call her in?" Daisy asked, impatiently.

"Yes, call her in, child. Take her right through the hall into the kitchen," Mrs. Mount answered.

Just as Daisy and the strange child reached the kitchen, the front-door bell rang again.

"You tend the door, Martha, please," Daisy said to the housemaid. "I'm tired, and want to rest."

But she did not rest; she only hovered about the strange child with a pitying look upon her face.

"You look cold, and tired, and hungry," she said, kindly. "Sit down by the range and throw off your hood, and I'll get you a nice lunch."

The guest did as she was bid; and when the prettily-attired child brought her a plate of nourishing food, she thanked her with quivering lips.

"What is your name?" Daisy asked.

"Dolly."

"Where do you live?"

"Nowhere."

"What? How can you help living somewhere?"

"I mean nowhere partic'lar. Anywhere I can find a place."

"Whose child are you?"

"Nobody's."

Mrs. Mount's pleasant face appeared in the kitchen just then. Daisy said to her, "Mamma, this little girl says she's nobody's child."

"What do you mean, dear? Have you no mother and father?" Mrs. Mount asked, kindly.

"No, ma'am; no mother, no father, nobody," the girl answered.

"Mamma! Mamma!" called Carrie, "will you please come in and help entertain? There's a whole sleigh-load at the door, just about to descend upon our eatables."

"Yes, I'll be there in a moment, Carrie. And Daisy, dear, just let this little girl, nobody's child, stay in the kitchen until I return."

An hour passed before Mrs. Mount found an opportunity to look into the kitchen again.

"Mamma! what do you think? This poor little girl sleeps in barrels, in boxes, under door-steps, or in cold sheds—anywhere and everywhere that she can find a place," Daisy said, in a distressed tone. "Haven't we got a comfortable place somewhere in this big house that we can give to this poor little thing who belongs to nobody?"

This last question she whispered to her mother, who answered, sympathetically, "I'm sure I wish we had, Daisy, dear; but it would be running too much risk to take a street waif in whom we know nothing whatever about. She may not have told the truth. She may have a mother and father belonging to the very lowest class. I will question her some."

"Where do you live, little one?" she asked the child.

"In Brick street."

"Where is your home?"

"Nowhere."

"Where do you sleep? and where do you eat your meals?"

"I eat anywhere where I can find anything, and sometimes I sleep at Mammy Varden's."

"Who is Mammy Varden? Where does she live?"

"She's an old, ugly, wicked woman, and I hate her. She's got red rims around her eyes, and a red nose; and she's muttering, and scolding and swearing all the time. Sometimes when I beg for her she'll let me sleep on a bed of rags in her dirty room; but it ain't often, for I don't like to beg, and unless it's awful cold I'd rather sleep in a box out-of-doors than in her awful-smelling room; it most chokes me there."

A cheery whistle was heard, and Frank Mount came stamping in to shake the snow from his boots. His mother met him at the door.

"Don't take your coat off, Frank, my boy," she said; "I suppose you're about tired out, but just one more call; one to please Daisy."

"Yes, sir, to please me," laughed Daisy, running up to her brother with a greeting kiss.

"You want Master Paul Clifton to come over and taste the good things—is that it?" Frank asked teasingly.

Daisy's cheeks flushed, but she answered good naturedly, "No, I haven't once thought of Paul this afternoon. We want you to go to Brick street."

"Now Brick street is a lovely place for a young man like me to go to make New Year's calls, isn't it?" he asked, with a grimace.

"It will be lovely in you to go, anyway," Daisy said.

And then Mrs. Mount gave her son a message, which he listened to in a mystified manner, and then hurried off. In a half hour he was back again with red eyes and a hoarse, choking voice.

"The poor little thing told the truth, mother," he said; "only what she said was as a drop in the bucket. Why, there's a whole ocean of iniquity over in that old house on Brick street. That old woman is a regular hag. It's lucky for her that I didn't have my bootjack with me. Such an old, wrinkled, cruel face and such vixenish eyes I have never beheld before. She is a ragged woman, and her filthy room is the foulest-smelling place I ever was in. She called that poor little Dolly all the foul names her vile mind could think of, and I left her with unutterable loathing. As I walked down the dark, decayed hall-way after leaving her room, I heard a gentle voice call, 'Young man, young man, will you stop here a moment?' I stopped, of course, and grouped my way into another room, where an old lady—I call her a lady because she is one—lay on a low, but clean, bed. 'It's a poor place to receive a gentleman, but I want to make it all right about the little girl you're inquiring about. I couldn't help hearing what Mammy Varden said.' 'And did she tell the truth?' I asked. 'No,' she said, 'she's a wicked, cruel, low creature, and will ruin the child if she ever gets hold of her again. Dolly's father was once a good man, but he died a drunkard two years ago. Her mother was a gentle, patient, suffering woman who died in this old house one year ago, leaving poor Dolly a wanderer upon the face of the earth. If I wasn't a poor old bed-ridden creature, with only my little ten-year-old grandson to support me, I'd do something for the child. But you see I can't; it doesn't seem to be God's will.' That's what the poor old creature said, mother; and I do declare I never was so touched before in all my life."

Frank's eyes were full of tears, and so were the eyes of his listeners—his mother's, Carrie's and Daisy's.

"Perhaps it is God's will that we do something for poor Dolly," Daisy suggested, pleadingly.

"Of course, it's God's will! It's as plain as the noise on my face, and that's plain enough, goodness knows," Frank said. "Didn't He lead her to our very door? Of course He did; and Daisy, while you are telling Dolly that she's somebody's child, I want mother in the pantry a minute. Come, mother!"

Frank produced a basket, and his mother followed him into the pantry.

"What do you want, Frank?"

"I want this basket filled for that precious old woman and her little grandson. Didn't she teach us to remember the 'least of these'? And I want her to know it's happy New Year."

While Frank took his journey to Brick street and back a transformation scene went on in the laundry of the Mount house. When he returned he could scarcely recognize Dolly washed, combed and dressed in some of Daisy's outgrown, pretty clothes. I cannot mention all the scenes of the delightful evening that followed. To all in the Mount house it was an evening never to be forgotten for its joy and merriment; but to Dolly it was happiness unutterable and almost overwhelming. During the happy hours one thought stood prominent in her mind; the same thought seemed to drop asleep with her when she closed her eyes in her pure, fragrant bed; and even in her dreams it haunted her like a sweet spirit. It was this: "I am somebody's child."—Religious Telescope.

The Still Hour.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JANUARY 12, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

[Hereafter the daily Bible reading notes, and notes on the prayer-meeting topics, will appear in this column. All should supply themselves at once from the W. T. P. A., with the Bible Reading Calendar and Weekly Prayer-Meeting Topics for 1890. Price, postpaid, five copies for ten cents; fifty cents per hundred.]

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 1:26-55; John, chapters 11-16.)

Sunday, 12; Luke 1:26-55. Verses 31, 32. The name, Jesus, has become the greatest of all names. It is the Life of the church, the Light of the world, and the Hope of humanity. Verse 38, In Mary, we have one of the noblest examples of humility toward God, of entire acquiescence in His will. Verse 43, In Elizabeth, we have a rare and beautiful instance of humility toward others, the entire absence of all selfish and envious feelings. Verse 48, Let the poor be encouraged, for the lowliest have been chosen to usher in the greatest events. Memorize verse 50.

Monday, 13; Jno. 11:3. Every one of us may have a friend in Jesus. This friendship will not exempt us from earthly troubles; but it takes away the distress of trouble, to know that our blessed Lord understands all about it, and will stand by us to the end. Verse 6, We must not be discouraged if in times of trouble our Lord does not come at once to our relief. Verses 23-26, Instead of looking down into the dark grave as the end of earthly trouble, we look beyond to the everlasting deliverance from tribulation and death, in the happy country of the redeemed.

Tuesday, 14; Jno. 12:2. How great the joy to thus be together again! Far greater will be the joy when death is eternally vanquished, and we meet together in the immortal, undivided life of Heaven. Verse 5, Hypocrites always find something to censure in the works and conduct of honest Christians. Verse 6, Every man is tried according to his native propensity—the object of trial is to bring out a man's native character. Verse 40, God never gives men up to judicial hardness and blindness, till after a long course of warnings. This text, so terrible, is quoted six times in the New Testament. Do we see Christ? Do we recognize and own our Lord?

Wednesday, 15; Jno. 13:1. Christ interested Himself in their condition, and bore with the inconstancy of His disciples to the end. He never ceases to love His people. Verse 8, How short is the step from true humility to presumptuous humility, which is utterly disobedient. Verse 9, The submitting to being washed is often a greater test of humility than the washing of others. Verse 17, The knowledge of religion is worthless, apart from the practice of it. Verses 34, 35, The true badge of discipleship is love, the spirit of which is the soul of the new congregation of God.

Thursday, 16; Jno. 14:1. Blessed, wonderful words which begin with, "Let not your heart be troubled," and end with "Be of good cheer." Chap. 16:33. This discourse is a great, swelling channel of love, in which all the people of God may find comfort. Verse 2. Are you getting ready for a home in the "mansions"? Verses 15-27, Keep your Lord's commandments, if you will have the Comforter and the blessed peace. Memorize verse 6.

Friday, 17; Jno. 15:5. There is an organic life-union between Christ and His people. He is the source of their spiritual life and fruitfulness. Verse 11, Christ's heart is a joyful heart, even in the deepest suffering. This joy of Jesus Christ should become our joy. It will be ours if we have the one necessary thing of abiding in Him, which He mentions ten times in this chapter. Verse 12, How absurd to depend upon loyalty to a sect or correctness of doctrinal views for acceptance with God, when one has a sharp, ill-natured tongue, or a hard, unloving temper.

Saturday, 18; Jno. 16:3. In order to have a religion of vitality and strength, there must be a clear conception of the holiness of God and of sin, which is its opposing force. Verses 7-13, The Holy Spirit is a Rebuker, Renewer and Sanctifier, as well as a Comforter. Where His presence exists, His fruits appear. Gal. 5:22,23. Verse 33, Our blessed Saviour has overcome the world; it is now our opportunity to overcome the world, also, through abiding in Him.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(The Sinner's Excuses. Luke 14:16–24.)

Men are invited to the greatest feast that Heaven can afford, but they slight it on some pretence or other. Study the excuses in this parable of the Great Supper.

1. The sinner's excuses, intended to justify himself, condemn God. If one is blameless in disobeying God, God is to blame for requiring obedience. Who is most likely to be right, God or the sinner? Rom. 3:4, 19.

2. The sinner's conscience at times bears witness that his excuses spring from a bad and deceitful heart. Rom. 2:15; Heb. 10:27.

3. This parable shows that if the sinner persists in making excuses, and gives up religion and God, God will give him up. Verse 24. Hos. 4:17.

4. The excuses are but a pretext to go on in sin, and by holding on to them the sinner but provides for the ruin of his own soul. Prov. 8:36; Luke 12:20.

5. The Bible nowhere intimates that any possible pretext can excuse one from loving God and obeying the Gospel; and the whole of its truth and warnings are squarely against every one who by any kind of excuses goes on in sin. Matt. 22:12; 25:44–46.

The Household.

ALL THINGS NEW.

BY MARY LOWE DICKINSON.

Old sorrows that sit at the heart's sealed gate,
Like sentinels grim and sad,
While out in the night-damp, weary and late.
The King with a gift divinely great,
Is waiting to make us glad.

Old fears that hang like a changing cloud
Over a sunless day;
Old burdens that keep the spirit bowed,
Old wrongs that rankle and clamor loud,
Shall pass like a dream away.

In the world without and the world within
He maketh the old things new;
The touch of sorrow, the stain of sin,
Shall flee from the gate when the King comes in,
From the chill night's damp and dew.

Anew in the heavens the sweet stars shine,
On earth new blossoms spring;
The old life lost in the life divine,
"Thy will be mine, my will be Thine,"
Is the song which the new hearts sing.

BOYCOTTING A BUTCHER.

BY ELLA B. CARTER.

It happened on this wise. A Jew butcher owned an unoccupied store next to the back-yard entrance to my domicile. It was one of those buildings that, like some people, seem superfluous and never to have found their vocation. No business throve at Number Six, and it stood empty most of the year. Passing this building one day, I noticed a stir about the place; upon inquiring the cause, I learned that it had been rented for the purpose of a drinking saloon. The thought of a saloon by the back gate, our favorite way and shortest cut to the horse-cars and the stores, filled me with swift indignation. Not that a saloon is an unusual thing in the city; indeed, whenever I took my walks abroad, I found saloons to right of me , to left of me, and all around me, and I was painfully conscious of passing fifteen on my way to church on Sunday mornings, but there were none of the hated places in actual juxtaposition to my home. My soul was full of revolt. I stopped and pondered a moment; what could I do about it? I knew the owner; indeed, I was a customer of his, and I liked the man. I knew his character, a money-getter, of course, but I admired his sobriety, his industry, his business qualities, his parental pride and tenderness, and I determined to go to him and kindly expostulate.

A few minutes later, I walked into his shop, which was a little farther down the street, and asked if he had really rented Number Six for a saloon? He answered with an air of careless bravado that he had, that he could not afford to have it stand unoccupied, and that a saloon business there would certainly be successful and stay. I expressed my regret, and pleaded with him to reconsider his action; I appealed to his fatherly love,—his children might be ruined by this saloon; it would hurt the morals of his clerks, make the neighborhood less respectable, and depreciate the value of property. To all my entreaties he replied, "It is rented; a saloon will come there. The Excise Board has granted a license, and that's all there is about it." And I walked away sorrowfully.

What redress was there for me? The appeal to Cæsar, to the highest municipal authority? I had nothing to hope from that source; they would protect the saloon, and logically enough, since that which is established by law has a right to be upheld by law. They would protect the saloon before they would protect me from sights and sounds that may constitute an assault as well as blows, and from which the state ought to protect its decent citizens.

The next morning at the usual time I went out to do my marketing. As was my habit, I went to the shop kept by the owner of Number Six. But before I gave my order, I said to him: "Are you still determined to rent Number Six for a saloon?" "I am," he answered, very red in the face and very angry. "In that case," said I, "I can never spend here another dollar of my honest money. Will you please tell me the amount of my indebtedness to you?" I paid my bill, and I confess that as I walked out I thought with satisfaction that the custom I had thus withdrawn amounted in a year to as much as the rent of Number Six; and I determined to ask some other temperance women to withdraw their patronage from him also. I did not think at the time it was boycotting, but such it was, and I had to suffer from the recoil of the method, to take a longer walk that morning, and to buy an inferior grade of meat and vegetables.

Several days after this incident, I was passing by the shop of the owner of Number Six. The proprietor was standing in the door. It was an awkward moment. I believed he cherished resentful feelings towards me, and if I said "Good-morning," the return would probably be a cutting rebuff. Now I like to greet courteously my worst enemy, and when near the butcherman I bade him "Good-morning." What was my surprise, when in return to my salutation, there was not only a cordial "Good-morning," but he smiled, he doffed his hat, he bowed nearly to the ground; it was almost a salaam. And I went my way thinking, after all, men respect our opinions because they know in their hearts that we are right.

Returning a half-hour later, the Jew butcher was still standing in the door-way and was now beckoning me to enter, and asking if he could have a word with me. Somewhat dumfounded, I went in. He sat down on a barrel of potatoes, and I leaned against some piled-up bags of turnips, while he said in substance that he had been thinking the matter over, and he had changed his mind about Number Six, and had determined not to rent it for a saloon. It was all true, the saloon would have a bad influence on his children; his clerks, too, would be neglecting business and drinking beer, and then it would be less pleasant to sit with his family upon the stoop of warm evenings, as he liked to do; besides he wanted to be a good neighbor, and wanted to do nothing to depreciate the value of property or the respectability of the locality. "No," he concluded, bringing his fist down hard on the counter, "no saloon-keeper shall come to Number Six, even if he has got his license! I'll stand a law-suit first." Of course I told him I was glad of his decision; we shook hands, and my next day's dinner was bought at his shop.

Boycotting is a doubtful expedient which is growing unpopular and giving way to nobler and more rational measures; but it has seemed to me that in the butcher's case the end justified the means; at any rate, it prevented a saloon from coming next to my back gate.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEMPERANCE TEACHING.

BY CLARA SMITH COLTON.

The influence of a faithful Sunday-school teacher in instilling temperance principles into the minds of the young, cannot be overestimated. Temperance teaching should not be confined to the regular quarterly review day. We should be unwilling to let a single Sabbath go by without giving some direct lesson or passing remark or illustration on this great theme. A few earnest words often impress even the most frivolous young girls with their responsibility to help free suffering womanhood from the rum curse. Press it home to the heart of each girl that it is her duty to use her influence against the first steps toward intemperance in brothers and young men friends. Show the girls that they can and should by their social influence discountenance and ostracize young men who think there is no harm in taking a social glass now and then. Some earnest temperance Sunday-school teachers take three or five minutes every Sabbath to talk to their classes on temperance in its practical bearings as regards their individual responsibility. Is this not a good example for every Sunday-school teacher to follow?

We have a class of wide-awake lads who are beginning to form opinions of their own; we can ask them in all seriousness to think of all the reasons they can why men drink intoxicating liquors and smoke. Even help on the plausibility of the reasons; get all the arguments used by advocates of strong drink—from Kate Field to Monfort Wine and Brewers' Journals. Then slowly but surely lead the boys on to answer the arguments from physiological and moral standpoints, so that they themselves will bring the sledge hammer of logic down upon the specious reasoning. Touch the boys on their pride. They always aspire to manly size and strength and beauty. From Sabbath to Sabbath give them a few plain words about the stunting and deforming effect upon body and mind of tobacco and strong stimulants: paralysis, dimmed eyesight, heart palpitation from cigarette smoking.

From this, go higher and talk earnestly and reverently of man made in God's image; "our bodies temples of the living God." Inspire in them the desire to make the house where God may dwell beautiful, entire and clean.

Can we, as mothers, as Sunday-school teachers, as Christians, as temperance workers, say too much or begin too soon to talk to our boys about pure hearts, pure minds, pure bodies? Let the columns of our newspapers answer; columns filled with medical advertisements which it shames us even to read. Primary teachers in Sunday-schools can interest even very little children in temperance and personal purity instruction from a physiological standpoint, if it is put in the form of a parable.

My little three-year-old boy can understand comparing his body to a house. A cupola on top, with a soft covering of brown, black, or yellow, is where the master of the house lives; he looks out through bright, clear windows, which are blue, brown, gray or black. There are a great many parts to the house; an engine (the heart), connected with many little pipes, sends warm fluid all over the house; there are ventilators (the lungs), to keep the fluid pure with fresh air; there is a furnace (the stomach) where fuel is put in to warm the fluid that goes over the house; good fuel must be put into the furnace to keep the engine and the ventilators in working order, and to keep the master up in the cupola well and strong. The master has messengers all over the house (the nerves), which tell him when anything is wrong in any part of the body. Suppose that some strong poisonous stuff is put into the furnace which makes it red hot, and burns and injures it. It makes the engine pump very hard and fast, and sends the hot fumes of the poison up to the cupola and makes the master sick and partly insane. The clear windows are bleared and reddened, and the whole house disfigured. Each of these points should, of course, be enlarged upon and carefully and vividly explained, so that the little ones will understand. A lesson like the above, adapted for older children, is given in one of the Loyal Temperance Legion Lesson Manuals of the W. T. P. A. Publishing House.

Pictures cut from temperance papers and nicely mounted can be used to advantage by primary Sunday-school teachers. Sunday-school libraries should be well supplied with good temperance books—Julia McNair Wright's, T. S. Arthur's, Gough's and others; also hygienic temperance books, such as are used in many public schools.

Responsive Bible readings on temperance, in which the school and the officers and different classes take part, are helpful. Parts can be assigned beforehand to teachers, who should have their classes ready. Occasionally a good temperance recitation, select reading, short essay, or temperance talk should be given during the opening exercises of the school by a boy or girl who has been helped in making careful preparation. Good temperance songs should be used often. Let us, as Sunday-school teachers, use every means, make every effort to place the little feet firmly on the rock of total abstinence; to fill the hearts of our young girls, and our manly boys with an earnest purpose to fight for God and Home and Native Land against the monster, Rum.

THE ETHICAL PROBLEM OF TOBACCO.

BY N. A. HUNT.

Much has been said of the incivility of gentlemen who use tobacco on our streets, sidewalks, and especially on our lines of public travel. Some car companies, if I mistake not, have taken to themselves much credit for what they have done towards not having offense given to our olfactories. This is all very well, as far as it goes; but it does not always meet all our wants. The æsthetic views of society are worthy of our consideration; and there are very few of us who use none of the weed, but have been annoyed, even beyond the point of Christian forbearance, by both tobacco smoke and tobacco spittle. But it is the ethical, not the æsthetic view of the subject, that I now wish to dwell upon; i. e., so far as it is allowed on our lines of railroad travel.

I think that I can easily show to any person the true ethical bearing of the smoking-car on all non-users of tobacco. It is a sponge that ought to be eliminated. A coach will hold seventy persons, all the seats being occupied, but we will call it sixty. One engine will pull five coaches over the "Rockies," three hundred souls; but the sixth car has to be hitched on for the accommodation of those who use tobacco. A railroad man told me recently that it costs as much to take the smoking-car as it does any of the rest of them. And I am sure I should think it did more, if I had to keep it clean. But for our demonstration. At three cents a mile, sixty persons conveyed one hundred miles would be $180, which we will make the basis of our estimation. We will further suppose that our train consists of five cars without the scent of tobacco; although not absolutely; for almost the last time my wife went on the cars with me, before she was fairly seated, she said, "We are on the smoking-car." "No," I replied, "don't you see half the passengers are women?" "I don't care," she rejoined, "I smell tobacco." "It's only what clings to the gentlemen's mustache and kid gloves," I replied.

But enough side-issues; let us get to business. We were saying that our train consisted of six cars, five with smoking prohibited, and one with no prohibition. Bear in mind it costs as much to run the smoking-car as it does any of the others. If if costs $900 to run six cars one hundred miles, it will cost but $750 to run five that distance, a saving of $150. We will suppose a like number of ladies and gentlemen are on the train, and that two-thirds of the gentlemen smoke; of course, none of the ladies. We would have, then, one hundred smokers, and two hundred that do not. So on every one hundred miles fare, the non-smokers have to pay $100, for which they receive not a particle of benefit; it is solely for the gratification of the one hundred who use tobacco.

One afternoon, when talking to a railroad man (a user of tobacco), on this question, he said. "I see what you are after; you want to make us your debtors." I accorded to him quick perception as he said, "I've thought of that before." But in bringing in our charge, let us be fair, not too exacting. The engine, the hands, most of them; most of the fuel and water, and the road bed, would have to be furnished to run five cars instead of six, so that should we reduce the extra estimated expense of the smoking-car one-half, making it $50 each one hundred miles it would probably be not far out of the way. Some have intimated that the smoking car is furnished by the liberality of the railroad companies. If that is so, let us see their liberality in furnishing sleepers free, as well! Use any kind of arithmetic, or any kind of logic you please, and you will find hundreds of thousands of dollars, every year, exacted of non-users of tobacco for furnishings to those who use it on our lines of public travel; and it is time we all understood it.

WHERE MUCH IS GIVEN, MUCH SHALL BE REQUIRED.

To live without personal wrong-doing is a duty, and being a duty it is possible to achieve it. The better part of the community live without falling into the more obvious and grosser sins. Men and women attain a plane of life wherein they do not steal, or cheat, or lie, or give way to sins of appetite. What they do give way to in the line of error, is apt to be faults of temper and sins of omission rather than of commission. They are not living on that grosser plane wherein they are tempted to do evil to their neighbor, but they still lack moral enthusiasm to a degree that leads them to ignore the active good they might do. Their sins are not positive but negative. They have attained a height from which perhaps they do few of the things which they ought not to have done, but they do leave undone those things which they ought to have done. Now this, too, can be overcome. "To err is inhuman," "and to be holy is to live in the straight line of duty and of truth." It is just as much the absolute duty of those whose lives are far removed from the grosser sins to also overcome petty faults and errors and negative phases of wrong, as it is for the criminal classes to overcome their greater and grosser temptations. The elaborate life of wealth and refinement and social state has its obligations to higher truth and to absolute holiness of personal life. There is far less excuse for defects than in the lives of poverty and ignorance and repression, and lack of all finer and more stimulating influences. Where much is given, much shall be required. There are never privileges to enjoy without corresponding duties to fulfill in return.

It is undoubtedly true that there are spiritual as well as physical laws, and that when one lives high enough to be in the current of their forces, to be subject to them, he receives the benefit, as the ship that enters the circuit of trade winds is propelled by them. Our lives are enlarged by entering into other lives; they are exalted by giving themselves with absolute loyalty and self-sacrifice to higher purposes, and by recognizing and appreciating all that is truest and best in general life, not that which we personally achieve, but that which is still higher than our own poor achievements. That which we can enter with appreciation and sympathy becomes most truly our own.—Phillips Brooks.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES ELIZABETH W. ANDREW

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager,
161 La Salle St. - - - - - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President.—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 S. Ashland Av., Chicago, Ill.
Treasurer.—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary.—MISS MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago
MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS. CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. S. F. CHAPIN, Charleston, S. C.
MRS. J. R. NICHOLS, Indianapolis, Ind.
MISS E. S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Cry aloud. spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression.—Isaiah 58: 1.

THE BATTLE FOR BREAD.

Humanity must eat. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," were the solemn words which fell upon the ears of our first parents when their disobedience brought sin into the world. How to get the bread with as little as possible of the sweat, has been and will continue to be, one of the problems which the individual will naturally try to solve. In spite, however, of every curvature of thought to prevent the curvature of spine, that stern mandate must be carried out, and the battle will go on with ever increasing intensity. Humanity never had so large an appetite as it has to-day, and bread-winning conditions were never before so complex and intricate.

A large number of people annually give up the struggle of keeping soul and body together, and helplessly drift with the tide which sweeps them speedily out to a sea where all cries are hushed, all efforts extinguished, and where the rich and poor alike sail away to a country which they believe can be no worse, and which they hope may be vastly better than the one they leave behind.

A larger class still, sullenly regard their fate, and declare with great bitterness that the world owes them a living, and without asking how the debt was incurred, they demand at your front or back door as the case may be, the bread which your sweat may have earned. while their foreheads are not only free from that moisture. but painfully so from that which would remove the trade mark which the earth, cursed for man's sake, has ever stamped upon him, alike in honor or in scorn. But these do not enter into this subject as legitimate factors.

The battle for bread is fought by those who belong to that great division of humanity called wage-workers: a class too mighty to be despised, too powerful to be lightly esteemed. Their shoulders are under the pillars of our national government. and their fingers touch more or less deftly both the black and white keys of our commercial life The future well-being and perpetuity of this nation depend largely upon the solution of their triangle-problem:—worth, work, wages!

The employer asks of the employe: "What is he worth to me?" and his basis of valuation is one of money.

The employe, on the other hand, asks: "What am I worth to myself?" for a manhood which is free born, and which no labor, not even dull drudgery, can enslave, is above all money value; it cannot be represented in cold figures. To preserve this worth and yet harness it to work, even to the coarsest kind of honest labor, is a divine secret of power revealed only to those whose circumstances require and whose spirits are brave enough to meet the test. What is won on that basis by way of compensation for labor is the real value, for it is better that humanity should not eat—in other words, starve than that it should eat and survive its honor. The truest heroism of life is in the carrying out of this principle; for it regulates not only the outward conduct, but in conjunction with spiritual forces, ever at work when permitted, the soul is kept untainted, the spirit serene in trouble, the heart undaunted, while the entire being is enfolded by the wings of a patience near akin to the divine manifestation, "who for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich"' He who wrought in that lowly carpenter's shop dignified by His example all honest labor for all time to come, and took the last remaining sting from the Eden sentence!

No one can read the last report of Hon. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, without being deeply impressed with the painful truth that the battle for bread going on to-day by the working women of this country is also a battle for honor and purity.

To be pure and virtuous under the most favorable of conditions, is one thing; to battle for purity and honor in the midst of the howling mob of ofttimes unscrupulous money seekers, is quite another thing. In this report Mr. Wright deals almost exclusively with facts concerning working women, and under two or three prominent heads groups together some startling statements and figures.

Under the division of "General Conditions," which relate to the surroundings of women while at work, he states some pathetic facts; and while it is evident he has put the best side out, if indeed there can be even a good side, to say nothing of a superlative state—he has said enough to show that the one dominant thought in the minds of employers is not morals, but money.

Twenty-one cities, including, of course, the largest, furnish the facts and statistics which speak so forcibly, and so painfully as well, against the sanitary conditions, and the general environments of these daughters of toil. To leave the hot, stifling, vitiated air of the shops for the immoral atmosphere of tenement house life, is but to change, but not improve the chances for success in the moral as well as physical struggle. "The moral condition of working women," says Mr. Wright, "is influenced for evil by the tenement house system in a way too vast for discussion here." This, then, is the awful fact that neither during hours of labor nor when at home (?) are the conditions of many thousands of working women and girls conducive to either health or morals.

Another point to be noted is, that women employed in tobacco factories seem less able than others to maintain the law of purity. Nor is this at all to be wondered at—the filthy, degrading character of the work must of necessity exert its influence over the moral nature. Let young women everywhere take note of this, and when they see young men puffing away at a highly-flavored cigar, stop and think that very likely the hands of a girl long lost to virtue and honor helped in the manufacture of that exponent of idleness and vice!

Under the head of "Boarding Homes," "Aids for Working Women," etc., Mr. Wright has many kind and appreciative words for those who, in many of these cities are trying to ameliorate the untoward surroundings of this weary-hearted class. The Protective Agency for Women and Children, The Woman's Christian Association, and The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, receive from him words of praise and commendation.

In regard to the average weekly earnings of these working women, the figures stand at $5.74. Out of this paltry sum must come board, clothes, and such other necessary expenses as occur in ordinary everyday life. The fact that there are girls who can and do fight the battle for bread on that sum of money per week, to say nothing of the harder strain of the moral struggle, is enough to make one weep mingled tears of admiration and shame; admiration that the best type of womanhood is run in so heroic a mold; shame that "man's inhumanity" to woman is tolerated under a form of government we call Christian!

On the subject of "The Character of Women," Mr. Wright says: "The statistical method is not the best under which to determine moral conditions." True, there is no table of figures whereby we may compute motives; but, given certain conditions, and certain corresponding results are almost sure to follow. We are glad to believe that the majority of women wage-workers are honest and virtuous, but we may not shut our eyes to the fact that many are not.

This especial phase of the subject is too painful and too delicate to treat in this article, but enough has been said to arouse every woman more happily circumstanced, and especially every mother, to earnest and persistent efforts to prevent the awful ravages now going on upon the worth of young womanhood. Secure for working girls the best possible helps to virtue and intelligence when the band is thrown off the iron wheel of daily toil, and the machinery of labor ceases its roar and rattle, while feminine humanity eats its sweat-earned, tear-stained bread.

LAW AND ORDER.

In the prohibition warfare, there are three distinct lines of action: The educational, which strives to so inform the public that public opinion will both justify and demand proper legislation; the legislative, which endeavors to secure the enactment of prohibitory law, not in defiance of, but in accordance with enlightened public opinion; and the administrative, or those efforts whereby the enforcement of the law is secured.

The W. C. T. U. has always been so active in each of these that the charge has been made at different times that one or the other was its specialty. But it has no specialty in the sense of exclusiveness. Its educational work covers every phase of the question, and its educational activities have never been equaled. It has been foremost in every contest for improving the laws, and during the last ten years has probably paid the cost for more prosecutions under the law than any other organization.

We say this much in order to again call attention to the Law and Order Leagues, the national annual meeting of which will convene February 22, 1890, at Toronto, Canada. This is the first time a national convention of these Leagues has been called outside of the United States, and the movement is thus made distinctly international.

Where prohibition has been repealed, the strongest ground against the law has been its failure of enforcement; it was so from 1855 to 1875, during which time prohibitory laws were overthrown in a dozen states. It was so in Rhode Island, and it is so to-day in Iowa. The law has been trampled on in the river towns, and now the same parties that have stood by and seen the law annulled are asking for its repeal. The state which held the securing of the law to be a state movement, but the enforcement of the law the work only of localities, is now seeing the neglected and rebellious localities threaten the existence of the law in every portion of the state. The enforcement of the law is as much a state and national question as the securing of the law. It is because of these things that this special law and order movement is in every way commendable, proposing, as it does, to carry the contest to any limit, even to the election of independent candidates or to the breaking of party slates and smashing of party machines, whenever in the way of its purposes. Its most conspicuous triumphs have been in Boston, under Col. L. Edwin Dudley; in Philadelphia under Hon. Arthur M. Burton, and in Chicago under the late Andrew Paxton.

A hundred delegates to Toronto should go from Illinois and neighboring states. Any one interested in the purposes of the convention will be welcome, and Toronto, the best governed city in America, will be found both an object lesson to the friends of order, and a rebuke to the half-governed cities on this side of the line. Persons intending to go can secure full information from Hon. C. C. Bonney, President, Chicago; or from L. Edwin Dudley, Secretary, Boston.

DR. DE COSTA writes to correct the impression which for some reason has gone out that the White Cross society does not desire the coöperation of women. He declares, on the contrary. that such aid is essential to the movement, and especially requests our workers for social purity to urge pastors to the organization of White Cross auxiliaries, but cautions them to make it clear that such societies are, in their membership, composed entirely of men. Otherwise, the distinctive features are lost, and confusion results. We are glad to make this correction, feeling sure it is just. In this most delicate and untried march, it is not strange if sometimes the army fail to comprehend the tactics, but the great Captain of the growing host has given the watchword: "Blessed are the pure in heart," and there is sure victory for every true soldier, since his field of conquest is himself. It is fitting, too, that chaste women fasten the armor of these knights, the weapons of whose warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds of social prejudice, "casting down imaginations" and "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

GERMANY now occupies a more advanced position toward religious liberty than any other European nation. The Reichstag last week exempted theological students from military service; extended to all German colonies the same religious toleration which has heretofore been limited to the Congo, and repealed the law passed in 1874, which gave the government authority to expel from the country any clergyman who persists in the performance of his clerical duties after being officially deprived of his clerical charge. In other words, ecclesiastic offense in Germany must hereafter come to trial before ecclesiastic tribunals, as by the recent act, the civil authorities are relieved of all jurisdiction in such cases.

AT the late session of the Liberal Federation, held in Manchester, England, resolutions were adopted favoring a direct vote of the people upon the liquor traffic, and the disestablishment of the Church of England. Mr. Gladstone was accorded a non-partisan reception in the town hall. He advocated granting county councils control of the liquor traffic, and also of the police force.

THE appointment of Rev. Father Joseph Cotter to the bishopric of Winona, is gratifying to temperance workers in all communions, the Bishop having been three times elected president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union. He has also contributed valuable matter to the literature of the reform.

THE first contribution received toward the $150,000 memorial fund for Yankton College, which the trustees of the institution have decided to raise in honor of the late President Ward, is a purse of $200, given by the Indians of the Sauter Agency. The tawny donors to this fund for the education of whites, are members of a band which twenty-seven years ago assisted in the massacre along the Minnesota frontier

Special Difficulties.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

INDUSTRIAL HOMES

QUESTION.—Why would it not be well to detail some of our best speakers to go before the Legislatures, and in each state plead for industrial homes for women, and homes for the morally incapable? J. A.

ANSWER.—I do think there is no work that our women could set about in the Legislatures this winter that would recommend itself more thoroughly to the good sense of the people than the founding of industrial homes. Taxpayers put any amount of money into the public treasury. Politicians and boodlers get it out, and the people are always glad when even a fraction of it can be turned to some useful account in mitigating their own woes. This is the principle that makes such work popular. Politicians feeling the pressure of the people, will vote money for charitable institutions when they will do so for almost nothing else, except into their own pockets in some sort of jobbery; indeed, they see a job in the very institutions themselves. The contracts must be let, and they can bring in their uncles, aunts, and cousins, and all their wives' relations, to share the spoil. But meanwhile the building goes up, and unfortunates are helped.

To my mind we need at least three classes of industrial homes furnished by the state.

1. For young people who can never get on, except as they are taught a trade, and fairly well educated, in connection with learning that trade; boarded and clothed meanwhile, and set upon their feet, and started out into life with a few ideas in their heads, and a bread-winning weapon in their hands. Especially do I think in this statement of girls, who, if not criminal in their conduct, are at least on the verge of a departure from the white line of a true life; girls who have been arrested for vagrancy and crimes, and other girls who are in their company, or who from a wild and headlong nature, are likely soon to be. Of course I do not ignore the same class of boys, of whom all this is true, but I think they have been looked after much more than girls, and will be. I think it specially behooves women to exert their strongest efforts to help these girls, or the boys and girls both; probably that is the best of all, though their institutions should be entirely separate, and in different localities.

2. Industrial homes for those whose destruction is their poverty, rather than their vice. Perhaps you know that in the state of Mississippi they have a magnificent Industrial School for girls, accommodating, I think, 400, filled out to the last possible corner, to which respectable parents who could otherwise do little or nothing for their children's education, are glad to send them, and where they learn an occupation, as well as secure a fair English education.

3. Industrial homes or schools, probably both combined, for moral incapables, based on the principle that while a physical defect is so patent, that we all observe, commiserate, and would try to ameliorate it, there are thousands in this land whose moral birthmarks, blemishes, and practical lunacy of conscience, are a far greater curse to them and to society. But we make no provision for these poor things; they are thrust out upon the world utterly unequal to its temptations and are borne down swiftly into its vortex of sin. I refer to boys and girls who are born kleptomaniacs, born drunkards, born gamblers, born to abominations generally, who show these traits early, and do not depart from them later; who are a scourge, not the scourge of God, as Attila was called, but the scourge of the devil; the terrible outcome of a more terrible heredity, who are more to be pitied than blamed, who are sinned against before they know enough to be sinners. If we were half civilized we should make the same provision for them in homes where they could earn a reputable living, and were not permitted to prey upon society, that we now make by our poor-houses, insane asylums, and jails, for the same class of people when they have grown up. The rationale of this necessity on the home side is worthy of consideration. Think of what we mean by home. It is the temple of God; it is the most sacred place on earth—we like to say so, but practically in at least one-third of the homes, where children are reared, and where peace, and order, and quiet ought to be the rule, the home becomes a refuge for those who through alcohol are practically insane, and whose diabolical work of devastation in the home no language may ever even intimate. The pride of the home prevents us from learning what happens there, except as we are specialists, admitted to the confidence of those outraged and destroyed No plummet has sounded the depths of that expression, "A drunkard's home." The man in Chicago, who, in a fit of intoxication, beat his wife to death with the body of his new-born child, gives us in a diabolical climax, some knowledge of what, in modified form, takes place in the thousand cases never reported. In our own hallowed Evanston, as we call it, within a week, a stalwart man pounded his wife black and blue, almost destroyed her eyes, sending her shivering into the street, and when some of us went to see them, she begged us not to go in, for she feared he would be so angry that the consequences made her tremble; and there she was in that prison house, with four famished, ill-conditioned little children, while happy, educational, religious Evanston goes on its way, and does not even know of this outrage. Think of the home to which the gambler crawls in, "unbeknownst" in the heart of the night, to which the libertine returns at will, and which is polluted by the perpetual presence of tobacco smoke. We who have studied that subject know that many little lives are sacrificed by the ignorance of the father in sending the taint of his breath into the face of an infant not strong enough to endure the poison of the exhalation. Now, besides having homes for these moral incapables, which, of course, cannot be brought about to an adequate degree within a generation, but which we ought to begin working for, since if we never begin they will never be, there is one other kind of home.

4. For adult incapables, not necessarily morally below the pauper line like those I have been describing, but physically or mentally below, or both. For instance, an idiot child is born into a family. Up to the age of fifteen, or possibly twenty, he will be received into the home for imbeciles; at least this is the case in several of the states, and certainly it ought to be in all; but after that he must go home. His presence is blight and disease. He is without the self-control that would enable him to help keep the home reputable to the senses. He is a wholly disintegrating force; he harasses those who love him best, until their loss of sleep and of comfort generally, largely decreases their power as beneficent forces in the world. In none of these cases am I writing from imagination, but from actual instances known to me. Now the state ought to provide that these physical and mental imbeciles should be cared for at the state's expense, and, so far as possible, their powers turned to account. In all this subsidizing of the public funds to holy purposes, I see a magnificent and large unused field for the exercise of woman's powers. Illinois is one of the most debased states of the forty-two. We cannot stir hand or foot here to secure the abolition of the saloon. The distillery and brewery interest reach their climax within our borders, and powers and politicians have hand joined in hand to rivet the traffic upon us, and we shall only escape from it through the blessed reflex action of National prohibition. But Illinois is a very rich state. Its coffers run over, and I wish it might set the example of securing some of the institutions to which I have herein referred. And while I believe it to be the duty of our white-ribboners, in states that have a prospect of securing prohibition within their borders, to put in strong work at that point, I believe it is equally the duty and the opportunity of our society in the more hopeless states, to bring to bear strong pressure upon public opinion, and through that upon the Legislatures, to ameliorate the horrors of the present situation, and to protect the home from its direst horrors, by securing the establishment of institutions where hopeless drunkards may be confined, and other moral incapables looked after to their own greatest good, because this is always to be taken into consideration, and to the unspeakable relief of the keepers of the homes.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

QUESTION 1.—Is it necessary that we petition Congress again for a Sunday law, and should we ask the same persons to sign that did last year? A WORKER.

ANSWER.—It is necessary. We have a new Congress, and must repeat our work. Secure over again every indorsement and every name that was obtained last year, and double the number if possible. Signatures are especially wanted. Let them be sent in as soon as possible. They should pour in steadily until Congress adjourns. Scarcely a petition was received during the two weeks I spent in Washington.

QUESTION 2.—Is there a petition against the opening of the International Exposition of 1892 on Sunday?

ANS.—There is, and it should be circulated. Both this and the petition for Sunday Rest are free. Though absent myself in California, my secretary will fill all orders. Enclose stamp for postage, and tell how many of each you want. Address Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

The Watch-Tower.

Mrs. Frances E. W. Harper has been on a blessed ministry to her people in the sunny Southland.

* * *

This "Psalm for the New Year" from a voice that is still, has brought such uplift to me that I gladly pass it "along the line:"

O New Year, teach us faith!
The road of life is hard;
When our feet bleed and scourging winds us scathe,
Point thou to Him whose visage was more marred
Than any man's; who saith,
"Make straight paths for your feet," and to the opprest,
"Come ye to Me, and I will give you rest."

Yet hang some lamp-like hope
Above this unknown way,
Kind year, to give our spirits freer scope
And our hands strength to work while it is day.
But if that way must slope
Tombward, O bring before our fading eyes
The lamp of life, the hope that never dies.

Comfort our souls with love—
Love of all human kind;
Love special, close, in which, like sheltered dove,
Each weary heart its own safe nest may find;
And love that turns above
Adoringly; contented to resign
All loves, if need be, for the love Divine.

Friend, come thou like a friend,
And whether bright thy face
Or dim with clouds we cannot comprehend,
We'll hold our patient hands, each in his place,
And trust Thee to the end,
Knowing Thou leadest onward to those spheres
Where there are neither days, nor months, nor years.

—Dinah Muloch-Craik.

* * *

A sweeter, purer testimony rarely comes from sainted lips than that given by Madame Willard on her eighty-fifth birthday, January 3, 1890. Among the reminiscences of the day she spoke as follows: " 'My times are in Thy hand.' (Ps. 31:15.) 'Thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness.' (Ps. 30:11.) 'I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.' (Ps. 146:2.) My daughter wishes me to say that although entering to-day my eighty-sixth year, I am in full possession of all my faculties, sight, hearing, etc. Old age has immunity from many of the cares and exactions of middle life, so that I find life's contradictions and cares transferred to those in their prime, while I think my heart grows more tender, thoughtful and sympathetic toward all who are capable of suffering.

'He holds me when the billows smite,
I shall not fall;
If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light;
He tempers all.'

"What the poet means by 'weight of years' I doubt if thus far I have experienced.

'So long Thy power has blessed me, sure it still Will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile!' "

* * *

The Star in the East has appeared as the official organ of the Maine W. C. T. U.

* * *

"My mother heard the 'bells of the Holy City, the chimes of eternal peace,' this morning, and so went home," is the sad, sweet word from our beloved sister, Emma M. Taylor, of Massachusetts. How blessedly do those who "go before" link us to the unseen world. Truly, heaven is never made real to us "until some friend sits out of sight."

* * *

Here is a "bit" showing how New Mexico appreciates our workers. Miss Moore has been journeying and lecturing on the Pacific Coast for several months. She everywhere finds hospitable audience with the people. This seems a well-defined case of mutual admiration: "Much good and effectual work has been done in New Mexico since December 10, by Miss Henrietta G. Moore, who has given sixteen lectures in our territory, and was everywhere greeted by appreciative audiences. Many believers in high license and local option have become converts to her prohibition sentiments. The W. C. T. U. has received a new impetus, and been greatly strengthened by her efficient labors."

* * *

There was much excitement at the W. C. T. U. Anchorage Mission for Girls (Chicago) on New Year's Eve, when the express left a box marked "Stratford, England." It was found to contain an old-fashioned plum pudding of ample proportions, which had made the long voyage, and arrived literally "in good shape." It was sent by the mother of Dr. Boulter—a young dentist in the city—who became much interested in the Anchorage last summer while visiting her son. It was a rare treat to all the girls, and to some of them a delightful reminder of their home across the sea. ON DUTY.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Founded 1883.

Motto.—For God and Home and Every Land. Object: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over, and to circulate a petition for the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic drinks and opium, and other social reforms.

All members wear a little knot of white ribbon, and remember the noon hour of prayer for all temperance work and workers, and for the coming of Christ's kingdom.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care Miss Amy Leavitt, 1212 L. St., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Vice Presidents—England, Mrs. Margaret B. Lucas, 7 Charlotte St., Bedford Square, London.

Canada—Mrs. Letitia Youmans, Toronto.

France—Miss De Broen, 3 Rue Clavel, Paris.

China—Mrs. Dr. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.

Japan—Mrs. Kachi Yashima, 28 Nakarokuban cho, Tokio.

Hawaiian Islands—Mrs. Dr. Whitney, Honolulu.

New Zealand—Mrs. Packe, Upper Riccarton, Christ Church.

Queensland, Australia—Mrs. Brentnall, Brisbane.

South Australia—Mrs. Rev. Rice, Adelaide.

Victoria—Mrs. Mary M. Love, Armadale, Melbourne.

Ceylon—Miss M. W. Leitch, Oodooville, Jaffna.

India—Mrs. McDonald, F. C. M, Calcutta. Nat. Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Poona

Burma—Miss Ruth W. Ranney, Rangoon.

Turkey—Mrs. W. E. Locke, Philippopolis, Bulgaria.

Africa—Mrs. James Denholm, Roodebloem, Capetown.

Mauritius—Mrs. Bishop Royston, Bishop Thorpe, Rose Hill.

Siam—Miss Mary L. Cort, Petchaburee.

Sweden—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm.

Denmark..Mrs. Dr. Selmer, St. Kongensgade, Copenhagen.

Straits Settlement—Mrs. Marie Oldham, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.

World's Organizers—Europe, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, Christiania, Norway.

Northern Europe—Madame Andersson Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm, Sweden.

American Committee—The five General Officers N. W. C. T. U.

Secretaries—England—Mrs. Mary Whitall Costelloe, 40 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, S. W. London, England. America—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Treasurers—England—Mrs. James Gregson, Heart's Hill, Debden Green, Loughton, England. America—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Supt. Department of Temperance Literature and the Press—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Nettelbeck Str., 21, Berlin, Germany.

Supt. Department of Bible Readings—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W., England.

Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H Hunt, Hyde Park, Massachusetts.

Supt. Department of Prisons, Police Stations and Almshouses—Mrs. J. K Barney Providence, R. I.

American Supt. Legal Dept.—Mrs. John P. Newman, 333 C St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Supt. Exposition Dept—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Indianapolis, Ind.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

PLEDGE.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ——; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary; Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Miss Bertha G. Brown, Office Secretary.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.

Treasurer—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle, St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama—Mrs. M. L. Stratford, Montgomery.
Alaska—Mrs. John G Brady, Sitka.
Arizona—Mrs. S. A. Pearson, Phœnix.
Arkansas—Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, 1504 Spring S., Little Rock.
California—Mrs. R. R. Johnston, Box 288, Oakland.
California, Southern—Mrs. N. P. J. Button, Riverside.
Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, New Garden.
Carolina, South—Mrs, Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.
Colorado—Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, Longmont.
Connecticut—Mrs. S. B. Forbes. 152 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford
Dakota North—Miss Addie M. Kinnear, Fargo.
Dakota, South—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Huron.
Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.
District of Columbia—Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, Temple Hotel, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, Jacksonville.
Georgia—Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Augusta.
Idaho—Mrs. Susan Holbrook. Blackfoot.
Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago.
Indiana—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Staples, Tahlequah.
Iowa—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Clinton.
Kansas—Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, Topeka.
Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 Chestnut St., Louisville.
Louisiana—Mrs. E. T. Merrick, New Orleans.
Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. Stroudwater.
Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, Baltimore.
Massachusetts—Miss Elizabeth S. Tobey, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap. Jackson
Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart, Red Wing.
Mississippi—Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.
Missouri—Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Kansas City.
Montana—Mrs. R. H. Howey, Helena.
Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.
Nevada—Mrs. D. W. Van Deventer, Virginia City.
New Hampshire—Mrs. N. H. Knox, 263 Hanover St., Manchester.
New Jersey—Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, Ocean Grove.
New Mexico—Mrs. M. C. Raynolds, Las Vegas.
New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 103 East 123d St., New York.
Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.
Oregon—Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.
Pennsylvania—Mrs. Mary H. Jones, 2051 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Rhode Island—Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, Pawtuxet.
Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.
Texas—Mrs. S C. Acheson, 1419 W. Woodard St., Denison.
Utah—
Vermont—Mrs. Esther T. Housh, Brattleboro.
Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.
West Virginia—Mrs. Jane A Johnson, Parkersburg.
Washington Territory, Eastern—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington Territory, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, Durand.
Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, Evanston.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell.

Organizers—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.; Miss Henrietta G. Moore, Springfield, O.; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. M. L. Wells, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Frances E. Griffin, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

American Organizers for World's W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, 930 12th St., N. W. Washington, D. C., Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, Sacramento, Cal.; Miss Charlotte Gray, Christiania Norway; Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kan.; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kan.; Scandinavians, Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Hollanders, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Chinese, Mrs. M. S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, Cal.; Sclavic, Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton Ill.; Department Evangelist, Mrs. C. H. St. John, Beloit, Ka

Work among the Colored People—Mrs. Frances E. Harper, 1009 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Associate, Mrs. S. J. H. Early, 260 S Cherry St., Nashville, Tenn.

Young Women's Work—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 155 W. 48th St., New York City. Department Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Evans, 155 West 48th St., New York City; Organizers, Miss Ida Clothier, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Miss Jessica Morgan, Oberlin, Ohio; Miss Mary McDowell, Evanston, Ill.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice, 1597 Washington St., Boston; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Kindergarten, Mrs. E. L. Hailmann, La Porte, Ind.

II. PREVENTIVE.

Health and Heredity—Dr. Orpha A. Baldwin, Cleveland, O. Lecturers—Health—Dr. Mary Allen, Ithaca, N. Y.; Heredity—Mrs. R. A. Armstrong, Woodland, Cal.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass.; Literary Assistant, Miss Mary L. Benedict; Associate, Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, 165 State St., Portland Me.

Sunday School Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill., or Woodfords, Me.; Secretary, Miss Julia A. Bidwell, Hartford, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City; Advisory Committee, Mrs. Helen E. Brown, Mrs. E. W. Ruliffson, Mrs. E. M. Wymond, Mrs. Dr. A. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Vigelius, Mrs. J. C. Craw, Mrs. M. E. Morgan, Mrs. Dr. H. McLean, Treasurer, 205 Mason St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Temperance Publication Association—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, Editor Department Books and Leaflets, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T. B. Carse, Publisher; Advisory Committee, the National President and Corresponding Secretary.

Editors of The Union Signal—Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Julia A. Ames, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of The Young Crusader—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of the Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers.

The Press—Miss Mary Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, Baltimore, Md.

Purity in Literature and Art—Mrs. Samuel Clements, Ozontz, Pa.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Kirkwood, Mo.

W. C. T. U. School of Methods—Miss Mary Allen West, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.; For Practical Training to Public Speakers, Mrs. Anna B. Curry, Boston School of Expression.

Department of Narcotics—Mrs E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl. St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer, Mrs. James Havens, 673 Broadway, Denver, Col.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Work among Miners, Mrs. D. W. English, Rushville, Ill.; Unfermented Sacramental Wine, Mrs. R. A. Esmond, Syracuse, N. Y. Bible Study, Rev. A. A. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.

Flower Mission—Miss Jennie Casseday, 216 E. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.; Department Secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

Work in Prisons, Jails, Police Stations, Almshouses and Asylums—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Department Secretary, Mrs. H. D. Walker, Providence, R. I.

Work among Railroad Employes—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, McClees' Building, Gansevoort Square, New York City; Secretary, Miss Anna L. Davidson; Associate, Veterans' Branch, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Port Huron, Mich.; Petition Work, Mrs. Lavinia H. Chace, 1310 I St. N. W. Washington, D. C. Evangelist, Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, 40 Prospect St., Orange, N. J.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis. Associate, Mrs. Emma Obenauer, East Saginaw, Mich.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

Promotion of Social Purity—Miss Frances E. Willard; Associates, Mothers' Meetings, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Mrs. C.T. Cole; Mt. Pleasant, Iowa; Department Evangelist, Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, Evanston, Ill.; Legal Adviser, Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.; Industrial Homes, Mrs. Lydia R. Clark, Northfield, Minn. Work among Mormon Women, Mrs. Angie F. Newman, Lincoln, Neb.; Lecturer, Mrs. Frances McCready Harris, 218 DeGraw St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Purity in Literature, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, Effingham, Ill; Travelers' Aid, Miss Maud Remington, Baraboo, Wis.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, 23 Rowland St., Newark, N. J.; Associate, Madame Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York City.

State and County Fairs—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate, Mrs. Marion McBride, 179 Fremont St, Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Mrs. Mary I. Stille, Westchester, Pa.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.

Franchise—Dr. Anna Shaw, Evanston, Ill.; Associate, Alice Stone Blackwell, No. 3 Park St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Lucy E. Anthony, 478 N. 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Lecturer, Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace, Cataract, Ind.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine; Lecturer, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

On Appropriations—Chairman, Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 10 E. 14th St., New York City. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie H. Rastall, Topeka, Kan.

Advisory Committee—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson, Mich.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—Chairman of Committee, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Streator, Ill.

News from the Field.

ILLINOIS.

GREETING FROM THE STATE PRESIDENT.

When God was about to complete the deliverance of the children of Israel from the bondage of Egypt, He introduced a wonderful event of sorrow, and instituted at the same time a peculiar memorial service of joy. The sorrowful event was the death of Egypt's first-born, and the memorial service was called "The Passover."

In order to make it all the more impressive, the Lord changed the reckoning time of the year, and said, "This shall be the beginning of months with you, it shall be the first month of the year." Hence, it was to be to them forevermore a new year!

Without entering upon an exposition of this Scripture or an attempt to moralize, I would nevertheless ask you to remember that joy and sorrow never seem quite so closely allied as at this time. Tears and smiles chase each other alternately over our faces, while the elastic step of joy and the reluctant step of grief resound from the same by-paths of the heart.

The day of deliverance for us may be a day of bondage for another, and while we greet friends with smiles, and sunshine fills our dwellings, our neighbor over the way may be mourning the loss of a dear one; we, gathering about the feast of our passover, they sitting down in the blackness of unutterable sorrow! Let us moderate our joys, even as we wisely do our griefs, and partake of our blessings on this new year upon which we have entered, "with loins girded, shoes on our feet, and staff in hand." The record of 1889 is closed, and we are once more at the "beginning of months." "The clanging bells of Time have rung out the old and rung in the new," and we look wonderingly into the future.

Dear sisters of our white-ribbon army, what is that future to be for our blessed W. C. T. U.? Let me answer —just what you will make it!

One thing I am especially conscious of; it is to be a year of hard work, a year in which every one must be found at her post of duty, if we would measure up to the standard of the high ideal of the past. Let each one of us ask: "What is my duty to our beloved cause?" I am putting that serious heart-searching question to myself this morning, as I sit in the quiet of my room and pen these lines, and I can say, that, God helping me, I purpose to do more and better work this year than ever before, and seek to measure up to my full duty.

Will you join me in this solemn promise? It is wonderful vantage-ground when once we place our feet upon that rock—an invincible purpose to do one's duty regardless of consequences. A soldier makes but poor fighting whose feet are on shifting sand. So in our struggle, let the feet of our faith be firmly placed on the rock of a mighty truth, and we shall win, though the battle be long and hard. Let me especially urge you, my dear district presidents, to make this year remarkable in our history by such intelligent leadership on your part that the unions shall feel the force of your sympathy and helpfulness. Visit your unions; talk with the women in little heart meetings; inspire them with your faith, and with faith in you; with courage and enthusiasm all over your faces, and in your manner; in short, be a leader! If you have not faith in God for this work, you cannot lead your women; if you have not courage, you cannot help them to victory.

Grave responsibilities rest upon you. It is no small matter to be president of any one of the twenty districts of Illinois. Your respective unions have a right to demand of you your best thought and plans for their interests. To meet that demand will require time, study and special attention to details.

The Bible, your State Report, and THE UNION SIGNAL will equip you for your work. Observe that the constitution defines your duties to be an overseeing of the affairs of the organization. That takes in everything—the lines of work, the general shaping of plans and the trend of sentiment upon all questions which the state W. C. T. U. take up and indorse. Notice.—You cannot "oversee" very much at the point of a pen. We are all aware of the vast amount of willful and wicked misrepresentation there is abroad in the land concerning the recent National Convention and the political attitude of the W. C. T. U.

I hope that you, as district presidents, and all our accredited workers who are in the field, will, privately and publicly, as fitting opportunity occurs, give the facts in the case, and be ready to answer all questions pertaining to our important position.

Of the earnest, wide-awake superintendents of our twenty-three departments I expect great things this year. Make your departments hum with the music of activity. Make every one of them prominent, and write, write so constantly, so plainly, that "she may run who readeth" your suggestions, because of the haste she will feel to put them into execution.

My beloved sisters of the local unions, you who are patiently at work, without thought or care of the great world's notice or favor; you who have never held office, neither expect to my heart goes out to you most lovingly to-day. You have believed and trusted in God all these years, as you have seen Him lead forth our white-ribbon host. Trust Him still! Do not, because of the flying rumors of discontent and disintegration, almost wholly false, permit your souls to be disturbed. The great National W. C. T. U. was never stronger than it is to-day, never with firmer faith in God. Believe this, for it is true. Pray much for Miss Willard and our National leaders. The great majority of you will never appear on platform nor in print to vindicate our leaders or defend our cause, but, nevertheless, the real defense must after all come from you, and your duty, and ours as well, is defined in I. Peter second chapter and fifteenth verse: "For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." When we read in the papers that our unions are disbanding, "put to silence" those ignorant newspaper men by steadily going on with your work, making especial efforts to always attend the meetings, because your absence will be used as testimony against your loyalty to the union. Think much upon the words "well doing."

"Be comforted:
Sweet is it to have done the thing one ought,
When fallen in darker ways."

Just now, mysterious providences overarch our path, and so we have the "darker ways." But God can make it a "plain path because of our enemies," and He will if we always do the thing we ought. God bless you, dear sisters beloved, as we enter this new year. It is in my heart to live and die with you. Let me urge you to observe more carefully than ever before, because of these evil times:—First, the wearing of our badge, never be without it; secondly, the giving more attention to the devotional exercises as you open the meetings of the union. Do not let them drift into spiritless and profitless exercises, but keep the altar fires burning brightly with holy zeal and religious fervor. Speak often one to another on the blessedness of having Christ in our hearts and in our work. Be gentle, be loving and kind. Finally, my sisters, pray for me. Let us lean hard on the Strong Arm; "For the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness quiet and assurance for ever. And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places"!

MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS.

KANSAS.

'TIS WORTH THE TRIAL.

I have no doubt but what some of your readers often ask themselves this question: "Does any good result from the temperance work done in reformatory institutions?" Please let me repeat, "'Tis worth the trial."

Permit me, also, to give a brief description of the result here at the United States Military Prison, located at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. This is not a penal prison, but a big guard-house where offenders of the army are confined under sentence of general courts-martial, for periods ranging from one to ten years, for violations of the ar icles of war, governing the military service. As the purpose of this article is to make known results of temperance work here, I will not discuss the merits or demerits of this institution, other than that it is not to be confounded with prisons intended for the punishment of malefactors.

About one year ago, Mrs. Julia A. Chase, of Hiawatha, Kan., state superintendent of work among soldiers and sailors, W. C. T. U., visited this prison in response to an invitation from Rev. John B. McCleery, prison chaplain, and delivered an eloquent and touching address which started the well-springs of many a good heart, and rekindled in the breasts of her hearers the last waning spark of expiring hope or worldly ambition. Mrs. Chase was followed by Mesdames Fields and Merrill, and finally by Mrs. Hartough, anthor of "The Curse of Mill Valley," all residents of Leavenworth, Kan., and active "white-ribboners." The hope awakened, at first lay buried beneath the cares of every-day life, forgotten, probably, but not dormant. Nourished by an occasional "forget-me-not" in the shape of a letter or a little token of remembrance about the holidays, the slender blade that betokened the harvest to come, peeped forth timidly and grew apace. Through the Christian efforts of our beloved chaplain, the sickles were ground and the garners prepared. We concluded to bow to the inevitable. The writer went to interview the chaplain, and announce the desire of the men to organize. This was his reply as he laid his glasses down and settled back in his chair:

"I've just been waiting for this spontaneous outbreak. Yes, of course, I'm in favor of organizing a temperance society, first, last, and always. Get your fellows together; I'll get Mrs. Chase to come and fix you up all right." Mrs. Chase, accompanied again by the above-mentioned ladies, came, and we are a full fledged, dyed-in-the-wool temperance society with a big T. Our name is "The Julia A. Chase Temperance Union, of the United States Military Prison," and we are proud of it.

We are auxiliary to the great, grand, glorious, God-blessed W. C. T. U.; recognized "white-ribboners"; progressive Americans, and the adopted brothers of the Y's of Hiawatha, Kan. Messrs. Brown, Smith, Jenness and Miller, and Mesdames Hartough, Fields, and Merrill and many others have contributed toward the good work by their presence among us. We are two hundred strong; hold rousing meetings twice a month, and mean business.

Our chaplain is president, a good man, an earnest worker, a "Prohibitionist" and hard on sinners. Mrs. Chase is our "patron saint," and we love her. We are fond of good reading matter; would like to have some white ribbon; live in the hope that we shall yet see Miss Willard; read THE UNION SIGNAL; have no money in our treasury, but trust in God.

There are good prospects for a strong union among the soldiers of the garrison here, growing out of "The Prisoners' Union."

"Does any good result from the temperance work done in reformatory institutions?"—"'Tis worth the trial."

Yours "For God and Home and Native Land."

"TWO-SEVENTY-FOUR,"
Vice-President, J. A. C. T. U.

NEBRASKA.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE GREETING,

To all Friends of the pending Prohibitory Amendment in Nebraska:

Feeling the necessity of a well-defined and harmonious union of effort in the approaching amendment campaign in Nebraska, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Prohibition Party and the Independent Order of Good Templars deem it wise and expedient to make known to the people, through the executive representatives of these three organizations, a brief outline of policy, to the end that the greatest possible good may result from our individual and combined efforts during the momentous struggle, destined to become national in its scope.

We have agreed on the following general plan of work, to be supplemented and particularized as the needs of the eampaign shall require.

1. The national organizations of which we are auxiliary representatives, will do all in their power to make Nebraska the national battle-ground to fight out the battle of the Home against the high license delusion and snare. Miss Willard's address to the last National Convention at Chicago, contained these words: "We must concentrate in Nebraska all the work possible in 1890, for that dates, as we hope, the doom of the legalized liquor traffic in the state that opened upon the Nation the 'Pandora's Box' of High License."

The Good Templars have been considering Nebraska's interests, and will be heard from in no uncertain sound.

The Prohibition National Executive Committee has unanimously resolved to raise a special amendment campaign fund for the Nebraska work. This is to be supplemented by liberal sacrifices on the part of our own home people.

2. We recommend a clearly understood alliance of forces throughout the state of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Prohibition Party and the Good Templars.

3. In all counties and towns where these organizations exist, local committees should be made up from members of all three societies, and there should be a community of interest in the amendment work.

4. In the matter of finances, we cannot undertake to dictate, but respectfully suggest that each organization work to secure funds in its own way to be placed in its local treasury for use as the proper authorities shall determine, but in all public meetings in the interest of the amendment, held under whatever auspices, let all coöperate to secure success and lighten the burdens. We would also suggest that special efforts be made as often as once each month, by all the organizations for themselves, to raise money by collections or otherwise, for amendment work.

5. Let us make it known to all the people that we are united, harmonious and deeply in earnest, standing as a triune loyal unit, coöperating and working for the same end, yet each maintaining our separate state, county and local organizations. We will antagonize no organization that earnestly and consistently supports the Prohibitory Amendment, but our organized effort and our money should be expended through machinery that long experience has proven faithful and satisfactory.

6. As soon as possible it is our purpose to submit to the people an accredited list of state and national speakers, representing all our organizations. We shall not dictate as to whom our people should employ, but we can submit to you a choice list of available speakers and workers worthy of your highest confidence and capable of doing the highest class of service.

7. We should impress upon our people everywhere that the national aid we expect to secure is based upon the assumption that our own Nebraska folks will make the greatest financial sacrifices consistent with their condition.

8. Let us spare no time in enlisting the press and the pulpit on the right side, positively and aggressively. We cannot begin this work too early. Let every school-house ring with debates, essays and speeches during the winter months. Utilize every local speaker to canvass your counties and precincts, and press the fight everywhere against this universal enemy of our race.

MARY A. HITCHCOCK, Pres.
JENNIE F. HOLMES, Cor. Sec:
GEO. SCOTT, Chair. Prohibition State Com.
R. A. HAWLEY, Sec. Prohibition State Com.
A. M. WALLING, G. C T., I. O. G. T.
CHAS. WATTS, Grand Sec. I. O. G. T.

NEVADA.

NOTES OF GOOD WORK.

The cause of temperance has been aroused as never before by the godly work and flaming words of Major Hilton. Reno, Carson City, Gold Hill and Mason Valley secured his services. Crowded houses and great interest made the temperance workers rejoice in renewed hope and courage. At Mason Valley, Major Hilton gave two days' work; and such work as stirred the entire country. All classes heard him, every saloon in the place was represented, and such a conviction of the great power and crime of the liquor traffic came upon the people as appalled the drinkers with terror. When the pledge was passed, dram drinkers, drunkards and gamblers signed it, and the little union which had been recently organized by the state president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Lucy Van Deventer, was increased from a dozen members to fourscore. The good work is going on; the W. C. T. U. has a meeting each week, and a gospel temperance meeting every Sabbath evening. New names are added to the roll at each service. If Major Hilton, or some other first class field worker, could be sent into this state for a few campaigns, it could be carried for prohibition.

The population is small, the towns are all small, the entire field is ripe for an immediate harvest. Four-fifths of the ministers are thorough going and fearless for prohibition, state and national, and it seems providential that Major Hilton came to us as a brother worker and gathered so many to the temperance ranks. The Major was delighted with his visit to this state; he discovered here unlooked-for promise and success. The fall and winter seasons are most favorable for a state campaign. This is owing to the very mild climate, and also to the fact that our people are more settled at this time than at other seasons of the year. Major Hilton carries a high standard, but it is the only thing that will break the alliance of the government with this "sum of villainies" and redeem the victim of drink. The fight for a public sentiment is on; the temperance workers of Nevada have made provision for neither quarter nor retreat, but we want help from the great field workers who will come with Christian love and sympathy the remedy for the rum curse. Major Hilton's success among us was due to the fact that the people felt the force of his trust in God; that God was in his work, and that God was glorified in the redemption of the people. The W. C. T. U. is the only practicable agent for this field. We desire a more intimate relation with the National Union, and hope that our state will be remembered in its plans for the annual campaigns.

T. E. SISSON,
Pastor of M. E. Church.

FLORIDA.

NEWS FROM ST. AUGUSTINE.

The Band of Hope and Loyal Temperance Legion have been reorganized, and on Friday evening, December 6, held a prize meeting in which the children participated with enthusiasm. The names of the contestants from the Band of Hope, were: Carrie White, Marie Pellicer, Lulu Mourey, Maud Walton and Ida Mallette; these gave recitations. Maud Walton took the prize, which was a beautiful picture. The prize for the best reading, which was also a picture, was given to Antonio Entenza. Those who contested from the Loyal Temperance Legion were: Genevieve Spencer, on "How a Little Girl Emptied the Brown Jug"; Beatrice Elliot, "Please Do Not Sell My Father Rum"; Virgie Markler, "The Children's Petition." The last named gained the prize, which was a copy of "Nineteen Beautiful Years." A fine recitation was given by Miss Glennie Pearl, of Sterling, Ill., subject, "A Glorious Battle Won." A present was given to the successful contestants, from M. W. Spencer, of a poem entitled "The Rosy Cross," of which he is the author.

We have also been favored, the past few days, with the presence of Mrs. G. S. Mead, of Deland, state organizer of Y. W. C. T. Unions. An enthusiastic meeting was held with the girls on Monday evening, December 9, and a union of fifteen members, with a promise of more, was organized. The officers chosen were: Miss Lottie Willett, president; Gertie Edminister, first vice-president; Julia Van Balsam, second vice-president; Angie VanDarn, secretary: Emily Allen, corresponding secretary; Amelia Myers, treasurer.

During the past year our union has encountered many discouragements, and we feel that in numbers and influence we are weak; we can but hope and pray that these items of encouragement, of which you have read, may prove to be a record of the few drops before a plentiful shower. Miss Willard, in her glowing description of our beautiful city, last spring, truly said, "But the trail of the serpent is over them all." Will not the white ribbon workers pray earnestly that the Spirit of the Lord may so move upon the waters all about us that the rum curse may be removed from our midst? Are there any lecturers or workers coming South? If they will inform us we shall be glad to arrange for them to help us.

MRS. E. C. SPENCER.

MICHIGAN.

A PLEASANT OCCASION IN DETROIT.

At the regular meeting of the Central W. C. T. U., December 26, 1889, a very pleasant surprise awaited the president, Mrs. Lillian Hollister. As she was intent upon getting volunteers to distribute the dodgers for Dr. Boole's lecture, Mrs. Cushing asked for the privilege of the floor. The president, in her usual business-like way, still insisted on getting the dodgers out, at which point Mrs. Cushing appealed to the ladies, when Mrs. Kay rose and said, "We will take care of your dodgers after Mrs. Cushing gets through." She then stepped forward and said: "Mrs. President, in behalf of the ladies of the union I present this good, grand and wonderful book, of the more beautiful life of that peerless woman, Frances E. Willard. May your years be prolonged to the allotted time, and much longer if the rum curse is in the land. Some of us will be on the other side of the river, where we will meet those who have gone before. We shall still be near you, and hope to be singing 'Victory! victory has come!' I voice the sentiments of our good women in the language of the Crusade Hymn, and in the following lines:

'On the plains for bloodless battle,
They are gathering true and strong.
All the hero-hearted women
Who have wept in silence long
O'er the terrible oncoming
Of the raven-winged wrong;
Now the Lord is leading on.'"

Mrs. Hollister very touchingly responded as follows:

"Sisters, you must have anticipated just what I wanted. Many thanks for your remembrance. There are times when I try to make a speech, to help humanity, but today the subjec is one that touches me too close to allow me to say mu.h. My heart is too full for utterance.

"Hon. Mr. Reed, when he was recently elected as speaker of the House of Congress, said: 'Gentlemen, there is no one who would not bow their heads before such honors as you have placed upon me, but I think more of the responsibility and the work than the honor.' Seven years you have honored me as an officer, four as your president. I sometimes think that is one of my faults, that I have thought more of the responsibility and of forwarding the work, than of the honor you have placed upon me.

"At this time of the year, when we remember our friends by gifts, let us remember the gift to us of the Son of Righteousness from God. I desire to let my life reflect the light received from His rays as they shine into my heart. Again I thank you for this kind remembrance."

MRS. J. B. SWITS, Rec. Sec.

MAINE.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY.

The Maine W. C. T. U. held a very interesting Crusade anniversary meeting, Sunday evening, December 22, at Plymouth Church, Portland. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens presided, weaving in, as she introduced the speakers, important facts and fitting incidents relating to the Crusade. Mr. and Mrs. Bent led the singing of the old hymns with the cornets, Mrs. Stevens, alluding to the touching fact (especially touching to those who know so well of the relentless disease fastened upon Mrs. Bent) that when she ceases to play for the W. C. T. U. upon her golden cornet, it is to be hung up in the Temperance Temple.

Gen. Neal Dow took a prominent part in the meeting, as did also the pastor of the church where the service was held, the Rev. Mr. Lowden, Miss Cornelia Dow, president of Cumberland county W. C. T. U., Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, Mrs. G. F. French, Mrs. Helen Humphrey, Miss Abbie Leavitt and Mrs. Trumbull, of Evanston, Ill., all took part in the exercises. It was pronounced by all (including the newspapers of the city) to be an occasion of great interest, and in every way a success.

This day, the one previous, and the one following were very generally observed by the local unions throughout Maine. Mrs. Stevens managed to be present and help at five of these meetings, thus carrying out the plan for her to "hold the fort at home" instead of reporting at Hillsboro.

WHITE RIBBONER.

IOWA.

THE CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY IN OSAGE.

The W. C. T. U. of Osage met for a "Crusade Campfire" on the afternoon of December 23. A large number of earnest workers were present, and the meeting was both interesting and profitable to all. A fine program on the "Work of the Crusade" was given, and I believe that every one who heard again the story felt her heart thrill with greater zeal for temperance work, and renewed her covenant with the W. C. T. U. Many silent prayers went up to the Master that He would give wisdom and discretion to every woman of the land who labors for this great cause.

As we look backward to the winter of 1873, when the Woman's Crusade first startled the country, we are amazed to know that woman hath done this, and that the W. C. T. U., a child of the Crusade, with all its departments of work, is felt all over the world.

LOUISE E. ABERNETHY, Sec.

MICHIGAN.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY AT ALBION.

The sixteenth anniversary of the Woman's Crusade was appropriately observed on Sunday and Monday, December 22 and 23. It commenced with exercises from the Loyal Temperance Legion, one of the "children of the Crusade," on Sabbath afternoon. There were stirring recitations, readings about the Crusade, music, reception of new members, and last, but not least, a collection for the Temperance Temple in Chicago. Following this was a gospel meeting presided over by Mrs. Thomas. The Rev. Mr. Knappen led the devotional exercises with appropriate remarks. A selection was read by Miss Carrie Bruce, followed by a prayer service, and many said "It is good to be here."

Monday evening, a mass-meeting was held in the Baptist church. The members of the W. C. T. U. took their seats in a body. After some explanatory remarks as to the origin of the Crusade by the president, Mrs. Dickie, Mrs. Sutton read the Crusade Psalm, and prayer was offered by Miss Benge. Mrs. C. Reynolds Smith read a selection from Miss Willard; Mrs. Knappen read a poem on the Crusade; Mrs. Thomas told some of its results; Mrs. Avann, the prospects of the future; and Mrs. Floyd the keystone of the arch prayer.

The original poem and all the speeches Monday evening seemed like an inspiration. It was the most profitable meeting we have had for a long time. Several new subscribers were gained for THE UNION SIGNAL.

After this program, a consecration service was held, in which all resolved on more earnest endeavors in the future. M. D.

NOTICE—MICHIGAN W. C. T. U.

Marian Lanney, state superintendent of gospel work for lumbermen and miners, has been obliged to resign the work on account of illness. All communications and money should now be sent to Mary E. Sutton, Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Mich., who will act as state superintendent the remainder of the year. MARIAN LANNEY.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

A CORRESPONDENT in Las Vegas, New Mexico, writes as follows: "Please grant us the privilege of correcting the statement made in THE UNION SIGNAL of November 28, that the Y's of Las Vegas realized $6,000 from a dining-hall at the last Territorial fair. We would be delighted if it were true, but the Las Vegas Y's took no active part in the last fair, and we are sorry to add, the united temperance workers of New Mexico have not realized so much money as this. We do not despise the day of small things, however, but rejoice that we enlisted in the cause."

ALL organizations working along the line of domestic service reform are requested to send names and addresses to Mrs. Laura M. Lippincott Pancoast, chairman of correspondence committee of the Sunshine Mission, Woodstown, Salem county, N. J.

ALL the unions in Trumbull county, Ohio, save one, observed Crusade Day, most of them by special services by members, in addition to sermons by pastors. The interest is growing.

MRS. C. H. THOMPSON, president of the Colorado W. C. T. U., writes as follows: "Colorado is moving on along the lines of the National W. C. T. U., though it may seem slowly. We have declared again in our state convention for woman suffrage, and in favor of the party whose dominant principle is the destruction of the liquor traffic, and thus the protection of the home. We are making efforts to purchase the building we now occupy in Denver, as a home for our prodigal daughters, and women of prayer and of large faith are behind the effort. Count on the Colorado W. C. T. U. to stand firm in the battle we now see before us this coming year, and may God bless and strengthen us all!"

UNDER the auspices of Prof. J. J. Rucker, a stanch Prohibitionist, a rousing temperance entertainment was given at the Court House Friday evening, December 13, at Georgetown, Ky. Pointed recitations, declamations and orations were well rendered by young men and young women from the different schools and colleges—including an appeal to all classes of people to sign the pledge—from twenty-two boys and girls from the Loyal Temperance Legion. These exercises were interspersed with stirring temperance songs, making altogether an entertainment of a high character.

THE W. C. T. U. of Bath, Ohio, recently celebrated its second anniversary, when an address was given by one of the pastors, and recitations by the children. The union is now arranging for a Demorest medal contest. Though often discouraged, yet these dear workers go on working and making sacrifices, believing that God will bring the day dawn, when all these dark "shadows" of sin will "flee away."

THE Detroit, Mich., Central W. C. T. U. sent their compliments to the ministers, daily and religious press, in the form of a copy of the Convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL.

MRS. M. KENNEDY EAST, president of the twentieth district, Illinois, sends through the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL, earnest thanks to her unions for their gift to her of the lovely presentation copy of Miss Willard's "Glimpses of Fifty Years."

ARRANGEMENTS have been made to secure special bargains in United States flags (forty-two stars), for any desiring them at ten per cent below list prices, express prepaid, if orders are addressed, and post-office order enclosed, to Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Port Huron, Mich. By writing Mrs. Moffat, all information will be given regarding prices, and the program for an entertainment to secure "The School-house Flag" will be sent free on receipt of a one-cent stamp.

MRS. C. H. ST. JOHN should be addressed as Rev. Eugenia F. St. John, Beloit, Kan. The mistake has frequently been made in addressing her at Beloit, Mich., instead of Kansas. Please note.

THE Fountain City, Indiana, W. C. T. U. passed appropriate resolutions concerning the death of Mrs. Emily J. Huff, a beloved and earnest member of the union.

A MASS meeting was held on the Crusade anniversary in Big Rapids, Mich., with a crowded house and interesting exercises. Mrs. Lucy A. Morehouse gave a delightful sketch of the founding of the W. C. T. U., its growth and prosperity. Mrs. Maria Bennett followed with a brief account of the Woman's Crusade in Big Rapids, when every saloon was closed for a greater or less length of time. Mrs. D. W. Parsons read a psalm, Miss Spencer recited a poem, and Mrs. Stella B. Roben gave a most interesting address on the work of the W. C. T. U. A number of ministers took part. The singing by the choir was excellent.

MRS. C. WATSON, of Reed City, Mich., has a silk crazy quilt which she desires to sell for the benefit of temperance work in her state. The quilt is lined with cashmere, fastened with silk knots. It is valued at $50. Address her at Reed City, Michigan, post-office box 128.

THE warmest words of appreciation are received regarding the work and influence of Mrs. Caroline Talbert, of Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, a minister of the Society of Friends, who visited Williamston early in December by invitation of the W. C. T. U. and was "abundant in labors."

THE Bement, Illinois, union, celebrated its tenth anniversary December 18, with a crowded house. This union was organized by Miss Willard, December, 1879. Has held public meetings monthly; has now more paying members than ever before—thirty ladies and five honorary. Eighteen copies of THE UNION SIGNAL are taken.

THE following new W. C. T. Unions are reported from Missouri: Jefferson City, Mrs. J. W. Edwards, president; Mrs. Dora Short, corresponding secretary. West Plains, Mrs. N. P. Shotwell, president; Mrs. M. E. Benson, corresponding secretary. Cabool, Mrs. Madenna E. Keithly, corresponding secretary Pacific, Mrs. A. C. Brown, president; Miss Lulu Patterson, corresponding secretary. Wheeling, Mrs. Ella R. McCollum, corresponding secretary.

REV. C. H. AND REV. EUGENIA F. ST. JOHN have just closed four weeks' successful evangelistic services at Gloversville, N. Y. About a hundred and seventy conversions and additions to the various churches is one of the results of their work. One noted saloon-keeper took down his sign, emptied the contents of his bar, and with his wife sought Christ.

NOTICES.

By mistake, in the list of "new superintendents" in THE UNION SIGNAL of November 28, the name of Mrs. R. A Armstrong was given as superintendent of the health and heredity department, instead of Dr. Orpha Baldwin, of Cleveland. Address all communications relating to this department to the latter.

Mrs. Ira. Lewis, of Kansas City, 917 Forest avenue, has been appointed state superintendent of evangelistic and jail and prison work for Missouri, in place of Mrs. M. L. Williams, resigned.

CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Pres.
ELLEN D. MORRIS, Cor. Sec.

Official Communications.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION.

"Please tell us through the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL what should be said this year to school boards and teachers, at institutes and elsewhere, for scientific temperance."

To this frequent request from our workers in the field, I reply:

The time has come for insisting that the study of scientific temperance be pursued with the same thoroughness that other studies are, and by every pupil in every public school under temperance education laws. Experience shows that this cannot be done unless it is made a text-book study, with regular lessons well learned from text books as well adapted to grade as modern school readers are, and that contain the full truth against alcohol and other narcotics in connection with relative laws of health.

On account of lack of previous education in this branch on the part of otherwise good teachers, much of the so-called moral scientific temperance instruction that is now being given in the public schools is incomplete, inaccurate and inadequate. The remedy is at once to put the good text books, of which we now have an ample variety, into the hands of the pupils. Three lessons per week for at least one half of the school year, learned by the pupils from any one of the indorsed text-books, adapted to the grade using it and recited as other lessons are, will answer as nothing else will the teachers' questions concerning the new study, viz.: 'What is it?" and, "How shall we teach it?" Such a text-book tells what the topic is that should be studied, just like any other branch with a text-book in the hands of pupils who can read, and orally by those who cannot read. These conclusions have been formulated into a brief circular entitled, "Essentials to a Thorough Enforcement of a Temperance Education Law."

Boards of education and school superintendents have hardly known just how to put this study into the schools. For the aid of such we have made out a schedule, or course of study, for scientific temperance in graded and ungraded schools, containing a list of the indorsed text-books attached to each grade for which they are designed. These schedules show just what we want for scientific temperance in the schools, how much time to give it, and what books to do it with.

These schedules, with an accompanying circular, "Reasons for the Adoption of Schedules," etc., should be put into the hands of all teachers, school superintendents, and all members of every school board in the land, with the request to the board that they adopt it, the schedule, as the method for the pursuit of this study in the schools under their jurisdiction.

We send with these a printed circular letter to local co-workers or local superintendents, with further suggestions as to methods in the use of the schedule or course of study, and for securing the adoption and use of the right books in the schools. For the local superintendent of scientific temperance instruction who has had the plan of work of this department, these circulars are a complete outfit of suggestions as to the duty now next to hand.

It costs us about eight cents to send a package of one each of these five circulars to a local superintendent of scientific temperance instruction. There are now, we are glad to say, thousands of superintendents of scientific temperance instruction, and in every instance where one pays for the package we are helped by so much to meet the expense of the many packages for which no payment is ever received.

As we pray that God will save our youth and children from the horrors of intemperance, and that He will shut the open saloon that leads down to death, let us remember that God has made us the instruments for answering our own prayers. It is not enough to give a few circulars to a school board and teachers and leave it there.

It is our duty to take the schedule to the school board, and to persistently ask for its adoption as a course of study. If we persist, never letting up in the effort or harboring a discouraged thought, we shall win, and that will make this branch a text-book study with sufficient time assigned for its faithful pursuit, and it is our duty to persist and to win.

IT IS OUR DUTY to urge the adoption of the right books, or for the exchange of the imperfect for the revised books.

IT IS OUR DUTY to first so study the schedules and other literature of this department, that we shall know what is a faithful pursuit of this branch of study by "all pupils in all schools."

IT IS OUR DUTY not to take the word of some school official, who may not look at it at all from our standpoint, but to visit the schools and carefully and wisely ascertain for ourselves if the study is faithfully pursued by all pupils.

These and more are our duties, and God will not send angels down to do them for us, and the answers to our prayers will wait until we are ready to thus become His instruments for saving our children and youth who will soon be the citizens whose ballots will decide the fate of the saloon. MARY H. HUNT.

Hyde Park, Boston, Mass.

WORK AMONG COLORED PEOPLE OF THE NORTH.

SISTER CO-WORKERS:—At present I am spending some time in the South, where I have been speaking almost constantly for more than two weeks, sometimes two and three times a day, in churches, institutions of learning, and holding private meetings among women and young girls. I find abundant encouragement in the readily opened doors and receptive hearts with which it has been my privilege to come in contact, and shall probably remain South all winter. In the meantime if any of the helpers in my department wish any work done among them, will they please try to engage the services of my daughter, either as a speaker or elocutionist, especially among young ladies. Address Mary E. Harper, 1006 Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa. In Miss Willard's annual address, she made some suggestions in reference to aid being given to Southern work among the colored people. Permit me to say, here is a field replete with interest and encouragement, and to bespeak for Mrs. Early liberal aid, that she may have opportunity to labor among the colored Southern mothers and children, and strive to teach them to make their homes provinces of God's kingdom, "where they may plant their strongest batteries against the rum traffic, in the name of Him who honored our common humanity by taking its form upon Himself, and glorified it by dying for it." FRANCES E. W. HARPER,

Supt. Northern Work.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. A. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.	Miss Henrietta G. Moore.
Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward.
Mrs. Marian B. Baxter.	Rev. C. H. St. John.
Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.	Rev. W. H. Boole, D.D.
Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.	Hon. John P. St. John.
Mr. A. G. Wolfenbarger.	Prof. A. B. Huckins.
Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.	Mrs. R. J. Trego.
Miss I. C. DeVelling.	Col. John Sobieski.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP

speaks at Toronto, Can., January 12; Montreal, 14; Middleburgh, N. Y., 16.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE

spends February in Illinois.

MRS. MARIAN B. BAXTER

will give February to New York, and March to Pennsylvania.

REV. C. H. AND REV. EUGENIA F. ST. JOHN

begin a series of meetings at Concordia, Kan., January 5.

MISS HENRIETTA G. MOORE

speaks at Rock Springs, Wyoming, January 9 and 10; Green River, 10 and 12. Evanston, 13, 14, and 15

For dates and terms of all the above, address the

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Publisher's Dep't.

Our Leaflets

And small books, do you know their value? Take the Mothers' Meeting Leaflets, for instance, or the Home Leaflets. Have you read them? Very often a small, short tract will arouse thought, where one would not look at a large book. The Loyal Leaflets are uncommonly good stories at a small cost. The Gospel Lights are one-page tracts suitable for distribution at gospel temperance meetings. Timely Talks and Signal Lights are well-known, but new numbers are constantly brought out. For all these and many more keep posted by having the latest Bulletin of Publications, and by watching the publisher's columns.

Girls of To-day.

A new book by Mrs. Lucy A. Scott; a companion to "Boys and Other Boys," by the same author. Price, cloth 50 cents; paper, 25 cents. If you think this is a goody-goody, namby-pamby book of dusty advice, you are utterly mistaken! It starts out with admiration for the character of a woman who took ten Indian scalps! There now, all the boys will be for reading the book before the girls can get a chance! And this, "In Illinois—in 1869, Mrs. Livermore was not allowed to speak till she had paid a license of five dollars. 'But now,' said Mrs. L., recently, 'instead of paying a license to speak, we make everybody pay a dollar to come and hear!'" Oh, yes; this is a good strong book, not at all to be looked down on because its small. Truly, mothers who care to have their girls grow up to be women, and not fashion plates or butterflies, will be joyful over the advent of this little book. It is strong, but not rough in its teaching; tender but not mawkish; delicate, but full of clear-cut truth.

The Bible Reading Calendar.

Don't forget it—the topics are printed—they will be followed up by notes weekly in THE UNION SIGNAL, written by Rev. C. C. Harrah, the author of the Calendar. His idea is a new one and most valuable, that the Old and New Testaments should be studied side by side, and their correlations be understood. The Calendar was largely used in 1889, and we know it will be this year if it is understood. By all means send for free sample copy; show it to your pastor and get the topics adopted for church use if this is possible. It will be a sort of W. C. T. U. wedge where no other could by any means have a chance. Don't put it off a moment. The work is truly a most important one. Price, 50 cents 100 copies.

Methods.

As the work of the W. C. T. U. goes on branching out in every way where the trail of the serpent can be found, so have there always been those strong in mind and action, ready to seize on all vantage points and to bring forth methods adaptable to Christian women's ways of working. Our editor, Miss Mary Allen West, has been using a part of her year's vacation to give her ripe experience in a book that shall help the conductors of county state and assembly Schools of Methods to teach the most excellent ways of doing department work—first telling how to organize the Schools of Methods—what to teach in them—how to do it—what helps to use in department work and where to obtain them. Many of our juvenile workers know what admirable hints and methods are contained in Miss Gordon's "Questions Answered." Miss West's book will be for the other departments what "Questions Answered" is for the juvenile. The "Schools of Methods" will be sold at the low price of 25 cts., postpaid, and will be ready in ten days or two weeks. Any county president can, with its help, hold a School of Methods that would be double the efficiency of the local unions. Strong words, but who that knows Miss West's power of teaching will doubt the truth of the statement?

"In His Name."

A beautiful purple Maltese cross, 3½ inches square, which has eight white pages between the two purple covers, all tied by purple ribbon, the eight pages printed each with two mottoes; here is a sample:

"In His Name," if two or three
Touching one thing shalt agree,
Then may they His promise claim,
When they ask it "In His Name."

Other quotations are from the Bible, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Margaret E. Sangster, etc. Hard to describe the little booklet; costs but ten cents; best way is to send for one and see its beauty, is it not?

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The new W. C. T. U. pin just received, gives me an opportunity to say, what is to me an increasing conviction, how much as field and local workers we owe to the W. T. P. A. Who can overlook the wonderful diversity of effort in our ranks, the blessed helpfulness of organization, for while many of us go out to the people, others, a "great host," faithful in service or sacrifice, build over against their own homes, you at W. T. P. A. Headquarters are anticipating our wants and filling our needy hands with all precious and helpful things. The new white-ribbon pin is very pretty, serving its purpose well as a badge, and yet modest; it will be a general favorite, and with its inseparable companion, the white rose, is well suited to the deepening conflict into which we now go.

CAROLINE M. WOODWARD.

Stories of the March.—Compiled by Mary Allen West. Choice temperance stories and poems. - - $1.00

The McClellan homestead, consisting of eleven acres of beautiful grounds, and a great old-fashioned house built by General McClellan before the war, has recently been sold for $55,000.

Catarrhal Deafness—Hay Fever.
A new home treatment which permanently cures the worst case in from one to three applications. Send for particulars to A. H. Dixon & Son, Toronto, Canada.

TAKE MONON ROUTE
for all points South.

Hull's Ladies' Hair Store; 20 years established. Best goods, lowest prices. Illustrated Catalogue free. 113 State St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR A DISORDERED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.
A Marvelous Triumph Over Disease Without Medicine.

It takes dircctly hold of the worst cases of constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaints, headaches, heart disease, incipient consumption, diabetes and Bright's disease of the kidneys, rheumatism, fevers, and inflammation of the lungs and of other internal organs, not by attacking these so-called diseases directly, but by radically neutralizing and removing their causes, thus allowing Nature herself to do her work unimpeded.

Dr. Wilford Hall's Hygienic Treatment is being used and indorsed by the leading physicians, lawyers, clergymen, and thinking people throughout the country. For further information regarding this treatment call upon or send a two-cent stamp to

A. T. BATES,
Room 46, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

BONDS
BOUGHT AND SOLD.

We offer the following from our JANUARY LIST:
$133,000 City of Omaha, Neb., improvement 6s.
85,000 City of Sioux City, Ia., School 4 1-2s.
15,000 City of Topeka, Kas., improvement 6s.
18,000 City of Columbus, O., 4s.
12,000 City of Colton, Cal., 7s.
25,000 City of Anaconda, Mont., 6s.
50,000 Watertown, S.D. Water Works Co., 6s.
50,000 North Chicago Street Ry. 20 yr. 5s.
Call, Write or Wire for Price List.

We Transact a GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS. Also deal in U. S. Land Warrants and Scrip.

S. A. KEAN & CO., Bankers,
115 Broadway, NEW YORK 100 Washington St, CHICAGO, ILL.

MONEY in Building Lots in the new towns of the West, so as to yield 100 to 1000 per ct.

Loss Impossible. Send 10c. for 100-page book. Prudential Trust Co., 1305 Arch St., Phila. INVESTED

ALL ABOUT NEW STATE OF WASHINGTON. Send stamp for Catechism. ESHELMAN, LLEWELLYN & CO., Seattle.

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus. East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A.A.Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N.Y.City.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.
Beecham's Pills
For Bilious and Nervous Disorders.
"Worth a Guinea a Box"—but sold for 25 cents,
BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

What a Difference between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

LADIES YOUR CHOICE. 100,000 DEMOREST CORSETS 100,000 SHOULDER BRACES 100,000 STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE

A MARVELOUS OFFER
By A Reliable House!

Every lady has heard of MME. DEMOREST. Her name is a by-word in every house in the land. Her celebrated Patterns have been in use over 40 years. We are the publishers of the well-known publication,

Mme. Demorest's Illustrated Monthly Fashion Journal

and we wish to increase its circulation 200,000 copies during the next 90 days, and to that end we will give away to new subscribers

100,000 Demorest Celeb'd Corsets / " Shoulder Braces / " Stocking Supporters FREE

The MME. DEMOREST ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY FASHION JOURNAL is a 36 page paper, beautifully illustrated, covering every possible field of Fashions Fancy Work, Home Decorations, Cooking, etc., each department being under the special supervision of the best known contributors. It is besides replete with matters of interest to mothers, and is furthermore filled with illustrations, stories, sketches, humor and matters of general interest.

FREE!

FINE AMERICAN JEAN! Beautiful Ornamental Stitching. Perfect Fit. Usual Price, $1.25.

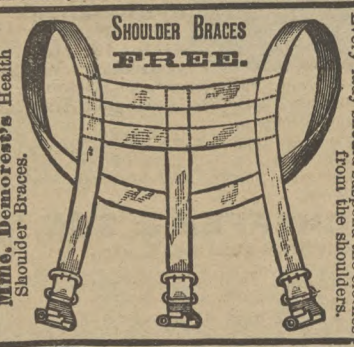
Sizes 18 to 30. Give your Corset Measure.



Every line of reading is carefully guarded by an editor, who receives $5,000 per annum, and nothing is published in its columns but the best and purest reading matter. It may be admitted to any household and your children may read it as well as you. It numbers among its subscribers the wives of thousands of clergymen throughout the country. It is the best Fashion paper published in the world. It tells you "What to Wear" "When and How to Wear It." It gives you all the latest styles in Ladies' Hats, Bonnets, etc. It is always abreast of the times, and everything within its pages is new and original. It also contains the latest Fashion news from abroad by our Special London and Paris correspondents

HOW TO OBTAIN The Mme. Demorest Corset FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL and 25 cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 CENTS in all, and we will mail you one of these handsome CORSETS FREE.

How To Obtain Two Articles: A PAIR OF SHOULDER BRACES AND Stocking Supporters FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL, and 25 Cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 Cents in all, and we will mail you these two articles, One Pair of SHOULDER BRACES and One Pair of STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE!

REMEMBER THERE IS NO HUMBUG ABOUT THESE OFFERS.

We do exactly as we guarantee. Our house has been established for over 40 years, and we can refer you to any Commercial Agency, Bank, Express Office or Business Firm in the land. Make all remittances either by Draft, Postal Note, Money Order, or Registered Letter. When postal note is not procurable, send stamps. Address all communications to

THE DEMOREST FASHION & SEWING MACHINE CO., 17 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK.

This offer should be taken advantage of at once as we will give away no more than 100,000 of each article. SHOW THIS TO YOUR FRIENDS. IT WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN.

We know the Demorest Fashion and Sewing Machine Co. to be a thoroughly reliable firm and advise our readers to accept their offer.—EDITOR.

ECONOMIC TEMPERANCE PACKAGE.

Words for Wage Workers (Signal Lights 8 and 13.)
Facts for Organized Labor.
Labor, Capital, and Temperance.
Political Economy vs. Commercial Economy.
Liquor's War on Labor.
The Coming Brotherhood.
The Relation of Temperance Reform to the Labor Movement.
Price of package..... $ .05

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE PACKAGE.

The Teacher Taught.
Is Alcohol a Stimulant?
Tobacco and the Drink Habit.
What Shall be Taught the Children?
The Tobacco Habit and Its Effects upon School Work.
Smoking.
Price of package..... $ .05

NARCOTICS.

Monthly Readings, Oct., 1886.
" " July, 1887.
" " March, 1888.
Timely Talks, 21, 26.
Signal Lights, 7, 17, 24.
National Leaflets, 12, 13, 23, 32.
Leaflet for Mothers' Meetings. 7.
L. T. L. Manual, Vol. II. No. 4.
Crusader Series, No. 3.
The Alcohol Question.
Price of Package..... $ .25
The Tobacco Problem..... 1.25

Platform Voices.—By Julia Ames. A book of popular temperance recitations. - - - - - $ .25

Publisher's Notes.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Der Deutsch Amerikaner (semi-monthly) German temperance; single copy 50 cents, in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

SONGS FOR Y. W. C. T. U

by ANNA A. GORDON.

Sample pages mailed at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies. A new and delightful song book, just what is needed for King's Daughters' meetings, Y. P. S. C. E., Young Ladies' Missionary Societies, etc. Will undoubtedly be a success like Marching Songs, of which 130,000 copies have been sold. Lined Covers. Price $.25.

THE YEAR'S BRIGHT CHAIN.

Compiled by ALICE M. GUERNSEY

A beautiful gift book; has twelve large pictures—one for each month—and opposite each a page of wise and telling quotations from Miss Willard's writings. Compiled especially for the fiftieth year of Miss Willard's life. A very appropriate birthday gift.

Price, $.50.

THE WHITE ROSE PIN.

More than 30,000 sold. Modest but effective. It means you believe in pointing "right straight" at the saloon and don't believe in any side-tracking toward high license.

PRICE, EACH,	$0.10.
PRICE, PER DOZ.	2.00.

AGITATION LEAFLETS.

A series of seven leaflets with blank spaces for the name of the town in which you live. We will print in the number of saloons and the town's name, so that a local agitation can be aroused. Send three cents for a sample package. They have been tested and found good.

Price per 1,000, specially printed, $2.00.

Nineteen Beautiful Years By Miss Willard. A new edition from new plates; gilt-edged top.... .75

How To Win. By Miss Frances E. Willard. The book you want for young girls..... 1.00

WHITE CROSS SERIES.

This design (in red) is also used on the White Cross Pledge.

1.	My Little Sister. Touching Pitch.	Ellice Hopkins.
2.	Is It Natural? Who Holds the Rope?	J. E. H.
3.	The Apocalypse of Evil.	Ellice Hopkins.
4.	Bloodguiltiness.	Rev. J. M. Horsley.
5.	Buried Seed.	Ellice Hopkins.
6.	An Evil Tradition.	Rev. A. G. Butler.
7.	What Can We Do?	Ellice Hopkins.
8.	Black Anchor.	" "
9.	Little Kindnesses. The Temple of the Eternal.	" " J. E. H.
10.	The Man with the Drawn Sword.	Ellice Hopkins.

Reprints from the latest and best English Leaflets, on handsome paper and with beautiful cover in two colors.

Price, single numbers	$ 03
Per 100	2.00

GOSPEL PURITY SERIES.

1.	The White Cross.	Ellice Hopkins.
2.	Social Purity: The Latest and Greatest Crusade.	Frances E. Willard.
3.	The Woman Condemned.	Kate C. Bushnell, M. D.

Price, each	$ .05
Per 100	3.00

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of Imitations. NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

A Prominent, Regular Physician

of New York City gives the following directions

For Preventing and Curing

INFLUENZA or "LA GRIPPE"

Evaporate morning and evening a few tablespoonfuls of POND'S EXTRACT and inhale the vapor. Pour the POND'S EXTRACT into a tin cup, which hold over the flame of a lamp; hold the nose over the cup that the vapor may be inhaled. By this treatment the membrane of the nose and throat will be in such condition that it will resist the poisonous action of the germs, which are the cause of this disease; and if the germs have already been inhaled they will be destroyed. The symptoms of "La Grippe" are, inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which may extend to the lungs, with cough, sneezing, running at the nose and perhaps severe aching pains and high fever. These directions are for POND'S EXTRACT only. It may be unsafe to use any other article in this way.

Have Pond's Extract in Readiness.

Made only by

POND'S EXTRACT CO.,

New York and London.

EVERY LADY WANTS A SILK DRESS

This is your opportunity. A new departure. SILKS direct from the manufacturers to you. Our reduced prices bring the best goods within reach of all. We are the only manufacturers in the U. S. selling direct to consumers. You take no risk. We warrant every piece of goods as represented, or money refunded. See our references. We are the oldest Silk Manufacturers in the U.S. Established in 1838, with over 50 years' experience. We guarantee the

CHAFFEE DRESS SILKS,

for richness of color, superior finish and wearing qualities, to be unexcelled by any make of Black Silks in the world. We offer these Dress Silks in Gros Grains, Satins, Surahs, Faille Francaise and Aida Cloths, in Blacks only.

Send us a 2c.-stamp (to pay postage) and we will forward you samples of all our styles free with prices, and you can see for yourselves.

O. S. CHAFFEE & SON,

Mansfield Centre, Conn.

Refer, by permission, to First National Bank, Windham National Bank, Dime Savings Bank, Willimantic Savings Institute, of Willimantic, Conn.

RECOLLECT we send to all parts of the U.S. With each Dress Pattern we present the buyer with 1000 Yards Sewing Silk, and enough Silk Braid to bind bottom of dress.

THE GOODS are delivered to you all carrying charges PREPAID

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED, for "THE CRIME OF THE CENTURY; or the Assassination of Dr. Patrick Henry Cronin.

BIG WAGES $60 to $75 per week being made. Bound in cloth. Retails $1.50. Send 30 cts. for outfit. Elliott & Beezley.

Philadelphia, Pa. Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

DR SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER CURES COUGHS AND COLDS PREVENTS CONSUMPTION

—HAVE FOUND— DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER the Best Medicine for a cough I ever tried, and have also recommended it to others who were much pleased with the effect. Indeed, it cured my little boy's cough when the prescription of an excellent physician had no effect.—MRS. S. B. HOLMES, Moorehead, Minn., Jan. 14, 1886. Price 25c, 50c and $1.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.

Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2. 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. SEWING MACHINE OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE AND GET FREE DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Best terms. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500. Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.

We do not sell liquors in any shape.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS LOOK HERE and Farmers with no experience make $2.50 an hour during spare time. A. D. BATES, 164 W. Robbins Ave., Covington, Ky., made $21 one day, $81 one week. So can you. Proofs and catalogue free. J. E. SHEPARD & Co., Cincinnati, O.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.

E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR

MY STORY OF THE WAR

By Mary A. Livermore

Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. It sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

Come, come, now! let us be sensible for once in our lives, and have warm feet this winter, and a cool, level head. If our feet are warm our blood will circulate freely, and all the processes of Nature will go on while we are at work.

Don't you know your feet are the two extreme poles of a great Magnetic Battery? Your body is held together and kept in motion, that is life by MAGNETIC POLARITY. You change the Magnetic Polarities of your being by your thoughts. You intensify the power of your blood by applying MAGNETIC BATTERIES to your feet. This vitalizing Substance called magnetism is Life manifest. Without Magnetism we could not have Life. Can't you see at once that if you redouble the Life Potency at the extreme poles of your body, that is your feet, you intensify the Life principle just where it is necessary to have it? Why put on an overcoat to hold warmth where it is not needed, when you can get what you desire at once, by applying the life energy to the very point you need to intensify the living, vivifying essence of power. Come, be sensible once, and let us speak to you through your feet! "With all thy getting get understanding." To begin this work place our genuine Magnetic Foot Batteries under your feet; one pair will convince you, $1.00 a pair or three pairs for $2.00, any size, by mail, postpaid. Order to-day, and be happy all winter. Catalogue free.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago.

WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY

Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

TAR-OID

A new method of compounding Tar.

SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

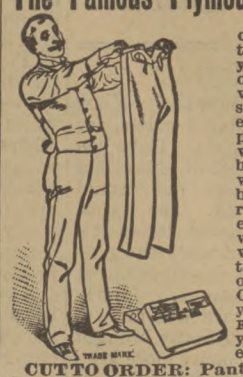
100 page book, with colored illustrations and many prominent testimonials, among others, Mrs. T. B. Carse, regarding Dr. Peiro's Oxygen treatment, free. Dr. Peiro, 78 State St., Chicago.

The Famous Plymouth Rock Pants.



If you cannot reach one of our branch stores, or there is no local agent in your town, write us at once (at Boston), and we will forward you, free, 30 samples of our latest novelties as well as quiet patterns in men's cloth, with self-measurement blanks, the results of which we guarantee to be satisfactory or money refunded. Agents wanted in every town and village in U. S., where we have none now to take orders for our famous goods cut to order. Our reputation secures your first order and that FIRST ORDER secures you a steady customer every time.

CUT TO ORDER: Pants, $3 to $5.25; Suits, $13.25 to $21; Overcoats, $10.25 to $20.

If you don't know who we are, look in any commercial agency, or write to any bank or business firm (except clothiers and tailors) in any of these cities.

DO YOU WEAR PANTS

PLYMOUTH ROCK PANTS CO.

ADDRESS ALL MAIL TO

Headquarters: 11 to 17 Eliot Street. Annex: 695 Washington Street, And 18 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

BRANCHES: 285 Broadway, New York; 943 Penn. Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 72 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.; 914 Main St., Richmond, Va.; 225 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md.; 110 Canal St., New Orleans; 104 Montgomery St., Montgomery, Ala.; 39 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.; Burnside Building, Worcester, Mass.; Hotel Gilmore, Springfield, Mass.; 198 Westminster St., Providence, R. I.; Old Register Building, New Haven, Conn.

Be your own tailor.

Send for samples and rules for self-measuring.

Men's Suits, $12.00 to $30.00.
Men's Overcoats, $6.00 to $45.00.
Men's Pantaloons, $3.00 to $10.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Suits, $5.00 to $20.00.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Overcoats, $5.00 to $20.00.

Be sure and send for samples of our Combination Suits for boys, ages 4 to 14.

This means suit, extra pants and hat, all for the price of a suit alone, $5.00 & $6.00.

Goods sent C. O. D., with privilege of examining before paying.

PUTNAM CLOTHING HOUSE,

131 & 133 Clark St., 113 & 117 Madison St., N. E. Cor. Clark & Madison.

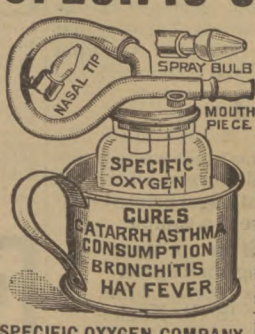
HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to ag'ts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.

An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18,000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it. When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free

W. G. Morris, Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.

References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

SPECIFIC OXYGEN.



It contains a Germacide and Disinfectant which kills the microbes or germs, and disinfects the membranes in the nose, throat and lungs. It QUIETS cough. It softens tubercles and heals the lungs. It purifies the blood. "IT IS THE BREATH OF LIFE." It is a Natural Narcotic, giving rest & sleep. It revitalizes the nerves. Send for 100 page manual, free.

SPECIFIC OXYGEN COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

MARION WALKER.

I wish to employ a few ladies on salary to take charge of my business at their homes. Light, very fascinating and healthful. Wages $10 per week. Good pay for part time. References given. Address with stamp, MRS. MARION WALKER, Louisville, Ky.

Publisher's Dep't.

Maybe It's Your Business?

For a number of weeks we have repeated the description below of our plans to further the sales of W. T. P. A. literature. And why so many times? To make an indelible impression by iteration and reiteration. The responses are good, we want them to be better. We have extra inducements for all who are willing to exert themselves thus for "God and Home and Native Land."

In 1886 we formulated a plan for having our literature brought before the members of the unions as fast as it should appear. Of course this could not be done without the co-operation of some one in each union. As fast as possible W. T. P. A. Representatives (as they were called) were appointed, whose work it was to show the samples to the members of the union, and, wherever possible, to effect sales. The plan worked well for awhile, and does yet in a great many places, but there must inevitably be changes and resignations, and we have not pushed the work as vigorously during the past year or two, because sending out so much literature free, and giving the privilege of returning any unsold at our expense, caused our ledgers to grow very large with accounts, so that we preferred giving the plan a good trial. We are more than satisfied that the idea is a good one, and we now again urge it upon the attention of the unions. We have not changed the offer, except that we require a deposit of twenty-five per cent of the list value of the packages as ordered. We now have eight packages from which to select, on all which a special profit is allowed the Representative.

Suppose we tell you exactly what we want done, and then you answer the question at the head of this column.

1st. Get up before your union, and say or read that the W. T. P. A. wants some one in your place to represent it, and that you move that Mrs. —(naming the brightest woman you can think of for the place) shall be elected to the office. Go on to say that the W. T. P. A. will send out carefully assorted packages of its literature, and that it will be the duty of its Representative to show the books and effect sales, etc., to the members of the union, and, as far as possible, to others in your place.

2nd. Say, in addition, that the W. T. P. A. will pay a percentage on all sales to the Representative, keep her posted as to new goods coming out, supply her with full instructions as to best goods to show, when and how to do it; and, in short, do all it can to help build up the feeling that should grow constantly—the personal relationship between the publishing house and those for whom it does the publishing. All we require is that the representative shall agree to faithfully endeavor to follow instructions, and that twenty-five per cent of all purchases shall be paid in advance. At the recent National Convention, Miss Willard (who heartily approves of the plan of having Representatives) recommended that each union should have a reader who should be in correspondence with the National, and whose duty it should be to regularly read extracts from our publications, which should be educational along the lines of W. C. T. U. work. This work, whenever possible, should be given to the W. T. P. A. Representative for obvious reasons. Now is the time to bring this whole matter before your union, and we trust you sufficiently see the great importance of it to take it out of the realm of everybody's business, to where it can be discussed and acted on in your own keenly intelligent way. You are our public, and in times like these, your need of intelligence as to what is being done at headquarters, is doubly great. There is no better plan than the above, and if it is not altogether clear to you in all its details, we hope you will write in to us at once, and ask all the questions you want to. It is not necessary to order a full line of all our publications; any selections best suited to your local needs can be made. Shall we hear from you, and soon?

Address, WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Fall of the Christians:

An Historical Romance of Japan in the 17th Century.

By Prof. W. C. Kitchin, Ph. D.

"The Fall of the Christians" is a history of the desperate struggle of Christianity against Paganism in Japan over two hundred and fifty years ago, as related in ancient manuscripts discovered by the author. There were then several thousands of Christians in Japan, and the attempt to exterminate them led to one of the most sanguinary struggles recorded in history. The heroism of the Christians, both men and women, and their fortitude under the most appalling dangers, as portrayed by Professor Kitchin, will enlist the sympathies of the civilized world.

GIVEN FREE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS
SOUVENIR POEMS
—BY—
JOHN G. WHITTIER,
—AND—
JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

THE LEADING WRITERS.

CELEBRATED ARTISTS.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

$2 A YEAR
SIXTEEN PAGES EVERY WEEK

Herbert Ward, Stanley's Companion.

Herbert Ward, the companion of Stanley in his explorations in Africa, is one of the few men connected with Stanley's African explorations who has ever returned alive from the "Dark Continent." Mr. Ward's articles running through eight numbers of the "Ledger" are of the most intensely interesting description, and cover five years of his adventures in Africa, and they will be illustrated by sketches made by Mr. Ward, and by the reproduction of photographs taken by him in Africa. These pictures will throw much light upon the manners and customs of the hitherto unknown cannibal tribes of Africa.

Life in British America, By Rev. E. R. Young.

Being the adventures and experiences of Rev. E. R. Young, the celebrated missionary, and his wife during their residence in the Polar region twelve hundred miles north of St. Paul, in which Dr Young narrates how he tamed and taught the native wild Indians of the Northwest; how he equipped himself for and how he made his perilous sledging and hazardous canoe trips when visiting all the Indian settlements within five hundred miles of his home.

Nihilism in Russia, By Leo Hartmann, Nihilist.

Leo Hartmann, a fugitive from Russian authorities, has been connected with the most daring feats of the Russian Nihilists. Mr. Hartmann shows how the intelligent people of Russia are becoming Nihilists in consequence of the despotism of the form of government. A participant in plots to kill the Czar, such as the blowing up of the Winter Palace, he is able to give true information as to how this and other great schemes were accomplished. The situation in Russia is sufficient to increase the love of every true American for our form of government.

Into Mischief and Out, By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

This is a story of college life. It describes, in a graphic manner, the troubles which overtake bright students who get into mischief, and their skillful manœuvres to evade the consequences of their conduct.

Other Contributors for 1890 are:

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.
Mrs. Margaret Deland.
Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.
Mrs. Madeleine Vinton Dahlgren.
Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford.
Mrs. Emma Alice Browne.
Mary Kyle Dallas.
Marion Harland.
Clara Whitridge.
Judge Albion W. Tourgee.
Marquise Lanza.
Robert Louis Stevenson.
Anna Sheilds.
Josephine Pollard.
Amy Randolph.
Frank H. Converse.
C. F. Holder.
Dr. Felix L. Oswald.
Rev. Emory J. Haynes.
Julian Hawthorne.
Prof. W. C. Kitchin.
Robert Grant.
Rev. Dr. H. M. Field.
M. W. Hazeltine.
Thomas Dunn English.
George F. Parsons.
Col. Thomas W. Knox.
Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton.
Rev. Dr. James McCosh.
Prof. S. M. Stevens.
Prof. J. H. Comstock.
James Parton.
Harold Frederic.

The Character of the New York Ledger.

The New York Ledger directs its efforts towards crowding out that trashy and injurious literature which is poisoning the minds of American youth. The Ledger appeals to the intelligence of the people, and depends for its support on that taste which prevails for innocent and amusing entertainment and healthful instruction. The Ledger will contain the best Serial and Short Stories, Historical and Biographical Sketches, Travels, Wit and Humor, and everything interesting to the Household.

Subscription money can be sent at our risk by Post Office Money Order, Bank Check or Draft, or an Express Money Order.

Send $2 for a Year's Subscription or 5 Cents for Sample Copy and Illustrated Calendar Announcement.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, 220 William St., New York.

FLAVOR YOUR
Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with
BELL'S SPICED SEASONING

THIS SEASONING is made of the granulated leaves of fragrant sweet herbs and choice selected spices, having all the flavors that can be desired, thereby saving the trouble of having to use a dozen different kinds of herbs and spices in order to give the proper flavor. On account of the purity, one tablespoonful is enough to season the dressing to an eight-pound turkey. Full directions with each can. Used by all leading Hotels.

WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs. Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE

can be CURED in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.

FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.
Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c

To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 60c., 6 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address
INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St. N. Y. City

"DOWN WITH HIGH PRICES."

A $65.00 Sewing Machine,	$18.00
A 500-lb. Platform Scale,	10.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy,	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale,	40.00
A $40.00 Road Cart,	15.00
A $15.00 Buggy Harness	7.50
A $15.00 Buggy Platform Scale,	3.00
A 240-lb. Scoop and Platform Scale,	1.00

Catalogue of 1000 useful articles sent FREE. Address
CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

Educational Dep't.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,
Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping. Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by MAIL. Circulars free. BRYANT & STRATTON'S, 433 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Portrait of the President of the ALABAMA W. C. T. U.,
Mrs. M. L. Stratford, appears in DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for January, now ready. Every member of W. C. T. U. should have it.

For Gas — BAILEY'S — For Oil

COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO. 118 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Signal Notes.

WHAT we need to do for this hard world every day is to put something of Christ into it.—Dr. Goodell.

PROHIBITIONISTS Turks are working to abolish saloons kept by "Christians"(?) in Constantinople.

THE keeper of the morgue in New York City states that four-fifths of the five thousand bodies that reach that place of the dead every year, are sent there by drunkenness.

ACCORDING to the Propaganda in Rome, there are 218,000,000 Catholics in the world.

THE practice of cremation is said to be notably on the increase in England and Italy.

THE Kentucky University this year opened its doors to women, and now the names of twenty young women are upon its rolls.

THE twenty-second annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association will be held in Washington, D. C., February 18-21, in the Church of Our Father, corner of 11 and L streets. All the state societies are urged to send representatives.

EIGHTY-TWO persons have been killed in the United States during the past six months by boiler explosions, and in no one case has any one been held legally responsible for the calamity.

THE discussion of the advisability of colonizing Vermont and New Hampshire with Scandinavian immigrants, has directed attention to the fact that Maine made a successful venture of this kind twenty years ago.

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania proposes to distribute 15,000 copies of the bill passed by the Legislature recently, prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors, after which all offenders will be rigidly prosecuted.

THE courts of Alsace have sentenced 246 young Alsatians to terms of imprisonment of six months each for seeking to emigrate secretly to America, their desire to leave the country being construed as an attempt to evade military duty.

A SABBATH reform convention will be held by the American Sabbath Union at Washington, D. C., January 30 and 31. The leading purpose of the convention is to urge upon Congress the request of the commissioners of the District of Columbia for a Sunday law. The Hon. Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky has consented to prepare and introduce the bill. Reduced railroad rates will be obtained. Address Col. Weston Flint, 1101 K Street, Washington, for particulars and programs.

THE sales of Bellamy's "Looking Backward" read like magic. One day's sale recently amounted to 4,300 copies, more than double the average daily sale, which is now about 2,000. There have been 215,000 copies sold, exclusive of the German edition.

MRS. ORMISTON CHANT preached the anniversary sermons at Oxford Congregational Church this year, and the building was "absolutely packed in the evening, even up to the pulpit steps," says a London exchange. "It was probably the first time in this country that a woman has officiated at the administration of the communion Mrs. Chant offered the Thanksgiving prayer, sitting with the minister and deacons, within the communion rail. The music and words of the hymns sung were written by her for the occasion."

LORD EGMONT has sold the whole of his property in the south of Ireland to his tenants for $1,250,000, and at fifteen years purchase. This has infuriated his neighbors, who now find it impossible to get a larger price for their land, and declare that they cannot afford to sell at that price. The government scheme of land purchase is finding much more favor in the eyes of Irish landlords since Lord Salisbury announced that it was not to be compulsory.

THE New York Medical Journal is authority for the following: "In an experimental observation of thirty-eight boys of all classes of society, and of average health, who had been using tobacco for periods ranging from two months to two years, twenty-seven showed severe injury to the constitution and insufficient growth; thirty-two showed the existence of irregularity of the heart's action, disordered stomachs, cough, and a craving for alcohol; thirteen had abandoned the use of tobacco; within six months one-half were free from all their former symptoms, and the remainder had recovered by the end of the year.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

MILLER'S HOTEL N. Y. Address,
New York City, 39 West 26th St
A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting Turkish Electric, Roman Baths.
DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

Family Shoes! FARGO'S $2.50 Calf Shoes for Gentlemen.
Fargo's $2.50 Ladies' Boot for Ladies, and "Box Tip" SCHOOL SHOES for Boys and Girls.
☞ Ask your dealer for them. If he does not keep them, send to us for the size and style you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Or send to us for a full description of the Fargo shoes. A Pocket-Mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.)
100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

RIDGE'S FOOD The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, and Scrofulous Humors.
TO CONSUMPTIVES.—Wilbor's Cod-liver Oil and Phosphates has now been before the public twenty years, and has steadily grown in favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphates with pure Cod-liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. It can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the nausea which is such an objection to the Cod-liver Oil when taken without Phosphates. It is prescribed by the regular faculty. Sold by the proprietor, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and by all Druggists.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE
1890 Catalogue with 10 cents worth of any kind of seeds desired, will be mailed on receipt of 10 cents in stamps. Customers need not write. P. O. Box 688.
CHICAGO.

ROSES AND HARDY PLANTS OUR SPECIALTIES.

PÆONIES, LILIES, PHLOXES, PINKS; VINES and SHRUBS, (5 sorts of Dbl. Lilacs;) the NEW RED CLEMATIS, KERMISINUS, BEGONIAS, finest collection in the country, BRUANT RACE of GERANIUMS, splendid new family of sun proof bedders. CHRYSANTHEMUMS, all prize taking varieties. FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS, very best quality. All the good New sorts, and best old varieties. PLANTS post-paid by Mail. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Send for our FREE Illustrated Catalogue, and mention this paper.
HILL & CO., RICHMOND, INDIANA.

JAPANESE WARE for Church Fairs. The Formosa Co., 86 State St., Chicago, Ill.

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., Box 747 Chicago.

DR. WARNER'S
"CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

$29 Saved. A $45.00 Sewing Machine for $16.00. Call on or write to M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., for particulars. Mentioning this paper and get full information.

DEAFNESS CURED And NOISES IN HEAD entirely overcome by Peck's Pat. Improv'd TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers, Conversation and Music heard. Comfortable; Self-Adjusting and Unseen. Successful when all other Remedies FAIL. SOLD ONLY by F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, Cor. 14th, New York. CALL or WRITE for ILLUST'D BOOK of PROOFS, FREE. NO AGENTS

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO. Sell Mantels & Tile Work. Call or send your address. Agents wanted. (Liberal commissions.) Room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

A $60.00 Sewing Machine For $14.90.
Sold low to advertise us and win new customers. Large stock; other goods very cheap. This is the Singer Model, (original Singer). None better. Warranted for 5 years. (Registered guaranty.) Walnut top; drop leaf; 3 drawers. Full set nickel plated attachments. A. T. EVANS & CO., 182 State st. Chicago.

THE GRIFFIN RUG MACHINE
Leads All its Competitors.
It works either rags or yarn, is Simple, Durable, and EASY TO OPERATE.
Price, by mail,
Plain, $1.00.
Nickel Plated, $1.50
Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Send for Circulars.
Agents Wanted.
G. W. GRIFFIN & CO., Franklin Falls, N.H.

EQUIPOISE WAIST.

A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS,
including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jennes-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue.
Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE" CORDED CORSET WAISTS
are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR! 0
NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$1
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$1
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$1
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$1
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$1
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$1
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$1
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$1
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$1
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$1
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$1
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$1
College Songs; 150,000 sold	50c
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$1
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music.	$1

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$1
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$1
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$1
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$1
Popular Dance Music Collection	$1
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$1

The above are all superior books.
Any book mailed for retail price.
Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.
C. H. DITSON & Co.,
867 Broadway, New York.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

BOOKS—96 Page Catalogue of popular and standard books sent free on request. Lowest prices ever known. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York; 242 Wabash Avenue, Chicago; 73 Whitehall Street, Atlanta. Agents wanted.

RICHES If you desire them, no use fooling away time on things that don't pay; but send $1, at once for magnificent outfit of our Great New Stanley Book. If book and terms not satisfactory we will refund your money. No risk. No capital needed. Both ladies and gentlemen employed. Don't lose time in writing. "Step in while the waters are troubled." Days are worth dollars. Address B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

GOSPEL LIGHTS.

(A new series, note-book size, printed on one side only, designed especially for distribution at Gospel temperance meetings).

1. What is a Temperance Pledge? Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
2. Why Should I Sign the Pledge? Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
3. A Message for You.

Per 100, ... $ .15
Per 1,000 ..... 1.30
By express, the same as Signal Lights.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 3.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 16, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: The Ladder of Stimulants—The School Ballot for Women—A Timely Recommendation 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Advance of Truth, by R. L. Crawford—The "Brig"—An Inebriate Asylum Incident, by Major E. T. Scott—An Unrestricted Ballot, by Helen M. Gougar—Rum and Crime, by A. B. Richmond—Methods of Temperance Reform, by Rev. B. W. Williams—Temperance Temple Items, by Matilda B. Carse 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Our Second Round-the-World Missionary A Word From our Crusade Mother—The Next Step 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The King and the Snake—A Scrubbing Song—Dora's Gift—Roll Call in Heaven 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning January 19, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, Transformed by Beholding—Tobacco Poison—Homes of the People—Suggestions for Jail Work—Poem, Success 7
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: China, Indiana, District of Columbia, Missouri, Florida, New Hampshire, South Dakota, New York, Nebraska, News in a Nut-shell, Announcement, Dr. Orpha D. Baldwin's Lecture Appointments in Eastern Washington 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Sabbath Observance—Woman's Lecture Bureau—Receipts for Temperance Temple. 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

At present China has only three newspapers.

There is not now a ship in the British navy without a temperance society.

The temperance party in Wales has resolved on an active Parliamentary Propaganda.

A stone with the simple legend, "Browning, '89," was placed over the poet's grave in Westminster Abbey, January 11.

The Monarch Distillery of Peoria, Ill., the largest distillery in the world, was damaged by fire on the 12th inst., to the extent of $175,000.

A Y. M. C. A. of twenty-seven young braves, fifteen of whom are church members, has been organized in the Omaha Indian Agency, Nebraska.

A cyclone swept over St. Louis and vicinity Sunday, resulting in the destruction of three lives, the injuring of several persons, and the demolition of thousands of dollars' worth of property.

The extradition treaty, submitted by Lord Salisbury and Minister Lincoln, enumerates as extraditable offenses, "murder, assault with intent to kill, arson, piracy, robbery, forgery, counterfeiting money, larceny of over $50, and rape or indecent assault upon females."

The Nebraska Masonic Grand Lodge has adopted a rule prohibiting saloon-keepers from becoming Masons, and forbids their remaining in the order unless they discontinue the business of drunkard-making. Under the ruling of the last clause, three prominent members have been expelled from the Lincoln lodge, after an all-night session.

OUT of 165 members of the Kansas Legislature, 151 have been interviewed by the Hutchinson News on the subject of re-submission, and only four of that number favor it.

THE Supreme Court of Kansas has sustained the decision of Judge Johnston of the District Court, condemning F. W. Fulker, the express and depot agent at Oketo, for selling "original packages" of whisky, transported from another state.

WHAT institution is working so intelligently to help the home divinities, mother and child, as the W.C.T.U.? The departments of Heredity, Health and Kindergarten, White Cross and White Shield, are all in their immediate interest, and the departments of Sunday-School Work and Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public school are hardly less so, while the greatest and most pervasive of all, that of Temperance Literature and the Press, interplay with all the rest in this single and most sacred interest.

THE influenza seeks a shining mark in literary circles, and is a bit contrary withal. George W. Cable has been compelled to cancel his engagements for the present. Bill Nye's jokes are suspended, but he will doubtless be heard from later; while the man who was expected to "catch it" in genuine Russian form—George Kennan — is said to be escaping altogether. THE UNION SIGNAL, by quietly ignoring the foreign invader, hoped to be overlooked, and has been very lightly touched, owing, probably, to the temperate habits of its force and the true Americanism of its make-up.

IT was a rich life which the Dowager Empress of Germany yielded up in the presence of her children's children, to the third generation. She was the daughter and mother of warriors, yet the great desire of her old age was the peace of Europe. In her last interview with Minister Phelps she dismissed him with an earnest injunction to promote harmony between Germany and America. The last two years were sad ones for the Empress Augusta, marked, as they were, by the death of her husband, with whom she had lived most happily for fifty-eight years, and afterward by the death of their only son, but she conquered her sorrow by doing good to others. She designed buildings for the poor in Berlin, after the plan of Mr. Peabody in London, and gave practical expression of her interest in libraries and works of art. It was her special pride that she was in her girlhood a pupil of Goethe. She drew to the court such men as Aüerbach and Herder. Her patronage of letters, science, and art has done much to make Germany the Mecca it has become to students of this generation.

THE new name for unlicensed groggeries in Pennsylvania is "Speak-easies." They are thinly disguised as "soft drink" places. cigars shops and restaurants. They get their supplies of liquor in the dead of night, and sell without hindrance or regulation when they please and to whom they please. They have so multiplied under the Brooks high-license law in Pittsburgh, that, according to a correspondent of the New York Evening Post, "there are now more drinking places in that city than ever there were before." An editorial in the Philadelphia Press of January 6, says: "All accounts agree that high-license is a failure in Pittsburgh. 'Speak-easies,' or unlicensed groggeries, have multiplied in every section of the city, until now it is believed that the number of places where liquor is sold is considerably greater than it was two years ago under low license." The situation seems to be even worse in Philadelphia. Albert Griffin writes that "one of the leading members of the Law and Order League in that city, and an ardent supporter of the Brooks law, puts the unlicensed places at twice the number that are licensed"

IN the Senate of the United States on January 4, Senator Frye, of Maine, introduced a bill to provide for a Commission of five persons "to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic, its relations to revenue and taxation, and its general economic, criminal, moral and scientific aspects in connection with pauperism, crime, social vice, the public health, and general welfare of the people; and also to inquire and take testimony as to the practical results of license and prohibitory legislation for the prevention of intemperance in the several states of the Union." The bill further provides that investigation shall not continue more than two years, that the Commissioners shall receive compensation not exceeding $10 per day, and necessary expenses, and also that an appropriation of $10,000 be made for necessary expenses. This appropriation is certainly not large enough. Yet the outlook for this Commission is more hopeful than ever before, since the new Congressional Committee upon the liquor traffic is mainly composed of well-known temperance men. Among them is Major Pickler of Dakota, Messrs. Kerr and Struble of Iowa, and Mr. Anderson of Kansas, while the chairman, Mr. Taylor, is one of the stanchest Prohibitionists in the House.

THE fever in the South, as manifested by the ascendency of mob rule in some quarters of late, has passed a healthy crisis, and the remedy is discovered in the immediate locality of the eruption. The Augusta Chronicle, a paper of much influence in the South, recently contained a double leaded editorial on the Barnwell mob, in which this healthy sentiment found expression: "The white men who mob and shoot negroes accused of crime violate the laws of God and their country. They are guilty of murder, and, however revolting the crimes supposed to have been committed by those upon whom their vengeance is wreaked, the men who take the law into their own hands, who usurp the places of judge and jury, are conspirators against the peace and integrity of the state and enemies to the most sacred rights and only safeguard of the liberties of the people." In Lafayette Parish, Louisiana, the best citizens have organized for law and order, as against the negro-hunting "regulators." The outrages at Jessup and the reckless lynchings at Barnwell, have awakened the people of Georgia to see the difference between spurious, shot-gun chivalry and the real sort, which stands for justice, always, and never so firmly as when defending the weak and oppressed.

IOWA Prohibitionists, eight hundred strong, assembled in Des Moines last week to consider the best means of fortifying the threatened prohibitory statute. They were outspoken in their demands, warning legislators that the only way to retain their confidence is by maintaining the present law, and enacting stronger measures for its enforcement, instead of by modifying its rigor. They declare that wherever enforced, prohibition has proved a great promoter of morality and prosperity. Non-enforcement is due to the inefficiency or duplicity of officials, for which they demand a remedy. Local option will not answer as a substitute with this clear-headed yeomanry. "The sovereignty of the state of Iowa extends over every county, township and school district of the state. It is not consistent with the dignity of the state, or the right administration of justice to recognize that an act shall be criminal in one part of the state and be legal in another." In setting their foot down there, they tread upon a tender corn, as shown by the wincing of the rum sympathizing press. They "regard all devices of local option or high license as mere subterfuges and apologies for the toleration of crime, and are unalterably opposed to the same. Crime should never be licensed." A Republican paper, of wide circulation, commenting upon this utterance of Iowa Republicans, pronounces it a curious misstatement, and sneeringly remarks, "if any lawyers were on the resolutions committee, they should have pointed out the legal distinction between acts which are wrong in themselves and those which are malum prohibitum—wrong, because prohibited liquor selling belongs to the latter class." We lack space to name the eminent lawyers who lend their eloquence and the weight of their opinion to the defense of the position taken by Iowa Prohibitionists, that liquor selling belongs to the first-mentioned class—of acts wrong in themselves. Our contemporary has staked the ground upon which the prohibition issue must finally be fought. Is poison vending wrong, per se, or does its moral status depend upon the fitful breath of legislation?

A SIGNIFICANT article appeared in the Chicago Tribune last week, on Presidential dinner parties. Its significance lies in the fact that the Tribune belongs to that class of papers which sneered at Mrs. Hayes' "puritanical, parsimonious notions." Now it says, "The most generous entertainer among the occupants of the Executive Mansion was President Hayes," and goes on to give a full description of what it terms "the most notable entertainment, without exception, ever given there," the reception to the diplomatic corp in 1881. It mentions that two wine barrels of terrapin were prepared and served, and that the cost of this entertainment was $6,000 "though no wines were served." Thus it shows, unintentionally, probably, that wine is not a necessity in the most notable entertainments, and that some other motive than "stinginess" dictates its exclusion. In sharp contrast with President Hayes' entertainments were those of President Arthur, where a different wine was served with each course, and during the entire dinner "a cheap claret was served instead of water." No wonder, as this chronicler relates, that "at one of these state bouts, two ladies toppled out of their chairs, whereupon Mr. Arthur raised a great hullabaloo about the room being overheated, which, he proclaimed, caused the ladies to faint." It describes another of this same President's "bouts" which began Saturday night and ended some time Sunday morning. No ladies were present, the guests, according to the Tribune, being "pot-house dandies." "The boys" considered it was a "royal time," but in the estimation of the Tribune it "was a violation of the sanctity and dignity of the home of the Presidents, which was not uncommon during that administration." With these two examples before him, we wish President Harrison had seen fit not to have had "four or five wine glasses at every plate" at his state dinner Tuesday, the very day Christians all over the land were especially praying for him.

Contributed.

THE ADVANCE OF TRUTH.

BY R. L. CRAWFORD.

Art thou not called the heir of Time?
Advance, majestic Truth, advance!
Behold in thy royal house the dance
Of usurping revelers; at their feast
Are cunning lackeys, who deftly trim
Lamps that for folly have burned too long:
Let them fan not the flames now growing dim.
Open the windows to the east,
Where soon the light will be full and strong,
And the heralds of dawn to the star heights climb.

In this, the day of a great demand,
Shall men before the error stand
With lips as dumb as the lips of death?
In the hour of a nation's utmost pain
Do they wait the beckoning hand of gain?
For paltry profit or petty fear
Do they turn from the path to the Conscience clear?
Ah, they may not, dare not, hold their breath;
Who on the conflict shuts his sight,
Though his hands be folded and weaponless,
Shall in God's judgment, nevertheless,
Be bound in guilt for the murdered Right.

Let Thy light of strong conviction sweep
To the farmost wall of the universe;
Till the shadow of a century's curse,
The blight of evil broad and deep,
Is lifted from us. Be it known
That the wrong will ne'er be overthrown
Till the might of heart and brain be spent
In the cause of earth's ennoblement—
Till the sense of justice is stronger than
The goad of avarice, and man
Shall follow in honor to farthest length
The lead of pure, unselfish thought:
For grandest achievement is ever wrought
By the strength of love, not the force of strength.

O prophets, who foretell the need
Of a broader purpose, may your creed
Of a higher fellowship embrace
Earnest effort in humblest place;
Be this the Godlike thought ye teach—
That valiant service and earnest speech,
That every duty, however small,
When done in faith for the common good,
Still widens the circle of brotherhood;
And the grandest, noblest trait in all
Is manhood's honor of manhood's worth:
Let him who to the Truth is true
Have undisputed access to
The best and highest things of earth.

THE "BRIG"—AN INEBRIATE ASYLUM INCIDENT.

BY MAJOR E. T. SCOTT.

One day last summer as I was passing up the street, my attention was called to the many posters that almost covered the front windows of a prominent hardware store, announcing in bold head-lines, and free use of exclamation points, a "sheriff's sale" of the entire stock within.

A sheriff's sale! There is pathos in that. The bare thought affects me. It must come, I think, from once witnessing a scene where a constable sold at public vendue a poor widow's only cow to pay an old debt of her dead husband. The piteous look I saw on her face, so full of appeal, as two little ones tugged at her dress, is indelibly stamped on my memory, though it occurred when not yet in my teens.

How cold type can be made to appear! A piece of white paper, a few letters thereon, affirming that "these goods will be sold regardless of first cost,—plows, tinware, stoves, agricultural implements, tools, shelf-ware, etc., etc., beginning Wednesday, July 11; to be sold without reserve; taken in execution of writs," etc. There is a whole sermon in it.

While absorbed in this part of my soliloquy, an acquaintance came to my side to whom I remarked that "I was sorry to see that," pointing to the posters on the windows, "but it was no more than was to be expected when we consider the habits of some members of the firm."

"How's that?" he asked.

"Why, the senior member has become an habitual drinker. I have seen him enter three different saloons within an hour, and drink at each before he could get his nerves steady enough to attend to business. His face is dull and heavy looking; he talks carelessly, with a manner as if there were 'millions in it,' and his laugh is hollow—not a round, ringing, hearty kind, by any means. And the junior member is not much better, if I may judge from appearances. I don't see how they could expect to succeed."

"They could n't?"

"No."

"Do you think that liquor had anything to do with it?" he asked in a rather dubious tone.

"Yes, I do. It was at the bottom of the trouble. Shrewd capitalists supplying the trade have detectives whose duty it is to visit places where they have patrons and report their habits, as well as financial ability. Many a merchant has been astounded to find the sheriff at his door when he supposed all was serene. He rubs his eyes,—can scarcely believe his senses—and wonders why the 'minion of the law' visits him just at this particular juncture, when everything, apparently, is going swimmingly on! He is told that the wiser course is to be quiet, and pay the debt; that his creditors prefer he would hereafter deal elsewhere. Should he push his inquiries, he is, perhaps, politely informed that the Eastern house has learned through an 'agent' that he spends too much time at the saloons. He of course professes indignation, and mentally declares that people had 'better mind their own business.'"

"Mr. Scott, do you pretend that those men have spies for such a purpose?"

"Certainly; they have just that kind of men. They are not spies in the sense you mean. They are men paid to protect the interests of employers, as a private watchman is paid to guard the place of business against midnight prowlers, thieves and burglars."

"Isn't it pretty small business to be prying into the private affairs of other men?"

"Well, I think a careful business man forms his own opinion when he learns that a customer is a frequenter of a drinking place."

"Yes; but in this particular case of our old acquaintances here to-day, I believe that if Johnson had done as Thomson did—let whisky alone and stuck to beer—this would not have occurred."

"How's that?" I said. Then without waiting for a reply, I quickly added, "'A man caught riding a stolen horse, must prove how he came by it,' is a sound maxim in law. So one doesn't stop to ask if he drinks beer; it is enough to know that one is in the babit of visiting saloons—the starting-point to bankruptcy in any kind of business."

"Well, now, Mr. Scott, I maintain that if these men had let whisky alone—drank their beer at home—there would have been no occasion for this trouble."

"Do you drink it at home, my Christian friend?"

"Yes, I do. I don't go into saloons for it. I have always had beer, and wine, and cider at home, and no one can make me believe that there is any harm in it, either."

"Do you think that?"

"Yes, I do."

"I begin to more clearly understand now, why the prohibitory amendment was defeated the 18th of June. Men like you, prominent in church and society, thousands upon thousands of them, voted against the amendment, or stayed at home."

"That's what I did."

"What?"

"Stayed at home."

"I think now I know why there are so many dead churches. I do not believe a church can—as a rule, at least—be instrumental in making converts to Christ, whose members habitually use intoxicating beverages."

Ah, he knew well enough what I meant. He knew that his church was dead—spiritually dead—that the only accessions, comparatively, came by letters from other churches.

"Oh, pshaw!" he replied, "there is not a bit of harm in a glass of beer. When you temperance radicals attack beer, you have taken hold of the hot end of the poker."

"Did you ever see a brig?"

"A brig!"

"Yes."

"Of course I've seen a brig, lots of them, on the Hudson and the Delaware."

"I don't mean that kind. I mean the one sometimes to be seen at hospitals and inebriate asylums."

"What are you up to? You are getting enigmatical. Explain yourself."

"I refer to a room where those afflicted with delirium tremens are sometimes confined until they have sufficiently recovered from that peculiar stage of their debauch. There is not an article of furniture in it. The carpet is laid on a mass of lining so thick that the touch is soft to the feet as one walks over it. No window is to be seen save a single pane of glass elevated beyond your reach, for the ceiling is high in this room. The bed, if one is used, is made on the carpeted floor. Strike the walls with your fist as hard as you please, there will be no sound, nor will your hand suffer because of the blow."

"Why?"

"Because the walls are heavily padded."

"What is all this for?"

"Because some there are when crazed by drink whose dominating idea is to do something desperate, and against themselves, so these precautions are taken to prevent it. A man frenzied and dehumanized by alcoholic poison has been known to dash his head violently against any hard substance—even to thump it on the floor—to run with all his might and main to crash his way through the glass of a window. Terrible sights have been witnessed: heads cut up and flesh hanging in shreds, for the want of this precaution. This room is called by the officials in their vernacular the 'brig.' When it is said of one just admitted, 'he is in the brig,' it is understood that the poor fellow has the delirium tremens.

"An acquaintance of mine, for months an inmate (who shall be known as Tom), was sitting in his room one day when he heard a carriage stop at the main entrance, which was immediately beneath his window, he having a room on the second floor facing the main street. He saw a man struggling violently, while three men were trying to prevent him from getting out of their grip. They pulled and tugged hard to get him out of the carriage. By the time that they had succeeded in landing him on the sidewalk, his clothing was almost in rags, for he kicked, shook himself almost loose several times, swore furiously, raved like a maniac; but with Tom's assistance, he was forced into the 'brig.' For three days he was constantly delirious. Then he was considered safe to take up his abode in the room assigned him as a regular boarder of the Home.

"Tom was asked by the superintendent to call on the 'new boarder,' talk to him, show him around the Home, the chapel, the library, and billiard room. He would be fearfully blue, would imagine that the whole world was against him—especially his wife and friends; that he would lose his situation; worse yet, lose his property, that his wife had left him and taken all that he once possessed with her. In this mood Tom found him. Tom, however, soon won his confidence, and when he discovered that Tom, too, was, like himself, a patient, he unbosomed himself; told particularly how it happened that he was brought to the Home. If you will let me have five more minutes of your time, sir, I'll repeat what he told Tom."

"All right. You have aroused my curiosity. I'll hear the rest of it."

"Well, in substance he said:

"'About twelve years ago I was a slave to drink. I had given up the hope of ever being a sober man again, when, by the merest accident, I stumbled into a church where revival services were being held. In some manner, to me inexplicable, I became an interested spectator, and before I left that place that night I was converted. The good news was received in a transport of joy by my wife and children. I had found freedom at last, for God Himself broke the chain which bound me. A family altar was erected. I attended divine services regularly, and, together with my wife and oldest child, was soon received into the church in full connection. I became interested in the Sunday-school, took a class of boys, and in course of time was elected the superintendent.

"'In the meantime, my business outlook grew brighter. I engaged in a newspaper printing establishment. I rose from one position to another, until I stood on one of the top rounds of the ladder. Close and protracted application to my work, with sedentary habits, began to tell on me. Consulting my physician, he advised me not to work so hard and take a little old cider; said I was dyspeptic, something acidulous would assist digestion, and for my sleeplessness I might take a glass of ale or beer just before retiring. I said nothing to him of my former life, or the appetite I once had. Neither did I follow his advice then. I grew worse. On my second consultation the doctor repeated, with greater emphasis, the same advice. I hesitated; began to reason within myself. Surely I can have no appetite now. Certainly I was now strong enough to take a glass of cider, or ale, without letting it make a fool of me. I could not be so weak as that! So I followed the doctor's advice. As I did not notice a desire for more of the stuff, I concluded that the old appetite for liquor was indeed gone for good. On my way to the office one day, I took my usual glass of cider. I did not even notice the taste of cider, so I ordered another glass. A conversation with the clerk ensued, when at his invitation I took one more with him. A tingling sensation was the result. Then a feeling of buoyant exhilaration possessed me. The blood fairly danced and bounded through every vein. I could feel my face flush, and see my eyes snap and flash, while my tongue rattled on like a spinning top. What happened after that I can scarcely say. I know I went from one place to another, zigzaging across the streets, anywhere, everywhere, wherever there was a drinking place, drinking beer, whisky—anything, everything! It seemed as if I could have drank a whole brewery!

"'Yes, I have been on a terrible spree. What will become of me, God alone knows. I don't know what I have done nor where I have been. It is almost a blank. I never came to my senses until I awoke in that room below, when I found myself in a straight jacket, mouth gagged, and both hands tightly encased in one mitten.'

"Then a fit of utter despair, born of the consciousness of the terrible disgrace of his awful fall, with the pent-up agony of his soul breaking its bonds, he fairly screamed: 'I shall be driven from the church! I can never look into the face of a member again! I am ruined! ruined! And there's my poor wife and children! What must they think. Their hearts are breaking. God forgive me. I wish I were dead. No use, no use, I'm gone! Oh! why didn't I tell the doctor all about it? or why did I yield to the devil in the shape of my doctor's advice? Only think, sir, it is over eleven years since I had touched a drop, and then to think, too, that that appetite was there all the time—slumbering like a hidden foe—and at last leaped upon me tiger-like, and with his cruel, hungry, bloody claws tore me to pieces. If he had only finished me, I would have been glad. I'm almost mad.'

"Then he broke down completely, buried his face in his hands, rocked and swayed, and sobbed like an inconsolable, homesick boy. What do you think? Is there no harm in just a glass of beer? Answer me candidly—as if you stood at the judgment bar of Almighty God!"

"Yes, Mr. Scott, there is harm if what you have related is based on facts; and my reasoning was illogical, my assumptions were false, and my opinion founded on pure ignorance. I am afraid there is too much—altogether too much—ignorance on this beer question."

"'Based on facts,' you said. It is true: I know it to be true, every word of it."

AN UNRESTRICTED BALLOT.

BY HELEN M. GOUGAR.

I am "called" to write for THE UNION SIGNAL on the above subject because of the forcible article on "An Educated Ballot" in a recent number. The latter was a plea for reading, writing, intelligence, and an oath "upon the spelling-book as well as the Bible." for the voter. The article closed with these words:

"With nineteen per cent of all our voters who cannot read or write, as many more who know just enough to misspell, and seventy-eight per cent of Southern blacks who cannot read, we face a serious alternative."

Two wrongs never made a right, and any act based upon wrong principles must lead to wrong results.

In view of the fact that great dangers threaten our national existence, reformers make haste to seek and apply remedies. The greatest care must be exercised that we do not violate God's law in our attempt to mend the deformities of man's law. To apply the educational test in ever so slight a degree, even to that of reading and writing, is a violation of an eternal principle, and must, therefore, be wrong in results. The ballot is the outward expression of the inward sense of self-protection and self-preservation. The person who cannot read needs it far more than the man who possesses the additional weapon of intelligence. A college-educated brain is not the sure sign of a clean heart or a just conscience void of offense. The man or woman has never been born, and doubtless never will be, sufficiently just to have unlimited control of any other human being, therefore self-protection is the only kind to be trusted in the many vicissitudes of life. Without the ballot the non-voter is the victim of any whim or injustice that the voter may impose upon him. This is seen to-day, and most keenly felt, by the mothers of this nation. They are subjected to the horrible tortures of the rum traffic, as they see annually 100,000 of their boys led to this fiend , while the fathers of these boys juggle with party and sell their very blood for spleen, place and power. Though these mothers could not write their a, b, c, they know perfectly the alphabet of love and the protection of their offspring, and should be given their ballot of self-protection.

In the first election held in Kansas under the woman's municipal suffrage law, the cry went up that the "ignorant black women" of Leavenworth, the largest city of the state, would vote with the saloon and be controlled by the vicious element. Out of nearly seven hundred "ignorant black women," as these helpless victims of human slavery are thoughtlessly called, all but twenty-three voted as Miss Willard would have done, "For God and Home and Native Land." No amount of intimidation or deception could turn these women from their mother instinct of self-protection.

I had a lesson early on the first election day that I shall not soon forget. Churches were used for headquarters for the women voters, and prayers were made all day long by the waiting, watching hosts. I had promised to accompany the first body of colored women to the ballot-box in a certain ward. Not one of them could read or write. Arriving at the polls, we waited for four white women to vote. They were elegantly attired, all "educated ladies." All four voted for the "saloon candidate," for they wanted wine according to their "personal liberty." In marked contrast, the "uneducated black women" killed these four whisky ballots. The educational test for the ballot is to cover up rather than remove a disease of the body politic. Such a policy is as unwise and dangerous as if applied to the human body. Rather let us seek to destroy the disease. This can be done by granting universal suffrage and putting compulsory education behind it. In this way only can we remove,and render ourselves safe from the disease of illiteracy. The ballot is an educator not second to the spelling-book or free Bible, and the ignorant man most needs its beneficent influence.

Had the "black women" of Leavenworth been disfranchised on account of their illiteracy, no time would have been given to educating them in the great reforms at stake in the contest in that election. As it was, not only these mothers, but their children, were started down the ages, drifting on the sea of righteousness and sobriety through the spoken word. Just so would it be with the "seventy-eight per cent of blacks in the Southern states," especially the women.

Give me the black women of Atlanta balloted, and no amount of whisky money could buy that city "wet" in a local option contest. Experiences in Kansas have proven this beyond a doubt. History teaches the important fact that the ballot has never been extended to a class where it has injured that class, and suffrage has never been extended in a government where it has injured that government. "Do ye unto others as ye would that others should do unto you," is the command, but the wrongs of the ages have been that humanity has not been catholic enough to define "others" with sufficient length and breadth. The ballot-box is the pulse of our body politic. If illiteracy is our disease, let us read the fact on election day, and proceed to the remedy, for our brother wronged is our wrong; for God has made us our brother's keeper, though that brother never saw a spelling-book.

RUM AND CRIME.

BY HON. A. B. RICHMOND.

"Oh, the selling of rum is a good device
To make a hell of a paradise;
Where'er shall roll that fiery flood,
'Tis swollen with tears and stained with blood."
The Rum-seller's Dream.

"Telegram for you, Mr. R——; wants answer right off—the man is waiting in the office for it!"

The young "Mercury" of "Jupiter's" modernized thunder bolts handed me a message which I read, and immediately answered, when he vanished from my sight like a flash of his own lightning.

This occurred one evening a few days ago. The telegram I received was from a distant county, and read as follows:

—— ——— Co., Pa., Oct. 20, 1889.

"My brother was murdered this afternoon—shot by a drunken employe of his. Wish to retain you for prosecution; when can I see you in your office?"

For some time I sat and mused with the telegram in my hand. Then recollection opened her volume before me, and commenced to read from its pages, "This is the eightieth case of homicide in which you have been engaged, and over sixty of them were caused by the accursed influence of rum." Here memory paused a few moments, as if shocked at the revelations of its own record; then it commenced to relate the details of some of the incidents it had recorded. I observed that the "docket" from which it read was labeled, "The Diary of an Old Lawyer," and as memory commenced to turn over its pages, I saw there the narration of many a tale of crime and woe; and I observed that in the most of them rum was the primordial cause. That as prone to sin as human nature is under the influence of ignorance, temptation and vile surroundings, yet that depravity could only reach the climax of its possibilities in man when it was assisted by rum and its licensed privileges.

Long I sat and pondered over the events incident to a practice of over forty years in our so-called "courts of justice"—courts of justice? where the law licenses its agents to tempt their fellows to crime, and then sentences its victims to the prison or death for the crimes committed under its legalized temptations.

Over the darkened pages of my memory flitted many a scene of crime I have heard narrated in our courts, and many a tale of sin as related to me in the cells of our prisons; and in nearly all of them the demoniacal spirit of rum was the principal actor. On the tables of our court rooms I have seen evidences of human guilt that would far exceed the horrors that Tam O'Shanter saw on "the holy table" in "Alloways auld haunted kirk." The blood-stained skull of a wife cleft from top to base by an axe in the hands of a brutal, drunken husband; the skull of an aged father crushed by a blow struck with a club by an infuriated, drunken son, who was once the pride and hope of over-indulgent parents; a bullet taken from the head of a beautiful young girl who was shot by her lover under the combined influence of jealousy and rum; veritably, have I there seen

"A garter, which a babe had strangled;
A knife, a father's throat had mangled,
Whom his ain son o' life bereft,
The gray hairs yet stuck to the heft—
Wi mair o' horrible and awfu
Which ev'n to name wad be unlawfu."

This is neither painted phrase nor hyperbole, but the simple truth, and yet have I not related a tithe of the horrors I have seen and heard in our courts of justice (?) where licenses are granted to a favored few to make criminals and outcasts of the unfortunate many. But what avails it to tell this "old, old story of rum and crime"? It has become as familiar as the hearse and funeral cortege; public sensibility has become blunted and indifferent to the tales of want and woe so frequently related in its chronicles of human depravity.

On one page of our statute book are recorded enactments to prevent crime and punish criminals, and on the next are legalized provisions to establish rum-shops and beer saloons, in which crime is engendered and propagated as is miasma from a stagnant pool. By the laws of a Christian Legislature profanity is made a misdemeanor to be punished with fine and imprisonment, while the same laws legalize the cup that causes lips to blaspheme that had never uttered an oath before. In all the offences against men and morality recorded in the criminal codes of the Christian world there is not one whose commission is not prompted by rum, and promoted by its licensed franchises. During all the long centuries of Christian civilization the greatest enemy of religion and morality has been rum and its kindred spirits of evil; and yet from the time when the first poisonous drop fell from the alembic of the alchemist to the present, it has been a pet of the law and a privileged assassin. It was probably this monstrous incongruity between our professions and our practice as a Christian people that suggested the bitter satire of Lord Byron:

"There is naught so much the spirit calms
As rum and true religion."

It is this parasite on Christian enlightenment that is the great obstacle to our missionary efforts in obeying the Divine command to the disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;" for wherever is unfurled the "banner of the cross" by those who would obey the injunction of the great Master, there flourishes its great counteracting influence, "licensed rum" and its baleful accessories. In all Christian lands the church and saloon stand side by side. Two hundred years ago Defoe, the poet, wrote:

"Wherever God erects a house of prayer,
The devil always builds a chapel there;
And 't will be found upon examination
The latter has the largest congregation."

In all Mohammedan countries the use of alcoholic beverages is prohibited by the laws of man and interdicted by the commands of the Koran. This fact suggests the inquiry, "While we are earnestly endeavoring to Christianize the followers of Mahomet, would it not be wise in us to exchange a few of our teachers for a like number of temperance missionaries?" To an old lawyer it looks as if we would be greatly benefited by a commercial transaction in which the equitable principles of facio ut facias are so apparent. It is useless to expect that in this Christian country where so many of the pews in our fashionable churches are purchased and decorated with the profits of the rum traffic, which also contributes so generously to the support of home ministers and foreign missions, that our clergy should feel as untrammeled as would the devoted followers of Mahomet in preaching total abstinence from the wine cup. It therefore seems to me not unwise to make an exchange which would so manifestly enlighten both parties to the contract, as well as advance the moral condition of mankind.

It is evident that there is but one method to stay the torrent of evil arising from the use of intoxicating liquor, and that is by the votes of the whole people. Put the ballot in the hands of the women, turn their pure influence into the turbed channels of political government, and the saloons and rum-shops would vanish from our midst like the mist of the morning. Let the mothers, wives and sisters of the thousands of victims of the fatal appetite for strong drink but vote as they pray, and the places that now know the licensed drinking resorts would soon know them no more forever. The ballot is a weapon which women can wield as effectively as man, and in the defense of home and its surroundings it is far more effective than the artillery of the battle-field.

METHODS OF TEMPERANCE REFORM.

BY REV. B. W. WILLIAMS.

I. MORAL SUASION.

The Great Teacher once made an observation to the effect that no wise man would attempt to build a tower without first estimating its probable cost. He also stated that no prudent monarch would engage in a war with a foreign ruler until he had considered the strength of his own army, and compared it with that of the enemy. It is equally true that no judicious reformer will attempt a great moral reform before he has carefully considered the fundamental principles involved, and the best methods of accomplishing the object aimed at. The progress of a good cause may be retarded by the use of unwise methods for its promotion. It is sometimes the case that measures popularly supposed to favor the attainment of a certain end are found, by experience, to militate against it. This is notably true of that progressive reform which seeks to counteract the evils resulting from the use of intoxicating beverages. There is a difference of opinion as to the manner in which this work can best be accomplished. We need to study the "how" as well as the "why" of temperance reform. A comparison of the relative value of the various means employed to restrain or destroy the evils of drunkenness, is here proposed. By this means we may be enabled to decide as to the best remedy for intemperance.

I shall first consider moral suasion as a means of combating the drink evil. By moral suasion is meant the use of argument, persuasion, remonstrance, personal influence, gospel entreaty, appeals to conscience, and such other methods as do not invoke the aid of law. In the earlier stages of the temperance reform these incentives were almost the sole reliance. Every intelligent friend of temperance recognizes the value and utility of this kind of work in its legitimate province. We all believe in moral suasion as a means of creating public sentiment and leading to wise and intelligent action. But there are two phases of the work to be accomplished—reformation of the victim of drunkenness and destruction of the traffic which causes it. The drunkard is to be saved by moral suasion and the grace of God; but the saloon can be closed only by the aid of law. We indorse the efforts to educate the public conscience; but the assumption that moral suasion alone is sufficient, is a proposition from which we must dissent.

The idea that we should rely solely upon moral suasion for the suppression of the drink evil, is not only fallacious but absurd. Dr. Albert Barnes effectually disposes of this specious plea by giving it other applications equally as logical and consistent. Hear him: "Why not rely on moral suasion and appeals to conscience in regard to lotteries? Why not continue to license them and regulate them and derive a revenue from them; and if, after every precaution, there are still evils in regard to them, why not endeavor to check those evils by appeals to the consciences and the reason of the men engaged in selling lottery tickets? Why not pursue the same course in regard to gaming establishments, and to horse-racing and bull-baiting; and if there are still evils in regard to them, seek to persuade the men engaged in these pursuits not to carry them too far; and if there are young men liable to be led astray, endeavor by moral suasion to induce them not to do that which the law allows. And why not extend the same principle to horse-stealing, and burglary, and arson, and rely on moral suasion in checking these evils? Yet not one of these evils does an appreciable part of the mischief in our land which is done by the traffic in ardent spirits." If these observations are correct, the inadequacy of moral suasion alone, as a remedy for drunkenness, must be apparent to all.

If further proof were needed of the insufficiency of this method of dealing with the liquor traffic, it could be found in the history and development of the various temperance societies. The Washingtonians, for example, started out on the line of moral suasion only, supposing that to be the best plan; but the logic of events afterward compelled them to declare in favor of prohibition. The good sisters of the W. C. T. U. began with the idea of saving the drunkard by Christian persuasives and gospel influences; but they soon clearly saw that this could not be effectually done so long as the liquor traffic continued to exist. No sooner did they rescue the poor inebriate from the gutter, clean and sober him up, and return him to his family clothed in his right mind, than the open saloon allured him again into the path of vice. Hence they began their efforts to close the saloon by the aid of legislative enactments. To-day they are ardent Prohibitionists, and generally earnest supporters of the Prohibition party.

Weatherford, Texas.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

Jane E. Weeden keeps faithfully at work raising the littles. Her house-to-house dime collections, however, quickly amount to a goodly sum. She has just forwarded $73.20. Of this amount $5.30 is from the Chicago Foundlings' Home Baby Band, and $1.50 is from a Baby Band of Dr. Geo. E. Shipman's grandchildren. Dr. Shipman is the founder and manager of the Chicago Foundlings' Home, one of the most Christlike and best conducted charities in Chicago. It is entirely a work of faith. The Doctor prays the Lord to put it into the hearts of His children to supply their daily wants, and they are indeed marvelously cared for. The building and grounds are worth about $100,000, and are all paid for. The Doctor founded the Home about eighteen years ago, giving what little he possessed to the undertaking. He has never asked a living person in all these years to give one dollar to the work; nor has he had any agent out to solicit for the Home. Often they know not where the next meal is coming from, but in some way the Lord provides. They always have a family of over a hundred. During the National Convention of the W. C. T. U. in this city, Miss Weeden was a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Shipman. She was greatly delighted with the saintly pair, and their noble work. She went into the nurseries of the Home and took down the name of each little forsaken one, fifty-three in all. They were too poor to give her the necessary ten cents each, but while she was raising the Willard Baby Band at Evanston, which numbers one hundred and twenty, she asked some of the kind-hearted mothers to pay an extra ten cents for the little babies that had no mothers to pay for them, and in this way she secured $5.30 to pay for the Foundlings' Home Baby Band.

In the $73.20 sent in by Miss Weeden is included the Hinsdale, Aurora, and Downer's Grove Baby Band, numbering eighty-five, and the Evanston Band already alluded to. The balance of the money was personal contributions given in Evanston, Aurora, Hinsdale and Downer's Grove. Three dollars was contributed by Miss Hannah Hughes, Medina, Ohio, one of the original Crusaders.

***

The Woman's Hundred Dollar Band is growing—we have had several additions lately. Mrs. G. F. Swift, of Chicago, a member of the Winter Street W. C. T. U., has just sent us a personal gift of $100. Mrs. Elizabeth Packard, of Chicago, also joined the Band a few days ago by the payment of $100. Mrs. Packard has one of the most remarkable histories of any woman living—she is the author of that wonderful book, "Modern Persecution; or Married Women's Liabilities." Mrs. Packard has been the means of literally opening the eyes of thousands of legislators to the fact that by the common law women are slaves, not free human beings, and has also been the means of having the laws changed to those of humanity and justice in more than nineteen states and territories.

Mrs. Amelia Thorp, Cambridge, Mass., has paid $100. A white-ribboner of Canton, Ill., sends a draft for $50, to add to $50 she previously sent—thus completing her gift of $100. She desires that her name may not be made public. Another of these hidden friends who has pledged $100, is a white-ribboner from Lanark, Ill.; she sends $40 to be added to a gift of $10 previously sent. Another, who has sent $100 is a white-ribboner from Delaware, Ohio; she, also, does not want her name mentioned. And still another white-ribboner, who wants to be incog., resides in Wellsville, Ohio; she pledges $100. We wish our generous friends would allow us the use of their names. They might often double their gift by giving their names, for it would be a power to move others to like generous giving. Mrs. Mary Balch, Eagelstown, Ind., has pledged $100. Dr. Bessie Cushman, Chicago, pledges $100, in memory of her loved and lamented sister, Miss Rose Phillips, of Kansas City, Mo., who did such valiant work in Missouri for temperance during her noble life. Mrs. D. A. Garlick, Chicago, pledges $100, in memory of a loved mother.

***

Mrs. Serena Turner, of Ozark, Ark., writes: "I received on Christmas day $5 from the Lord through my mother, and in honor of her I send it to the Temple fund, to help build a home for our Nation's mother, i. e., the National W. C. T. U." The Rev. H. L. Mills. of Huron, So. Dakota, has done a brotherly and helpful thing, why cannot all laymen as well as clergy who are favorable to our cause in this day of bitter persecution of the W. C. T. U. follow his noble example? He writes: "Enclosed please find postal note for $3 for the Temperance Temple. We want the names of all our family to go under the cornerstone. Rev. H. Mills, Mrs. Mary F. Mills, Ernest I. Mills." He also sent a stamp for a mite-box for his son to be used during the coming year.

***

There is notthing that touches us more than gifts sent by the very aged. A large number who have given to the Woman's Hundred Dollar Band are women over threescore. This shows a beautiful Christlike spirit; they are doing for the good of the generations that are to follow them. Mrs. Sarah I. Webster, Van Wert, Ohio, eighty-six years old, one of the original Ohio Crusaders, sends a pair of men's knit woolen socks, made by her own hands. Mrs. A. E. Smith, Green Lake, Wis., eighty-four years old, sends a beautiful and artistically pieced crib quilt of silk to be sold for the Temple; it is lined throughout with silk; we will sell it for $5. Miss Mary A. Mohler, Huntington, Ind., sends a beautifully painted white silk bathing cloth scarf two and a half yards long. She says it is a gift from her mother and herself, who are not possessed with money, and adds, "If our means was as great as our interest in the temperance work, we would not stop short of any amount until the Temple was erected." We will sell the scarf for $4, although it should bring $5.

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Correspondence.

OUR SECOND ROUND-THE-WORLD MISSIONARY.

(Concluded.)

Next I visited another seaport where a mission was held in the Institute; the first thing I saw on entering the hall was a canvas bag pinned to a banner. I recognized it at once as one of our W. C. T. U. bags, and upon making inquiry about it, found that a young sailor, five years ago, on a sailing vessel had stopped in New York harbor. The W. C. T. U. ladies had asked permission to have this bag, filled with gospel and temperance literature, placed on the vessel; from these tracts the sailors first read of the Good Templars, and resolved to join a Lodge in the first port. This, five of them, did, "And," said the young man, "we are still Good Templars." I was very glad to meet this young fellow, and I thought how important it is that we should scatter as seed, our literature broadcast, for it is certain to spring up somewhere. A union was also formed in this place with some seventy members.

After roaming at large for nearly two months, I returned to Adelaide. It is a beautiful spot, the most beautiful city of Australia. Large parks, zoölogical gardens containing birds and beasts of nearly every clime; long and wide drives, lined on either side with native trees; large homes and spacious grounds, many churches—in fact, it is called the "City of Churches"; the whole place is surrounded by green hills, forming a background that lends striking beauty to the situation.

While there I saw no one of great note, except a "real, live earl." The Earl and Countess of Kintore reside here. They are noted, she especially, for their interest in all good works. Major Dane was also holding forth, but my time was very much taken up, and I did not meet him. I attended a debate in Parliament on the "No, confidence" question. It seems such a strange method of government; if there is dissatisfaction as to any policy put forth, some one in the house brings in a resolution of "No confidence in the present ministry." This resolution is debated upon at length; it usually lasts some days, then the house divides to support the ministry or defeat it; if it is defeated, the whole ministry, from the Premier down, is turned out, and the mover of the resolution becomes Premier. The Ministry was defeated and gracefully took a back seat. A most disgraceful scene was witnessed just as the discussion closed. The debate lasted till five o'clock in the morning, and when a recess was declared before the house divided, one of the members left the hall and soon returned bringing with him another member in a shockingly intoxicated condition, and, propped up between two honorable members, he was led to a seat to vote. I was told he had been on a protracted spree during the debate, and this was about his first appearance in the Hall during the session. Great excitement followed, and cries of Shame! Shame!! were heard from all parts of the house.

When we find the fountain head corrupt, what can we expect of the stream? As long as drunkards are sent to legislative halls we can have only drunken laws, and a community that would send a man known to be given to the excessive use of liquor to represent the best interests of the commonwealth and help frame laws for a sober people, should be branded with shame.

But I was writing of my return to the city. I reached there "weary and foot-sore." We were to have a grand finale. The ladies had worked hard to make the convention, which had been called to form a colonial union, a success. Hundreds and hundreds of prayers had been offered, both in and out of the city, that it might be a time when much good should be done.

In every place where a mission was to be held we had asked that a special time be set aside as a night of prayer in which all churches should join praying for a special blessing upon the work of South Australia. It was a time when I was fairly borne up upon the prayers and sympathy of the people, and, as we fully expected, the very windows of heaven opened upon us and blessings came showering down. The two months I was out in the largest places, scores of women were raised up to do the work in the city. Women who had never spoken in public before went to the suburbs, held meetings and even organized. I never saw such a resurrection of latent talent.

Convention day came, and if I remember correctly, there were forty-six delegates coming from far and near. We opened the convention with an hour's devotional exercises, at the early hour of 9 a. m. Through the rain came some seventy women and a number of gentlemen to lift their voices for a special blessing. We all felt it was a time and place "where Jesus sheds the oil of gladness on our heads."

I had been invited to preside at the convention. We adopted constitution and by-laws drawn up by a special committee, received fraternal delegates including one from the Ministerial Association, elected officers, and concluded with a tea in the Town Hall, where about six hundred were seated. Then a mass-meeting followed, at which several speakers addressed the meeting; it was most enthusiastic. I was received in true American style, with a "Chautauqua salute," and as it was new to the people it created great enthusiasm. At the close of the meeting I was presented with a check in aid of the mission fund, and all went home singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." Next morning I bid adieu to the many friends who had stood by me so grandly, and I left strengthened for the work before me.

Before leaving the Colony for good, I visited two places in the southern part of Naracoort and Mt. Gambia. At the former place we held a very successful mission, which resulted in the formation of a union. While there, I was taken to the caves. They are wonderful, not very deep, but of great extent. We did not go through them, but far enough to see the chief beauties. The water comes dripping through the earth, and the different chemicals have given every hue and shade of coloring to the roof—delicate pink, sea-surf green, ultramarine blue and almost every other cast. The whole roof and sides sparkle and glisten, reflecting rays of light seen only in caves, but far beyond description. After spending some time here we visited the next cave, a half mile distant. All that could be seen was a hole in the earth. In the far North they would say a "bear-hole"; through this small space we are supposed to descend. I looked at the mouth of the cave, then viewed my own dimensions, and concluded I would not fit. The other ladies all being small, had no difficulty in descending, but when my turn came (which my friends insisted upon), it was too funny—I stuck fast. Two gentlemen came to the rescue, and I was pulled out alive. Of course the laugh passed around, and I tried again and again; finally, after several attempts, I landed safely some twenty feet below. But the difficulty was by no means over. I must get out of that hole, and in my attempts to reach the surface I began to think I should have to spend my days as a hanging ornament in the mouth of that cave; but thanks to the valuable service rendered by the gentlemen, I escaped to tell the story. This cave was very unlike the other. The whole roof was covered with a white frosting, looking like a field of untrodden snow, and every flake sparkled with the turn of our torches. It seems so wonderful that there should be such hidden beauties in the earth.

From here I journeyed to Mt. Gambia, named from an extinct volcano near by. This whole section of the country seems to be of volcanic formation. In many places it seems quite hollow, and you can hear a slight echo of the horses' tread. In the center of this volcano is the far-famed Blue Lake, seven hundred feet deep, and as blue as indigo; there seems to be no regular current to the water, but, ever restless, it gathers in the center into a sort of a whirlpool. There are other lakes near by, and the whole country affords many a view from which could be painted a beautiful landscape. I held a short mission, formed a union of some sixty members, leaving the colony early in the morning for Victoria, stopping first at Ballarat.

This was my first stop in the colony of Victoria, and a beautiful spot it is, noted for its statuary. In the Botanical Gardens is some of the finest statuary I have ever seen. In a sheltered spot stands a group chiseled from the purest marble, "The Fight from Pompeii." It represents a man and woman with a young child fleeing from the destruction. The strong arms of the man are stretched out toward the woman as if to protect her from danger, while the mother bears in her arms a clinging infant. The whole effect is charming.

Leaving here, I journeyed to Geelong, a place of about twenty-six thousand inhabitants, situated on a slight eminence overlooking the bright and shining waters of a sheltered bay. This city seems quite by itself, and on account of the situation many resort to this spot in summer time in search of fresh, cool air. The gentle zephyers from the bay waft the odor of the salt sea over the city, and one is greatly refreshed. A W. C. T. U. is doing a good work; we had splendid meetings, and numbers were added to the union.

I was invited to speak at the annual Alliance to be held in Melbourne, so my next stop was at the metropolis. This is a large city of about three hundred thousand, and altogether an American city in looks, architecture and in push. Most of the cities of Australia are very quiet, and people never hurry, take time for everything; but the rush is something alarming in Melbourne. Much of the hurry arises from the fact that all the homes are in the suburbs. I have never seen a city so wholly given to business houses; scarcely a dwelling in the city. So every one is in a hurry to catch the trains, and some hours it seems almost unsafe to be found in the pushing crowds. It reminds me very much of San Francisco in appearance as well as climate. The suburbs are simply lovely; such beautiful homes, spacious grounds, and pure air; I should like very much to live in some of them. Mrs. Love, of America, met me on my arrival, and I was the guest of her sister at Armadale. Mrs. Love has done a grand work. She belonged to our army in the states, and is so well informed as to methods; they have thirty unions in the colony, and she is a grand leader. The annual Alliance was held in the Town Hall, a place seating some thousands; the building was packed and crowded. A resolution was moved and seconded, and I was asked to speak in support of it, but before I was called upon, Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Love unfurled a W. C. T. U. banner. The design is the form of a serpent coiled about a mother and her children; one child is lying crushed in the folds of the serpent at the mother's feet; another clings to her for protection, while the infant is held with one hand and with the other the mother has grasped the green-eyed monster by the throat. In gilt letters is the motto, "W. C. T. U. of Victoria. 'For God and Home and Every Land.'" The banner is about ten feet long, and eight feet wide, made of white satin and finished with gold fringe. It is a work of art, and a credit to the artist. The audience fairly cheered when they caught sight of it, after which I was received in a most enthusiastic manner. The next morning we sat down to breakfast in the Town Hall. Eleven hundred guests were present, including many distinguished ones from abroad. Among them, Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson, of England, Mr. Blackmore, also from England, as well as workers from Canada and the United States.

From Melbourne, I started for New South Wales, stopping first at Bathurst where we held a short, but successful mission, then journeyed on to Sydney, stopping only over night on my way to Queensland. The scenery from Bathurst to Sydney is some of the finest in the country. A few miles from the city we cross the Hawksbury river. It is a good-sized body of water, navigable for some distance. At the point crossed by the railroad, the river branches out into a very wide arm, more like a lake than a river. It was a clear, beautiful night, and the moon shed a pale light over the scene, making a landscape of rare beauty.

The next day we crossed the Blue Mountains, named because of a bluish haze that seems never to leave them; they are not very high, but a most remarkable railroad runs over them called the "zigzag." It is regarded as a wonderful piece of engineering. I'm not authority on engineering, but I cannot see the advantage of this road over the "loop road" in California. About twelve hours brought us to Sydney, the oldest city in the colony. New South Wales is the oldest colony; it was the first penal colony, and when the settlement of the country began, there were fifty-six thousand convicts in the colony; of course all trace of convict life has vanished, but this early settlement has been a great drawback to the colony. It is far behind any other part of Australia, the people seem so slow to move.

My stay in Sydney was brief, I rested only over night and started on to Queensland. Two nights and one day's travel from the city brings us to Brisbane. The country is very uninteresting, travel very slow, and accommodations exceedingly poor, but in due time these discomforts were overcome, and very early in the morning I reached my destination safely, Mrs. Brentnall driving me to her beautiful suburban home where I refreshed myself ready for work. A meeting of welcome was held the first night, and short addresses of welcome offered by representatives of the different temperance societies as well as the ministers. The Good Templars' Congress of Queensland presented me with an "address of welcome" and fraternal greeting. It was printed in blue and gilt on white satin, and is exceedingly beautiful. Mrs. Brentnall is at the head of the work, and a perfect host she is. The colony through her efforts, is pretty well organized, and the good work moves on. They hold their colonial convention while I am here, and much interest is taken in it.

From here I visit northern points, hoping to go as far north as Thursday Island. I had expected to spend some months longer in Australia, but the way seems opened to go to China and Japan just now, so I am to take the first steamer for Hong Kong, returning here when the heat of those countries becomes so intense. On my return, all being well, I shall hope to organize in New South Wales and Western Australia, and thence on from the western coast. There seems to be such a cry from all parts of Australia for workers, one could spend her whole life here.

My time has been so taken up I have not written often to THE UNION SIGNAL, but I sincerely hope the mission is remembered by every sister at the noon-tide hour. There are many obstacles in the way; I sometimes grow faint-hearted, and I hope, my dear sisters, you who have your quiet homes to retire to, and loved ones to soothe you in your trials, will not forget those who battle in some places almost, yes, quite alone. I am deeply grateful for the showers of blessings that have descended upon us and the thousands of women who at our meetings have come up to help. A large number of unions have been organized and the smile of heaven has rested upon my feeble efforts. JESSIE A. ACKERMAN.

Brisbane, Sept. 30, '89.

A WORD FROM OUR CRUSADE MOTHER.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—A little girl was directed to open the door for General Washington, as he was leaving a house where he had been visiting. Turning to her, he said, "I am sorry, my little dear, to give you so much trouble." "I only wish, sir," she sweetly replied, "it was to let you in."

That artless, loving child expressed our feeling when the parting door was opened for our beloved sisters of national and state celebrity who for three days and nights had cheered our homes, comforted, strengthened and edified us as we lingered about the camp-fire, realizing together the old-time burning about the heart felt by the "disciples of Emmaus," as we recounted the past of the Crusade, the present outlook, and the future possibilities of this battle which "is not ours, but God's."

So widespread has been the light from this "Crusade camp-fire," and so varied and interesting the reports of it from other points, that a glance at the wonderful effects on the minds of the Hillsboro people must suffice for this item from the "Old Fort."

When the first note sounded from our National leader, and was reported to us by Ohio's president, that a "Camp-fire" was to be lighted in Hillsboro on the 23d of December, 1889, in commemoration of the Crusade of December 23, 1873, great astonishment took hold on the people, and the guessings were many as to what was meant by "such a rally." Then there were some who could not understand the "etiquette" of visiting our little city "uninvited," forgetting that Hillsboro is the "mecca" of the temperance women, and a journey thither is, according to their faith, an inspiration, and so it proved, as well as a "Pentecost" to our community.

The names of the gifted and inspired ones who so greatly helped us all will ever be "household words," and, like the melody of the Æolian harp, will linger while the winds of human conflict play about us.

Would that I could reproduce the utterances of this wonderful occasion, and the sentiments of each letter and telegram sent from scores of captains and privates in this grand army in loving faith, and blending regrets with benedictions, but as this is impossible, we may thank God that the recording angel has them in sacred keeping. E. J. THOMPSON.

THE NEXT STEP.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The question has frequently been asked by workers outside of Ohio, "Why have you never given a report of your legislative campaign in the interest of scientific temperance?"

If securing the law had completed effort necessary to establish this instruction in our schools, there would have been ample time to tell of a conflict that stands without a parallel in the history of this particular work throughout the country. In no other state has the W. C. T. U. ever encountered a competing bill, arraying itself, on party basis, against the one presented by us, a bill only partially covering the ground desired, and in the hands of a champion determined "to make or break." In no other state, as in Ohio, did party preference and political prejudice come to the front, ready to thwart years of earnest labor—willing that the welfare of one million children should be utterly ignored, if securing their best interests must come, even indirectly, through an organization whose convictions on other phases of the temperance question did not harmonize with the political complexion of our law-making body at that time. We rejoice to-day that an overruling Providence permitted the bill that truly represented the homes of the state to become law—not in answer to the judgment of political caucus, a party policy, but because the people demanded it. Upon this fact rests the stability of this legislation. The never-failing petitions, aggregating many thousand names, going in day after day throughout the entire session of the final winter's work, together with hundreds of letters that flooded the boxes of the legislators when critical periods arrived, were constant reminders that the people were expecting favorable response, while the messenger boys from the telegraph office gave frequent emphasis to this demand as occasion required.

There were times—planned with a purpose—when the reading of these petitions from the people required more than one hour of the two and one-half hours usually devoted to morning work by the assembly. These were periods when the average law-maker indulged in the entire catalogue of mental conditions that this demand naturally provoked: First, the joke; second, anger; third, seriousness.

We do not forget the men in that body who recognized the justice of our petition, and were true to the responsibility resting upon them as representatives of the people; and that most successfully did they bring their convictions and influence to bear in the crucial test. Suffice it to say, the smoke of the battle cleared away and the field was ours.

That conflict and its results meant more than securing a compulsory temperance education law. It proved—and upon Ohio soil where honest convictions are too frequently the sole cause for relentless persecution—that party ambition, political prejudice, treacherous maligning of motives and unprincipled intrigue must finally give way before the intense purpose of consecrated womanhood, which is truly embodied in the organization known to the world as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Under all the circumstances that existed, it is marvelous indeed that so good a law was secured, the points of which are as follows:

1. This temperance instruction is compulsory, not simply permissive.
2. It must be given in all grades of schools.
3. Teachers must be examined in this branch in order to secure a certificate after January, 1890.
4. It provides a satisfactory penalty.

Strenuous effort was made to require oral instruction only. After a long, bitter struggle this amendment was lost. A clause was finally added, however, making oral instruction compliance with the law; this, its advocates claimed, was necessary to prevent flooding the primary grades with text-books. Such an amendment was naturally regarded by many as a calamity, but by one who had witnessed time after time the overruling hand of Providence, as that conflict progressed during the last fifteen weeks, it could only be accepted as a Providence that would be better understood later on. The first few months after the law went into effect, proved this very amendment to be a saving clause. It warded off the text-book conflict that would naturally have resulted—and doubtless disastrously to the cause—had the law specified the use of books. The selection of methods is left with Boards of Education, etc. The time will surely come at no distant day, when a different plan will be advisable and possible; for the present, we believe in good faith, that establishing this instruction by any method practicable, is successful initial work. The amending clause disarmed text-book prejudice, and publishing houses having indorsed books have been quietly and steadily pushing their "wares" into the field, several series at hand giving educators the privilege of selection.

The attitude of Ohio teachers is not unfavorable to this instruction. Under the permissive clause referred to, the prevailing method in lower grades is of course oral; consequently, lack of experience on the part of the average teacher will, for a time, retard the work. We have noticed that even in states whose law requires a text-book in the hands of all pupils capable of using such, that these same difficulties must be met and overcome. When this instruction is an established part of the school curriculum, it will be an easy matter for boards to see that time can be economized on the part of both teacher and pupil if regular text-books are used, as in other branches. To appreciate the true value of this instruction, teachers must be informed on this question. If our law should partially fail during the first year or two, it will not be wholly, if at all, because this instruction has been given orally—rather because teachers have lacked the true spirit of this work.

We did not need experience to teach us that the enactment of such a law meant nothing more than securing "right of way" in the school-room, and that the next duty was to take possession of that right. Scarcely had the pen of the Secretary of State, upon the last day of the session, traced the signature that gave the Barrett-Ames Bill place upon the statute books when there came, with all-absorbing force, the conviction that as an organization we should reach out the friendly hand of aid to our teachers, making it as easy as possible for them to comply with the new demand. In extending this friendly hand to those whose lives are usually too full for research, the Ohio department has prepared the Temperance Education Bulletin, the aim of which is to give teachers and the people at large a comprehensive (though brief) idea of what is meant by the teachings of science on the temperance question. This Bulletin is a sixteen-page paper or pamphlet, like THE UNION SIGNAL in size, with the addition of a tinted paper cover. The matter is arranged in topics, in a manner best calculated to enlist the attention and interest of the reader. Thirty-seven carefully prepared experiments, with some illustrations, cannot fail to be of material benefit in the school-room, as well as entertaining and instructive at home. All available helps are mentioned, giving in each case the publisher and price, which will be of service to those desiring to pursue the subject more extensively. The text-book question receives ample attention, and desirable charts are mentioned. A series of brief question lessons furnishes a fair idea of the ground that may be covered in lower grades.

The Bulletin is intended only as an aid; but should it fall into the hands of any instructor not possessing the regular school-room helps, it will temporarily supply the need, teaching the use and value of text-books on this question in the school room.

The single issue of forty thousand copies is steadily going out into Ohio. Systematic effort, county by county, is being made to supply each educator with one copy free, though extra copies will be mailed at ten cents each.

Preparing this Bulletin, and meeting the large correspondence necessary to secure the coöperation of the unions in this state, have occupied the department for nearly nine months, and during much of this time a competent secretary has been in faithful service.

Teachers from all parts of the state are giving this help a cordial welcome indeed; while the hundreds of copies being distributed among the people are furnishing information that cannot fail to support effort at school with intelligent sentiment at home. After securing the law, this Bulletin, we have considered, is "The next step."

FRANCES W. LEITER, Ohio Supt. Ed. Dept.

Our Children.

THE KING AND THE SNAKE.

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

In an ancient city, whose walls are dust,
There reigned a king who was called the Just;
The light of his eyes was quenched in night,
But the eye of his mind was keen and bright.
A bell was hung by the monarch's grace,
In a tower that fronted the market-place,
So lightly poised that a young child's hand
Might set it swinging to wake the land.
Whoever was wronged this bell might ring,
And he should have justice of the King.

Many a day, in sun and shower,
The bell hung silent up in the tower;
For the blind King's rule was firm and strong,
And few in his kingdom suffered wrong.
So moss grew green on the belfry stair,
And the birds of the air resorted there,
And creeping creatures, great and small,
Dwelt in the clefts of the ivied wall.

But a wavering peal rang out one day
From the rusty bell in the belfry gray;
And the King commanded, "Go and see
Who now is wronged and hath need of me."
His servants laughed as they came from their quest:
"A toad has stolen a serpent's nest;
And it is the serpent, strange to tell,
Which, wreathed in the bell-rope, rings the bell.
Shall we kill her, then, that the din may cease,
And let your Majesty rest in peace?"
"Nay," said the King; "let the toad be slain,
And give the serpent her nest again."

That night, as the King in his palace slept,
Into his chamber a serpent crept.
Softly she glided over the floor,
And a marvelous stone in her mouth she bore;
No wisest jeweler on the earth
Could have told its name or guessed its worth.
It lighted the depths of the King's dark room
As the moon illumines the midnight's gloom.
Up to his pillow she wound her way,
Where deep asleep on his couch he lay;
She touched his eyes with the stone she bore,
And the King received his sight once more.
Then she slipped away, and he woke, alone,
In a room made bright by the luminous stone.

The gem was brought by the grateful King
To the fane of the gods for an offering.
It shone in the shades of the temple old
Like one great pearl in a sea-cave cold,
Like one white rock in a darksome pass,
Like one white flower in a black morass,
Like the one clear star of a cloudy morn,
When the night is dead and the day unborn.
And long they guarded the serpent-stone,
Till the last of the good King's race was gone;
Then, they say, it vanished away,
And no man vieweth its like to-day.

—Harper's Young People.

A SCRUBBING SONG.

She sang a sweet song as she scrubb'd the floor,
The dear little maid with the dimpled face;
And eyes of the tenderest blue, and hair
That curled o'er her head with a childish grace.
The day it was rainy, and dull, and dark,
Sweet Annie ne'er heeded, but sang away,
With the careless rapture of Shelley's lark,
That ravished the poet's soul with his lay!

For her thoughts were far from the dripping rain,
Away in a region of wild romance;
And still as she scrubb'd with her hands, her brain
Was teeming with visions of tilt and dance!
A reader was Annie—of Dickens, Scott,
Of Tennyson, Lytton and forty more;
And many's the page that by heart she got,
To sing to herself as she scrubb'd the floor!

Oh poets! romancers! your words illume
Our "set gray lives" with a radiance fair!
How oft and how sweetly you chase our gloom
With the magic spell of your visions rare!
For ever our souls through your fadeless bow'rs
May rove, though our fingers with toil be sore;
Your fancy can brighten our path with flowers,
And teach us to sing while we scrub the floor!

—The Reformer.

DORA'S GIFT.

BY ELIZABETH P. ALLAN.

"You don't mean me to believe, Emily, that all these tall girls are yours? One, two, three, four—my! what a lot."

"We pass for Mrs. Brown's 'boys and girls,' Uncle Phil. You see, we have to attend to her business, and escort her around, and do what there are no boys here to do."

"And what sort of business can you attend to, I'd like to know?" asked Uncle Phil, with all a man's scorn of a woman's business head.

"Em is my man of business," said the gentle, lady-like mother. "No, not the tallest; that is Julia. She is our member of society; she entertains our company, and is to the family what a drawing-room is to a house."

"She is our decorative art society, too," added Emily. "She paints and embroiders, and sings in the choir."

"They are just slandering me, Uncle Phil!" cried Julia. "Look at my forefinger, and you will see who is the seamstress of the family."

"What is the matter with Daisy's fingers?" asked the new relation, who, by the way, had been abroad while these girls were growing up, and had now come back to make a home for himself.

"Oh! I'm the housekeeper, and I've just been preserving strawberries; that's where my finger tips get their rosy color. You'd better speak me fair, uncle, if you want your bread buttered on both sides while you are here."

Uncle Phil leaned back in his chair and surveyed the party with admiring eyes. Without being particularly handsome, they were delightful looking girls. Erect, vigorous, graceful, blooming, and full of fun, they gave proof of being a well-raised, healthy, charming quartette of daughters.

"Well, sister Emily," he said presently, "lump them now, and say what you will take for them. I'll give a fair price for the lot."

"Koh-i-noors as thick as hail-stones couldn't buy one of them," said the proud mother.

"Foolish woman!" he cried in pretended amazement. "Don't you know some trifling fellows will come along, presently, and steal one after the other away from you?"

"We haven't come to that bridge yet," answered his sister, lightly dismissing the subject.

And then the girls seized the gentleman and carried him off to see their flower-garden and chickens and pigeons.

"But you haven't told me what this small woman is good for," said Uncle Phil, pinching the pink tip of Dora's ear.

"Good for nothing," answered the small woman herself, rescuing the persecuted ear.

"Dora? What is Dora's forte? Why, I don't know; but we couldn't do anything without Dora!"

And the girls looked at their uncle as if they feared he might be weak-minded, to ask such a question.

"There!" said merry Dora, "I told you I didn't have any gifts. I can't sing, nor paint, nor embroider, nor even entertain company."

"But she can be always the dearest dear of a Dora that ever was," said the sister on the other side of Dora, giving her a troublesome squeeze as they walked along. And Dora seemed highly satisfied with this explanation.

But of course the weather in this family was not all summer weather; Uncle Phil found, after he had been living with them awhile, that they had their ups and downs like other people; they disagreed with one another, and felt cross about it; they tried to do things and failed sometimes; jellies wouldn't always jell; dresses wouldn't always fit—in short, "the briars besetting every path" pricked the feet of these sweet lassies in their turn, as they do the feet of all earth travelers.

And then Uncle Phil found out what was Dora's gift. It had been dawning on him for some time, but one rainy day he startled the family by saying: "Sister Emily, Dora is the most gifted child you've got."

It was, as I said, a rainy day. "Of course it had to rain," Julia had said grimly, as they gathered into the breakfast-room. "As I wanted to go to ride on horseback with uncle, I might have known it would rain."

"It is well you have got a beau that will wait till a clear day," said Dora, who was busy pulling up the blinds to the top pane, that they might get all the light there was to be had.

"Ah, what a nice little blaze!" said Uncle Phil, limping round to the grate; "which of you knew that I had rheumatism this morning?"

"Dora always keeps a little pile of wood and shavings hid away for mornings like this," Julia said, leaving the window, and coming to warm her cold nose by the cheerful glow.

The mother entered with a cloud on her usually placid brow.

"Bridget is sick, girls; not able to get out of bed."

"How lucky that it rains!" cried Dora, "no visitors, no going out; we can be busy bees to-day without molestation. Sit down, and keep Uncle Phil from getting cross, mother, while we go and scratch up a little breakfast."

In a very short time a comfortable breakfast was on the table, everybody chatting pleasantly, and not a frown to be seen It was at this moment that Uncle Phil announced his discovery that Dora was the most gifted child in the family.

"Proof positive; I have made a bit of toast without scorching the edges," said Dora, with a mocking little bow.

"No," said Uncle Phil, gravely, in answer to the questioning eyes fixed upon him all around the table, "but Dora has that rare treasure, the gift of pleasantness, of being pleasant herself, and making other people feel so, no matter what is going on. I am sure that was the kind of woman the Apostle Peter was thinking of when he said it didn't matter about plaiting the hair, and putting on gold ornaments, if a woman had that sweet, bright, quiet, unselfish spirit that the Lord thought so much of."

And then all the eyes fixed upon the speaker, filled up suddenly with loving tears, and everybody seemed trying to kiss blushing Dora first.

"Yes," said the mother softly; "pleasantness—that is just my Dora's gift!"—Sunday-School Times.

ROLL CALL IN HEAVEN.

A soldier mortally wounded, was lying in a hospital dying. All was still. He had not spoken for some time. Suddenly the silence was broken and the attending surgeon was startled by the voice of the dying man uttering clear and strong the single word: "Here." "What do you want?" asked the surgeon hastening to his cot. A moment elapsed. There was a seeming struggle after recollection. The lips of the dying soldier murmured, "It was the roll call in Heaven, and I was answering to my name." These were his last words. At roll call in Heaven will you and I be ready to answer to our names?

—Ex.

The Still Hour.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JANUARY 19, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 1: 56-80; John 17-21; Joshua 1.)

Sunday, 19; Luke 1: 56-80. Verse 56, The abode of these two blessed women has long since been lost to human knowledge; but the work of their children still goes on, brightening and purifying the world. Verse 67, The blessing to children and to the world of pious parents cannot be overestimated. Verse 68, This song is national in its character, and it points out the close relation of the knowledge and facts of salvation and the remission of sins to the nation's well-being. Verse 80, Youth that knows nothing of development by retirement, gives no promise of great public usefulness to society.

Monday, 20; Jno. 17. Verse 1, Not our Father, which Christ could not say in common with His disciples; nor my Father, which would make too great a separation between Him and His people for such a prayer; but simply "Father." Verse 3, Many think that they know God, when they have not true knowledge. A true knowledge of God and of Christ will make an impression on the mind and life; so that those who know, become in spirit and life God's children. Verse 21, He commands (chapter 13: 34), and now prays that His disciples may be one. Our Lord prays for four things: "Holy Father, keep," verse 11. "Sanctify them," verse 17. "All may be one," verse 21. "Be with me where I am," verse 24.

Tuesday, 21; Jno. 18. Verse 1, Every Christian should have some place where he can go and be alone, and offer his devotions to God. Verse 4, The composure of Jesus at this trying time is remarkable, and is an example for His people when passing through trials and afflictions. Verse 37, Jesus, the friend of souls, bears witness to that for which our souls are seeking. Verse 38, The character and work of Jesus was such that the infidel world has accomplished nothing by its attempts to find fault with Him. All through life it should be our aim to live a Christlike life. "There is but one perfect example for man, in Him who so often called Himself the Son of man."

Wednesday, 22; Jno. 19. Verses 1-3, He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed. Isa. 53:5. Verse 5, With what meekness does our Lord bear the indignities and affronts which the world thinks it right never to pardon. "Behold the man"; the world never saw another such perfect and glorious person. Verse 30, Sweet gospel for the whole world. I am a sinner, but the work of my atonement is now accomplished; and I believe in Him who justifies the ungodly. Memorize verse 35.

Thursday, 23; Jno. 20. Verse 1, There is a power superior to death; and now we may shout with joy: "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Verse 10, Even after his denial of Christ, John did not give up his dear friend, Peter, Verse 14, John and Peter could not see Him, although our Lord was there when they came to the tomb; the faith of a woman was rewarded by first seeing the risen Saviour.

Friday, 24; Jno. 21. Verse 3, Three years before, Peter and his companions had labored a whole night, in this same place, and taken nothing. Luke 5: 5. On both occasions their success was given after a night of disappointment. Verse 7, Notice John's modest way of referring to himself. The noblest spirits are the meekest. Verse 16, By this one test of love to our Lord, the human race is and will be divided. Verse 22, To Christ belongs the disposal of our lives. While they are continued to us, let us follow on in the truth and spirit of this blessed Gospel.

Saturday, 25; Josh. 1. Verse 1, Blessed is the man whose life is such that when he dies it can be truly said of him, "He was the servant of the Lord." The book of Joshua is a history of faith, conflicts and victory. It is full of lessons which show how God is able to redeem His people. Verse 2, When one of the Lord's servants ends his work, God always raises up some other one to take his place. Verse 3, Only what we make use of in this world do we practically possess. Verse 7, Every servant of God ought to be strong and courageous. Verse 8, Beware of opinions, philosophies, and delusions, and hold on to the Bible. Verse 17, All should live a life of obedience. Our Lord teaches that it amounts to nothing if we call Him Lord, Lord, and yet do not the things which He says. Matt. 7:21.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

Sit Still. Isaiah 30:7. (Bible Reading Leaflet, September, 1888.) The greatest of God's works are done, and go on, in silence. The vital functions of our bodies are silently performed. Our activity and bustle hinder our seeing the power that there is in stillness.

1. In the sphere of the spirit there is an activity in stillness; and, different from the sphere of matter, results are not accomplished by fleshly activity and struggle. There is a different way of looking at, understanding, and doing things on the plane of the spirit. I. Cor. 2: 14; Rom. 8: 5-8; II. Cor. 10: 13, 14.

2. This stillness in the sphere of the spirit greatly helps us in outward activity; because thereby we obtain a strength which enables us to keep back that fretting and fussing which always hinder successful work. Isai. 30: 15-17, 32: 17-19; 41: 1; I. Thess. 4: 10.

3. In order really to know God, this inward stillness is absolutely necessary. Our times of real communion with God are when we have quietness of spirit. Hab. 2: 20; I. Pet. 3. 3, 4; Psalm 46: 10, 11.

4. The suggestions of duty that come to us in the times of perfect quietness before God, can usually be relied upon as correct; and we should not, without good reasons, mark out for ourselves a different line of conduct from that which at these times we are impressed with as right. Ps. 119: 97-99.

The Household.

TRANSFORMED BY BEHOLDING.

The great sea lay and looked on high,
When, floating aloft in the lovely sky,
It saw a fleecy cloud, so light,
So pure, so spotless, and so bright;
And it wondered whence so fleet a form
Arose, the heavens to adorn.

"They say," it whispered, "that came from earth,
And more, that I had given it birth.
But how absurd to think that I
Could ever mount that lofty sky!"
And then the sea heaved such a sigh
As it watched the beauteous thing on high.

"Ah, I could never be like thee;
In the bosom of God thou seem'st to be.
Besides—" and the sea was silent now,
As it thought of its wild and fevered brow;
And how oft in its rage it had dealt a blow
That laid thousands dead in its depths below.

And yet I perceived the sea could not rest
As it looked at that beauteous thing so blest;
Then it roused itself, and said, "I will try,"
And it borrowed the wind to drive it high;
And, gathering its strength, it curled in its pride,
And dashed itself on the rocks beside;
Then, rearing a column of quivering spray,
It seemed to be borne to the heights away.

But it fell, alas! on the angry breast,
Back with its foaming, whitened crest.
Baffled and beaten it buried its head,
To hide in the depths of its ocean bed.
And it hissed as it did so, "It cannot be;
I said I knew it was not for me."

At length the great sea lay quiet and still,
For fell despair had subdued its will;
When the glorious sun looked forth on the scene,
And gleamed on its bosom in silver sheen.
And the great sea looked in the face of the sun,
And asked if he knew what could be done;
"The moon draws me hither and thither," it said,
"But it cannot uplift me from my bed;
Nor can it transform this turbid breast
Into that thing so pure and blest."

"Canst thou transform me?" said the sea.
"Oh, yes," said the sun, "if you'll suffer me."
And the sun sent down a noiseless ray,
That loosened and warmed it as it lay,
And lifted it up; how, it never knew,
A fleecy cloud in the heavens blue.

* * * * * * *

Do you ken the parable, reader fair?
Can you take the lesson that's couching there?
Are you that sea with its fond desire,
Sighing and struggling to rise up higher?
Does perfect grace attract thine eye,
And to attain it dost thou try?
But do baffled efforts mock thy skill,
While sorrow and anguish thy spirit fill?
And thou say'st, "In God's bosom that grace must rest;
It never can visit my troubled breast."

Now change thy plan, and behold yon sun.
Just rest and trust, and the work is done.
Transformed by beholding Him thou'lt be,
His great salvation thou shalt see.
The process? Well, that thou canst not know;
Enough for thee, it is "even so,"
That He lifts thee up, and makes thee fit
In the heavenly places with Him to sit.

TOBACCO POISON.

BY HESTER M. POOLE.

Within the last month three separate cases of poisoning from the use of the "American weed" have come to my knowledge. One was that of a student who smoked twenty-four cigarettes in the space of twelve hours, and ended by lying in convulsions which alternated with periods of stupor during several days. A second case was that of a lad made seriously ill through cigarette smoking, and the last, that of a strong, muscular man from Virginia, who was brought to New York in a demented condition, and finally had to be taken to an insane asylum in a straight jacket.

This last person, a man of substance with a family, a man who should have known better, and probably did, had been in the habit of chewing from two to three pounds of tobacco per day, until Nature, as she always does, brought in the train of habits, their inevitable consequences. Yet who of all who witness or hear of such sad histories, takes warning in time to avoid similar penalties?

Within the week, I have met an artist belonging to one of the distinguished old families of the East whom I had known, years ago, as an immoderate smoker. He was pale, aged, attenuated, and, he said, had been very ill for a long time, but was now in a fair way to perfect recovery. In reply to my questions, he admitted that much of his ill health was the result of the tobacco habit.

"I have used the weed for many years," said he, "and laughed to scorn any suggestions that it might be an injury to me. Finally, there came a sore on my lip which developed into an ugly cancer. It came just below the teeth between which I always held my cigar, and I was not so stupid as to deny the connection between the tobacco and the disease. The cancer was cut out two years ago, and I began at once to change my habits. I dropped the use of beer and narcotics, lived simply, and there has been no reappearance of the dreaded difficulty. I must try it for myself, you know; I could not take the experience of others as my guide. Well, I suppose human nature is the same everywhere, and that my advice will be of no use to the young fellows whom I would gladly save from following in my footsteps."

Years ago, when Dr. Nott was president of Union College, his edicts against the use of tobacco grew annually more severe. Finally they culminated in threats of the expulsion of any student who should use it. One evening the old doctor while walking through the dormitory at a late hour, thought he detected that peculiar fragrance which is like nothing else on earth. Guided by sensitive nostrils, he made his way to a room, where, upon opening the door, he found four students puffing away as if their lives depended upon an immense consumption of the weed.

The next morning the four students were closeted in the doctor's private sanctum. The boys were sober enough, and expected to be sent home without delay.

Turning sharply upon them when the door was closed, the doctor asked,

"Why do you smoke, young gentlemen?"

Thus objured, they found it necessary to gather themselves together quickly, for the president brooked no delay. The first to reply, a delicate, long-limbed youth answered eagerly,

"I smoke because I am very much troubled with dyspepsia."

"Ah! indeed! So smoking cures dyspepsia, does it?"

"Yes, sir. I have not been troubled with it at all since I began to use tobacco."

The second and third students, both built after the same pattern as the first, also smoked in order to cure dyspepsia. The fourth, a hearty, healthy robust fellow, who had never known an ache, found it impossible to plead dyspepsia as an excuse for the forbidden habit.

The president gave him no time in which to concoct an answer. "Well, my friend, what have you to say in regard to disobedience?"

"I—I,—what makes me smoke? The fact is I am very much troubled with corns, and I smoke on that account!"

History fails to relate the president's reply. But ever since that date, as well as before, its friends claim that tobacco has cured sleeplessness, consumption, toothache, neuralgia, headache, and many ailments of the throat. Those who have fallen victims to its fascinations, on the contrary, may be numbered by the tens of thousands.

The deadly power of the plant is such that an eminent physician who successfully battled with the tobacco habit and conquered, states this to be a fact:

Give to a boy ten years of age a piece of the plug no larger than a pea and ask him to keep on chewing without swallowing one drop of the juice. Let him continue, and he will soon fall to the floor bathed in a cold, deathly perspiration and deadly sick. Vomiting will result, the pulse will be almost gone, and for two hours or more it will seem as if the boy is on the verge of the grave.

"There are very few poisons to be found in any drug store," continued the doctor, "which taken into the mouth of that ten years' old boy and not swallowed, will produce effects equally noxious. Tobacco, then, as an extremely powerful poison, must produce disaster to the nervous systems of those who use it."

In the December number of the Revere de Hygiene published in Paris, M. Bousrier, inspector of meat of that city, cites his experiments with meat impregnated with tobacco smoke. Thin slices of beef were exposed for a considerable time to the fumes of tobacco and then fed to a dog which had eaten nothing for twelve hours. The dog, though seemingly famished, refused to eat the meat.

It was then cut in bits and concealed in bread, which the dog ate ravenously. In twenty minutes thereafter the animal showed symptoms of distress, and soon expired in great agony. All sorts of meat, both raw, roasted and broiled, were then exposed to the smoke and afterward given to animals. In every case symptoms of acute poisoning supervened, sometimes ending in death. Whenever raw meat was smoked, the process of boiling afterward failed to extract the nicotine.

M. Bousrier also found that all kinds of oil and grease rapidly absorbed the odor and properties of tobacco, the facility of absorption being in proportion to their fineness and fluidity. The juices of meat exposed to its fumes are also poisonous. For instance, the juice of veal perfectly saturated with tobacco smoke was injected into a rabbit and death resulted in a few moments.

Fruits also absorb the deadly poison. A dish of raspberries or strawberries, after receiving a few whiffs of strong tobacco, has parted with its delicate flavor and become unpalatable; sometimes, if very juicy, even noxious.

In my own experience, I have found that the penetrative power of the pungent oils of tobacco is remarkably great. Last spring a friend, living within the sugar-maple belt of New England, sent me, by express, a cigar box filled with small cakes of the toothsome product of those hardy trees. It was only two days on the road and had been packed by my friend the day before sending. Yet, though wrapped in paper, the sugar was absolutely uneatable. Further than that, the rich saccharine flavor was entirely gone.

Happening to mention the fact, the day after the box arrived, to a confirmed tobacco eater, I was greeted with derisive laughter and a denial that such an effect was possible. Accordingly, I placed in his hand the parcel, which had been taken from its receptacle, and, hardened as he was, his stomach refused to contain that maple sugar. Its pores had been filled with nicotine.

There is no doubt that certain temperaments and developments crave tobacco—when once they have learned its use. On its fumes the soul floats into the region of fantasy far above the rude clangor of this common work-a-day world.

Yet, precisely the state of mind so induced is unwholesome, enervating, paralyzing. While poesy exists, and music and art and social exhilaration, free from debasement, there is little excuse for this descent into the lower nature. Where the temperament is keyed too low, a steady effort will induce the habit of cheerfulness.

In attaining this, the will is the power to be used; the will which is able to act like a kind of divine potentiality when coöperated with by the sense of rectitude and faith.

THE HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

The late H. W. Grady in his recent speech in Boston, painted this beautiful word picture:

"I went to Washington the other day and I stood on the Capitol Hill; my heart beat quick as I looked at the towering marble of my country's Capitol, and the mist gathered in my eyes as I thought of its tremendous significance and the armies, and the treasury and the judges, and the President, and the Congress and the courts, and all that was gathered there. And I felt that the sun in all its course could not look down on a better sight than that majestic home of a republic that had taught the world its best lessons of liberty. And I felt that if honor and wisdom and justice abided therein, the world would at last owe that great house in which the ark of the covenant of my country is lodged, its final uplifting and its regeneration.

"Two days afterward I went to visit a friend in the country, a modest man, with a quiet country home. It was just a simple, unpretentious house, set about with great big trees, encircled in meadow and field rich with the promise of harvest. The fragrance of the pink and the hollyhock in the front yard was mingled with the aroma of the orchard and of the gardens, and resonant with the cluck of poultry and the hum of bees. Inside was quiet, cleanliness, thrift and comfort. There was the old clock that had welcomed in steady measure every new-comer to the family, that had ticked the solemn requium of the dead, and had kept company with the watcher at the bedside. There were the big, restful beds and the old open fireplace, and the old family Bible, thumbed with the fingers of hands long since still, and wet with the tears of eyes long since closed, holding the simple annals of the family and the heart and the conscience of the home. Outside, there stood my friend, the master, a simple, upright man, with no mortgage on his roof, no lien on his growing crops, master of his land and master of himself. There was his old father, an aged, trembling man, but happy in the heart and home of his son. And as they started to their home the hands of the old man went down on the young man's shoulder, laying there the unspeakable blessing of the honored and grateful father and ennobling it with the knighthood of the fifth commandment. And as they got to the door, the old mother came, with the sunset falling fair on her face and lighting up her deep, patient eyes, while her lips, trembling with the rich music of her heart, she bade her husband and son welcome to their home. Beyond was the housewife, busy with her household cares, clean of heart and conscience, the buckler and helpmeet of her husband. Down the lane came the children, trooping home after the cows, seeking, as truant birds do, the quiet of their home nest. And I saw the night come down on that house, falling gently as from the wings of the unseen dove. And the old man, while a startled bird called from the forest and the trees shrill with the cricket's cry, and the stars were swarming in the sky, got the family around him, and, taking the old Bible from the table called them to their knees, the little baby hiding in the folds of its mother's dress, while he closed the record of that simple day by calling down God's benediction on that family and that home. And while I gazed, the vision of that marble Capitol faded. Forgotten were its treasures and its majesty, and I said, "Oh, surely here in the homes of the people is lodged at last the strength and the responsibility of this government, the hope and the promise of this republic."

SUGGESTIONS FOR JAIL WORK.

BY A WORKER.

In the first place, in visiting the jail I never ask questions of the men in regard to their being there. I only go to do spiritual good. Then I make a great point of the singing; we use Gospel Hymns No. 4. I almost always let the men make their own selections, and as they have a number of singing books in the jail, they practice during the week and are well prepared on Sabbath. In reading the Scripture lesson I choose a chapter that is easily understood, that has direct reference to sinners or to the goodness and mercy of God, as the Prodigal Son, the Lost Sheep, etc. I open the chapter by reading the first verse and have the prisoners read the alternate verses, which they do very gladly. I leave five or six Bibles or Testaments and as many singing books in the jail all the time.

In your prayers, dear sister workers, pray for each man separately as much as you can; let each feel you have as much interest in him as in his companion. Make your talk and your prayers go home as much as possible. I have seen tears in the eyes of the most hardened men when we spoke of their mothers, and their innocent childhood days. I always present the pledge when there are new inmates, and many have signed it. I use the pledge cards, so they can retain them; lastly, I take all the temperance and religious literature I can; they will read it, and who knows what seed may fall on good ground?

SUCCESS.

As we go straining up Fame's arid height—
That loneliest peak in all the mountain chains
Of grim Success—kind hearts weep o'er our pains
And helpful hands point up beyond the night.
The world hath sorrow for our piteous plight;
But as we near the top its interest wanes,
And when the mountain belches forth and rains
Its riches on us, pity turns to spite.

The voice that cheered us on, now howls us down;
And hands deal blows that erst dealt generous dole.
God pity him who hath attained his goal
And give him strength, for Failure's cross weighs less
And presses lighter than Achievement's crown.
I think th' unpardon'ble sin must be Success.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Pittsburg Bulletin.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager,
161 La Salle St. - - - - - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President.—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 S. Ashland Av., Chicago, Ill.
Treasurer.—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary.—MISS MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
MRS. CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MRS. S. F. CHAPIN, Charleston, S. C.
MRS. J. R. NICHOLS, Indianapolis, Ind.
MISS E. S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Be strong and of a good courage, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—Josh. 1: 9.

THE LADDER OF STIMULANTS.

We shall here knowingly take ground many mile-stones ahead of the heedless in this age; that is the province of reform; upon those who stand highest rests the duty of trying to lift the lowest up to their side. Also, we must here cross the path of the vast and respectable multitude whose palates from infancy have been educated to stimulation three times a day. We fear we may run counter to even many of our ablest and sincerest co-adjutors in reform. They and we have long had our hands so full of antidotes for that climax in stimulation—the liquor traffic—as to take no thought of the pleasant rungs in the ladder up which appetite, in the finest temperaments, is often insiduously coaxed toward that climax. But we speak on new lines simply as a pioneer, not as an autocrat, believing that what we here set down will be suggestive in thought and educative in practice.

Our thought is this: Not only tobacco, but many articles of diet upon the tables of both rich and poor, cultured and ignorant, are mild beginnings in stimulation which tempt the palate, when tired of the milder excitation, to tamper with the ranker. Our theory is builded primarily upon the fact that the people who distinctively give this nation its impetus toward the timber-line of civilization, are of the most active brain and nerve construction, hence the most easily tumbled into disorder; easily excited, hence most easily over-excited; stimulated by the natural atmosphere and the artificial competition of this semi-sleepless western world to do all they can stand, hence unable to stand foods and drinks that stimulate. They do not get the sleep enjoyed in Europe, yet need more than Europeans. The country folk are flocking to the cities, to take their turn in rapid living, city-building, and dying under the excitements thus generated; hence food and drink sedative rather than stimulative are the best preservers of American health and morals.

City living, even to the basement class, is chiefly sedentary, or indoor, much of it both, from the double-windowed, steam-heated parlors, to the stifling factories and the squalid cellars. But neither the human orange-blossom in the winter conservatory, nor the human potato-vine, grown pale and spindling in the damp hovel, can long survive the frost and storm that human oaks survive in spite of. In the pioneer days, when "our fathers" dwelt sixteen hours in the field and forest, and slept in the log-cabin, ventilated by cranny and back-log fire-place, and our mothers, too, were thoroughly outdoor plants, they partook of even Paul's prescription in tent-dwelling times, yet ripened into old age. And they who still fell the forests of the North, take to themselves quantities of strong coffee, pork and beef, corn-cakes and molasses that would quickly ruin the indoor constitution. And many of them seem brutalized by their diet of stimulant foods; for, on their spring exit from the pineries, many move at once upon the saloon for the climax in stimulants, then to the house that is its neighbor in shame. And if the brain that gets the effect of but a fraction of the rank food consumed for muscle, can not keep sober and pure under it, what must foods of such quality, though in lighter quantity, be to the brain whose mu cle does nothing but grind the food for the brain!

The plain and unavoidable result is unnatural stimulation into unnatural cranial activity, till the dietary stimulants fail to wake up the jaded brain, and resort is had to alcohol to complete the evil commonly begun in ignorance; or the whipped organ, after a season of sluggish moping, gives up—lies down in apoplexy, paralysis, or some other form of over-strain at the top. Few men make whisky their first inebriate beverage; none become drunkards at the first wrong step. Beer is the great forerunner of whisky; cider, in all stages, and lemonade with a "stick" in it, are for the cheap multitude, and lead the way to the lager habit, while the wines allure the wealthy toward the stronger drinks. And is there nothing that draws both classes unconsciously toward wine and cider? Well, while it is not true that all consumers of much flesh, strong tea and coffee, sweet cakes, candies, mince pies, pickles, spices, mustard, olive oil, wine sauces and brandied pastry are wine-bibbers, it is true that most wine-bibbers have first been liberal partakers of these stimulating foods and relishes, pricking an appetite to relish the keener stimulant. And even the poor who "hanker" after their beer, if not born to it, or nursed upon it, have cultivated the desire largely with tobacco, and all the crumbs of stimulation from the rich man's table they could get; the average poor man of this country is even very much of a meat-eater.

Barring the moderate use of meat, or the essence of meat, medical science does not prescribe any of this list for the convalescent invalid; he needs nourishment, not nervous agitation. Yet the great brain-working class and that other great class—the sedentary insipids who do nothing but dawdle—are for the most part physical invalids, and not convalescent, either. And the continued use of the stomach as a spice-box, a pickle-dish, and the receiver of cold meats, minced in brandy, the accomplished doctor who is independent of your patronage, will tell you is temptation to worse filling—is to invite tippling, is to coax appetite up the ladder. Not all go that way; nor do all butchers become man-slayers, though they may be challenged as jurors in capital cases.

Far be it from our purpose to intimate that many good people do not stimulate the appetite for food with table luxuries that are not foods. Our purpose is simply to awaken thought along this line, that the thoughtful in other things may not be careless in this, but inquire whether there is not reason for greater temperance at the table. Let the intelligent mother who would not give her child tea or pepper, think whether the teapot and pepper-box are good for her, or whether the philosophy of their use is all in the fact that the adult can "stand" abuse better than the infant. If the noblest of our domestic animals are vegetarians, is not it possible that man even would be milder in temper if he ate less meat? Are the tables of even the middle class wholly innocent of encouragement toward the liquor habit? How far are we our neighbor's keeper?

THE SCHOOL BALLOT FOR WOMEN

Why should women vote on school matters? Because the school is but the outer circle of the home, and next to the home, exerts the greatest influence upon children. From every school-room go out streams of blessing or of cursing to every home represented there; the mother-hand is needed at these springs of power. Women look more carefully after the minutia of school life, those little things that are so great in the formation of character, than do men, probably because they have more leisure, and keener eyes.

A school janitor in New York complained bitterly of "those women on the school board," because at their first visit they opened up to the light a festering mass of filth in the basement. "I've always thrown rubbish in there," he said, "and no committeeman in the fourteen years I have been here, ever complained of it," doubtless because no committeeman took the time and trouble to penetrate that abode of darkness. No one can listen to the late accounts of the fearfully unsanitary conditions which these women found surrounding many New York school-rooms, without feeling that women are needed on school boards, and as the "power behind the throne" to purify the school-rooms in which their children spend one-third their waking hours. And physical filth is not the only or the worst evil they are needed to combat.

Women "take naturally" to the care of children, and perceive more readily than the average man what is needed in the school. They have less to distract their attention, especially when the school ballot is the extent of their suffrage, and are more apt to have an eye single to the good of the school in casting their ballots. Nine years' experience as county superintendent of schools, to whom came all the school election controversies for settlement, convinced us that in very many cases party politics, whisky, or business considerations had a greater influence in controlling votes cast for school officers than did considerations based upon the best interests of the schools.

Again, the aggregate woman is better fitted to vote intelligently upon school questions than is the aggregate man, because she has enjoyed more school privileges than he. Records show that, while in the lower grades boys and girls are about equal in number, in the higher grades girls largely outnumber the boys. It is claimed that this is due to the difference in money value of the labor of men and women, boys leaving school earlier than girls to engage in productive occupations. We believe that the saloon and its accompanying temptations has as much to do with this "early-closing" of school-life for dozens as has the labor question; whatever the cause, the fact remains that girls continue longer in school than boys do. Hence, if the public schools are accomplishing their mission, which is preparing for intelligent citizenship, and we have no reason to doubt they are, the mass of women are better prepared for citizenship and its highest duty, voting, than are the mass of men, because they have enjoyed this training for citizenship longer. Especially are they better fitted to vote intelligently upon school affairs, because they are more conversant with the workings of the school.

The fact that three-fourths, and in large cities nine-tenths, of the teachers are women, is a strong argument in favor of women school directors and voters. Indeed, it is a strong argument in favor of the full ballot for these women teachers, as the history of Rome under subject Grecian schoolmasters proves that disfranchised teachers are not the best trainers of future citizens.

While the arguments here adduced for restricted suffrage are equally cogent for the full ballot, we have concentrated thought upon school suffrage for two reasons: many states have already secured this franchise; we would have them feel the importance of living up to their privileges; and secondly, we would send a note of cheer to those states now striving for it. The two are intimately connected, and both have an important bearing upon the question of the full ballot for woman. If in the states where she does enjoy this privilege she does not exercise her right, she furnishes her enemies with a strong weapon against its continuance. Let every woman in states having either municipal or school suffrage feel her obligation to women not thus favored—feel the sacredness of the white plumed knights' motto "Noblesse oblige" "my rank compels me." The privilege she possesses carries with it a duty to all her disfranchised sisters to so use the ballot that it may become a ladder by which they may ascend to her level of privilege.

Like Christianity itself, the American public school has proved an especial blessing to women; they remain in it longer than do men, and there learn lessons of independence, of social science which business life may teach their brothers, but which the majority of women would learn nowhere else. Their debt to the public school being thus greater than that of men, their responsibility concerning it is proportionately increased. Let them discharge this duty by voting wherever they have the franchise, for the best interests of the schools, as in the sight of God, and wherever they have the scientific temperance instruction law, working vigorously for its enforcement.

A TIMELY RECOMMENDATION.

In Miss Willard's last annual address she recommended "a course of reading and study that shall be to the W. C. T. U. what the C. L. S. C. is to the Sunday-school." This is a most timely suggestion. Our fifteen years' march has carried us far beyond the sentimental stage of temperance work, where pathetic or ludicrous stories formed the staple of temperance addresses. It has brought us and the whole nation face to face with the fact that the problem before us is a complex one, whose factors ramify through every department of national life. Our first recognition of the evil we have to fight was in the home, and its preservation was the first instinct of the Crusade. But as those women pleaded and prayed in the saloon, they saw upon its walls the government's license, and there learned the nation's partnership in the liquor traffic. Soon women dropped out of the Crusade ranks because liquor men threatened their husbands with a withdrawal of business, and thus we came to know how tight was the grip of the saloon on the throat of business. We rapidly learned its power in legislative assemblies, in politics, in literary circles, even over the pulpit.

Then we knew that we must be prepared to meet it everywhere, not with prayers alone, though they are never omitted, but with "thus saith Reason; thus saith Science, thus saith God." Now commenced the greatest educational campaign in history, not alone for the education of twelve million children in temperance text books, but the education of their mothers. Women commenced to study this awful problem of intemperance—study as for their lives—its influence upon the home, the school, the church, the industries of the nation, its politics, all the manifold departments of social science. Never was there such an intellectual, as well as moral, awakening among the women of America as that started by the Crusade; never has the world seen more eager pupils and those that progressed faster than they.

If such progress has been made without regular, systematic plans of study, what may not be accomplished with them? This is the question which has engaged the best thought of our department of School of Methods the past year. One result of this thought was the announcement made at last summer's schools of a course of reading and study on economic and scientific temperance. Two lists of books were prepared, one consisting of those which must be studied before the diploma can be awarded; the other of books recommended for further reading. The design is to have arrangements for teaching, suggestions to be sent out to all those pursuing the course, examinations and diplomas given in connection with the various Schools of Methods.

Care has been taken to unite this with the Chautauqua course so far as could be done by adopting the same books when found suitable; this was done in making Hatfield's Physiology and Ely's Political Economy a part of our course. The rest of the readings are as follows:

Economic course. Required reading: Political Economy, Professor Ely; National Government and the Liquor Traffic, Powell; Prohibition: Constitutional and Statutory, J. B. Finch; Our Toiling Children, Florence K. Wischnewetzky; Economic Package Leaflets; Duties of Women, Frances P. Cobbe.

Recommended readings: Prohibition, E. J. Wheeler; The Labor Movement in America, Ely; Alcohol and the State, Pitman (paper); Unto this Last, Ruskin; Free Rum on the Congo, Hornaday; Sweet Cicely, Holley; Looking Backward, Bellamy (paper); The Liquor Problem, Dorchester.

Scientific course. Required reading: Physiology and Hygiene, Hatfield; Cantor Lectures, Richardson (paper); Alcohol, Bunge; Alcohol as a Therapeutic Agent, Dr. N. S. Davis; Tobacco Problem, Meta Lander; Scientific Package Leaflets.

Recommended readings: Foundation of Death, Gustafson; Temperance Teachings of Science, Palmer; Kerr's Wines: Scriptural and Ecclesiastical (paper); Alcohol and the Human Brain, Joseph Cook; Heredity, Ribot; Hygiene of the Home, Barnes.

These books, though published by many different houses, can be ordered through the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle street, Chicago.

What next? Finding out how many men and women desire to take this course. This must be done in order to complete arrangements for examinations, diplomas, and the like. For the perfect working of the plan there must be a central head and heart, some one who shall do for this course what Miss Kimball does for the C. L. S. C., and such a central head will be found so soon as a sufficient number of persons signify their desire to pursue this course. Will all who do so desire send their names at once to Miss Ida Evans, Abingdon, Ill., or to Miss West, National superintendent of School of Methods, Oneida, Ill?

For this is an outgrowth of the School of Methods, and closely allied with it. When Miss Willard's ideal of a National Training School for W. C. T. U. workers materializes, this will be the natural center of the great reading circle which, we trust, will include every white-ribboner in the land. To it will flow, in pulsing tides, knowledge of the work, the workers and their needs; from it will flow the steady stream which, like arterial blood, shall feed and strengthen the entire body. Knowing these needs, the women of grace, grit and gumption will find means to supply them. All departments declare that their greatest need is trained workers; this is just what the school is destined to supply. True, not one in a hundred of the women whom the unions need to do their work can become pupils in it, but there can be trained the women who will go out as teachers or conductors of hosts of Schools of Methods, where hundreds and thousands of women can be taught the more excellent way of doing W. C. T. U. work. From this center, too, the lines of reading circles radiating to every state will bring to thousands more not only the knowledge of our work, but knowledge of those bed-rock facts and principles upon which the great reform rests.

A NOBLER or a more gifted man can hardly be named than Benjamin F. Taylor, the Western poet. He was the son of Dr Taylor, president of Hamilton College, and was brought up under the classical influences of scholarly home life and college environment. He had a heart great as his brain, and nothing proves it more than the little gem of an editorial from the Chicago Journal written about 1858, when he was one of the editorial staff. We have this choice bit from Mrs. B. F. Taylor, who, in her sorrowful widowhood, is nobly doing all in her power to bring before the people the hundreds of pages of unpublished manuscript left as the product of her husband's inexhaustible brain. It seems paradoxical, but is true, had he been half as much endowed he would have been twice as famous. Embarrassment of riches was his one hindrance intellectually. He piled Pelion upon Ossa with imagery, and had the mental furnishing that would have made a dozen poets. In sending this extract, Mrs. Taylor says: "I sincerely hope it may be the means of sowing the seeds of tenderness toward all dumb animals, and inculcating a chivalrous protection toward all creatures that cannot plead for themselves. My husband's loving heart was always pained by cruelty shown to the meanest creature, recognizing that life is a sacred possession, as coming from the Father. I am glad that I can truly say I have never worn hat or bonnet (dis)-graced by a wing that once carried some sweet songster heavenward; and I think if ladies would disregard this fashion, the volume of song from tiny throats would swell into an anthem of praise and thanksgiving":

The man who needs a law to keep him from abusing an inferior animal needs a prison to keep him from violating the law. It ought to be enough to deter a man from cruelty that the objects of it cannot speak for themselves, cannot bear witness against him, are dumb.

And yet we have seen an ox turn his large, meek eyes toward the miserable tyrant whose blows were falling fast upon him; and we thought there was speech, if not prayer, in those looks. We have seen a horse with nerves more nobly strung, and with a freer heart and spirit than his master, quiver with pain and look entreaty all the while. It is an evil thing to needlessly cause a human being pain, but it is a fearful thing to inflict it upon a creature that cannot speak; and it must be there is always *some*where a tongue to tell, a voice to bear testimony for it, a mysterious witness, whose words shall bear record when the beatitude is uttered again: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

When we wantonly crush a butterfly and no blood cries from the ground, and no moan appeals to the ear, the silence is ominous and should "give us pause."

JULIA THOMAS, of New York, impressed every woman at the Chicago convention who heard her deep, clear voice, watched her elastic step, instinct with the poetry of motion, or looked into her soul-illuminated face, as a veritable apostle of health and wholesomeness. Her sunny spirit, expert skill, and contagious enthusiasm so won the Executive Committee that when she came before it at a post-convention session to explain her system of psycho-physical culture, she soon had that dignified body of fifty white-ribbon leaders in line, like a lot of school girls charging around their great room at the Palmer House, walking after the pattern set by her and practicing her graceful gymnastics with great glee and gusto. She had built up a fine reputation in New York City, was in demand at the summer Chautauquas, and had engaged to go to London in December, where a wide career was opening out before her. She came to the National Convention at Chicago with a message for the women whom she felt were "living too much in the upper story." She tried to show them the spiritual side of bodily exercise, and that thus viewed it "profiteth much." On the sleeping-car en route West, she heard groans from an adjoining berth, and going with quick sympathy to see the occupant, she found a woman ill to whom she ministered, placing her own wrap over her, and after she became quiet, Miss Thomas dropped asleep, not adequately clad, and woke with a chill which developed into a cough with which she battled throughout the convention and for several weeks afterwards in Chicago, finally returning to her home in New York very ill, where her loving sister, besides a trained nurse and five physicians, did all in their power to help her, but pneumonia carried her away on the day after Christmas. Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, president of New Jersey W. C. T. U., has sent a letter of particulars from which we take the following tender account of her last days: "She talked much of my little granddaughter, Frances Willard Quigley, a rarely perfect child, with whose mother's training she had had much to do. 'I'm going to superintend her education,' said Miss Thomas in her delirium, 'she is so perfect now, and nothing must be allowed to mar her fine physique.' Another utterance that comforts us all so much was this, 'Dear God, thou hast given me wonderful messages to Thy people, and I should love to go on, but I lay the work all at Thy feet. Thy will be done.' Some lives must be short because they are so full. It was so with the life of this brave young spirit. What good she has done, preaching the gospel of health—for it was all gospel to her." Farewell, radiant life,—intent upon God—in love with humanity, we shall meet thee farther up the Immortal Heights.

GENERAL BOOTH, the ever practical commander of the Salvation Army, deals with foreign missions in the same commonsense way which distinguishes his work at home. He is now sifting his native soldiery in India, with the purpose of bringing the most cultured and devout of them to London, where their service will be to teach their language to those who are "under marching orders" for India. So officers upon landing will be able to go immediately into service without having to undergo the drill of learning the language, while becoming acclimated.

The Watch-Tower.

Mrs. Wieder, of Honolulu, called, January 11, at Rest Cottage, with cheering news of W. C. T. U. work there.

***

We are as responsible for the path of our thought as we are for the path of our feet.

***

Fourteen women are serving as superintendents of county schools in Iowa. Four-fifths of the teachers are women. The knight of the ferule has well-nigh "perished out."

***

Washington ladies are far from being mere butterflies of fashion. Mrs. Sunset Cox is diligently studying real estate, that she may be her own agent; Secretary Blaine's daughters are notable housewives, and said to be the best needlewomen in Washington; Chief Justice Fuller's daughters pride themselves on their cooking; Miss Rachel Sherman is thoroughly versed in politics, and General Sherman's daughters are noted for good works among the poor.

***

Mr. George W. Child, of the Philadelphia Ledger, has been styled "the two Cheeryble Brothers rolled into one." He also makes an excellent Santa Claus. Although he pays his employes higher salaries than any other Philadelphia publisher, no Christmas passes without his remembering them by personal gifts. It is said that last Christmas these gifts amounted to several thousand dollars in hard cash. Better even than high salaries and Christmas gifts, is the daily consideration he shows to his employes.

***

It is a blessed thing that the white-ribboners are able to keep in deep sea surroundings and other-world peace through all the commotions of the present time.

***

Mrs. A. F. Newman spoke recently at Ann Arbor, Mich., to a great audience, on Mormonism.

***

An inquiry of the British Medical Association into the connection of intemperate habits with disease exhibited the fact in 41,234 cases examined, and showed that the average length of life was as follows: "Total abstainers, 51.22 years; habitually temperate, 62.31 years; careless drinkers, 59.67; free drinkers, 57.58; decidedly intemperate, 52.03." The above statement going the rounds of the rum-subsidized press so puzzled On Duty that she submitted it to "the doctor," who immediately explained that as more than one-half of the human beings born die in infancy or early childhood, and as such are naturally counted with the total abstainers, the average duration of life among otal abstainers is necessarily short. With characteristic lightness of speech she added: "Don't be caught with—chaff!"

***

Miss Willard terms the W. C. T. U. a standing committee of the whole on the state of the union.

***

Elizabeth Thompson, the philanthropist, on being asked if it would be wearisome to her to have family prayers every day in the home to which she had been invited, inasmuch as it was known that Mrs. Thompson was a liberal in religion, made the following beautiful reply to the daughter of the household: "My child, your mother's prayers would distill upon my spirit like dew upon the mown grass."

***

On Duty congratulates Bishop and Mrs. John H. Vincent on the marriage of their only son and child, George E. Vincent, to Miss Mary Louise, daughter of General and Mrs. Palmer, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., leaders in the work of the W. C. T. U. "Blest be the tie that binds."

***

Again the Health Calendar comes forth, revised, improved and brought to date. It is sent out with the injunction,

"Go forth and bless
The world that needs the hand and heart
Of Martha's helpful carefulness,
No less than Mary's better part."

It contains the most deliciously appetizing hints in its bills of fare. The mysterious formulæ of these toothsome suggestions are to be found in recipes which are plain enough for any one to follow. Then it tells where the ingredients are to be found in reliable quantities. The column of Home Amusements for after-supper sports is worth more than any prescription. Its cheapness—only 30 cts.; address Frank E. Housh & Co., Brattleboro, Vt. —commends it. We are sure its pretty heliotrope cover brightened many Christmas trees, and that its useful contents will make the New Year happier for many housekeepers, young and old.

ON DUTY.

News from the Field.

CHINA.

A YOUNG WHITE-RIBBONER IN KINKIANG.

[Extract from a letter to Anna Gordon.—ED.]

Our work is most interesting. When we wear white ribbons it attracts much attention, and we are able to tell people about our aims, and they often listen readily and say, "Yes, it is a good idea; opium and wine do do a lot of harm," yet they cannot be persuaded to give up wine, because they are afraid of being ridiculed.

Once when Mary's mother, Mrs. Stone, Mary and I, went to the home of their uncle whom they had not seen for many years, we were offered wine and tobacco. Upon our declining they said, "The foreigners are not here, and they won't see you." We told them that we had pledged ourselves not to drink, and they expressed much surprise.

The three boys who live here were invited to a feast where their teachers were present. When they refused wine the teachers laughed and sneered, and made sarcastic jokes, to which none of the boys replied, but when one of the teachers said, "Confucius drank wine, and of the best, too," one of the boys said, "When Confucius does wrong we ought not to follow him," which made the teachers vexed, because they hold Confucius to be faultless.

If I were asked to tell true stories about opium, I should not know where to stop. This is the latest: One of our former school-girls, who is now here, told us about one of her neighbors who was a confirmed opium smoker. He sold everything he could lay hands upon, even to the tiles from the house; then he sold his wife; that is, gave her to another man on his paying some money. But he had a grown-up son who, when he came back and found no mother, made a great ado, and threatened to have a lawsuit. Since the son had right on his side, the father was obliged to send for his wife again; she stayed for awhile, but as she had nothing to eat, and not a house to live in, she, of her own accord, went to live with the man who had bought her. Shortly afterward the opium smoker died in a pig-pen. The rats ate his eyes, tongue and other parts of his body, because no one would bury him. His son said he was not his father, since he left him nothing, not even a house to live in, but afterward was persuaded into burying him.

Early this spring we girls bought over seventy chickens, and now have over sixty left. We each of us set one apart for our temperance society. Our society consists mostly of little girls and working women who have not much money, so we are not able to send much to help along the cause in America, but we hope to do better next year.

Six new members joined our society this year. Some of the younger school-girls would like to join, too, but we are afraid that they may not be strong enough to stand the ridicule. Will you please tell us what you think about it?

Thank you very much for the temperance song book you sent me. Mamma has bought quite a number of them. She has translated some of them, but not so many as she would like, because she is translating a hymn book to be used in our Sunday-school. Mary and I also translated a few of the temperance songs. This year we will try to do more. We were so sorry to hear that Dr. and Mrs. Gulick have gone home, because Mrs. Gulick always helped our societies so much.

The girls all know Miss Willard and Miss Gordon, and when Miss Gordon's letter was read, they were glad to hear that perhaps they may see her some day. They always like to hear me tell them things that Miss Willard says or does, and of the movements of the W. C. T. U., so I try to read everything I can, and tell them about it.

In our prayers we never forget to pray for the W. C. T. U., and I hope that the ladies in America will pray that China may become Christian and temperate, freed from the curses of superstition, opium and wine.

IDA HOWE.

INDIANA.

CRUSADE GLEANINGS AND OTHER HAPPENINGS.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Beside the lecture delivered by Mrs. Bullock on Sabbath afternoon, a consecration meeting was held on Monday afternoon by the unions of the city. The cream of the feast was the "Crusade Camp-fire," held in the Fifth Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Mary E. Haggart was the first speaker. Her definition of a "genuine crank" is the best we have ever heard; she characterized him as "one who does not lead on from bad to worse, nor choose the less of two evils."

Mrs. Haggart was followed by Capt. Eli F. Ritter, in one of his brief, pointed addresses. Mrs. Bullock then came with some pertinent, practical remarks. The closing address was some very interesting reminiscences of the Crusade by the pastor, Mr. Mitchell.

The different unions of the city received several new members as one result of these meetings.

MICHIGAN CITY.—Sunday was observed by the union as Crusade Day, and a service was held in the M. E. Church, at which interesting articles were read by Mrs. Black and Miss Harrison, and personal reminiscences were given by Mrs. Purdy, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Bread conducted the devotional exercises. Superintendent J. C. Black and Rev. Mr. Bread, the pastor of the Congregational Church, made short, pointed speeches, showing clearly their earnest sympathy and support of the union. The music was furnished by the organist of the Congregational Church, and the leading sopranos of Trinity Episcopal and the M. E. Church. Although, on account of a crowded day, the service was not held until four o'clock, there was a large attendance, and all seemed much interested.

Another interesting event of the past week, was the entertainment given by the High School Lyceum. One number on the program was the "The Bridal Wine Cup." and the part of Marion was taken by Miss Edna Pierce, a very talented young senior. Her denunciation of the wine and portrayal of the results of drink, had probably more effect on the minds of the audience than many more direct assaults. These little bits here and there may be only straws, but they show the direction of the current, and workers feel that they have reason to be greatly encouraged and to press on.

MARION.—The W. C. T. U. held their Crusade anniversary meeting Sabbath afternoon, in the Friends' Church. The house was filled, and the audience was evidently much interested.

A memorial service in honor of all the members that had engaged in the Crusade work, and who had since gone to the heavenly home, was led by Mrs. P. G. Flim. At the close of this a general Crusade camp-fire was held, men and women engaging in reminiscences. One man who had been a saloon-keeper was reformed by this woman's movement, and gave his testimony. He said that he not only did not sell, but that he voted for the prohibition of the traffic.

CENTREVILLE.—The work of our union is going on in a quiet but earnest way. Our work has been personal, and much with the children. Crusade Sunday, December 22, Rev. J. Hiem, pastor M. E. Church, delivered a very interesting and encouraging discourse to a large audience. His subject was, "Small Beginnings and large Developments." First taking the Christian church and its growth; next, the W. C. T. U. and its wonderful development. He is a warm advocate of our cause. On Christmas day, the Loyal Temperance Legion, assisted by its superintendent and the W. C. T. U., gave a free dinner to all the children of our town who would come and partake. The town council donated the use of their room and fuel. Our citizens heartily responded to the call for provisions, and when the dinner hour arrived, the table was loaded with all of the substantials, and many luxuries. The children, about seventy-five in number, were seated, thus avoiding the confusion of standing around the table. The blessing was pronounced by Rev. J. Peele, and plates filled for each child. The superintendent of our public schools, the superintendents from the M. E. and Christian Sunday-schools, two of our leading physicians, Hon. J. A. Commons, and others favored us with their presence and assistance. The pastor of the M. E. Church, necessarily being absent, left text-cards for each child. We feel that one little boy, in speaking to his mother in the evening, expressed the sentiment of each heart, when he said, "Mother, this is the happiest day I ever had; I can remember it all the year."

FOUNTAIN CITY.—An appropriate and interesting program was rendered on the anniversary of the Crusade, by the W. C. T. U. of this place. The exercises consisted of responsive reading of the Crusade Psalm by the president and members of the union, followed by prayer and singing "Rock of Ages." "Reminiscences of the Crusade," by Ruth A. Edgerton, was very interesting and instructive, showing how the Lord had led the women of the Crusade, and in the organization of the W. C. T. U. Choice selections from Frances Willard's address at the late National Convention were read by Emma Hough.

A summary of the treasurer's report by Julia A. Miles, shows the growth of the organization, and that it is still on the increase. Recitations by members of the Loyal Temperance Legion added much to the interest of the meeting. Recitation by Freddie Davis, subject, "I Voted It Just the Same," was well rendered, and merited the applause which it received.

At the conclusion of the program, a memorial service was held in honor of our sister Emily J. Huff. We, as a union of temperance workers, feel our hearts saddened that one so noble and true has been taken from among us, yet we resolve anew, having been inspired by her worthy example, to stand more bravely for the right, and against the wrong, working with still more energy "For God and Home and Native Land."

OAKLANDON.—The W. C. T. U. held a Crusade meeting at the Christian Church, Sunday, December 22. Every one took great interest in the meeting. The afternoon was spent in talks, prayers and songs. Mr. J. W. Apple and Mrs. Yorger addressed the audience. There was a select reading by Miss Alice Hickle, and declamations by the little folks.

An oyster supper was given for the benefit of the W. C. T. U. by the members of the union, Christmas evening.

SPICELAND.—We held a Crusade memorial meeting December 23. More than thirty persons were present, including our county president and several members of the Y. W. C. T. U. The song service was led by Miss Anna Allen. The Crusade Psalm was read in concert, led by Mrs. Jane Ratliff, who also led in prayer, being followed by several others. Dr. L. E. Holloway read a "Song of Praise." Mrs. Martha Elliot read an interesting account of her part in Crusade work, and personal reminiscences being called for, several members recited incidents indicative of the spirit of the times. Some had been treated with courtesy; others with contumely. Many of the workers remarked briefly upon their experiences in Crusade work; a few interesting extracts were read, and, despite many disheartening influences in our midst, the union felt constrained to thank God and take courage. A closing prayer was made by C. Edgerton, and after singing "Praise God," the meeting adjourned. REPORTER.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY AT WASHINGTON.

A mass meeting was held Sunday afternoon by the W. C. T. U. at Wesley chapel, to commemorate the Crusade. Mrs. Sarah D. LaFetra presided.

Mrs. Judge McDowell gave an account of the progress of the work since the first Crusade. Bishop Hurst made the address of the afternoon. The Bishop strongly opposed license, high and low. He stated that before Iowa had prohibition, the city council of Des Moines raised the license fee from five hundred dollars to a thousand. In six months the saloons had increased from fifty to sixty-five under the thousand-dollar license. This, he said, he had learned by reading that reliable paper, the Iowa State Register, of which Assistant-Postmaster Clarkson was editor, and which published weekly statements of the increase of the saloons under high license. "If any one supposes," continued the Bishop, "that high license diminishes the amount of liquor consumed, he is mistaken." Massachusetts and Iowa have about the same population. Massachusetts has high license, and in some places local option. In 1888 there were seventy-two thousand arrests in Massachusetts and thirty-two thousand commitments to prison. Now no one denies that ninety per cent of crime is caused by intoxicants.

In Massachusetts the people even asked for one million dollars to provide additional jail accommodations. In the same year in Iowa there were only fifteen thousand arrests for crime, and eight hundred and thirty commitments to jail. In Iowa there was one commitment to jail for every two thousand inhabitants, while in Massachusetts there was one for every twenty-nine inhabitants. The Bishop compared the prohibition to the anti-slavery movement, and referred to the victories in the west, where the two Dakotas had marched into the Union holding up a cup of cold water.

Just before the meeting closed the Rev. George Elliot, pastor of Foundry Church, rose and said he had two missions to perform; one was to protest against the custom which characterizes New Year's day, of pretty girls of this town making themselves barmaids for one day. His second mission was to advise all persons who had to deal with grocers to open an account on New Year's day with grocers who did not sell intoxicants.

IDA HINMAN.

MISSOURI.

THE CLAY COUNTY W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

This was held at the Christian Union Chapel in Excelsior Springs December 28 and 29. Mrs. Clara Hoffman, state president, Miss Ellen Morris, state secretary, Mrs. Dickens, district president, and many other honored ladies were present to enliven and entertain as well as instruct the convention. A very complimentary attendance of visitors, ladies and gentlemen, were present from the city. The music was excellent and the devotional exercises truly solemn. The routine of the convention was disposed of in perfect order, and many admirable papers, cheering and telling speeches, and appropriate reports were made, covering in an effectual manner each department of work.

Excelsior Springs rejoiced at the coming of these workers, and follows them everywhere with many fervent prayers. The impressions made by this convention and the public speaking will be lasting. Especially do we desire to call attention to the pertinent talks of the ladies during the business sessions of the convention. Every sentence appeared to be prompted by the divine Spirit. The large and liberal views expressed were only bounded by the lines of eternal truth; and not a sentiment was heard that did not breathe the love of Christ and love for suffering humanity. The crowning work, however, was embraced in the inimitable speeches of Mrs. Hoffman, made on Saturday and Sunday evenings. The largest church edifice in the city, the Baptist, was secured, and dodgers were circulated over the city by which the public was duly informed of the change of place of meeting; and at an early hour the house was filled with an eager audience. The speech was one of the most withering and sarcastic arraignments of the liquor traffic, its political friends and adherents, we ever listened to in all our life, and we have heard about all the leading temperance orators of the nation. On Sunday night she gave her famous lecture on "The Modern Idolatry," which in point of force and effectiveness exceeded her previous effort. The arguments, sarcasm and pathos of this speech cannot be portrayed by our pen. It was a sweeping cyclone of powerful truths from beginning to end. The deeply affected audience joined the speaker with their mingled tears, as she told the sad story of ruin wrought by the saloon system. The results of these lectures, the work of the convention, the zeal of the local union, the queenly and kindly bearing of these blessed women workers have produced such a solemn and profound effect upon this city that it is talked of all over the place and on the street corners. God bless such noble workers! God does bless them, and God will bless the men who cheer them and help on their shining way.

NOTE.

The above account of the good work of the W. C. T. U. at Excelsior Springs, Clay county, Mo., is from the pen of Rev. J. V. B. Flack, D. D., editor of the church paper of the "Churches of Christ in Christian Union" in the west. When such encouragement and good cheer is given our work by all the clergymen and newspaper men of the land, it will not be a long time ere the success of our mission, duly achieved, will drive every dramshop out of business. We rejoice to hear of such a flattering indorsement being given our faithful workers at Excelsior. We learn that Mrs. M. S. Flack, the wife of Rev. Dr. Flack, is the zealous and efficient president of the W. C. T. U. of Clay county. May every town and city in Missouri have a flourishing W. C. T. U.! WHITE RIBBONER.

FURTHER FROM THE EXCELSIOR SPRINGS CONVENTION.

To say that our convention was a success, is a mild way of expressing the interest awakened by the earnestness of our W. C. T. U. ladies, and the stirring addresses of our state president, Mrs. Clara Hoffman. Her arguments were keen and convincing, and the many who heard her were forced to acknowledge the truth of her statements, though some did it with great reluctance.

Not the least effective work done by the convention and its faithful abettor, Mr. Julius C. Hughes, was the copying of a petition for saloon license which our county court had illegally granted, and which was printed in leaflet form and circulated through the audience prior to Mrs. Hoffman's lecture. The house was crowded, and every man, woman and child was given a copy. As the audience progressed with the reading, the effect produced was simply electrical. A smile of approval beamed from the faces of the friends of temperance, while a mingled expression of surprise, anger and disgust proved plainly that the guilty parties had not expected to be exposed in so bold a manner. Some made excuses, some denied having any knowledge of their names being on the petition, while many said if they had known their names were to appear before the public they never would have signed the petition. A careful examination of the tax-books showed that fifty of the names were not represented, therefore they were not legal petitioners, thus leaving the saloon beautifully in the minority. The action of our court in the matter was an open violation of the law; and there is a growing sentiment in favor of prosecuting it, which I think should be done at once.

MRS. N. A. MONTFORT,
Supt. Press Work Clay Co.

FLOWER MISSION WORK.

Mrs. Alice Dickens, of King City, has the honor of being the first and only district president in the state of Missouri to appoint a superintendent of flower mission work; at least she is the only one from whom I have received such report. A letter from her superintendent, Miss Alice Dickens, dated December 31, says: "I have a promise from most of the county superintendents to push the work in their unions. Local superintendents are reporting to me, and I am sending out literature to each union. I sent in my first report to the district convention."

Will not more of the district presidents do likewise? Let there be a movement all along the line in this department. Miss Mary Knighton, of Hannibal, writes favorably of the work there. She brings into it a consecrated heart, which makes it sure of success.

Superintendents should write to Miss Ferguson, 2633 Bank street, Louisville, Ky., for instruction leaflets. Miss Ferguson is Miss Casseday's secretary, and keeps on hand Scripture texts, explanatory leaflets, and other literature pertaining to the work of the flower mission, at low prices. A little money will equip one with literature which will be very helpful in the work. Superintendents should urge our women to raise more flowers for our use the coming season. Almost every one can spare a small space of ground for geraniums, and multiply them endlessly by slipping. Nothing yields such abundant and constant bloom, and is so brilliant and lasting in bouquets. Pansies, too, are easily cultivated, and a favorite with all, blooming from early spring until the winter snows. The last week of December I gathered a lovely handful from a bed where they were half hidden with leaves from the trees under which they grow, thus escaping the cold winds and frosts. Although it is not the season of flowers, our work need not stop; visits with literature, fruit, clothing, or food, if needed, will find large place and welcome.

M. M. PHILLIPS,
State Supt. Flower Mission.

FLORIDA.

CRUSADE CAMP-FIRE AT WINDSOR.

On the eve of December 22, the W. C. T. U. assembled in a public meeting to encourage each other and return thanks to our Father for all the way He has led us in this Crusade against all evil, especially the one which is Satan's corner-stone and foundation for nearly every evil thing. Though a dark night, our president came for me, driving a span of horses, her little daughter eleven years of age carrying a lantern, so that her mother could see where to drive. Dark nights in Florida mean darkness, and moonlight ones mean light. This incident touched my heart as I thought what it signifies for these tenderly nurtured women to so come to the front, with their little ones imbibing the same spirit, and the significant motto, "Tremble, King Alcohol! we shall grow up!"

A goodly number were assembled, and we realized the presence of our King as one after another threw on the chips and sticks of testimony, until the fire burned hotly and brightly in all our hearts. God bless the W. C. T. U. in all its agencies throughout the earth, and hasten the coming of His kingdom which shall have no end.

MRS. E. M. MUNSINGER.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

BELKNAP COUNTY CONVENTION.

This convention, which was held in the Free Baptist church of Belmont, was a success, being one of the best ever held in the county. It opened Tuesday, December 10, with an hour of amusement and instruction to the children as well as the older ones. Mr. Churchill gave views of noted places and people with some familiar faces of our own townspeople. The lecture by Mrs. Knox, president of the state W. C. T. U., on "Children's Rights," was listened to with interest by a large audience, the vestry being filled. Mrs. Knox is a quiet, easy speaker, and by her pleasant manner of telling facts wins the admiration of all. Wednesday morning was ushered in with a quantity of the favorite beverage of the W. C. T. U.—cold water. In spite of the pouring rain, a fair number met for the devotional exercises, while in the parsonage other busy workers were preparing dinner, which was an enjoyable feature of the day.

The afternoon exercises were attended by a good number, and were very interesting. Papers were read, followed by discussions upon Sabbath observance by Miss Knowles, of Meredith, state superintendent of that department; on "The Value and Necessity of Prayer." Mrs. R. W. Churchill; on juvenile work, by Miss Lizzie Adams, superintendent of the Juvenile Temple at Tilton. A pleasant feature of the afternoon was the addition to the Belmont union of three honorary members, daughters of local members: Miss Helen Bean, whose age corresponds with that of the Belmont union, being born January 23, 1886, the day the union was organized; Miss Alice Churchill, who is not yet five, and Miss Bernice Sargent, who is six. Mrs. Randall, the superintendent of juvenile work, came in with about thirty members of the Band of Hope, who sang a song of greeting to the W. C. T. U., and with other music and recitations entertained the convention for half an hour. They were served with supper in the parsonage. A vote of thanks was extended to them for their efforts. Also to all who had so kindly helped to make the convention a success. We feel that a new interest is awakened in the W. C. T. U. which will be productive of much good.

Especial mention should be made of the singing by a quartet composed of Herbert Adams and John Pope, Mrs. E. C. Bean and Lena Fuller. Mrs. E. C. Bean sang a solo, the "Trundle Bed Song" or "My Mother's Prayer," which was well received. The closing song by the quartet was "God be with you till we meet again." Miss Kate Fuller acted as organist. A resolution of regret and sympathy was passed Wednesday afternoon on account of the illness of Mrs. Dr. Osborne, of Tilton, president of Belknap county W. C. T. U., who was unable to be present. In her absence, the convention was presided over by Mrs. Lizzie A. Young, president of the local union. Miss Lizzie Adams, of Tilton, acting as secretary.

W. C. T. U.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

AN APPEAL FROM MRS. BARKER.

To the Friends of Suffrage:

South Dakota is in the midst of another campaign. The constitution compels a suffrage vote in November, 1890. Our state and national treasuries are depleted from the expenses of our prohibition work. We received no help from outside for last campaign, save $50 donated by Miss Willard. Now we ask the friends who believe in the equality that Christ taught, and desire to see South Dakota victorious in this greater battle, to help us in a substantial way in this work. We believe, if we can get the means, that we can win, and place equal suffrage in our constitution, and with prohibition and suffrage for all in our organic act, we can defy the liquor traffic for all time. Who will help us? Send all contributions to Miss S. A. Richards, Pukwana, Brule county, S. D.

H. M. BARKER, Pres.

NEW YORK.

ERIE COUNTY CONVENTION.

In Holland, December 4, the seventeenth quarterly convention of the W. C. T. U. was called to order, and the invocation was made by its president, Mrs. C. M. Hawthorne; after singing Coronation, Mrs. H. H. Otis, first vice-president, led devotional services. After the necessary round of business, Mrs. Otis was asked to lead the mothers' meeting in the absence, from illness, of the superintendent, Mrs. Show; it proved one of exceeding interest to all; the corresponding secretary brought for it suggestive aids and ideas from the National Convention which were gladly received. Reports of unions were given verbally; many places have especial growth and interest. Buffalo No. 1 is very successful with its young men's boarding home, "The Avon," and is widening its work in important ways. Buffalo Niagara Square Union has established the past quarter a "Helping Hand Coffee and Lunch Room," at 369 Michigan street, to which they invite all who wish a nice warm dinner or lunch at low rates, and are greatly encouraged by their success.

The president of Hamburgh W. C. T. U. reported growth in her own union, and also the organization of a Y of thirty members by Mrs. Jump, on her way home from the National Convention. Marilla has got a charter and will build itself a hall, and is growing in interest. Other unions gave a cheerful outlook in some lines of work.

After noontide prayer, we adjourned to the commodious dining-room arranged for us. The town clerk had graciously vacated his room that it might add to the convenience of the W. C. T. U. room for convention.

Executive committee meeting and devotional services followed. Mrs. J. O. Riley gave gracious and cordial welcome; Rev. Mr. Burt and Rev. Mr. Voght were very earnest and hearty in their greetings and welcome. Several gentlemen belonging to the Royal Templars were ready to cheer and encourage by words, and their banners were hung with our own in the decorations of the hall. Mrs. M. F. Umpleby, president of Hamburgh, responded in behalf of the convention in a fitting, graceful, thoughtful manner; several fraternal delegates were introduced. The state convention report had been prepared, but its author failed to get to convention; Mrs. Dr. Palmer led a profitable parliamentary drill.

In the evening the hall was packed. After opening music and devotional exercises, greetings were given by fifty boys and girls, singing as they marched, bearing flags and banners, and filled the large platform in a charming manner. There were excellent songs and recitations by the young people, and a finely executed "motion song" by a group of boys. The corresponding secretary had a full report of our grand National Convention, but was so hoarse that she found it impossible to make herself heard, and was excused. Mrs. Nettie Beach, of Tonawanda, gave an address that held close attention for an hour. The Rev. Mr. Burt made a unique and original collection speech.

Thursday morning opened by singing "Hold the Fort," followed by the 140th Psalm, and the Lord's Prayer in concert, led by Miss Marsh. Reports of officers received. Remarks of workers followed. Mrs. Dr. Sarah Morris, of Buffalo, gave an instructive address on "Health, Food and Dress." The praise and consecration service in the afternoon was rich in blessing, full of aspirations for lives hid with Christ in God. After some business we paused for a memorial service, when sweet music and tender, loving words from several sisters briefly voiced our grief at the loss of our dearly beloved Mrs. Webster, of Buffalo, and Mrs. Briggs, of Brant, both officers in their unions, and the aged mother from Aurora union, all gone home to God within this quarter just passed.

Reports of committees on credentials, and resolutions, discussions and miscellaneous business, followed. Lovely music was interspersed all through the convention. Among other business of the executive committee, Miss E. M. Marsh, of Akron, was made superintendent of juvenile work, and it was decided to call Mrs. C. J. A. Jump, of Albany, to work in Buffalo, and in country unions in February.

The kindness and hospitality of the Holland people could not be excelled. Mr. Button, the proprietor of the hall, did everything to make it enjoyable and convenient. The omnibus proprietor carried the coming and departing delegates at half fare. The W. N. Y. & Penn. R. R. gave us the usual reduction on return tickets. The convention was pronounced an inspiring success, conducted wholly by home talent, and a large proportion of it by our younger women. Adjourned to meet in Evans, in March.

W. E. YURANN, Cor. Sec.

MADISON COUNTY CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the W. C. T. U. assembled in the Presbyterian Church in Canastota, October 9. The meeting was opened with a few appropriate words by the president, followed by singing, "Guide me, oh Thou Great Jehovah." Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Chas. Perkins, of Cazenovia, in a very impressive manner.

The able address of the president filled with wise suggestions, and with its thoughtful consideration of the problems confronting temperance workers, deserves more than this mere mention.

The report of the corresponding secretary gave twenty unions, eighteen reporting; membership, three hundred and ninety-seven paying, and fifty-seven honorary members; thirteen Loyal Temperance Legions or children's bands, with five hundred and twenty members; eight unions have headquarters; forty-five public meetings have been held; fifty-four evangelistic services; and twenty-nine days of prayer observed. The departments of work aggregate seventy-three; $539.16 total amount of money raised; $80.58 has been paid for state dues, and $48.36 for county. Much special work is reported.

Reports of superintendents followed, which were listened to with much interest, notably those on press work, by Mrs. Lansing, of Canastota; juvenile work, by Miss Barnes, of Whitelaw; and social purity by Mrs. Richardson, of Hamilton. A thoughtful paper on "Heredity" by Mrs. Sawyer, of Oneida, was much appreciated, and a solo, which was beautifully sung by Mrs. Edgerton, of Canastota.

The evening session was opened with devotional exercises by Mrs. Clark, of Eaton. The delegates were charmingly welcomed in behalf of Canastota union by Miss Lizzie Lamb, which was responded to by Mrs. Topliff, of Morrisville. Rev. J. C. Mead then welcomed the delegates in behalf of the churches and pastors of Canastota. The address of the evening by Mrs. Mary Seymour Howell, of Albany, held the crowded church for about two hours. A beautiful duet was well rendered by Misses Van Allen and Housley, and Master Bertie Barlow recited a bright little collection speech, which brought in a bountiful collection.

Thursday morning October 10, came bright and beautiful, and the executive committee convened at 8:30, when work was planned for the coming year. Devotions were led by Mrs. Richardson, of Hamilton. Credential committee reported seven presidents, seven superintendents and twenty voting delegates present. Visitors were present from Herkimer and Oneida counties, besides many from our own. Treasurer reported balance in treasury, $44. Election of officers resulted in the reëlection of the old officers, with one exception—Mrs. H. L. Clark, of Eaton, was made vice-president in place of Mrs. Fiske, resigned. Reports of superintendents followed, of which that of Mrs. Campbell, of Hamilton, on Sunday-school work, Mrs. Cuykendall, of Cazenovia, on evangelistic, and Mrs. Burdick, of South Brookfield, on narcotics, deserve special mention. An able paper was read on "Our Enemies" by Miss Foote, of Chittenango, and a beautiful song given by Miss Hattie Plank, Miss Lonie and Mr. Nelson Dunn.

The committee on resolutions reported excellent resolutions, which were unanimously adopted. A beautiful memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Dewey, of Oneida.

Invitations were extended to the convention from Brookfield, Cazenovia, and Georgetown, and the convention adjourned to meet with Brookfield in February.

M

SULLIVAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The convention held at Livingston Manor, the 17th and 18th of October, had the inspiriting influence of most glorious weather. Eight of our eleven unions were represented; a very fair showing, considering that ours is a county of "magnificent distances." The hospitable citizens had prepared to entertain many more delegates and visitors than were present. Four ministers of the county were present all through the convention, encouraging us by their evident intention of obeying the apostle's injunction, "Help these women."

Thursday evening was occupied by words of welcome from Mrs. E. A. Fry, which were strong, unwavering declarations of our principles and position; a few cheering remarks from Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Livingston Manor, and a response by Mrs. T. M. Webb, of Liberty, who was called upon to perform the task of the county vice-president, who was absent. Mrs. Webb is a new accession to our ranks from Brooklyn, and the manner in which she performed this unexpected service assured us that our county has gained an accomplished worker. Most of the evening was occupied by the president's annual address, which, owing to the request to have it an evening address, was longer and more full than is usual, giving an outlook over the whole field for the past year, as well as of our county work, and pointing out the path for the year's march.

Friday morning the convention showed its appreciation of its officers by reëlecting them all. Reports of departments were received, and two original papers read, both of which deserve special mention, which cannot be given them here. In the afternoon a mothers' meeting was held by the county superintendent of that department, and was a very interesting and suggestive meeting. At three o'clock Mrs. Douglass, of Sayville, arrived, and the remaining hour was occupied by her in giving most practical and valuable suggestions on different branches of the work. Mrs. Douglass' lecture in the evening was well received by a large audience. Twenty names were added to the village union and fifteen subscriptions sent to our state paper. The literature table was quite well patronized, but has not yet become as popular as it should be. May the unseen and uncounted results of our second annual convention far exceed those which are noted.

M. M. MCKOON.

CIRCULAR LETTER.

To the County and Local Presidents of the W. C. T. U.:

Believing that the principles of peace as set forth by our Saviour should be more generally promulgated and the day hastened when "nation shall not lift up sword against nation," we earnestly ask you to do all in your power to advance the cause of peace and arbitration.

It is heartily recommended that each county convention and each local union should set apart some time for the presentation of this department.

Mrs. Emilie Burgess of Highland, Ulster county, N. Y., state lecturer, continues to ably advocate the cause. The only charge to unions desiring her will be for traveling expenses. This same offer is extended to the Young Men's Christian Associations of our state.

Will not our women exert themselves to influence these organizations to take a stand on this subject? Those desiring the services of Mrs. Burgess will please apply to the state superintendent of the department of peace and arbitration. SARAH W. COLLINS.

Purchase, N. Y.

NEBRASKA.

Mrs. L. E. Bailey, of Minneapolis, opened the campaign in Johnson county January 2, and has spoken in the principal towns, closing her lectures on the 8th.

Owing to a sudden change in the weather, which rendered the roads and sidewalks so icy as to be unsafe for travel, we were obliged to cancel some of the appointments, which we greatly regretted. We all feel that we were fortunate to secure Mrs. Bailey so early in the campaign, as this lady arouses earnest sentiment among the workers, so that speakers coming after her will find the people ready for the work.

Every county president in the first district should secure Mrs. Bailey while she is in this part of the state, as she comes for the collections, entertainment and traveling expenses from the last place of speaking.

MRS. L. H. RUSSELL, Co. Pres.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. C. M. W. FOSTER reports further donations for Johnstown as follows: Lisbon, Pa., W. C. T. U., $10; Mrs. Frances L. Swift, $5; Miss Frances E. Willard, $3.25.

MRS. CHACE, of Arkansas, writes of the death of another beloved worker, Miss Mamie Nourse, the corresponding secretary of the Lamar union. Surely this devoted state is deeply bereaved

MRS. BATEHAM, National superintendent of the Sabbath observance department, had spoken thirty times and attended seven conventions, including the Hillsboro Camp-fire, since the National Convention until December 27, when she started to California to help toward obtaining a Sunday law there.

AN interesting program was prepared for the dedication of the W. C. T. U. Mercy Home at Manchester, N. H., January 1, of which it is hoped that an account may be given to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL.

A SEMI-ANNUAL meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Platte county, Missouri, was held in Dearborn, December 19. The morning consecration hour brought a blessed uplift of spirit to those present In the evening a large and attentive audience proved that the temperance sentiment had kept pace with the growth of the town. The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. M. B. Smith, of Dearborn; secretary, Miss Lena Watson; treasurer, Mrs. Kate Mullendore.

THE sixteenth anniversary of the Crusade was celebrated December 23 by the W. C. T. U. of Newport, Ky. While we could not have the "Mother of the Crusade" with us personally, the president of our union, Mrs. H. E. Lewis, had procured a photograph of Mrs. Thompson, and had it beautifully decorated with white flowers and ribbon; the very appearance of that dear, gentle face was a benediction to our white-ribbon sisters, and we hope the celebration was not in vain. The thousands of meetings which were held at this time will give a powerful stimulus to the movement, and will be fruitful in results.

A W. C. T. U. was formed November 6, 1889, to be called the West Side Union No. 14 of New York City. There has been for a long time a great want felt for this movement, and just at a point which seemed singularly indicated by Providence, a number of Christian ladies felt it was the time to take some decided action, and at the above date, in response to a call, a respectable number met in the Jane Street M. E. Church for conference and prayer. The result was an organization. Ladies living in rural districts can scarcely appreciate the difficulties of city work, and we realize that Gideon's sword and Gideon's God must be our help and defense. The election of officers resulted as follows. President, Mrs. M. Hatfield Searles; vice-president, Mrs. A. C. Rose; recording secretary, Miss Libbie Spencer; corresponding secretary, Miss Emma Van Wurt; treasurer, Mrs. C. A. Bailey.

THE W. C. T. U. of Arkansas City, Kan., mourns the loss of one of its best beloved workers, Mrs. Fannie L. Barrow. She was one of the charter members, and was a "tower of strength" to the society in her loyalty and devotion. Her sweet voice led its songs of praise, and her winsome presence will be sadly missed.

THE W. C. T. U. of New York county held meetings in the Temperance Hall, 192 East One Hundred and Twenty-first street, New York City, December 23, in celebration of the sixteenth anniversary of the Woman's Crusade. Mrs. Dr. Buchanan presided, and the speakers for the occasion were Mrs. Dr. Ellerson, Mrs. M. Hatfield Searles, Rev. Mr. Pogson, and Mrs. Rebecca Collins, president of the first W. C. T. U. in the city, and now an honorary president and an active Quaker preacher, although eighty-five years old. On the same evening several unions in Brooklyn celebrated the great event by holding meetings, that of No. 7, at 965 Myrtle avenue, being addressed by the Rev. Dr. Leonard, the famous Prohibitionist, and also by Mrs. Chadwick and Geo. R. Scott, of the Witness.

MISS VARNUM was billed for Wallaceville, Pa., on December 23, but owing to sickness in the place it was not considered advisable for her to fill the appointment. The Sunville Y's upon learning the situation immediately extended her an invitation to spend the week in their little town. The invitation was accepted. Miss Varnum came and held a most successful temperance meeting. The inclemency of the weather, bad condition of the roads and numerous places of amusement during holiday week made it an unfavorable time for temperance meetings. Yet despite all this the audience and interest increased with each succeeding lecture, until the house became filled to overflowing. Many signed the pledge; a W. C. T. U. was organized; the membership of the Y's and Loyal Temperance Legion increased; and a lasting impression for good was made upon the community.

AT Richmond, Minnesota, on a recent Sunday, Dr. Kate Bushnell spoke on "Social Purity" Sunday afternoon at the M. E. Church, in the evening at the Baptist Church, and Monday afternoon at the parlors of the M. E. Church, the latter meeting for women only. The Sunday evening meeting was largely attended, and all present were made to realize the importance of the question, and to see the need of reform in our social laws. The local press comments thus: "Dr Bushnell's burning words, born of intimate acquaintance in medical and hospital practice with the misery aud suffering and one-sidedness of the social evil, could not fail to move every thoughtful man and woman to pity and indignation at the inequality which visits upon the offender—and that one oftentimes the least to blame—all of the punishment. The W. C. T. U. have done well in placing this branch of work in the hands of Dr. Bushnell."

THE following comes from the depths of a sympathizing heart: "May the tenderest ministry of the Comforter be given to our sorrowing sister, Mrs. Geo. R. Knapp, of Albuquerque, New Mexico. Mrs. Knapp was a delegate to the National Convention, and at its close went to visit her parents in Pennsylvania. Two days after reaching her father's house a telegram brought the news of her husband's sudden death, he having been ill but five hours. Mr. Knapp was his mother's only son and died on her seventy-ninth birthday; he also leaves three children. May the Lord seem very near them all!"

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The thirteenth district Missouri W. C. T. U, convention meets at Neosho, January 29 and 30. Mrs. Hoffman, state president, will lecture on Wednesday evening, January 29. Those wishing to attend will please notify Mrs. M. P. Lemen, of Neosho, corresponding secretary, that entertainment may be provided.

DR. ORPHA D. BALDWIN'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN EASTERN WASHINGTON.

January 12, 13, Colfax; 14, Endicott; 15, 16, Moscow, Idaho; 17, Pullman; 18, 19, Colton, Uniontown; 20, Genesee, Ida.; 21, 22, Palouse City; 23, Garfield; 24. Elberton; 25, 26, Farmington; 27, Latah; 28, 29, Rockford; 30, Waverly; February 1, 2, 3, Spokane Falls; 4, Spangle; 5, Rosalia; 6, 7, Oaksdale; 8, 9, Cheney; 10, 11, Medical Lake; 12, Davenport; 14, Sprague; 15, 16, Ritzville; 17, Wallula; 19, 20, North Yakima; 21, 22, Ellensburg; 24, Cleallum.

Official Communications.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

1. The National Sunday Rest Bill.

Senator Blair, at the request of our organization, again introduced into the Senate, on December 9, his Sunday Rest Bill, altered and improved so as to be entirely satisfactory to our organization. It is entitled "A bill to secure to the people the privileges of rest and of religious worship, free from disturbance by others on the first day of the week." The bill closes with this proviso: "Nor shall the provisions of this act be construed to prohibit or to sanction labor on Sunday by individuals who conscientiously believe in and observe any other day than Sunday as the Sabbath, or a day of religious worship, provided such labor be not done to the disturbance of others."

Our Seventh Day friends, we think, have no further ground for criticism. Now let us push the work of petitioning. It is the only way to succeed.

2 Help wanted from state officers.

The District of Columbia, like California, has no Sabbath law. This was discovered not long since by the district attorney when appealed to by our Washington W. C. T. U. to stop Sunday labor on the public streets. We are working with good hope of success to secure such a law the present winter. The three District commissioners favor it, the President approves of it, and, so far as I have been able to see members of Congress, they are favorably disposed.

Congressman Breckenridge, of Kentucky, will introduce a bill into the House for this purpose soon after the holidays, the District W. C. T. U. are circulating petitions for this object, and what is now greatly to be desired is that the general officers of every state in the Union send in a memorial to Congress in behalf of their constituencies asking for a Sunday law for the District of Columbia. This is also an important step towards securing our National law. Will not state officers give this immediate attention and oblige J. C. BATEHAM,

Nat. Supt.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

MRS. LAURA ORMISTON CHANT

has written the secretary of the Woman's Lecture Bureau that she will probably reach this country about February 1, so any one desiring her services should apply at once.

REV. W. H. BOOLE, D.D.,

will be in Illinois and states adjoining from February 15. Unions desiring his famous lecture, "The Great National Snake Exhibition," (so favorably noticed in a recent number of THE UNION SIGNAL,) should send their application for dates at once to the

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Arkansas—Mrs. Serena Turner, Ozark, $5.

California—W. C. T. U. Sentinel, $1.05.

Southern California—Mite-Box, Mrs. Blanchard, Los Angeles, $1.15.

Colorado—Baby Band, Yuma, 70 cents.

Connecticut—Danbury W. C. T. U., $5.

South Dakota—W. C. T. U.. Hitchcock, $5; Huron, Rev. H. L. Mills and family, $3; East Pierre, F. P. Wright, $200.

District of Columbia—Washington, Mrs. Edward Ells, $3.65; Vivian Church, $1.

Florida—St. Andrews Bay, Mrs. Laura B. Sturrock, $1.

Illinois—Chicago, Mrs. E. P. W. Packard, $100; Mrs. G. F. Swift, $100; in memoriam Willa Cox, $1; Mary Allen West W. C. T. U., $15.43; Isabella Jones, mite-box, $2.59; Englewood, Mrs. P. E. Lane, Mrs. W. W. Ray, Mrs. J. G. Alexander, Mrs. B. Holbrook, Mrs. S. P. Kishler, Mrs. M. Rowe, Mrs. J. A. Sprague, Mrs. E. M. Noble, Mrs. Anna Searing, Mrs. Dr. Lodor, $1 each; Cherub Band, 20 cents; Youth's Band, $2.50; Baby Band, $11; others $2.50; Aurora, E. D. Kinney, Mrs. M. D. Cheney, Mrs. S. Thompson, $1 each; others $2.50; Hinsdale, Mrs. Merrill, Mrs. Linsley, Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. Van Inwagen, Mrs. H. C Irish, Mrs. Childs, Pearsall, Prouty & Wakeman, $1 each; Bowles & Blodgett, $1.50; others, $2; Baby Band, Chicago Foundlings' Home, $5.30; Evanston, C. T. McElwin, J. G. Brown, Mrs. O. A. Craine, Mrs. L. C. Pitner, Mrs. M. C. Baker, Mrs. O. French, Mrs. Geo. Key, Mrs. C. B. Freeman, Mrs. E. W. Bragdon, Miss Kitchell, Mrs. Geo. Lord, Mrs. Hollingshead Mrs. Peabody, Mrs. A. L. Sewell, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. J. Gilliland, Mrs. Dudley, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. C. T McElwin, $1 each; Baby Band, $13.50; others, $8.40; Baby Band, Hinsdale, Aurora, and Downer's Grove, $8.50; Baby Band, Perry, $5; Lanark, A Friend, $30; Tuscola, Lend a Hand Society, Presbyterian Church, $1; Danville, Veteran Band, $11; Carlye W. C. T. U , $1.75; Polo, Mrs. R. G. Shumway, $3.19; Orion, Mrs. E. T. Lippincott, $1; Camp Creek Baby Band, $6; Decatur W. C. T. U., $10; Mendota W. C. T. U., $25; Canton, Mrs. J. W. Ingersoll, $50; Dixon, Mrs. E. B. Street, $3.65; Roscoe, Mrs. L. W. Richardson, $3.65; Harvard W. C. T. U., $17; Hinckley W. C. T. U., $1.55; Evanston W. C. T. U., $1; Forreston, Mrs. W. H. McClure, $1.15; Quincy Baby Band, $2.30; Griggsville, Baby Butler, $1; Poplar Grove, Mrs. Della Foster, $2; Benjaminville W. C. T. U., $3.90; Marengo, Miss Ella O. Patrick, $2.

Indiana—James N. Parker, Elkhart, $1.65; South Bend W. C. T. U. and Y's, $12.55; Elkhart W. C. T. U. $5.

Indian Territory—Mrs. Laura Harsha, Muskogee, $4.12.

Iowa—W. C. T. U., Le Mars, $5.

Kansas—Baby Band, Wichita, $2.50; Sterling, Mrs. M. A. Maxwell, $3.10.

Massachusetts—Campello W. C. T. U. $12.10; Alford, $1; Hampshire W. C. T. U. $3; Leonminster W. C. T. U., $100; Greenfield W. C. T. U., $5; Baby Band, Middleboro, $1.70; Cambridge, Mrs. T. D. Bennett, $2.

Michigan—Albion Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.90; Charlotte, Mrs. A. G. Munson, $7; Muskegon, Mrs. F. D. Peck, $3; Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.30; Adrian, Mrs. R. B. LeFevre, $3; Four Towns W. C. T. U., $24.50; Muskegon, Mrs. J. Vanderwerp, $3.65; Detroit Baby Band, $4.10; Shelby Baby Band, $2.80.

Minnesota—Spring Valley W. C. T. U., $5; Owatonna, Mrs. J. B. Lord, $1.

Missouri—Warrenburg, Mrs. Dawson Houts, $1.85; Browning W. C. T. U., $2; Maryville, Mrs. E. A. Rowley, $5; Mexico W. C. T. U. $1.

Montana—Twin Bridges, E. E. Smith, $1.

New Hampshire—Lucy J. Holmes, Derry, $1.

New York—Jacob Harwick, Hermon, $1; North New York W. C. T. U., $5; Alice Requa, Middleburgh, $1.41; Madison avenue W. C. T. U. New York City children, $10.50; mite-boxes, $7.50; Mrs. M. C. Teed, Purdy's Station, $1; Olean Y. W. C. T. U. $5.

Ohio—Mrs. Perkins, Cleveland, $1; Lorain W. C. T. U. $10; Miamisburg W. C. T. U. $6; Medina, Miss Hannah Hughes, $3.

Pennsylvania—South Oil City, Katie H. Maitland, $6; Octoraro, Ella B. King, $3.75; New Florence, Ruth Lee O'Donnell, $2; English Mills Sunday-school, $2.63; New Enterprise Band of Hope, $1; Nicholson W. C. T. U., $13; North Clarendon, Baby Band, $2.50; Waynesburg, H. W. Sayers, $25.

Rhode Island—Loyal Temperance Legion, Wakefield, $1; Willie and Ernest Graham, 20 cents.

Tennessee—St. Bethlehem, Mrs. Lucy Beaumont, $4.45; Mrs. D. P. Sypert, $3.65.

Texas—Mexia, a Friend, $2.

Washington—Mrs. J. L. Davis, Richardson, $1.

Vermont—Mendon W. C. T. U. $3.84; Felchville W. C. T. U., $2.25; Coventry, Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.25; Sales, $12.78.

Corrections—The sum credited to Mrs. M. H. Tifft, Brooklyn, N. Y., in last list should have been Mrs. M. E. Tifft, New York City, for Madison avenue W. C. T. U. The amount credited to North Adams W. C. T. U., Mass., should have been Adams W. C. T. U. The amount credited to W. C. T. U., Litchfield, Conn., should have been to Goshen W. C. T. U.

November 25, 1889. ESTHER PUGH.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

2X10=20

And Picture Free.

We have 800 artotypes measuring 11x14 inches of Miss Willard's workshop in Rest Cottage, Evanston; we used several thousand of these pictures in 1887. We now make the special offer to send one (regular price 25 cents) for two 10-cent trial subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL. The picture will be sent to you postpaid or to any address that you name. This is a generous offer—take advantage of it at once. The limited number of pictures will soon be called for. All readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will be interested in this unique picture. No further commission than the picture will be given for the two names, and that only while the supply lasts.

Gold Thimbles as Premiums.

They have been called for by the dozen, and we repeat the generous offer made in October, viz.: to send a thimble free for every name at $1.50; or to send one for fifty cents, providing you will agree to get up a club of ten subscribers at $1.00 each, the 50 cents to be deducted from the $10 when remitting. These thimbles are made practically of two gold thimbles with a stiffened wall of steel between them. They are warranted to outwear thimbles that are solid gold throughout. How easy it would be to wear one in asking for subscriptions! The lowest retail price of the thimble is $1.00, and it makes a wonderfully attractive premium. Number eight is the size we send, unless otherwise directed.

How To Win. By Miss Frances E. Willard. The book you want for young girls.....$1.00

Business-like?

It would be just that to be provided with the answers to the many headed statements given out nowadays about the W. C. T. U. How dreadfully and fearfully some few were abused in the convention; what a tempest of hisses, groans, etc., there were; what vast falsehoods Miss Willard told about Vice-President Morton (don't hear quite so much about that somehow, lately!) how she threw an inkstand at Mrs. Foster, and other misleading statements. You can easily get folks to read the other side; in fact, a lot of them don't know there is another side, unless you tell them of it! How can you better do so than to put Miss Willard's annual address (DAILY UNION SIGNAL No. 1) and the Convention Number of November 21 in their hands?

The prices are the same for both papers, viz:

100 copies.....$ 1.70
1000 copies (either paper) 14.00

Be business-like!

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

TAKE MONON ROUTE
for all points South.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure bilious and nervous ills.

Mt. Carroll (Ill) Conservatory of Music.

Don't forget in sending for seed catalogues to get one from H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill. See his advertisement in another column.

Josiah Allen's wife (Marietta Holley,) writes: "When I opened Tokology, and saw the strong, sweet face of the writer, I knew I should find nothing but good in its pages. It is written with delicacy, bravery and wisdom. I wish every woman in the land could read it."

Annie Jenness Miller writes: "I thank you for Tokology. I shall personally recommend it, and urge our readers to read and follow its words of wisdom." Tokology is a complete ladies' guide in health and disease. Sample pages free. Sent postpaid. Leather, $2.75; cloth, $2.00. Address, ALICE B. STOCKHAM, & Co., 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

To introduce our publications, we offer 186 full-size pieces music, including 112 Jigs, Polkas, Waltzes, Reels, etc., for piano or organ; 12 selections for the violin, and 60 of the most popular songs of the day arranged by that great composer CHARLES D. BLAKE. This grand collection and our complete catalogue of musical goods, forming altogether a book of 136 large pages, sent to any address on receipt of 20 cents, stamps or silver. Address Galaxy of Music, 408 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

REGARDING DR. WILFORD HALL'S HEALTH PAMPHLET AND TREATMENT.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman,

PRESIDENT OF THE MISSOURI W. C. T. U., WRITES:

Mr. A. T. Bates, Chicago:

After trying every remedy, for years, to remove constipation and hemorrhoids, and all without avail, I have found a complete cure offered by Dr. W. Hall. I recommend his treatment to all suffering from the hundred ills arising from these causes:

Kansas City, Dec. 24, 1889. C. C. HOFFMAN.

Rev. Emerson Jessup, New Haven, Conn., writes, November 20:

"DEAR DR. HALL.—After four years' acquaintance with your philosophical writings, and having come to believe in your judgment and integrity, I was prepared in advance to accept your hygienic discoveries as containing something of value. But now, after having used your treatment for the past four months, I can simply testify that it is all and even more than you or your enthusiastic patients have represented it to be. No money could deprive me of its advantages. I feel it should be in every family in the whole country." Sincerely yours,

270 Martin Street. EMERSON JESSUP."

I wish to call particular attention to the letters I have published from time to time; coming as they do from prominent, intelligent people who have used the treatment for weeks, or months, there can be no doubt as to their meaning. I gave the treatment a fair trial before accepting the agency, and believe it to be a valuable remedy, not only for invalids, or persons in poor health, but for every family to have in case of fevers, colds, or other sickness, as well as to use as a preventive of disease.

Respectfully, A. T. Bates, 161 La Salle street, Room 46, Chicago. Full information sent on receipt of 2 cent stamp.

Wanted: Intelligent persons who have used this treatment to act as agent in every community.

A. T. BATES.

BONDS

FOR SALE.

$100,000 San Bernadino, Cal., 6s, Water Bonds.
$20,000 McMinnville, Ore., 6s, Water Bonds.
$50,000 Watertown, Dak., Water Works, 6s.
$50,000 Grand Island, Neb., 6s, Sewer Bonds.

ALSO OTHER CHOICE BONDS AND SECURITIES.

Write for lists and prices.

S. A. KEAN & CO., Bankers,

100 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

115 Broadway, New York.

CATARRH HAY FEVER CATARRHAL DEAFNESS

A NEW TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been discovered which permanently cures the most aggravated cases of these distressing diseases by a few simple applications made (two weeks apart) by the patient at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free by A. H. DIXON & SON, 337 and 339 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.

Miss Willard recommends "The Faith that Makes Faithful." 8 sermons by Gannett and Jones, $1.00 and 50 cents. Special edition mailed to UNION SIGNAL readers for 20c. Chas. H. Kerr & Co., 175 Dearborn St., Chicago.

MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

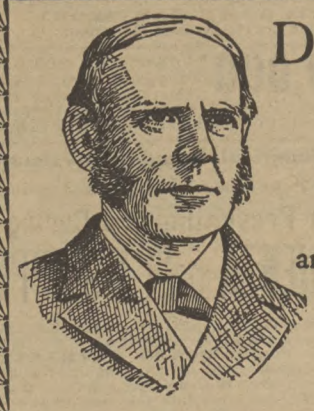
DEAFNESS CURED by Peck's Pat. INVISIBLE TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable. Successful where all Remedies FAIL. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y.



Dr. Talmage's Early Home,

His Mother's Death, and a Celestial Dream are Word-Pictures of striking beauty as drawn by the famous Preacher in his new department—

"Under My Study Lamp"—

In the JANUARY

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Breakfast and Dinner Parties,

Teas, Suppers, Luncheons and Receptions; How to entertain well; New ideas in serving; Pretty table adjuncts and decorations; Dainties and Desserts; are all original in the JOURNAL. Cooking recipes are practical, and are furnished by the best society women and housekeepers in the country.

Side Talks with Girls.

Instruction in morals and manners; How to improve grammar, and how to talk and appear well in society; Wholesome advice for growing daughters given sugar-coated by pure fiction and confidential talks.

A Special Offer for January.

To introduce the LADIES' HOME JOURNAL into your home with the new year, we offer to mail to your address the double Holiday Numbers FREE of charge, if you will send us 25 cents for a Three Months' Trial Subscription, beginning January 1st, 1890. This makes FIVE MONTHS for only 25 Cents.

On the News Stands. 10 Cents a copy.

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

GREAT OFFER!

PIANOS! $35. ORGANS!

Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every his own agent Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address

THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs

BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.

From Rev. Jas. H. Potts, D.D., editor of Michigan "Christian Advocate," Detroit, Mich: "To say that we are delighted with the Piano does not express the fact. We are jubilant. If all your instruments are as fine in appearance and as pleasing in tone as this one, your patrons will rise by the hundred."

"Aches and Pains I'll fear no More!!"
is what a lady said after using an

EMPIRE WRINGER!

"It works so easy I do my work in half the time it took with my old wringer, SAVES MY CLOTHES, and doesn't tire me out." IT WRINGS DRYER, WEARS LONGER AND IS THE ONLY WRINGER WHICH DOES NOT HAVE THE CRANK ATTACHED TO EITHER ROLL, it is constructed in this way to save labor. It is warranted against defects, requires no oil and never rusts. Agents Wanted Everywhere.

EMPIRE WRINGER CO., Auburn, N. Y.

FAINLESS BEECHAM'S EFFECTUAL

THE GREAT ENGLISH MEDICINE PILLS WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

For Weak Stomach—Impaired Digestion—Disordered Liver.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

PRICE 25 CENTS PER BOX.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.

B. F. ALLEN & CO., Sole Agents

FOR UNITED STATES, 365 & 367 CANAL ST., NEW YORK,

Who (if your druggist does not keep them) will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price—but inquire first. (Please mention this paper.)

The Only One.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid Vestibuled, Electric Lighted and Steam Heated trains between Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid Vestibuled Electric Lighted and Steam Heated trains between Chicago, Council Bluffs and Omaha.

The berth reading lamp feature in the Pullman Sleeping Cars run on these lines is patented, and cannot be used by any other Railway Company. It is the great improvement of the age. Try it and be convinced.

For further particulars apply to the nearest coupon ticket agent, or address A. V. H. CARPENTER General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis.

Burlington Route

TO ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

No other railroad will give you quicker trains or better service from Chicago, St. Louis or Peoria, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, than the Burlington. Vestibule trains, dining cars, through sleepers and direct connection for all points in the Northwest. Tickets via the Burlington Route can be obtained of any ticket agent of its own or connecting lines.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,

181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,

Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Pape

Publisher's Notes.

TERMS FOR 1890 — THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Der Deutsch Amerikaner (semi-monthly) German temperance; single copy 50 cents, in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

State Agents and Superintendents of Union Signal Work

To whom names can be sent to enter clubs of ten when you can not get up a club of ten in your own town.

Friends living in Connecticut will remit to Mrs J. H. Leeds, 236 Wooster street, New Haven.

Delaware: Mrs. M. L. Cox, Middletown.
Illinois: Miss Helen Walker, Barry.
Iowa: Miss Clara Stephens (general agent for Iowa and North and South Dakota), 406 Centre Street, Des Moines.
Massachusetts: Mrs. M. E. Cheney, Hotel Clifton, Boston.
Maine: Mrs. E. F. Denny, 51½ Exchange Street, Portland.
Missouri: Mrs. Ida F. Burr, Princeton.
Nebraska: Mrs. Z. A. Willson, Lincoln.
New York: Mrs. Ella C. Viele, 10 East 14th Street, New York City.
New Hampshire: Mrs. C. E. Albee, Claremont.
North Dakota: Mrs. E. F. Dewey, St. Lawrence.
Ohio: Mrs. E. J. Gray, Medina.
Oregon: Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.
Pennsylvania: Miss S. S. Sterrett, 2133 Vine street, Philadelphia.
Rhode Island: Mrs. S. R. Alexander, Abbots Run.
Vermont: Mrs. Clinton Smith, Middleburg.

In Prison—Behind Bars

Are the men who have learned because others have a license to sell liquors is no protection whatever to them, that they are the dupes; the government has a part of their money, the city or village another part, and the man who sold the fiery stuff that stole their brains has the largest part, while they have the experience—behind the bars. If ever men do have a good chance to see what exceedingly great fools they have made of themselves, it is when they learn there is one place where even the government of the United States cannot sell a license; where that money, so desirable to have, according to some who bear Christ's name, cannot be paid in by the accommodating distiller, brewer, or saloon-keeper. Let us help these men "to come to themselves" in this their time of enforced prohibition, by sending them THE UNION SIGNAL and our other papers. We are told by all the prison officials, that THE UNION SIGNAL is most eagerly read by these unfortunates. To help on this truly philanthropic work we will agree to receive subscriptions during January only for papers to be sent to prisons, almshouses, jails, workshops, reformatory institutes, etc., at the following low rates:

The UNION SIGNAL, Young Crusader, and Der Deutsch-Amerikaner all one year each, only $1.

THE UNION SIGNAL alone, only 50 cents.

You are not so situated that you can do jail visiting, perhaps, but here is an opportunity to send an evangel in your place. We cannot, however, hold the offer open more than through the month of January. One month should be time enough for action, surely

Can-Town Again.

The union at Canton, Ill., has voted to send THE UNION SIGNAL to all the ministers in that city during 1890. What one town can do, any town can! Can yours?

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of immitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

A Prominent, Regular Physician
of New York City gives the following directions
For Preventing and Curing
INFLUENZA or "LA GRIPPE"
Evaporate morning and evening a few tablespoonfuls of POND'S EXTRACT and inhale the vapor. Pour the POND'S EXTRACT into a tin cup, which hold over the flame of a lamp; hold the nose over the cup that the vapor may be inhaled. By this treatment the membrane of the nose and throat will be in such condition that it will resist the poisonous action of the germs, which are the cause of this disease; and if the germs have already been inhaled they will be destroyed. The symptoms of "La Grippe" are, inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which may extend to the lungs, with cough, sneezing, running at the nose and perhaps severe aching pains and high fever. These directions are for POND'S EXTRACT only. It may be unsafe to use any other article in this way.
Have Pond's Extract in Readiness.
Made only by
POND'S EXTRACT CO.,
New York and London.

MONEY in Building Lots in the new towns of the West, so as to yield 100 to 1000 per ct.
Loss Impossible. Send 10c. for 100-page book. Prudential Trust Co., 1305 Arch St., Phila. INVESTED

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A.A.Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N.Y.City.

BABY CARRIAGES Velocipedes or Girl's Tricycles Best C. O. D.
One or more at Wholesale Prices. Express charges prepaid from L. O. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison St., CHICAGO. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer SEWING MACHINE 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE "PEARL"
A marvel of beauty & usefulness. FULLY WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS. Plush-lined case of Attachments free. Buy direct and save $20 to $50 Agents' commissions.
Send for Circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., CHICAGO, ILL.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED, for "THE CRIME OF THE CENTURY; or the Assassination of Dr. Patrick Henry Cronin.
BIG WAGES $60 to $75 per week being made. Bound in cloth. Retails $1.50. Send 30 cts. for outfit. Elliott & Beezley.
Philadelphia, Pa. Chicago, Ill.

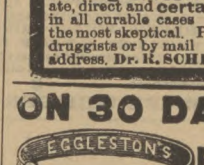
GARMENTS GUARANTEED TO FIT PERFECT WITHOUT TRYING ON.
FREE
by return mail full descriptive circulars of MOODY'S NEW TAILOR SYSTEM OF DRESS CUTTING. Any lady of ordinary intelligence can easily and quickly learn to cut and make any garment, in any style to any measure for lady or child. Address MOODY & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

ASTHMA CURED
SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE
Instantly relieves the most violent attack. No waiting for results. Its action is immediate, direct and certain, and a cure is the result in all curable cases. A single trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, of druggists or by mail. Trial package Free to any address. Dr. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.



THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER!
Cures Whooping Cough.
"My son had an attack of Whooping Cough, and was cured by using three bottles of Dr. Seth Arnold's Cough Killer."—DR. EDWARD C. HUGHES, Rockford, Ill.
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

JAPANESE WARE for Church Fairs. The Formosa Co., 86 State St., Chicago, Ill.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Best terms. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S
"CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

Come, come, now! let us be sensible for once in our lives, and have warm feet this winter, and a cool, level head. If our feet are warm our blood will circulate freely, and all the processes of Nature will go on while we are at work.
Don't you know your feet are the two extreme poles of a great Magnetic Battery? Your body is held together and kept in motion, that is life by MAGNETIC POLARITY. You change the Magnetic Polarities of your being by your thoughts. You intensify the power of your blood by applying MAGNETIC BATTERIES to your feet. This vitalizing Substance called magnetism is Life manifest. Without Magnetism we could not have Life. Can't you see at once that if you redouble the Life Potency at the extreme poles of your body, that is your feet, you intensify the Life principle just where it is necessary to have it? Why put on an overcoat to hold warmth where it is not needed, when you can get what you desire at once, by applying the life energy to the very point you need to intensify the living, vivifying essence of power. Come, be sensible once, and let us speak to you through your feet! "With all thy getting get understanding." To begin this work place our genuine Magnetic Foot Batteries under your feet; one pair will convince you, $1.00 a pair or three pairs for $2.00, any size, by mail, postpaid. Order to-day, and be happy all winter. Catalogue free.
CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago.

WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY DELAVAU'S
Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

TAR-OID
A new method of compounding Tar.
SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR! 0

NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$1
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$1
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$1
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$1
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$1
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$1
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$1
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$1
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$1
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$1
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$1
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$1
College Songs; 150,000 sold	50c
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$1
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music.	$1

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$1
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$1
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$1
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$1
Popular Dance Music Collection	$1
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$1

The above are all superior books.

Any book mailed for retail price.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

C. H. DITSON & CO.,
867 Broadway, New York.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City

BOOKS—96 Page Catalogue of popular and standard books sent free on request. Lowest prices ever known. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York; 242 Wabash Avenue, Chicago; 73 Whitehall Street, Atlanta. Agents wanted.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

Family Shoes! FARGO'S $2.50 Calf Shoes for Gentlemen.
Fargo's $2.50 Ladies' Boot for Ladies, and "Box Tip" SCHOOL SHOES for Boys and Girls. ☞ Ask your dealer for them. If he does not keep them, send to us for the size and style you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Or send to us for a full description of the Fargo shoes. A Pocket-Mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to ag'ts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.

An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18,000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it.
When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W.G.Morris, Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

Publisher's Dep't.

Friends of the Children!!

Listen!!!

Do you know there is a children's temperance paper, the organ of the

Loyal Temperance Legion

CALLED

The Young Crusader?

Do you know it was started as a weekly, in the full expectation that the W. C. T. U. women, the lovers of children, the people who believe that "the only hope of the temperance reform lies in reaching the children," etc., etc., would support it?

And do you know that after running it for some time at a steady loss of $200 a week, we found we could not afford to do missionary work at that rate, and were forced to turn it into a semi-monthly?

Oh, yes, you know all about that, and are sorry, too.

How Sorry are You?

We propose to give you a chance to show your answer to that question. The children are clamoring for a return to the weekly edition of

The Young Crusader.

We can give them what they want, and at the present price, if we can keep the subscribers we now have, and get 8,000 more, at forty cents each, between now and the first of next July. This is our plan: We ask each friend of temperance work among the children, each boy and girl who wishes to have The Young Crusader come weekly, instead of twice a month, to fill out the following slip, and return to us at the earliest date you can. The slip explains itself; you see it does not ask for any money now, it is simply a promise by which we may learn what you really do believe in regard to the teaching of temperance through the children's reading.

We add the present subscription list by states. To the state making the greatest pro rata increase in its subscription by the next National Convention, we will give the custody of The Young Crusader banner for the ensuing year.

Now, friends, rally for the children!!!

Pledge.

I hereby promise to pay for.....(copy or copies) of The Young Crusader, at forty cents each, on or before August 1, 1890, providing the number of similar pledges taken, equals 8,000 by the first of July. In return, the W. T. P. A. promises, if said payments are made by August 1, to issue The Young Crusader for the year ending August 1, 1891, as a weekly, and to send the above.....(copy or copies) of said paper for the same year to any address to be given by me. This I do because I believe that the hope of the nation lies in the temperance training of the children.

Signature.....

Town.....

County.....

State.....

Date.....

(If you wish specimen copies of The Young Crusader sent you, write "Yes" on the line below.)

.....

"Ye Hatchet Partie"

Know ye that Washington's Birthday is coming? Dost remember that the above named entertainment has been given with great success? Why not gather in some shekels for your local work by giving this or some other entertainment of which we have such a variety to suit all ages and requirements? Ye Hatchet Party sells at 15 cts. each, $1.50 per dozen. The music required in it can also be had through us.

New Bulletin.

A new Bulletin of Publications is ready. Send for one. Use them to indicate to those not familiar with our publications what leaflets, books, etc., they should order.

Old or New?

"Will you please say through THE UNION SIGNAL whether the ten-cent or short-term subscribers come under the name of old or new subscribers." We suppose the question refers to the yearly subscription that so often follows the short-term one. The fact that the paper has been on trial, does not make the reader an old subscriber; we count all trial subscribers as new names. We do not, of course, expect that any old subscriber will ever take the paper "on trial."

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Fall of the Christians:

An Historical Romance of Japan in the 17th Century.

By Prof. W. C. Kitchin, Ph. D.

"The Fall of the Christians" is a history of the desperate struggle of Christianity against Paganism in Japan over two hundred and fifty years ago, as related in ancient manuscripts discovered by the author. There were then several thousands of Christians in Japan, and the attempt to exterminate them led to one of the most sanguinary struggles recorded in history. The heroism of the Christians, both men and women, and their fortitude under the most appalling dangers, as portrayed by Professor Kitchin, will enlist the sympathies of the civilized world.

GIVEN FREE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS SOUVENIR POEMS —BY— JOHN G. WHITTIER, —AND— JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

THE LEADING WRITERS.

CELEBRATED ARTISTS.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

$2 A YEAR SIXTEEN PAGES EVERY WEEK

Herbert Ward, Stanley's Companion.

Herbert Ward, the companion of Stanley in his explorations in Africa, is one of the few men connected with Stanley's African explorations who has ever returned alive from the "Dark Continent." Mr. Ward's articles running through eight numbers of the "Ledger" are of the most intensely interesting description, and cover five years of his adventures in Africa, and they will be illustrated by sketches made by Mr. Ward, and by the reproduction of photographs taken by him in Africa. These pictures will throw much light upon the manners and customs of the hitherto unknown cannibal tribes of Africa.

Life in British America, By Rev. E. R. Young.

Being the adventures and experiences of Rev. E. R. Young, the celebrated missionary, and his wife during their residence in the Polar region twelve hundred miles north of St. Paul, in which Dr. Young narrates how he tamed and taught the native wild Indians of the Northwest; how he equipped himself for and how he made his perilous sledging and hazardous canoe trips when visiting all the Indian settlements within five hundred miles of his home.

Nihilism in Russia, By Leo Hartmann, Nihilist.

Leo Hartmann, a fugitive from Russian authorities, has been connected with the most daring feats of the Russian Nihilists. Mr. Hartmann shows how the intelligent people of Russia are becoming Nihilists in consequence of the despotism of the form of government. A participant in plots to kill the Czar, such as the blowing up of the Winter Palace, he is able to give true information as to how this and other great schemes were accomplished. The situation in Russia is sufficient to increase the love of every true American for our form of government.

Into Mischief and Out, By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

This is a story of college life. It describes, in a graphic manner, the troubles which overtake bright students who get into mischief, and their skillful manœuvres to evade the consequences of their conduct.

Other Contributors for 1890 are:

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.
Mrs. Margaret Deland.
Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.
Mrs. Madeleine Vinton Dahlgren.
Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford.
Mrs. Emma Alice Browne.
Mary Kyle Dallas.
Marion Harland.
Clara Whitridge.
Judge Albion W. Tourgee.
Marquise Lanza.
Robert Louis Stevenson.
Anna Sheilds.
Josephine Pollard.
Amy Randolph.
Frank H. Converse.
C. F. Holder.
Dr. Felix L. Oswald.
Rev. Emory J. Haynes.
Julian Hawthorne.
Prof. W. C. Kitchin.
Robert Grant.
Rev. Dr. H. M. Field.
M. W. Hazeltine.
Thomas Dunn English.
George F. Parsons.
Col. Thomas W. Knox.
Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton.
Rev. Dr. James McCosh.
Prof. S. M. Stevens.
Prof. J. H. Comstock.
James Parton.
Harold Frederic.

The Character of the New York Ledger.

The New York Ledger directs its efforts towards crowding out that trashy and injurious literature which is poisoning the minds of American youth. The Ledger appeals to the intelligence of the people, and depends for its support on that taste which prevails for innocent and amusing entertainment and healthful instruction. The Ledger will contain the best Serial and Short Stories, Historical and Biographical Sketches, Travels, Wit and Humor, and everything interesting to the Household.

Subscription money can be sent at our risk by Post Office Money Order, Bank Check or Draft, or an Express Money Order.

Send $2 for a Year's Subscription or 5 Cents for Sample Copy and Illustrated Calendar Announcement.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, 220 William St., New York.

FLAVOR YOUR Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with BELL'S SPICED SEASONING

Directions for Making a Nice Dressing: Take one pint of soaked bread, and season with two teaspoonfuls of salt and BELL'S POULTRY SPICE to suit the taste (on account of the purity, not more than a tablespoonful of the dressing for an eight pound turkey), also one tablespoonful of butter or fat salt pork cut up very fine. An egg well worked in will make the dressing cut up nicely. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT.

WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs, Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE can be CURED

in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.

FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c

To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 50c., 6 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St. N. Y. City

"DOWN WITH HIGH PRICES."

A $65.00 Sewing Machine,	$18.00
A 500-lb. Platform Scale,	10.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy,	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale,	40.00
A $40.00 Road Cart,	15.00
A $15.00 Buggy Harness	7.50
A 240-lb. Scoop and Platform Scale,	3.00
A 4-lb. Family or Store Scale,	1.00

Catalogue of 1000 useful articles sent FREE. Address

CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

Educational Dep't.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR KINDERGARTNERS.

Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,

Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping. Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by MAIL. Circulars free. BRYANT & STRATTON'S, 433 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting N. Y. Turkish Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A $60.00 Sewing Machine For $14.90.

Sold low to advertise us and win new customers. Large stock, other goods very cheap. This is the Singer Model, (original Singer). None better. Warranted for 5 years. (Registered guaranty.) Walnut top; drop leaf, 3 drawers. Full set nickel plated attachments A. T. EVANS & CO., 182 State st. Chicago.

Signal Notes.

God is not dead, nor doth He sleep;
The wrong shall fail,
The right prevail
With peace on earth, good-will to men.
—Longfellow.

THE London publishing houses are eagerly contending for the privilege of giving Stanley's forthcoming book to the world. One firm is reported to have offered $200,000 for it.

THE Mississippi White-Ribboner tells of a "palace of justice" in New Orleans, which is "arranged with due regard to the fitness of things;" the lower story occupied by saloons; the upper story by the criminal court.

MUNICIPAL suffrage has been granted to the women of Prince Edward Island. This form of suffrage now exists in every province in Canada.

THE annual meeting of the Illinois Woman's Press Association will be held in Monica Hall, No. 127 La Salle street, Thursday evening, January 16. The president's annual address, reports of officers and committees will be given, officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and other important business will be transacted.

AN English lady whose unostentatious ministrations to the sick have attracted much attention lately, has volunteered to act as nurse in the Hawaiian leper settlement, on the island of Molokai, and has announced her intention to sail for that place almost immediately.

THE British and Foreign Bible Society reports that the sacred Scriptures were last year translated into six fresh languages. The number of tongues in which this society now publishes the Bible is thus increased to 300. Fifty years ago it was published in 150 tongues. The society distributed 4,206,000 volumes during the year.

THE North Dakota prohibition law, recently passed by the legislature, punishes a first offense with a fine of from $200 to $1,000, and imprisonment not less than ninety days nor more than one year. The second and each succeeding offense are treated as felony, with punishment in state's prison for not more than two years, and not less than one. Registered pharmacists may sell for medicinal, scientific and sacramental purposes. All places where intoxicants are sold are declared common nuisances, and sheriffs are empowered to abate them and destroy all intoxicants and fixtures found therein.

HACKNEY, in the east and northeast, is one of the most populous quarters of London, and in it temperance work has been long and successfully carried on. It possesses, among other organizations, a Hackney and East Middlesex Band of Hope Union, which recently celebrated its thirteenth anniversary. It now numbers one hundred and forty-six societies, with twenty thousand members. Last year its speakers, lecturers and magic lanterns were supplied to one thousand four hundred meetings. The Bishop of Bedford is president.

ONE thousand Christian Chinamen are said to be connected with the Congregational missions in Oregon and California.

MR. A. J. MUNDELLA, M. P., made the assertion that 55,000 children in London went to school each morning unfed. Such a state of things is impossible but for drink.

THE Reformer gives this bit of history: "A firm of Middleborough iron masters, who had the highest reputation and got the highest price for what they sold, had never allowed a drop of intoxicating liquors to go inside their gates since the establishment of their works thirty years ago. Will our opponents parallel that?"

THERE will be a mass convention of the Prohibition party of Missouri in Sedalia, February 3-8. It is urged that members of the Farmers' Alliance, the Knights of Labor and other organizations in sympathy with the temperance reform, send representatives and aid in formulating a platform which shall adequately express mutual views on the political issues of the day. F. M. Lowe will address the conference on Monday, February 3; ex-Governor St. John and Dr. J. A. Brooks will speak on Tuesday. Reduced rates on railroads and reasonable rates of entertainment will be secured.

A DOZEN members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with representatives from several other societies, went with Mrs. H. N. K. Goff to the mayor of Brooklyn, December 23, to urge him to appoint matrons in the various police stations. It is hoped this good effort may be successful.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH.
SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS, UNEQUALLED.
NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.

Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour. Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
An INCOMPARABLE Food Ready for IMMEDIATE USE. Unsurpassed for Children, Invalids, and persons of SEDENTARY HABITS.
MOTHERS write for circulars
Trial box, prepaid 36cts. Address
OUR HOME GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Mention this publication

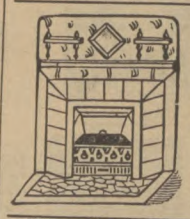
THE GLUTEN Flour the best and most economical flour made, the only cure for Dyspepsia. Recommended by Physicians. Kenosha Mills Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago. Entire Wheat

DETECTIVE.
We want a man in every locality to act as Private Detective under our instructions. Particulars free Central Detective Bureau, Box 195, Topeka, Kans.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.



Buyers of Mantels, Fireplace and Tile work will consult their interest by visiting our rooms or sending us their address before purchasing. We furnish a mantel like cut for $25.00 Liberal commission to agents.
THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO.,
Charles L. Page, Pres.
Down town show room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago. See our blower attachment.

RIDGE'S FOOD The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

LADIES' BEAUTIFUL Embroidered Robes, only $2.99 all colors. Send at once for descriptive price list. A. H. AGNEW, Alexandria, Va

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

THE WONDEROUS WEATHER PLANT.
This is the most marvelous plant ever introduced, the sensation of Europe, and the plant about which the scientific papers are saying so much. Its leaves truly foretell the state of the weather three days in advance, proven by many thousand tests. It is a most beautiful trailing or climbing vine, with graceful fern-like foliage and racemes or lovely flowers in great profusion. It grows quickly from seed, and is suitable either for outdoor or window culture, and in grace and beauty surpasses all other climbing plants. The Pall Mall Gazette of London says: "The remarkable Weather Plant (Abrus) continues to excite interest, and men of science agree that the plant is in truth prophetic. Thirty-two thousand trials tend to prove its infallibility. Its leaves by changing their position foretell the state of the weather three days in advance." The seed are bright scarlet, like beautiful beads. Our Catalogue gives full description, history, illustrations and newspaper comments. Fresh, genuine seed 25 cents per packet; 5 packets for $1 postpaid, together with a copy of our elegant Catalogue and four colored chromo plates. We also offer the great CYCLONE PLANT of the Black Hills (Cyclotoma Platyphylla), a most curious and novel plant. Also CHILDS' RUBY GOLD WATER MELON, the greatest Vegetable Novelty of the age. Flesh golden yellow, variegated with streaks and layers of bright pink; fifty to sixty pounds in weight, and the most beautiful and delicious melon known; having a tenderness and lusciousness unsurpassed. Per packet each 20 cents.
SPECIAL OFFER: For only 50 cents we will mail a packet each of the Weather Plant, Cyclone Plant, Ruby Gold Melon, the charming Shirley Poppies, Snow-White Pansy and Catalogue.
OUR CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare Fruits is the most magnificent ever issued. 116 pages profusely illustrated, and four large colored plates and colored covers. We offer the finest novelties in Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits, notably: our great Japanese Wineberry, Jewel Dahlia, Mary Washington Rose, Fruit Tomatoes, Cycas, Hardy Orange, Tree Currant, Rosebud Poppies, etc. Also the greatest collection of flowering Shrubs and rare Cacti. This elegant and expensive Catalogue will be sent for only TEN CENTS, which is only a part of its cost to us, or if you order any thing here offered, and ask for a Catalogue it will be sent FREE. Write at once, as this offer may not appear again.
Address JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, Queens Co., N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S CHICAGO PARKS FLOWERS, IN SEEDS, PLANTS, BULBS.
Our Catalogue for 1890 TELLS THE WHOLE STORY for the Garden, Lawn and Farm The handsomest, most complete and conservative SEED BOOK of the year. Our CHICAGO PARKS' Strains of FLOWER SEEDS and PLANTS are the finest in America. We mail free everywhere DOLLAR COLLECTIONS of these, among which are VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSY MIXTURE from all the celebrated growers in Europe and America. 5 packets for $1. Pkt. 25 cts. CHICAGO PARK'S BEDDING PANSIES, 12 separate colors for 50 cts. Our MIKADO Collection, 10 best Annuals for 25 cts. VAUGHAN'S CHICAGO PARKS' LAWN GRASS MIXTURE 4 pounds postpaid for $1. Sow early. LINCOLN PARK COLLECTION of 12 choicest Geraniums for $1. Our beautiful Catalogue with every order. We sell all Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, Garden Tools, Field Seeds, Corn, Potatoes, Small Fruits and Hardy Plants. Combine your orders here saving freight, time and expense. Send 10 cents for any kind of Seed and get Catalogue free.
VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, 146-148 W. Washington St, CHICAGO

We claim to be one of the largest growers and importers of Flower Seeds in America. In order to introduce them as widely as possible we make this UNPRECEDENTED OFFER. For 25c. in postage stamps or money we will send by mail one pkt. each of the following Valuable Seeds: New Diamond Aster, very handsome colors; Mixed Balsams, immense size, double as a rose; Calliopsis, Golden Wave, new, very showy; New Hybrid Caillardria, unrivaled for beauty; Phloxdrumundii Grandiflora Splendens, 15 distinct shades; GIANT SHOW PANSIES, immense size, rich and velvety; New Mammoth Verbena, 12 choice colors; New Giant Zinnia, largest in the world; 10 Seeds of ANNUAL NUTMEG PLANT, great value, never before offered; Amaranthus Gibbosus, highly ornamental; one Beautiful Everlasting Flower, 11 full-size pkts., with directions for culture, for 25c.. 5 Collections, $1.00. Catalogue with each order. SAMUEL WILSON, Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa.

FREE
Prettiest BOOK ever Printed.
SEED
ONE CENT A PACKAGE, and up, per rarity, scarcity, or cost. 1000000 extras. Cheap as dirt by oz. & lb. Send your address. R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable; celebrated for Purity and Strong Germinating Qualities. Only 2 and 3c per large package, and novelty extras with all orders. Mammoth Seed Farms! One Acre of Solid Glass! Write for my Beautiful Illustrated Catalogue. Free.
H. W. BUCKBEE,
Rockford Seed Farm, ROCKFORD, ILL.

SEEDS 6 pkts of my choicest Flower Seeds, 10c. Beautiful catalogue free.
F. B. MILLS, Thorn Hill, N. Y.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.

THE LITTLE GEM SWEET ALYSSUM
BURPEE'S GEM COLLECTION FOR 1890
Contains one regular size packet each of the fragrant Little Gem Sweet Alyssum,—the rare and lovely blue Torenia Fournieri,—the gorgeous new Shirley Poppies,—many varieties mixed of Choice Double Asters,—the unequaled strain of Burpee's Superb Camellia-Flowered Balsams,—Finest Mixed Chinese and Japanese Pinks,—Extra fine Mixed New and Beautiful Ipomoeas,—Choice Mixed Pansies,—Fordhook strain of Superfine Petunia Hybrida,—and twelve grand New Sweet Peas Mixed,—in all TEN VARIETIES Best new and popular Annuals for 25 Cents, or 5 Gem Collections mailed for $1. Try to get up a Club. Illustration and directions for growing printed on each packet. Purchased separately at retail the ten packets in our 25 cent Gem Collection would cost 85 cts., and this Special Offer is made to induce all to TRY BURPEE'S SEEDS. ORDER NOW and ask for a Handsomely Illustrated CATALOGUE —mailed FREE—of all the BEST SEEDS including Rare NOVELTIES of unusual merit.
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"GOOD SENSE" CORDED CORSET WAISTS are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them.

PRONOUNCING PARALLEL FAMILY BIBLE
The only Pronouncing Parallel Bible. From new plates, and now for the first time offered to Bible Agents. No such aid as Pronouncing Text has ever been offered to Bible Canvassers before. Every proper name in the whole Bible is properly pronounced. Massive in size, magnificently illustrated, additional matter in great variety. Prices low, discounts liberal. Those first in the field will reap the harvest. Agents wanted everywhere. Send for particulars. CRANSTON & STOWE, CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 4.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 23, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: W. T. P. A. Stockholders' Meeting—Do Something—The National W. C. T. U.—Partisan Versus Non-Partisanship 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Conqueror, by Julia H. Thayer—Her Talisman, by W. P. J.—English Factory Acts in Relation to Women and Children, by Helen Campbell—Just These Two, by Abby Morton Diaz—International Temperance Studies, by Felix L. Oswald, M. D.—Review of "Truth in the Case"—Temple Items, by Matilda B. Carse..... 2, 3, 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, By and By—The "Deck-Hand"..... 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning January 26, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, "With what Measure Ye Mete it Shall be Measured to you Again"—Misapprehensions of Good People—A "Crusade Day" Echo—Helpful Hints—Hints on Service—Light and Shade. 7
DIRECTORY..... 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Colorado, Oregon, District of Columbia, Rhode Island, Texas, Illinois, News in a Nutshell—Notice..... 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: School of Methods of the National W. C. T. U.—Prison, Jail, Police and Almshouse Work—Woman's Lecture Bureau..... 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Emin Pasha has had a relapse. Grave fears are entertained for his recovery.

President Harrison will issue a proclamation opening the Sioux Reservation at once.

The Woman's Board of Missions sent twenty-two missionaries to foreign fields in 1889. The total receipts for the year were $112,110.

The Rev. De Witt Talmage has cancelled his English engagements because of the influenza, and will sail for Brooklyn in a few days.

Marshal Field has supplemented Mr. J. D. Rockerfeller's gift of $600,000 toward the establishment of a Chicago Baptist University, by the donation of ten acres of valuable land as a site.

The Pope has issued an encyclical that sets forth the principles which shall guide Catholics in their relations toward the state. They must obey the state, it is declared, when such a course does not entail disobedience to the divine laws. In countries where the state opposes Catholicism, Catholics must combat the enemy, but must not tie the church to any political party.

On Wednesday, the 15th, at Washington, D. C., occurred the death of Walker Blaine, eldest son of Hon. James G. Blaine, Secretary of State. The sudden demise of this estimable young man is a severe loss to the State Department as well as to the entire Cabinet. He was his father's first assistant, and held the responsible position of Examiner of Claims. More than a thousand messages of condolence and expressions of high esteem have been received by the bereaved family, and all Washington united to do honor to one so worthy and beloved, on Saturday, the day of the funeral.

THE uncertainty is over. An "elegant dinner" has been given at the White House, not to the foreign ministers, but to a Cabinet of Americans, and the ruler of forty-four states—in seven of which the sale of alcoholic liquors is an offense that may send a man to prison—the Presbyterian president furnished wine in abundance to his guests.

IN response to the letter of Miss Willard to Governor Goodell, of New Hampshire, published in a late issue of this paper, his Excellency sends a cordial response. Among other things he says: "I have but little authority as Governor to enforce laws, but so far as the influence of my position goes, it shall be in favor of rigid enforcement of prohibitory law. I am glad to assure you that I am supported by the good people of the state in a wonderful manner, and I expect excellent results."

THERE is no lack of expert medical testimony to the effect that vices of appetite tighten the grip of "la grippe" upon the sons of men. Pasteur commands them to quit smoking tobacco. A learned Brooklyn physician says the only cases he has lost have been men of bibulous habits, and that if a man confesses to taking an occasional glass of whisky, he orders most rigid abstinence during the attack. Beware of the doctor who recommends whisky with the quinine. He does not "understand his business."

AN appeal has been issued to grocers and confectioners from the British Women's Temperance Association. After calling serious attention to the growth of intemperance among women, which is believed to be largely due to the facilities afforded for obtaining intoxicants through the granting of licenses to grocers and confectioners, they appeal to the holders of such licenses to co-operate in removing this source of temptation. "If sacrifice is called for, we would assure you that it is a privilege to give up anything that is counter to the glory of God, and destructive of the best interests of humanity."

THE church should not be exclusive, but inclusive. It should claim all good things as its own. It should show that "hereditary momentum," as Joseph Cook so aptly calls it, comes from generations of consecrated ancestry; that a pure, good life does not happen, but is the result of confluent causes that could by no possibility have had any other outcome. The church should claim every lofty, generous Christian as its own, every brave, brotherly word as its echo, and then should kindly reprove the sneering moralist who will have nothing of religion, and tell him that he does not render to God the things that are God's, but plants a blow on the cheek of his own mother, and dishonors his father's hallowed name.

THERE is no one thing that will at present so help on all reforms in which good people are interested, as the development of the Australian system of voting, which is a practical defense against illiteracy, and greatly enforces every argument in favor of equal franchise. There are many states in which a qualified ballot for women, that is, one having practically an educational test, would be received with favor, where the general subject of an unlimited suffrage is unpopular. Our people are profoundly convinced that we need less voting instead of more. The Australian system provides for a sifted, assorted, separated vote, one that on the whole shall more fairly represent the intelligence, conscience, and business interests of the country.

THE "Woolsey Professorship" of Biblical Literature, lately established in the Academic Department of Yale University will, we trust, be followed by similar professorships in other colleges, until secular education shall become spiritualized. The $50,000 financial basis upon which this chair stands was donated by a few men who refuse to give their names to the public. Their object, as stated in the announcement, is "to impart an intelligent apprehension of the English Bible with a view to stimulating earnest Christian faith, and the development of manly Christian life." Much interest is manifest among the students, two large classes having been formed. Professor Wm. Harper is the present incumbent.

ONE of the most remarkable utterances made at the recent state convention of temperance people at Des Moines, Iowa, was the declaration of the outgoing Governor Larrabee that his experience as governor of the state had made him favorable to prohibition. He said that he had formerly opposed it as impracticable, but that in eighty counties in the state the jails had been emptied, and the number of persons in the state penitentiary reduced by one-half during his administration, and that court and people were agreed that the cause of this was prohibition. He said that the taxes were less and the markets better, and that observing all these things in the administration of the affairs of the state he could not help but become a Prohibitionist. Governor Larrabee was distrusted by the temperance people when elected, lest his known opposition to prohibition at the time of its submission should lead to the use of his position as governor to belittle and defeat the law. But his conversion to prohibition while administering a law contrary to his personal convictions, is not less a compliment to the character of the law than to the sincerity and candor of the convert.

THE "Afro-American Convention" held in Madison Street Theater January 16, 17 and 18, numbered about 120 delegates. A League was formed, with Professor Price, of North Carolina, as president, and an address to the public was agreed upon, from which we take the following:

We hope to stimulate among the Afro-Americans more thrift, more economy, and a higher morality. We hope to lead them into ways of more correct education, the better to meet the present requirements of the age. To this end we rely more upon the wisdom of establishing agricultural, mechanical and business schools, together with the academical and professional schools, rather than maintaining exclusive schools for mental training. We hope, and earnestly expect, that each state in which large numbers of our people are congregated will supplement the appropriations now made for the maintenance of public schools, by liberal appropriations for the establishment and maintenance of such agricultural, mechanical and business schools, which can be easily made self-sustaining. We also favor the principle of national aid for the education of the people.

It is our desire to accomplish the purpose of the League by peaceful and law-abiding means. We earnestly protest against all forms of violence, which can never be justifiable except in self-defense. With the entire race earnestly laboring to accomplish the objects herein stated, and with the coöperation of the best elements of the people of the country, North and South, East and West, and relying upon the eternal justice of the God of nations, we confidently expect a result favorable to the right.

The Blair Bill was heartily indorsed.

THE Men's Department of the Bible Institute conducted by the Chicago Evangelization Society, of Chicago, of which D. L. Moody is president, was formally opened on January 16. The building has one hundred and twenty feet front, and a depth of one hundred feet. A court thirty feet square in the center, provides for good ventilation. There are ample reception rooms, music room, dining-room, store-rooms of every sort, laundry, and very perfectly equipped culinary department. There are thirty-one bedrooms. The chapel has seating capacity for 300. Three pianos have been donated, one of exceptional beauty and tone, being the gift of Cooper Institute, New York. A fine collection of colored plates in oak frames was given by the Chicago Art Institute. This institution is the showing forth of a plan cherished by Mr. Moody for twenty years. Its aim is tersely expressed by him: "We wish to test the women workers. If they have a gift to work here they may work in a foreign field. We want to train women in large cities to go into the houses of the people who can't go to church. Women can do this work better than men. They can go into houses and not disturb the women. We want to train men as presentors, to be able to lead the singing in churches. We want to train men to go into saloons and gambling hells and save men. We want to train evangelists to go into the world and teach the Bible to men."

THE name of Edward Delavan stands high in temperance records. He was one of the few rich men ready to devote time, influence, talent, fortune—all that he was and had—to the cause. His work was so many-sided that its history would be well-nigh the history of the reform through nearly half a century. One piece of work he left unfinished; it seems eminently fitting that we should take it up and carry it on. In 1834, Mr. Delavan conceived the thought of securing the official influence of successive Presidents of the United States for the temperance cause. He had Dr. Justin Edwards draw up a Presidential declaration and then himself undertook the task of securing to it the signatures of all the Presidents. This declaration is as follows: "Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirits, as a drink, is not only needless, but hurtful, and that the entire disuse of it would tend to promote the health, the virtue, and the happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction that should the citizens of the United States, and especially the young men, discontinue entirely the use of it, they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and of the world." Andrew Jackson was then President; Mr. Delavan at once secured his signature and those of the living ex-Presidents, Mr. Madison and John Quincy Adams; so long as he lived, Mr. Delavan presented the declaration in turn, to each incoming President. It now bears these signatures, taking the order in which they were appended: James Madison, Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren, John Tyler, James K. Polk, Z. Taylor, Millard Fillmore, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Johnson." Why cannot Mrs. La Fetra and her valiant co-workers at the Capital, look up this precious document and present it to Mr. Hayes, Mr. Cleveland and President Harrison for their signatures? We feel sure they would sign it, and thus new links would be added to the chain.

Contributed.

THE CONQUEROR.

BY JULIA H. THAYER.

Through Morning's vast triumphal arch,
Along a dust-beclouded way,
With what a grand, majestic march,
Advance the glittering hosts of Day.

Lift up your heads, ye gates of fire,
Ye everlasting doors of light,
The King of Glory, Nature's sire,
Returns victorious over Night.

And thou, O world below, prepare
Thy freshest coronals of flowers,
And send on votive wings of air
The worship of the perfumed hours.

See, not a watch-fire burns aloft;
The ranks of Gloom have fallen back,
And ambushed shadows, creeping soft,
Have followed their receding track.

No acclamations rend the skies,
No rude expression couched in word,
And yet responsive mysteries
In vapor, air and fire are heard.

With cloth of gold the east is spread
Far up the sapphire royal way,
And Earth salutes, with lifted head,
This god whom all her laws obey.

HER TALISMAN.

BY W. P. J.

"Be a good girl! Come home as soon as you can!"

It was at a railway station. The express train rushed towards the depot as if no power on earth could stop it, but suddenly checked by an unseen hand, the iron monster halted with a deafening clang and a jar that fairly shook the little platform. Rapidly the passengers crowded on and off the cars, all excitement lest the train should move before they could change places.

I had seen two middle-aged women accompanying a younger one to the depot, helping her to carry her valise and bundles. The elder ones were clad in homely garments, the younger in clothing somewhat better, but betokening humble circumstances. It took but a glance to show which one of the group was the mother. She had a wistful look in her eyes as she turned towards her darling, an anxious expression as she gazed down the track at the coming train, and when it suddenly halted, she started as if somebody had struck her.

But there was no time for reverie now. "All aboard," rang out on the crisp air; and, as she hurriedly laid the bundles on the seat that her daughter had chosen, I saw that her hands were calloused by hard work, that her face was wrinkled, not so much by age as by toil, and that gray hairs were braided with the brown under her worn and faded bonnet.

There was but an instant in which to note it all. No sooner had she deposited the bundles than she snatched a kiss from the trembling lips, and exclaiming, "Be a good girl! Come home as soon as you can!" rushed to the door, the mist in her tender eyes bursting into tears, and her words giving place to choking sobs, as she regained the ground.

I turned to observe the girl. There were tears on her eyelids; there was that painful contraction of the lips which betokened suppressed grieving, but even through her tears I could see that expectation in her eyes which ever attends on youth making its first venture forth into the great world.

"Will she ponder those words," I asked, "that mother's parting exhortation?"

Of course she will. She will think of it until the last day of her life, and when her mother's "home" is no longer on earth, but among the blessed angels, even then she will seem to hear her call: "Be a good girl; come home as soon as you can!"

***

In the strange city to which she went, the simple country girl had to associate in her daily work with girls who were familiar with the impurities of city slums. Obscene stories, obscene gossip, obscene slang, vulgar signals and gestures were retailed in her hearing, and flaunted before her, whenever the mistress was out of sight. Yet all this was seasoned with wit, and mingled with words and acts of good nature. No plot to corrupt the girl was evident—perhaps none was intended. So much the more dangerous, then, was this temptation to impurity of thought and life. Betimes, the conversation that had sounded disgusting at first grew commonplace, and presently when sallies of coarse wit were made, she ventured, in repartee, to echo back some of the foul stuff that had been ringing in her ears. But it sounds worse from her lips than it had ever done from the lips of others. Was it indeed her own voice that uttered that obscene joke? Tears come to her eyes. She turns aside to hide them. She hears the ribald talks of the kitchen no longer; the scene in the railroad car flits before her like a vision; she feels that trembling kiss, she sees the anxious face of her mother as she gropes her way out of the car; she hears her say, "Be a good girl!" No wonder she seeks a corner where she can wash the shame from her cheek with bitter, but saving tears.

Again a companion, a fellow servant, witty, sociable, but unrestrained and frivolous, fills her ears with wonderful stories of the sights to be seen in this and that place of amusement. She tempts her to keep her company along the gas-lit streets, stopping now at this brilliantly-lighted window, now strolling into that crowded shop, now waiting to speak and laugh with butterfly acquaintances out on a similar excursion.

Presently they hear music—they are in front of a low concert saloon.

"Come, let us go in here," cries the giddy friend.

Before she knows where she is going, she has entered, lured by the music and the siren at her side. She is seated. Gaudily-dressed women and girls, like her friend, are around her. Coarse-looking men, dissipated faces, young and old, are on every side of her. Her virtuous instinct shudders—she rises to leave. Her friend pulls her back into her seat.

"Wait! Wait! The curtain is just a goin' to rise! You fool! What makes you look so scared? Nobody here ain't goin' to hurt you!"

But she hears the voice of her mother, despite the din of the tambourine, the brazen horns and the cymbals. Clear beyond the stage where shameless actors, men and women, besmeared with rouge and chalk, and glittering with tinsel, are going through their obscene exhibition, she sees the tears trickling down the furrows in her mother's care-worn cheeks, and with the words ringing in her ears, "Come home as soon as you can," she slips from the side of her false friend and hastens to her room —saved from the tempter by that potent talisman—the sobbing syllables of a parting mother's love.

Yet once again the devil essays her ruin. This time he wears a lover's guise. He seems a man, a gentleman. He reaches down, as it were, from above, to lift her to a higher plane than the humble level on which she was born. She waited upon him at table. At first he only slipped a pleasant word between the orders for his food; then witty speeches and friendly questions. Then he was sorry she couldn't have a good time like other girls. She must have a ride some Sunday afternoon, when it was her day off! He would take her himself. Would she go?

What girl can refuse a ride to the suburbs with a handsome companion, especially if she has seen him day after day, and he always seems a real gentleman, and mingles hints of admiration with his gentle manners?

She went—not once, but again and again. He breathed love to her. She told him she was unsuited to his station in life, that she was unlearned; that she knew no more of gentle life than she had seen in the hotel dining-room.

He vowed she was a lady by nature, unaffected, simple, pure. He adored her! He glanced around him; the boulevard was nearly deserted. Quickly passing his arm around her, he drew her to his heart, and pressed a kiss upon her forehead. She was his!

The days passed rapidly. There were evening walks in which he took her to the house of his "aunt." There she met several "cousins" and their friends, and played cards and frolicked and listened to amusing songs sung to flute and violin, with piano accompaniments. He made her presents. He laid a wager and lost it, of course, and paid "the bet"—a lovely hat and evening dress.

She was almost insane with delight. That evening they visited the "aunt," and "aunt" and "cousins" and their "friends" praised her till she blushed crimson. Wine was brought in, and she was tempted to taste of it. They made her dance. They played wild games. They rushed into one another's arms; they caressed, they laughed, they romped in a delirium of passion. Her head was almost bursting with the effects of the wine, the heat, the carnival of passion.

"What does all this mean?" her tottering reason seemed to gasp.

She shut her eyes to recall her scattered senses. In that moment's darkness, her frightened heart cried out, "Mother, where am I?" She heard the rushing of the train, she saw her mother's anxious face, felt her pure lips upon her cheek. Swifter than the rushing car which snatched her from her mother's embrace, she bounded from her seat, and before her amazed, half-drunken lover and his imps could interpose, had sped into the street. The world, the flesh and the devil had failed!

Shame, anger, sense of horrible indignity, desire for revenge, strove in her bosom like tongues of flame in a gulf of fire, and drove her, furious, to her room.

Oh, that room! As its door closed upon her, how dark, how cold, how desolate it seemed! Then her murdered love—her woman's first and strongest love struggling in dying agony—cried out within her, "What shall I do? What shall I do?" And what could she do? Where could she turn for comfort? Who had stabbed her thus? Ah, bitterest thought of all!—he whom she had almost worshiped.

Alas! to find one's idol only a gilded shell, like that brazen Chinese Buddha, filled with foul vermin! How it sickens the very soul! And was this life? Was this the glorious world to which the rainbow-spanned [illegible] way of youth led forth?

Shut in with desertion and despair, no wonder she fell prone upon the floor, and wringing her hands cried, "Let me die! Oh, let me die!"

Unconsciousness is reason's last physician, administering balm of sleep and oil of rest when the mind has rejected all other remedies. Men sometimes swoon from dying, back to life again. So did she. And, after a night of fearful dreams, morning wakened her again. Wakened her for what? Surely not to live there. Mother's door is always open, mother's love is always warm. Fly to your ark, white dove! Cast yourself down at those knees where you first learned to pray "deliver us from evil." See God's love in that mother's eye. Hear it speak when she blesses her child. Healing is in that blessing, poor, broken heart! where mother-love is, there Christ is near.

***

It was evening. The mother's hard day's work was almost finished. She heard the gate open and shut, and then the sound of footfalls—such as only one dear pair of feet in all the earth could make. In an instant her thumb was on the latch—wide open flew the door—the light streamed past her far out into the gloom, she seemed transfigured while she stood upon the threshold with open arms to receive her child. Almost fainting, that dear head sank upon her bosom; and before the long embrace was over, something in the footfall, something in the first look, something in the embrace, had told that mother all she needed to know—that her darling had come back to her with an aching heart, but an unsullied soul.

ENGLISH FACTORY ACTS IN RELATION TO WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

I.

To give any thorough view of the subject, even from the merely historical side, would require far more space than that at my command, while the bearings of the question, and the problems that face one at each of its phases, mean not days, but weeks of patient study. I offer now, then, only hints as to the past, and as condensed a statement as possible of the present status of English factory acts, and their bearing on women and children, referring in the end to one or two authorities from which some covering for the skeleton may be obtained.

The story of factory labor in England is much the same as that of France and the manufacturing portions of the Continent anywhere, complicated by the fact that Anglo-Saxon obtuseness in the upper class, and utter brutality in the lower, so far as the relations of both to women were concerned, delayed the passage of any acts which could modify the conditions of women and children years after that of male workers had been provided for. The first English factory act passed in 1802, and others at intervals later, but it was not till 1844 that women were brought under their provisions, and then only in slight degree. For men and women alike, there seemed no hope of arousing general attention to the hideous nature of the conditions which had followed the introduction of machinery and the transfer of labor from the home to the factory. The love of gain, the growing pressure of competition, the blindness to any side but the personal one, arrayed capital as a body against labor, and even wise legislators dreaded action which should seem to interfere in the slightest degree with that spirit of individualism which is the Englishman's birthright.

As usual, it was the meddling reformer who called attention to evils so gross that the only wonder was that any eyes could be closed to them. The first factory act was known as "The Health and Morals Act," passed in 1802, and was the result of the discovery made by first voluntary, then appointed inspectors, that neither health nor morals remained for factory workers, and that hopeless deterioration would result unless government interfered at once. Hideous epidemic diseases, an extinction of any small natural endowment of moral sense, and a daily life infinitely below that of the brutes, had developed as industries developed, and the story in all its horror may be read in the books of Giffen, Engels, Toynbee, and other names identified with the cause of the worker.

So the first act was passed, and, year by year, others, with alterations and modifications, till, in 1833, another note of warning sounded, and a report on the condition of the people of Manchester gave the keynote to the situation everywhere. At this time 70,000 children under the legal age were working fourteen and sixteen hours a day in England under conditions less desirable than those of the farm animals. In Manchester they were packed away in tenement houses, of which the Government Inspector reported that 2,221 had no privies, the lanes serving this purpose, while out of 687 streets inspected, 352 contained heaps of refuse and ordure. Happily, the cholera appeared, and thus attention was called to a state of things which typhus and other fevers had already indicated, one would have supposed, with sufficient distinctness.

The Tory element in Parliament fought tooth and nail against reform of any description, and though manufacturers everywhere admitted that if a single act were repealed the old evils would at once reappear, a stated number worked continually for repeal, with no effect.

A summary of the various acts can only be indicated. That of 1802 fixed the hours of work at twelve; required factories to be whitewashed, and to have a sufficient number of windows, but these provisions applied only to apprenticed operatives. In 1819 came the act which covered the employment of all children in factories, and forbade the employment of any under nine years of age. In 1825 came one which made Saturday a half holiday, and in 1831, night work was forbidden to persons between nine and twenty-one. For all under eighteen the working day was fixed at twelve hours, with nine for Saturday.

In 1833, a great step forward was made, for children between nine and thirteen years were limited to forty-eight hours a week. In 1835, underground work was prohibited for them. In 1844, for the first time, adult women, this meaning from eighteen years of age on, were brought under the same regulations, and in 1847 were restricted nominally to ten hours' work per day, though it ran over these bounds, the working day, including an allowance of two hours for meals, being from 5:30 a. m., to 8:30 p. m.

Thus far these laws had applied only to textile manufactures, but in 1864 many more industries were included. In 1867 the day for children was ordered to be from 6 a. m. to 8 p. m., and for young persons from 5 a. m. to 9 p. m.; and finally in 1874 the employment of any children under ten was prohibited in England.

With 1878 came the great movement for consolidation and improvement of all acts, and a repeal of all from 1802 to 1878 was passed, these being sixteen in number. The new act contained 107 sections, and an appendage of six schedules, all minute and full in detail.

The system had developed such evils, and their growth so exceeded any fruit of legislation, that more and more restriction was placed upon manufacturers. Factory legislation is a growth necessarily, and a slow one, since any legislation whatever demanded an awakened moral sense, and to arouse this had been the well-nigh impossible task. Evasion was the law everywhere, and to prevent this, a corps of inspectors was demanded. Even these were bribed, hoodwinked and generally put off the track, while the provisions in regard to shielding of dangerous machinery, cleanliness, etc., were ignored by every possible method. The public conscience was stirred more deeply by Charles Reade's "Put Yourself in His Place," with its picture of the results of unprotected machinery, than by any government reports, but the work of the inspector remains one of the most difficult offices to fulfill. Were law obeyed and its provisions thoroughly carried out, English factory operatives would be better protected than those of any other country, America included. Sanitary conditions are required to be good. All factories must be kept clean, as any effluvia arising from closets, etc., renders owners liable to a fine. The generation of dust, gas, etc., must be neutralized by the inventions for this purpose, so that operatives may not be harmed thereby. Any manufacturer allowing machinery to remain unprotected is to be prosecuted, and there are minute regulations forbidding any child or young person to clean or walk between the fixed or traversing part of any self-acting machine while in motion. At least two hours must be allowed for meals, nor are these to be taken in any room where manufacturing is going on. A fixed number of attendances at school are demanded for every child.

This final act, since there seems to have arisen no further need of amendment, makes but little change in the English factory system, since it is a consolidation of all past legislation. It demands a fixed time for the education of children, and hedges about the employment of both women and children with the restrictions and penalties already mentioned. But even with all this, the Englishman still claims his right to do what he will with "his own," his own being wife and children, the first no less helpless than the last. The lowest order still feels it his right and privilege to kick his wife's brains out if he likes, and, if drunk enough to lose sight of consequences, beats her where, when, and as much as he will, and this ingrained brutality in the lowest, has its counterpart in the highest. It is this type of parent that lies as to the age of children, and lives upon the wages they must turn over to him, and who resents any shortening of hours or bettering of conditions as onslaught upon his rights as free-born Englishman. Certain results of this tendency shall be given in the next number.

JUST THESE TWO.

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

The problem of humanity's welfare can be solved only by the application of these two principles:

First. Life, for each and all, means the full development of their highest and best. Such is the divine order as seen in nature, everything bringing forth fruit after its kind, according as it manifests the fullness of its individual life. The universal recognition of this first principle will cause very great changes in our present educational systems—so-called.

Second. "We are members one of another." Humanity is one family. A recognition of this family kinship will compel the more favored to work for the above named development of the less favored. The work will be accomplished by equalizing opportunities. Members of one family share, and share alike. Thus by the application and coöperation of our two principles shall the desirable prevail and the undesirable disappear.

At present humanity is not living. Where, in any of its classes and conditions do we find complete individual development? Look among the distressed poor, the luxurious millionaires and all the way between; look among toilers everywhere: in the different trades, in the fields, in factories, in gloomy basements, in the bowels of the earth. Look among our business men, absorbed in complicated schemes, ever in dire strait betwixt hope of gain and fear of loss; among bankers and bookkeepers, thinking out their days in figures; among the hosts of full-grown men using up existence at ribbon-counters, selling buttons and spools of thread, matching samples and measuring off fabrics by the yard and fractions of a yard; among professional men, their thinking faculties chiefly brought into exercise, and even the thinking brought within narrow limits. Look among the millions enrolled in armies, filled with thought of war-glory and perpetually drilled in the art of human destruction. Look among the unfortunates who crowd our prisons, asylums, almshouses, hospitals. Look among women; women in the degradation of poverty or in the degradation of riches; women at the bottom sacrificed to the demands of hard-grinding labor; or women at the top (so-called), sacrificed to the demands of fashionable life; women in every station absorbed more or less in occupations which limit rather than enlarge. Where, among all these men and women, where in the whole mass of humanity, shall we find that full individual development—physical, intellectual, moral, spiritual, which alone can be called life?

Speaking generally, our present social, commercial, political and industrial systems stand directly in the way of such development, so that life in its fullness is out of the question. Also, these systems do by their very nature hinder the recognition of human kinship with all that implies, and actually compel a struggle for self's interests. From them must inevitably come the grinding of the poor, the oppression of the weak, together with strife, greed, dishonor, immorality, jealousy, envy, discontent, strikes, misery. Thus chaos prevails, and the problem of humanity's welfare remains unsolved. For we shall never get a right answer unless we do our sum by the right rules. Let all have equal facilities for showing forth the life that is in them. Let the more favored see that the less favored have these facilities.

All the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Sometime it will be found that the law now smiled at, often sneered at, called sentimental, called gush, called cant, called religion, given over to Sunday preaching—it will be found that this law is the wisest that could be devised for the conduct of every department of human affairs; that the teachings of Jesus are the most politic political economy; that it is their tendency, as it was their purpose, to make the course of life to run smoothly on earth by means of good will among men. If love is the fulfilling of law, why not practically apply it as the law of action, interpreting it in its broadest sense? Are we ashamed of it because of its name? Are we selfishly afraid of it? When love shall universally prevail, then everybody will reap the benefit and get the blessing. When there shall be a general giving forth of the best, then everybody will receive of the best, and when our principle of complete individual development of the highest and best shall be applied, then everybody will have somewhat of good to give.

Surely none will object to this condition of things. Are there hindrances to its establishment? Yes, unwillingness, apathy and disbelief. What will help bring the day? Everyone who declares a belief in its possibility will aid in bringing it on.

INTERNATIONAL TEMPERANCE STUDIES.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

I. GERMANY.

About three hundred years ago, the French philosopher Bodin published a voluminous treatise on "Sorcery," in which he defended the practice of the Holy Inquisition and the belief in the reality of witchcraft. In spite of the extravagant absurdity of its tenets, that work, with its countless quotations from ancient and modern authors of all nations, is one of the most learned books ever written, and proves to what degree erudition can be biased by the influence of hereditary tendencies.

On the same principle we may explain the alcohol-worship of that nation of scholars—the modern Germans. The almost immemorial universality of the drink-habit has engendered a belief in its physiological necessity, and erudition has exhausted its resources to defend that belief on scientific principles. "The logic of new theories," says the physiologist Carpenter, "is very differently estimated by different individuals, all equally desirous of arriving at the truth according to their conformity or disaccordance with that aggregate of preformed opinion which has grown up in the mind of each. For just as we try whether a new piece of furniture which is offered us does or does not fit into a certain recess in our apartment, and accept or decline it accordingly, so we try a new proposition which is offered to our mental acceptance. If it at once fits into some recess in our fabric of thought, we give our assent to it by admitting it to its appropriate place. Otherwise, the mind automatically rejects it."

Nations, like individuals, have to outgrow their prejudices, and in Germany a rare combination of circumstances has coöperated to retard the process of emancipation from the bias of the alcohol superstition. The central position of the country—hemmed in, as it were, by jealous and powerful rivals—has prevented colonial enterprise. The despotism of half a hundred small potentates (nearly fourscore of them up to the middle of the eighteenth century) prevented the development of national ambition, and the suppressed energies of the people found a vent in the excitement of alcoholic excesses. Nor is there a doubt that in many cases that tendency was deliberately encouraged by the wiles of conservative politicians. The progressive liberalism of the North German universities was suppressed with a rigor more worthy of Muscovite despots. Secret political unions, and even the gymnastic associations of German students were either directly prohibited or indirectly discouraged in every possible way, while their alcoholic orgies were calmly tolerated as long as the beer-inspired orators confined themselves to non-political topics. Alcohol was patronized as a political narcotic.

A variety of influences, however, are preparing a revival of better tendencies, and it is a suggestive circumstance that the present strongholds of alcoholism gravitate more and more towards the centers of ignorance and political lethargy. The alcoholic proclivities of northern nations have been often defended on climatic reasons, but in Germany the drink habit is losing its grip on the intelligent and industrial inhabitants of the higher latitudes, while in the less progressive south states the poison-vice, especially among the lower classes, has attained appalling proportions. In Bavaria and the border regions of the adjoining countries, there are cities where a plurality of mechanics and petty government officials literally spend every available penny of their savings and hour of their leisure at the beer-shop. Beer is served at breakfast, at dinner, at supper, and with every extra lunch. The male adults discuss the quality of each new "brew" as a topic of supreme importance. They talk beer and dream of beer, and that humorous legend of the "Three Wishes," hardly exaggerates the extent of the popular alcohol worship. A benevolent fairy, tradition says, once appeared at the cottage of a poor laborer, and announced her intention to achieve his deliverance from the sorrows of poverty. "I will grant you three wishes," she said, "but only three, so consider well before you ask their fulfillment. Now what is your first wish?"

"Beer enough."

"Very well; what next?"

"Money enough."

"Now, what else?"

"A—a—" after some reflection, "a little more beer."

In the Rhineland cities the wine habit has assumed a similar phase of epidemic prevalence. The worship of Bacchus unites all creeds and all classes of society; artisans, artists, parsons, horse-dealers, government school-inspectors, pensioned colonels, shop-keepers and students, all hobnob at the Schenke, and an argument against the wholesomeness of vinous stimulants would be received with a stare, implying a misgiving as to the condition of the dissenter's mental apparatus.

In the Northern states, too, the statistics of the revenue department bespeak an enormous consumption of beer and brandy, but it is an encouraging sign of the times that the educated classes are gradually breaking the fetters of the poison-habit. There are thousands of wealthy families in Prussia, Saxony and Hanover who avoid the tap-rooms of the neighboring villages or towns very much as a Chinese philosopher would avoid the opium dens of the Canton slum-alleys, and keep wine as a hospitable New England country gentleman might keep cards and dice, for the benefit of occasional more than usually "fast" young visitors. From the dinner table of intelligent German families wine is slowly but steadily disappearing, and it would not be an over-estimate to say that north of the Hartz Mountains, there are by this time a full million homes where no alcoholic stimulants of any kind are ever tasted by children or the female members of the household. Only a hundred years ago "beer soup" was a very frequent article of nursery diet, and by no means confined to the homes of the ignorant poor; for Frederick the Great himself was, in his boyhood, fuddled regularly, though much against his will, with an abominable compound of bread crumbs, boiled currants and strong brown beer. "No milk-sop meals," was the order of his royal father; "give him something that will make a man of him." Without his rare combination of wholesome instincts and obstinate self-dependence the specific in question would probably have turned him into a half-crazy ruffian; but just about that time a geveral revival of naturalism initiated an educational reform which found its ablest exponents among the disciples of Rousseau and Pestalozzi, and it is a curious fact that many of the most advanced tenets of teetotalism were anticipated by several German writers of the eighteenth century.

Next to the influence of social tradition, the chief support of the stimulant-vice is the obstinate conservatism of the large class who, directly or indirectly, share the pecuniary profits of the liquor traffic. Their hired demagogues at once rise in wrath against every attempt at legislative reform, and one of their favorite and most effective arguments is the sophism which identifies the temperance movement with a revival of the æscetic tendencies of the Middle Ages: "They have abolished our tournaments and our May festivals; dancing is denounced as a sin; bathing in the open rivers is suppressed by their prudish police; hunting and fishing have become a prerogative of wealth; are they now going to take away a poor man's last consolation—his privilege of forgetting his cares in the society of convivial friends? Shall we renounce every physical gratification to please a set of joy-hating fanatics? If their nonsense is not stopped in time, they will regulate our bill of fare next, or revive the monkish practice of church penance," etc., etc.

On the other hand, the caterers of the stimulant-vice certainly do their best to train the public in associating the ideas of pleasure and alcohol-worship. The beer gardens of several of the larger cities of Germany and Austria are veritable Armida-parks of diversified attractions. Free music, free dance-halls, free fire-works, skating-rinks, swings, and free reading-rooms, combine to lure victims of all classes to the "restaurant" that more than re-imburses the liberality of the proprietor, and loses nothing by the cunning non-obtrusiveness of its poisons. Nobody is compelled, or even invited, to invest in stimulants, but a family who should take a seat at a garden-table and enjoy the symphonies ef a trained orchestra without ordering the customary set of beer glasses would soon provoke the sarcastic comments of their fellow-visitors. They may have followed the crowd without any distinct personal predilection for fermented liquors, but dislike to brave public opinion, and so send for beer to save appearances. For appearance's sake children, too, are made to bear their share of the expense in health; they, too, are expected to encourage the enterprise of the proprietor, and pay for their free swings and free pony-tracks, by sipping a glass of lager. At home, the development of the habit, thus established, may not be directly encouraged, but its tendency revives in after years, when the beer-fuddled boy joins a club of alcoholized fellow-students and has to encounter the ordeal of their taunts without the aid of that sanitary instinct which in his childhood made him shudder at the first taste of the beer-garden poisons.

The common problem, yours, mine, every one's,
Is—not to fancy what were fair in life,
Provided it could be,—but, finding first
What may be, then find how to make it fair
Up to our means: a very different thing!

Let a strong hand to a weak hand give.

Renounce joy for my fellows' sake? That's joy
Beyond joy.

The great deed ne'er grows small.

—Robert Browning.

REVIEW OF "TRUTH IN THE CASE."

Prepared by Order of the National Executive Committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP, - Michigan.
MRS. HENRIETTA L. MONROE, Ohio.
MRS. FANNIE RASTALL, - - Kansas.
MISS ELISABETH TOBEY, - - Massachusetts.
Sub. Com.

[The report to be made through THE UNION SIGNAL begins with this general review, which will be followed by other articles dealing with specific points. The National Executive asks for a calm and thoughtful reading.]

THE BOOK.

Some weeks before the National Convention of 1889, a book entitled "The Truth in the Case" was given to the public. It contains 153 pages and is the work of several writers in various parts of the country. The title page, however, bears the name of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, who is known to be its inspiration, its compiler and the author of a large part of the contents.

"The Case" which it brings to the court of public judgment is between the Iowa State W. C. T. U. and the National organization; also between Mrs. Foster and a few women who sympathize with so-called "Non-partisanship," as opposed to what they claim to be "Partisanship" in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"The Truth in the Case" is a very vigorous, not to say bitter attack upon the National Union, its policy, methods and general officers, while not a few who are counted as leaders by virtue of service and official relation, come in for a part of the severe condemnation. While disclaiming any intent to be personal, it analyzes the National President to the core of motive, and declares that in all her great work she has been but seeking "a background for her personal exploits, and a theatre for the exercise of her wonderful powers and accomplishments."

This is but an example of the severe and offensive personalities aimed not alone at Miss Willard, but at many.

The book follows the wake of a series of protests, memorials and proposed amendments to the constitution, which, coming from the same source, have been pushed to the front of discussion in the annual Convention since 1884. It is in line with past and pending action of the state W. C. T. U. of Iowa which will destroy its auxiliary relation to the National Union.

It was also an argument beforehand for the "Campbell Amendment" to the National Constitution by which it was proposed to bring the nation-wide organization which represents in its present attitude the expressed sentiment of an overwhelming majority, "into harmony with the position held by Iowa." A modest demand truly!

This book written, as we are told in the preface, at the request of many "outside, as well as inside the W. C. T. U., for general circulation, and frequent reference," has been sent abroad with lavish generosity. Whatever else it may accomplish, a threefold mission burdens its pages.

1. To make pretentious argument and sophistical defense for the Iowa position, and those who are in full sympathy with it.

2. To stir up strife and divisions in the ranks of the W. C. T. U.; to discourage the timid; mislead the uninformed, and, like the whisperer, "divide chief friends."

3. To furnish weapons ready sharpened for the hands of the enemy and give aid and comfort to the wrong side in the great battle for "God and Home and Country," in which the W. C. T. U. is engaged; such is the book which demands that answer shall be made.

THE AUTHOR.

"Truth in the Case" has many writers, but Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, whose name stands on the title page, can be fairly held responsible for all utterances therein contained, and stands its real author. She has been identified with the growth of the W. C. T. U. from the beginning. She was foremost among its political thinkers; stood for many years practically the leader of its legal work, and educator of its growing political sentiment. She was chairman of the committee that framed its first constitution, and has been a prime mover in every change since made, either in the fundamental law of the organization or in expressed growth of sentiment, by method of work or resolution.

On pages 26 and 27 of "Truth in the Case," Mrs. M. J. Aldrich, of Iowa, makes a singular argument against the introduction of any new questions not contemplated in the original and main work of the society; as if when the slender and simple laws of the association were first agreed upon, it could have been foreseen to what the cause and the work would grow in coming years.

All associations which are worthy of continued life must come to questions of principle and method unseen at first, and the new issue will, of necessity, divide opinion. To check this inevitable law of growth would be to force organizations into perpetual infancy or to early death.

Such supreme points of division were reached by the W. C. T. U.; when, even the marvelous unity of love, faith and purpose did not, and could not prevent "majorities" and "minorities." With these came the law of equity which governs their relation to each other.

The first "new test of loyalty" introduced, because it was the first departure from the original compact, was the "Basis of representation." This affected the financial status of every state, compelled change in their constitutions, and in the final action touched every member. The proposition when first brought to the convention failed of passage, but the "minority" agitated, until it educated a majority and won.

When the change came in lawful fashion, a large protesting minority remained yet unconvinced; but nothing was heard in those days about "infringing on their rights," or any doubt as to the righteous supremacy of "majorities," so there was loyal submission to this new law that reached with binding power into every state.

The next and stronger "test" was woman suffrage. This sharply divided the union into three classes.

1. Those who desired to bring the agitation for woman's ballot into the activities of the W. C. T. U.

2. Those who believed in suffrage for women, but opposed introducing so disturbing an issue into the society.

3. Those opposed to woman suffrage in itself considered.

To the first class Mrs. Foster belonged, if she told "the truth in the case"; and largely on that growing issue Miss Willard was elected president of the National Union. No "diplomacy of effort or craftiness of expression" deceived Mrs. Foster in that long struggle.

Again, the "minority" was very large, and so earnestly did it protest, that some of the most irreconcilable walked out at Washington, as did the Iowa delegation at Chicago. In that "dividing" contest the "minority" had no quarter from Mrs. Foster.

It has been considered worthy of severe condemnation that Governor St. John, General Fisk, and Professor Dickie, who were offensive to a few, were introduced to the conventions at New York and Chicago.

Has Mrs. Foster forgotten the bringing of Susan B. Anthony to the platform at Washington when she knew that nearly one-half the delegates were opposed to the principle she represented, and to herself as its incarnation? It will not help matters to say the objection came of prejudice founded in ignorance now outgrown; an easy reply would be, less ignorance and more liberty of thought and discussion in Iowa would dispel prejudice on a question greater still.

Nothing could be more misleading than the claim that the battle of opinion on the suffrage question was won by "trick," either of language or method, and the women deceived into action not understood. Miss Willard has been a leader; far ahead, often, of the forces that followed her, but never a "boss" in the political sense; and the women with whom she deals have loved and trusted her, but done their own thinking, as the records show.

At the second annual convention a committee on resolutions, of which Miss Willard was not a member, reported, and the majority adopted the following significant resolution:

Resolved, That since women are among the greatest sufferers from the liquor traffic, and realizing that it is to be ultimately suppressed by means of the ballot, we, the Christian women of this land in convention assembled, do pray Almighty God, and all good and true men, that the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic be submitted to all adult citizens, irrespective of race, color, or sex.

That was in 1875. The next year, Corresponding Secretary Willard in her report made the following recommendation:

A petition for Home Protection may well engage our earnest and prayerful efforts, for when all is said the liquor traffic will continue to grow and flourish in this Christian republic just so long as it is "according to law," and not one moment longer, hence we are not honestly trying to answer our own prayers if we do not seek to make our influence felt where opinion crystallizes into law. Woman by her nature is the born conservator of home, and the necessary enemy of a traffic which is at war with home's best interest, therefore when the public sentiment she represents can be brought to bear upon the rum power, it must fall.

It was at this convention Miss Willard made her famous speech for suffrage, the story of which she has so often told. Were her sentiments put in "crafty" speech, when she was publicly rebuked at the close, and when the audience made her feel its silent condemnation of her words?

The dividing line of free opinion was clearly drawn from that hour, and it was because of Miss Willard's well-known views that Mrs. Foster and others henceforth opposed Mrs. Wittemmeyer, and worked unceasingly for a change in the administration. If Miss Willard was a diplomat in language and method, Mrs. Foster was an open and aggressive fighter, and no one could be in doubt which part of the field she occupied.

When read in the light of history, the statements found in "Truth in the Case," that suffrage is a "hindrance," its introduction a "mistake," and the position always held in law and fact, that "states and individuals were not bound by the action of the National Union," a "delusion" seems strange indeed!

It was Mrs. Foster who bore the banners of this "hindrance" and "delusion" to victory, and she as much as any one woman is responsible for the attitude of the W.C. T. U. on the question. "Truth in the Case" also goes back on Mrs. Foster's very recent record, for at the convention of the Iowa State W. C. T. U. held in October, 1889, she treats in her annual address this "hindrance," of the National organization as follows:

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

Thirteen years ago the annual meeting of the state union was held in this very church, and then for the first time declared for woman's ballot as a weapon of defense against the liquor traffic. Again and again this principle has been re-stated, petitions have been circulated, legislatures canvassed, and the general question discussed before the people. We have asked for various measures more or less fully setting up the right, and removing the disabilities which now prevent its exercise. After careful consideration, your general officers and the superintendent of the department, recommend a most vigorous movement, the coming winter, to secure

MUNICIPAL SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN.

We are not unacquainted with the objections made to this measure. We are, however, assured by the weight of authority, that municipal suffrage for women would be constitutional under Iowa's organic law. We are crowded to the consideration of some means by which laws in the interest of morals can be better enforced in the cities. We believe municipal suffrage for women would effect a marvelous change in this regard.

This is Mrs. Foster's argument for the Iowa W. C. T. U. when the book was already out which declares that the question of "equal suffrage" in the National Union "was directly calculated to divide the membership," was introduced by "indefiniteness of statement, not in accord with perfect candor," and by methods "which would be condemned as demagogic in politicians." See page 27, "Truth in the Case."

Verily, the world is composed of three classes: saints, sinners and "non-partisans!"

The third "test of loyalty" was the resolution of approval and aid, by influence, to the Prohibition party.

The first test changed constitutional law, and was binding on state and local unions.

The second came by resolution which expressed majority sentiment, and which was also incorporated into department work, thus deciding a new method. It was expressly declared, however, that the action was not binding, and any state could ignore or decide against the franchise department and still remain in perfect auxiliaryship with the National. History shows that the states accepted this declaration—which finally became a by-law—as a fact; acted upon it and came slowly, not by coercion, but education, to the advanced ground now occupied.

The third "test," the political resolution, never touched or colored the law of the W. C. T. U.; it neither added to nor modified its department methods or general policy; nor did it lay by the weight of a hair any obligation on state, auxiliaries, local unions, or individuals. It was simply a resolution which embodied the majority sentiment of the convention assembled in 1884. Any annual convention since might have revoked the action had the delegates been of the non-partisan mind; and such a majority would have been found had the splendid, heroic constituency been misrepresented, or thrown into rebellion by the action at St. Louis. Instead of this, the majority sustaining that action has grown, and the minority dwindled with every year.

Up to 1884 the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organically, constitutionally, in action and in sentiment "non-partisan," or, as one said at Chicago, "pan-partisan." Since 1884, organically, constitutionally and in action the society is just as "non-partisan" as ever, but its educated sentiment in the National and most of the state unions is with the Prohibition party. Meanwhile in many states the W. C. T. U. has stood in the front line of the great "non-partisan" contests for constitutional prohibition.

We have been told that the political attitude of the Union has hindered the cause for which we labor, and delayed the day of victory. If this be true, why did the most shameful and shameless defeat of constitutional prohibition come where the Republican party is strongest, and the W. C. T. U. was most sweetly "non-partisan," namely, in Pennsylvania? Much of the education leading up to the present sentiment of the National Union came from the author of "Truth in the Case."

On page 17 Mrs. Foster very adroitly makes personal defense from the charge that her views have changed in the recent years. In this defense she selects but a single quotation from her published reports, that of 1883, and then by a stretch of imagination makes the Republican party march to her ringing words:

> The grand chorus of majorities as in unison they cry, "The saloon must go," shall possess no coercive force unless that unison, merged into legislative, judicial, executive harmony, and guided by the baton of a political party, shall take up the strain and still sing on, "The saloon must go," andby our hand its power is broken.

Mrs. Foster says, "This grand chorus of majoritios in Iowa has been secured." But she also says: "It, 'the chorus of majorities,' "will have no coercive force unless guided by the baton of a political party."

What about that in Iowa? See herself acknowledges on page 18, that the "baton" does not truly guide, and the music is broken. Still Mrs. Foster says she meant the Republican party, and we are bound to believe her; but if her explanation be true, the woman who charges Miss Willard with deceiving those who trust her by "tricks" of expression, uttered words in 1883 which have been misunderstood since the day they were spoken by as intelligent and intent listeners as can be found in the country.

But some things Mrs. Foster does say quite out of harmony with her present opinions, viz.: "Majority sentiment has no force until merged in law, and law no force unless guided by the baton of a political party, which adds to the chorus 'the saloon must go,' the supreme strain 'by our hand its power is broken.' " Whose hand? Not majority's, not law; but the party with the "baton," and here she rests with the final power. Why, then, if a party is a necessity, talk forever of "non-partisanship," and why say, as she did in Chicago, "If I could write the platform of the Republican party I would not put prohibition into it"? What the white-ribbon women understood Mrs. Foster to mean in 1883, they stand for to-day.

We wish to make quotations farther back, and before the "Iowa position" was such as to influence Mrs. Foster's logic. The first is from page 74 of the National Minutes of 1880:

> The two great political parties of the country in their national manifestoes are silent on the relation of the state to the traffic, though in some instances their utterances may be construed to disapprove the expediency of prohibition, or even to insinuate against its rightfulness. These parties have, however, in a few instances, in their state platforms distinctly pronounced for or against prohibition, or the right of the whole people to settle the question by the popular vote in constitutional law. The national Prohibition party alone meets the question squarely on its merits, and places at the head of its ticket the Hon. Neal Dow, himself the very embodiment of prohibition doctrine.

How does this agree with her oft repeated utterance that the "Prohibition party is the greatest hindrance to the temperance reform"? Again in 1881 (see page 18 of appendix to National Minutes) after speaking of the responsibility of the national government in the District of Columbia and the territories, she says:

> However the money comes in, a part goes into the public treasury, and so the nation lives on the destruction of its sons and daughters. How long can this ghastly farce go on? How long e'er the cup of wrath be full? When we consider the causes that have brought about such defeats to legislation in the interests of temperance we find both the great political parties adverse to such legislation, either because they do not desire, or dare not give it. [Italics are Mrs. Foster's.]
>
> In occasional instances one or other of the parties has with more or less zeal championed the cause. In Kansas and Iowa the dominant party gave the question of prohibition to the people; in North Carolina the same party defeated prohibition, though the governor, a Democrat, favored it.
>
> To what do the logic of events and the philosophy of things lead us? Prohibitory legislation, national and state, can only be permanently secured through the agency of a political party, making this its central idea; we hail with thankful hearts such political organizations in state and nation. [Italics Mrs. Foster's.]

Now Mrs. Foster says she did not mean the Prohibition party at all, but only an "organized protest" such as was made when 11,000 men voted for Elias Jessup in Iowa, but she who charges Miss Willard with "misleading" use of language, here says what has been misunderstood since 1881, if now we have really "Truth in the Case." Has any party yet, except the one which the W. C. T. U. approves, nationally, made "this its central idea"? Why did not Mrs. Foster use the frankness she demands of others and say what she really intended? Now compare this high demand for a party of principle, with what appears on page 148 of "Truth in the Case":

> Parties are useful as a convenient means of recording the popular will on questions of legislative policy. They are not gardens of the Lord, wherein reforms are grown.

Up to 1884 Mrs. Foster was as well loved and as much sought after as any speaker among women on the temperance platform. When she wavered from the convictions and principles which she was supposed to hold, the main army passed her and went on to the front, leaving her in the midst of a few sympathizers, who shouted to the moving columns to return, but they never will, for the fight is onward. Meanwhile whatever values Mrs. J. Ellen Foster has won as chairman of the Republican Women's National League, as one of the famous "spell-binders," and wife of a Republican official, she has lost the faith of her old comrades in her sincerity, the chaplet of their admiring love, and the crown of leadership in the grandest body of women known to the world.

The writers who lent their aid to the production of "Truth in the Case" are but echoes of their chief, but some things may be said of their statements later on.

(To be Continued.)

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

* * *

North of Peking, in China, there is a celebrated pagoda and temple visited by a great number of worshipers. It is a most costly structure, and yet no emperor or rich man poured out of his treasure for its erection. It was built from the mites of the poor. Every worshiper coming to the place was asked to bring a single brick, and some of the devotees came many times, each time bringing a gift. There was hardly any one so poor that he could not bring as much as a brick or some small gift, and in time the pile grew, and it became a great mass of material, sufficient to build the spacious temple.

Some day the same story will be told in regard to the building of the Woman's Temple. The historian will say, "This magnificent building was not erected through large bequests from the rich, but by gifts of a penny a day from the women and children of the W. C. T. U.

> "'All the God-loved, cheerful givers,
> All the grand white-ribbon army,
> All the friends of Home Protection,
> Bands of Hope and Loyal Legions,
> Myriad Bands of toddling babies;
> Came the widow with her farthing,
> Each to make some contribution
> For the building of the Temple.'"

* * *

The returns which are beginning to come in from the mite-boxes give evidence of the great success of this mode of giving. There are none so poor that they cannot adopt it, and if they are not able to give a penny each day themselves, they can get their friends to help them. It is wonderful how quickly these small mites aggregate a large sum. At the first inception of the magnificent Chinese temple spoken of above, if the worshipers each had said, "I am so poor, one little brick from me will not help much towards building such a great structure. I won't trouble myself taking one; mine will never be missed anyway," the temple would not have been built. We must all remember that no amount of giving by others can excuse us from giving our portion, no matter how small it is. The Lord seems to lay great stress in His Holy Word in regard to those that are faithful in that which is least. We want every woman and child in the W. C. T. U. to feel and say, "It is our Temple," and make it such by the gift of at least one brick.

* * *

Mrs. L. W. Richardson of Roscoe, Ill., in sending the contents of her mite-box, $3.65, for 1889, writes: "May God bless the noble work, and may we soon hear the sound of the workmen on our building, for you know so many white-ribboners feel like calling it our Temple, although we have such a small part in it. Our prayers and our interest center around the work and the dear women who have planned such a grand and glorious monument." Mrs. Richardson is right in calling the Temple "ours." But the W. C. T. U. have not a small part in it. It is all theirs. They have given or pledged already almost $100,000.

* * *

We are glad of a word of cheer from the South. Mrs. D. P. Sypert, of Bethlehem, Penn., voices our thoughts so well, we will give her short but pointed letter entire: "I send you the contents of two mite-boxes, $4.45, contributed by Mrs. Lucy Beaumont, and $3.65 by Mrs. D. P. Sypert for 1889. The mite-box plan demonstrates so beautifully the power of small things—I wonder every white-ribboner does not accept it. I hope some day to visit Chicago and see this grand Temple." Mrs. Edward Eells, of Virginia, also sends a nice note with a check for $3.65 from her mite-box for 1889. The power of little things is wonderfully demonstrated in the case of a dear white-ribboner, Mrs. Laura E. Harsha, who lives in the far west, in Muscogee, Indian Territory. She is the mother of six children, the youngest being only three months old. She has named her after the best beloved woman in America, and one who has more namesakes than any other woman living, viz., Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Harsha sent for two mite-boxes a year ago, and pledged thirty cents a month for herself, and a cent a week for each of her children. She sends a check for $4.10 for six months. One dollar of this is for baby Frances. Thus in a year she sent $7.30, and besides is instilling into the minds of her six little ones—by thus giving to the Temple—such a practical temperance lesson as will stay by them all their lives.

* * *

The W. C. T. U. of Harvard, Ill., send a check for $17, the contents of mite-boxes. The W. C. T. U. of Four Towns, Mich., send $24.50, the proceeds of a mite-box social. We trust that all readers of the "Temple Items" who are not supplied with mite-boxes, will send at once to us for one to be filled during 1890.

* * *

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

BY AND BY.

"By and by," said merry Dick,
"I will learn to be very wise;
I will study hard, O long and hard,
And win full many a prize.
But now I'm only a little lad,
And the sun shines bright to-day,
And Rover's waiting for me outside,
And I do so love to play."

"By and by," said roving Dan,
"I will go to learn a trade,
For I know there's many a foolish man
Who can only handle a spade;
But to-day I'm going to hunt and fish—
'Tis a bright October day;
My mates are waiting for me outside,
And I do so love to play."

Twenty years of sun and storm
Went by like a year and a day;
Men were building a mansion proud,
And the workers working away,
The walls rose steadily up and up,
Grand and solid and thick,
Some were doing the nicer work,
Some were carrying brick.

I saw a river swift and strong,
And men on either ridge,
Grand, good workmen, wise and skilled,
Were building a railroad bridge;
Some of the workers knew right well
How every stone was laid,
But there were others only fit
To handle a pick or spade.

The little boy who loved to play.
The lad whose name was Dick,
Up the ladder was lifting slow
A wearisome load of brick.
And the boy who loved to hunt and fish,
With workers of lower grade,
Stood at the base of the railroad bridge,
Toiling away with a spade.

Now it isn't a lowering thing to work—
Workers are kings to-day,
And it isn't a foolish, wicked thing
For little lads to play;
But this I know, 'tis better to learn,
And youth is the learning time,
And a workman, skilled, a dollar ean earn
While a dolt is earning a dime. —Selected.

THE "DECK-HAND."

(The Will and the Way Stories.)

BY JESSIE BENTON FRÉMONT.

The boys of Mr. Fountain's school were delighted when he told them he should take them that evening to a lecture in the town; not that they cared a fig for the lecture, but it was a chance to get out, and in place of the quiet study-room there would be the jolly walk by moonlight down the frozen hillside, with slides and snowballing instead of books. Then the bright lecture-room, gay with all the young people of the town smiling and nodding to them in the telegraph-signal way young people knew long before real telegraphs were invented.

The lecture itself might have been on astronomy or prehistoric man and it would have been exactly as welcomed by them; they had no idea of using their ears, only their eyes.

But they were surprised into deep interest. A wiry but strong man about fifty years of age began at once to tell them he was glad to meet so many young people; that as they had marched in, their uniformed corps, their bright, healthy looks and elastic-trained steps made him see the good preparation they were having for a disciplined and useful future; that he felt it his opportunity to give them, in their young and impressionable phase, the warning that experience had qualified him to give, and the example of perseverance and will required to regain an upright life, which his experience also qualified him to prove was possible—"possible, with a steadfast will and God's help."

And he told them his story: the story of a pleasant New England home where he too had been a happy schoolboy, rejoicing in winter sleighings and skatings, and the cheery home-life around the big fire—the happy summers of farm-work and study—of his parents' love and pride in him: "I was a quick and bright boy, and they thought I would come to a high name, for I loved to study as well as to play."

And so his young life went on, steadily upwards, through the home school then until he was nearly through college. He had grown away from the simpler and loving home influences and had been made to think many things only "manly" and "like a good fellow" which in the home he had been taught were wrong.

But with the wish to be "a good fellow" and the unwillingness to lose popularity by refusing to drink, he made the break that let in ruin; "friendly drinks" were the beginning of the end. He told of his broken career—the dismissal from college—the distress of his home—his debts—his father's sorrow and anger—his father's death—his own remorse and flight from home as far as he could get to the South; and there, of his quick falling lower and lower, from his brief efforts to reform into longer periods of drinking until he found himself so degraded by it that he was finally forced by hunger to take the lowest employment a white man could then have—this was a good many years before our late war—the place of "deck-hand" on a Mississippi steamboat.

By this he was put entirely among a low and dangerous class of negro slaves; men whose violent natures or whose passion for drink made them unsafe for usual plantation work. Criminal and dangerous negroes were not put in jail then; that would have been a loss to the master of the profits of their labor. So he became one in a gang of the worst characters and—what was then held as worse yet—worked with black men.

Under the rough and even cruel control that could be enforced on board the boat these men were kept in check—to break out at times fiercely among themselves, or on getting ashore. I do not know how they manage now, but in the old days fuel for steam was supplied at frequent "landings," where long lines of cordwood were kept ready for the boats; the steamer was run alongside the bank and the crew rushed to "wood up." Often there was a question of speed, a race, in fact, between boats bound for the same port, and no time must be lost; so, what with the spirit of rivalry, the cursing, the cracking rawhides of the gang-masters, the eagerness of the men themselves to run off the boat and have a change from their hot work there of keeping up the furnace—and, always, the vague, wild hope of "running away," fixed in their minds—the scene was wild. Especially after nightfall, when the furnaces were opened and the glare turned on the bank, and many pine torches lit up the scene of rushing, hurrying, stalwart black figures naked to the waist and glistening wet with heat.

Always the gangs of negroes sang; quick, wild songs to which they kept time as they swarmed up the bank and ran back with their strong arms filled with the long heavy wood.

Often when the boat was off again and darkness closed all in and the strong sound of the engines and rush of the mighty river made the accompaniment, they sang in another way. A wailing chant, sad beyond the power of written music to tell, in its suggestive intonations. One subdued, melodious voice sang the recitative broken into by an irregular chorus, harmonized though so wildly irregular—voices rising, wavering, in prolonged lament—calls of rage, of despair—sinking again to the controlling but subdued solo of the leader—the Improvisatore—who would touch some other chord of feeling that again roused this storm of emotion in a chorus form. I was thirteen when I heard for the last time these true "folk-songs" of a suppressed race. When I saw Doré's illustrations of the lost souls in torment this singing came back to me as their fit expression to the ear.

Young as I was then it made me shudder and get closer to my father. His favorite place was the extreme bow-end of the "saloon-deck" where he could get the cool rush of the river air as the boat pressed swiftly on. Below on the projecting "boiler-deck" were always moving silent figures, "deck-hands tending furnace" and making every chance to get forward into the unheated air at the bow—fantastic figures, scarcely clothed, gleaming with wet from their hot work, their big, powerful bodies and naked limbs taking every tone of bronzes in the furnace-lights, then vanishing mysteriously as they passed into shadow. From out of this Plutonian dark would rise the wailing chant, and the farther voices took up the lament which passed from entreaty to fury—then submission, then the low dull recitative continued alone.

Talking was not permitted—it might not have been nice for the passengers to overhear—but singing was allowed.

And this was the level to which this educated New England young man had fallen through drink. It made him ashamed and angry, and he kept intoxicated to forget.

On the passage up from New Orleans he had noticed day after day a passenger always in the same place and always in the white linen clothing common to the hot season—looking all the more freshly cool from his fair skin and tawny hair and blue eyes; eyes that were often lifted from the little book he carried, and seemed to take in the river, its fertile banks, and, the young man fancied, at times rested on himself.

This further angered him. He had already realized his degraded position, and this contrast made it seem more terrible and hopeless. It helped move him to furious passion in his resentment of some indignity put upon him by the gang-master, and there followed a fierce but wordy scene; for, being white, he could not be silenced as the blacks were, by the stinging cowhide.

Sleeping off the drunken state that followed he woke near midnight. He was on the bare deck at the bow and the moon lit up a white figure standing by him. It was the person whose presence had so roused old feelings and made him realize his miserable downfall.

He sprang up with an oath and was hurrying off when the other held out a detaining hand, "My friend," he said (oh! how long since any one had said 'my friend' to him), "my friend, you have evidently had a classical education. When you were angry this evening, I heard you using expressions that showed you had careful and high training. This is not a fit place for you. With your education, your youth and health, you can renew your former life. You must leave this boat to-night when we stop at Cairo, and drop all these associations forever. I am not a rich man, but I can help you to a start on the upward road."

"And he took from his waistcoat pocket fifty dollars in gold and put it into my begrimed hand," said the lecturer. "He said he had spoken to the captain and arranged it all. 'You will transfer to the Louisville steamer we meet at Cairo. Take a cabin's passage. Begin with self-respect. Begin this night a new life. Go to your father and mother and ask their help to keep you in the right way.'

"I told him I had helped end my father's life, and had been afraid to learn of home. 'Find your mother and atone to her. A mother will forgive you and love you.'

"And when I wanted to get his name, that I might some day return him the money, he only said, 'Never mind that, but when you have freed yourself give it to some one needing it as you were—use it to help another.'

"I felt I could, I would stop drinking.

"I did. I left the shameful life behind me when I took the other boat. As the day dawned I turned my face East, and made my way to the old home, where I found my mother. And I did atone to her—all I could—and her last days were in peace and happiness.

"As soon as I could I made my education help me to stand firm, and lead others from going down as I had done. It was slow and hard work for a long time, to work against myself, but I persevered, and I have now secured usefulness and success as a lecturer on temperance.

"For a long time I had not the spare money for travel, and when I had it was too late for me to go and see and thank the man who had come to me in the darkest hour like a vision of light. I had found who he was, and written to him when I found myself reëstablished; and told him I had passed on his blessed fifty dollars to do for another the good it had brought me; but I grieve that I never saw him again. You all know his name, for he was one of our great senators, and his long life was full of usefulness to his country—he was Senator Benton of Missouri.

"I charge you, as he charged me, to value education, to profit by every chance for study and reading. Use all your will to live up to the best—to overcome idleness, for it brings temptation and evil. And love and honor your parents—above all, the mother.

"I always feel," he ended, "when I tell of this part of my life that I repay some of the debt I owe to that man of high character, and pray that it may carry with it some of the influence of his strong will."

When the lecturer ended, Mr. Fountain rose and asked to say a few words. He was a man greatly respected, and his long-established school had made him so trusted and recognized as a good man and good head of a school for boys, that the sons of former scholars were sent to him from all parts of the country.

He thanked the lecturer for the interesting talk and felt it would remain impressed on the minds of his pupils—especially the one who had been listening to a noble action of his grandfather—and he called out one of his young people who came forward blushing, but proud.

And the lecturer, with real feeling, took the hand of the grandson of his friend and said to him, and to all the young men present, some brief, heartfelt words of warning against temptation, and encouragement to hold out the helping hand, and believe in the power of good to triumph over evil—"with the aid of a steadfast will and God's help."

Was not this a precious and delightful fact of family history to come upon? It had been unknown to me—perhaps to all except the unhappy young man and my father himself; for my father was strong and helping because it was his nature to be so, and could not turn away from need in any form. It was a necessity to his large nature to combat evil and lift up its victims.

His own love of study and reading would have quickened his sympathy for a white man working among negro criminals who yet resented an indignity, and used a classic phrase.

His own practice and teaching were all on the side of temperance, and that in a part of our country where public feeling sneered at temperance, and where it was held as want of hospitality not to press upon every one, young and old, wines and "strong waters" from early morn to night.

Something my father saw while he was a very young man—a painful occurrence in a private house—so filled his mind with hatred of this mistaken idea of the beautiful grace of hospitality, that I have heard him tell how, sorrowfully riding homewards and thinking of the scene of shame this had caused, he resolved for his part to drink nothing; he has told us how he stopped his horse and bared his head and there alone among the trees made a vow—to himself—not to touch any wine or "drink" of any kind for five years. And he kept his vow. To the cooler natures of to-day this might seem fantastic; but people were younger of heart in that time, and not ashamed of fine impulses. And with my father this good warm nature never tamed down into calculation where he found the dragon of evil to slay.—Wide Awake.

The Still Hour.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JANUARY 26, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 2: 1-24; Joshua 2-7.)

Sunday, 26; Luke 2:1-24. Verse 4. With no purpose on Mary's part, God's plan that Christ should be born at Bethlehem is accomplished. So we walk blindfolded, and only He that dwells in light knows whither we go. Verse 8, The quiet occupation and the simplicity of these shepherds prepared them to be the first to find their way to Christ. We should not envy the wise men after the flesh, the mighty or the noble, since they are the least likely to come to the Saviour. I. Cor. 1:26. Verse 14, Blessed army which comes to celebrate peace. Verse 15, Think of and seek to possess, the lovely simplicity, devoutness and faith, of these humble men.

Monday, 27; Josh. 2. Verse 1. While Joshua had the promise of the land (Ch. 1:3), he used every means that a skillful general could think of, that the invasion of Canaan might be successful. A true faith is manifested by an active use of means. Jas. 2:22. Verse 5, Probably she was ignorant, and unconscious of her moral guilt. Because her service was united with faith, it was accepted. Jas. 2:25. Verse 9, The wicked may well tremble, when they consider the certainty that God's plans and kingdom shall triumph. Verse 18, In God there is a refuge, which if all seek, no member of your family will be lost in the day of judgment.

Tuesday, 28; Josh. 3. Verse 3. When God's Word and presence guides the way, we should not hesitate to follow. Verse 5, By prayer and consecration, we should prepare ourselves to enter upon new experiences and duties, and to pass over untrodden ways. Verse 10, Our God is not as a dumb idol, but is a Being of life, power, and activity, to defend and work for His people. Verse 17, We need not fear in view of death; God will see that we pass over to the heavenly Canaan in safety. Ps. 23:4.

Wednesday, 29; Josh. 4. Verse 7, We should keep in memory the important transactions in the providence of God. Times when we have had special help, and dangers from which we have been delivered, should never be forgotten. Verse 9, As this second pile of stones was made in the midst of the Jordan, so our old life of sin is buried with Christ out of sight. Rom. 6:4. Verse 10, If the haste of the people was because they blended fear with their faith, then they were like many of us now; if it was because of the alacrity of their obedience, then they were as we all should be.

Thursday, 30; Josh. 5. Verse 1. What the unbelieving thought to be an insurmountable obstacle to the progress of the people of God, disappears in a day. Their hearts "melted," but like so many others, not into faith and penitent submission. Verse 9, In a like manner is the mercy of God shown to us, when, following our repentance and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, all our sins are pardoned. Verse 10, The national existence of the people was commenced by a solemn act of religious dedication. Verse 14, The angel of the covenant is with God's people, to conduct them into the land of promise.

Friday, 31; Josh. 6. Verse 2, When Jordan was passed, Jericho had to be conquered; but the God who has helped through one difficulty is able to help overcome another. Verse 6, The faith that conquers shows itself by implicit obedience. Heb. 11: 30. Verse 25, The promises of God shall be kept, by the salvation of every one who trusts in Him. Heb. 11: 31.

Saturday, 1; Josh. 7. Verse 1, Achan's genealogy is given probably to show that from a parentage so infamous, the descendants would not be carefully trained in the fear of God. Verse 3, Faith in God gave victory at Jericho, but now over-confidence in self prepares the way for defeat. Verse 25, All Israel was present, because they needed to profit by the example that sin in its citizens affects the nation, and it must be found out and punished.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Prayer for Schools and Colleges. Daniel 1:17.)

God is interested in His own kingdom; and He must be interested in the education of our children, since so much of the work of His kingdom is done by trained minds. The help He gave to Daniel and his three friends, He will, according to their need, give to young people now. Let us pray for the schools and colleges.

1. From the beginning of our nation, the schools and colleges have been objects of the greatest interest to Christians; and they have grown up in an atmosphere of prayer, and they are the product, largely, of Christian efforts and beneficence.

2. The work of teachers is a most responsible one, in which the Christian graces, and convictions of personal responsibility, are constantly needed. Unless God will help them, how can their work be well done. They should have our prayers.

3. The places of greatest influence in the future will be occupied by those who are now in the schools and colleges. We cannot overestimate the importance of thorough, and the right kind of training, for those who are soon to occupy the places of responsibility and power in this country. The tendency to remove all directly religious influences from the public schools is a bad one. Pray and work that this and other evils to the lives of our boys and girls may be arrested.

4. The interest that all should have in the work being done, requires that parents should often visit the schools in the community where their own children attend. Public school teachers should have more encouragement and support from the fathers and mothers, and teachers should take more care to assist the parents in the right training of their children.

The Household.

"WITH WHAT MEASURE YE METE, IT SHALL BE MEASURED TO YOU AGAIN."

BY HARRIET NEWELL SWANWICK.

Look well o'er your life, my brother,
Your road, my sister, review;
In this way, that, or the other,
You'll find these solemn words true.

Has charity marked your dealing
With fallible fellow-men?
Then waves bearing rest and healing
Will flow to your heart again.

Your neighbor has ease and leisure,
No cares pursue, or await;
While you trudge on with full measure
Of burdens, both small and great.

And mayhap a glance of coldness
You catch from that neighbor's face;
A look that rebukes your boldness,
Reminding you of "your place."

You think—"Surely this he owes me,
'A man for a' that' to see;
A proud heart is all he shows me.
I could not so cruel be."

But stop! passed you not another,
More needy, lonely and sad?
Nor cheered by your kindness that brother—
Nor made grieving eyes look glad.

It may be your bitter sorrow
To be misjudged by a few;
Can you from your past not borrow
A leaf you will blush to view?

The pain you gave may be over,
But ah! you cannot forget;
And life is too short to cover
That error you still regret.

Half-blindly we turn life's pages;
Oft fail its best truths to know;
Nor heed the voice of the ages—
"Ye have that which ye bestowed."

MISAPPREHENSIONS OF GOOD PEOPLE.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

I once attended a camp-meeting at Grimsby, Canada, where the Rev. Dr. Tiffany gave a most eloquent temperance sermon, after which, as it was a warm day, he went to the pavilion, and sitting at the head of a long table, had beside his plate a large glass of cold tea. The friends of temperance seated around me, and half way down the table from the doctor, were greatly shocked to see him drinking what they said could be nothing other than London stout. They declared they wished to hear no more utterances from any such man. They were not, perhaps, as much accustomed to cold tea as a drink as we in the states. At any rate I am confident that I rescued my good friend's reputation from a very sorry plight by stating what I believed as to the drink he was imbibing, and afterward proving it true. A similar action not infrequently repeated, caused very erroneous remarks to be circulated in relation to the habits of Henry Ward Beecher, one of the stanchest total abstainers of our time.

I remember going up the Connecticut Valley road to St. Johnsbury, Vt., where I was to speak. I had a little bottle of beef tea of a peculiar kind that looked like sherry. Having eaten almost nothing since morning, I poured out from my bottle a glass of this and drank it, taking the precaution, however, to turn to a gentleman who was seated behind me in the parlor car, and was the only person near me, and saying, giving him my name, that I was to lecture that night in St. Johnsbury, and asking him to notice the label on the little suspicious looking bottle. He replied frankly, "I am glad you told me this, for I certainly thought you were drinking wine."

These incidents are related not without a purpose indeed, but with the intention of cautioning our good workers to guard with all possible care against the slightest appearance of evil, for lynx eyes are upon us, and those who do not wish to think ill, will very readily do so if appearances are against us.

A "CRUSADE DAY" ECHO.

BY REV. O. W. SCOTT, A. M.

There are crises in every nation's history. "Independence Day" recalls the crisis of July 4, 1776—"Memorial Day" serves to put us in lively remembrance of 1861, and the four summers of war that followed.

There are moral crises in the history of nations. Such was that marked by the "Washingtonian movement," but especially that which signalized the "Woman's Crusade," Dec. 23, 1873. Ah! what an awakening! And what an anniversary has just passed! Did I not witness the cheeks of the Band of Hope boys and girls flush with excitement and deepest interest as extracts from the "Crusade" UNION SIGNAL were read, and special reminiscences were given by the "veterans," or by those who had conversed with them? Ah! did they not thankfully tell "how fields were won" in 1873-4?

Out of those grand Crusade experiences have come all the modern aggressive "movements" for the betterment of men in their recovery from the domination of alcoholism.

The "Red Ribbon movement," led by Dr. H. A. Reynolds; the "White Ribbon movement," led by Mrs. Willing, Mrs. Wittenmeyer, and Miss Willard, and the "Blue Ribbon movement," led by Francis Murphy, all of these enterprises to save the fallen and to keep others from falling, grew out of the Crusade of '73.

"Red, White, and Blue!" There they are in the different temperance movements immediately succeeding the Crusade. "Red, White and Blue," the national colors, signifying, as it were, that our Nation's safety is in the annihilation of the American saloon. "God speed the right!" and God speed it right away.

But more than the three "ribbon" movements grew out of the Crusade. All the Reform Club efforts, led by J. K. Osgood, R. T. Booth and others, are legitimate fruits of that sowing—and more than this, the World's W. C. T. U., which includes every nation, oriental and occidental, expanding the American motto to "God and Home and Every Land," is the second great harvest of the Hillsboro seed-sowing.

Wonderful! Who could have prophesied it? No Isaiah or Daniel or Deborah appeared to foretell it—"What hath God wrought!"

From December 23, 1873, to date, America has seen a perpetual temperance revival. Never was the temperance cause such an "impending crisis" as to-day. Forward! the "Red, White and Blue," onward, forward; no faltering, for "right the day shall win."

HELPFUL HINTS.

"There is a fashionable way to leave a carriage," said a lady who conforms to all the fads of fashion. "You must never lean forward getting your head out first. The properly trained woman retains her seat till one foot is above the carriage-step, then, slightly rising, sinks her weight upon it and glides easily and gracefully to the curb.

Sufferers from neuralgia are warned by a medical writer not to drink tea; but to drink freely of coffee into which the juice of a lemon has been squeezed. Neuralgia is said to indicate a low and depressed state of vitality. The best remedy is to build up and fortify the constitution.

It is asserted that corns and bunions can be relieved by painting them three times a day with a mixture of equal parts of sweet-oil and tincture of iodine.

A Swedish cure for insomnia is a napkin, wet in ice-water and slightly wrung, laid over the eyes.

"Breathing," says a writer on health hints, "is the fundamental law of existence. Hence, if the air inhaled be pure or impure it is quite worth while to know. Pure air meeting the blood in the lungs is nature's great plan of life."

Tiled floors should be washed with lukewarm water and soap, applied with a flannel and dried with a soft cloth, and then rubbed over with a little linseed oil on a silk handkerchief, and polished. The oil need not be applied more than once a week; it preserves the bright appearance of the tiles. Its frequent use is the only remedy for tiles that have been neglected and fallen into a bad condition.

To remove spots from marble use a paste of whiting and benzine.

Plush goods, and all articles dyed with aniline colors, faded from exposure to light, may be made to look as good as new by sponging them carefully with chloroform.

The simplest way to fumigate a room is to heat an iron shovel very hot and then pour vinegar upon it, drop by drop. The steam arising from this is a disinfectant. Doors or windows should be opened that it may escape.

Into a solution of gum-arabic, stir plaster of Paris until the mixture assumes the consistency of cream; apply with a brush to the broken edges of china, and join together. In three days the article cannot be broken in the same place.

Bathe a sprain with arnica, diluted with water, and bandage with soft flannel moistened with the same. A sprained wrist thus treated will grow well in a few days.

HINTS ON SERVICE.

BY FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY.

Examples of usefulness are often more helpful than sermons on that subject. I meet a great many Christian ladies who feel anxious to help in the great work of life, but "don't know how."

I am thinking to-day of a few who have found ways and means of service which have proved to them means of grace.

Mrs. D., of G——, once had a strong, brave husband and a darling little boy. She says now, "I rested in their love,—selfishly. I thought all God asked of me was to make a happy home for them and myself." One day God took her husband to Himself. The widow's heart yearned as never before over her beautiful boy. "God called me to exert a wider influence for Him," she says, "and I refused. I was wrapped up in my boy, forgetful of the poor little waifs who had no mother,—except a drunken creature; and I forgot in my selfish love and sorrow the homes where grief meets little sympathy, and sunlight and flowers, God's gifts to mourners, were unknown." "'Twas not in cruelty—not in wrath," the merciful One sent for her child in a few months. Since her heart was so smitten, and her hands became so empty, God has enlarged her heart, and filled her empty, yearning hands with service. Children who knew her boy now know and love his mother. The pastor does not longer have to "wish Mrs. D. would do her part to sustain the prayer-meeting." She always does her part now, with a sympathetic voice and tender soul. Societies for truly benevolent purposes no longer languish for lack of Mrs. D's willingness to "serve as committee," or "vote one way or the other." She is ready. God called her three times,—twice by sorrow. Then she heard Him and answered.

Miss Jones is a book-keeper, and earns fifty dollars a month. One-tenth of it is set aside for God, in an especial manner. She always "can give a little." So can any one who does this much for God; and if the Bible means anything, it teaches that Christians have no right to offer God less than the Jews were required to, before the daylight of Christianity shone forth on men.

Miss Jones, too, takes two religious papers. After reading, she sends them to a friend who needs them; that friend sends them to a family too poor to subscribe for papers. They read and carry them a few blocks to a widow, who reads and gives them in turn to a reading-room. Old when the reading-room gets them? Yes. But boys there read things very new to them, and learn that when they are able, they, too, must have a paper of their own.

I know young ladies, one of whom is a graduate of Vassar, who gather up papers to put in homes where boys have just been converted, and must have helpful evening pleasures at home to lead and keep them from the vile dens they have known too well.

I have in mind a woman of culture and means who is expected by her well-to-do neighbors to call for their old clothes, boots, papers and books, once every few weeks, to put in her "barrel;" and "Miss P's barrel" people learn to remember, instead of putting away an old hat or bonnet or underskirt or roll of religious papers in the attic.

That's one reason I don't believe in attics. My Aunt Jane's attic had enough old clothing and books and papers laid away in it, yes, and old dishes, too, to make glad many a home for months. Women, if you want something to do, clear out your attics and back closets, bundle up your papers, retrim cheaply the old hats and bonnets bent out of all shape in some old chest, and send them South, or even around the corner of your own street.

LIGHT AND SHADE.

BY F. W. FABER.

There are no shadows where there is no sun;
There is no beauty where there is no shade;
And all things in two lines of glory run,
Darkness and light, ebon and gold inlaid.
God comes among us through the shrouds of air;
And His dim track is like the silvery wake
Left by yon pinnace on the mountain lake,
Fading and reappearing here and there.

The lamps and veils through heaven and earth that move,
Go in and out, as jealous of their light,
Like sailing stars upon a misty night.
Death is the shade of coming life; and Love
Yearns for her dear ones in the holy tomb,
Because bright things are better seen in gloom.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago
Treasurer—Mrs. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us: and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it.—Ps. 90:17.

W. T. P. A. STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The stockholders' meeting of January 15, 16, 1890, will live in our annals as the most interesting and profitable one yet held. While all regretted the absence of one of the original stockholders and directors from the beginning, who has never before missed an annual meeting, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, detained by sickness, we were glad to record that seventeen hundred and ninety-three of our eighteen hundred and eighty shares were represented, personally or by proxy, a much larger proportion than ever before.

One important factor in the profitableness of the meeting was the presence of Miss Elisabeth Tobey, president of Massachusetts, who came with her head and her bag full of Yankee questions. With these she peppered and probed every department of the W. T. P. A; the facts thus elicited made even us old directors more thoroughly acquainted with all the workings of the varied machinery of our publishing business. The fact that she returns to Boston more enthusiastic than ever concerning our work, and confident of rapidly selling all the stock the Board see fit to place at her disposal, speaks volumes for the wisdom and the efficiency of its management.

The report of the business manager, Mr. Hall, shows that the year's receipts have amounted to about $180,000, an increase of about $39,000. The net gains of the year have been very gratifying, in spite of the inevitable loss occasioned by cutting the subscription price in two for new subscribers. This loss has been offset, as we calculated it would be, by increased receipts from advertising, and we commence the year with a circulation of 80,000, which is exceeded by that of only one Protestant religious paper in the country, The Sunday-School Times.

Under the new arrangement adopted in July, The Young Crusader has paid his own bills in full for the first time in his life, and, we trust, has now reached the stage of permanent self-support. His bright young sister, the Oak and Ivy Leaf, has always paid her way, and continues to demonstrate her ability to stand alone. Her change of form is duly appreciated by all, but she has decided not to change her name. Both these papers keep fully up to the high literary standard set for them by their respective editors, Miss Guernsey and Miss Sudduth.

As it is well known that I have been absent from this office since the middle of July, and that the editorial responsibility rests on Miss Ames, assisted by Mrs. Andrew, allow me to say the same thing of THE UNION SIGNAL, which never stood higher in literary excellence than it does to-day.

Der Deustch-Amerikaner is now published semi-monthly, and its editor, Dr. Lampert, devotes his entire time to it. We bespeak for it your heartiest sympathy and support.

During the year, eleven thousand one hundred dollars worth of stock—very nearly all we had for sale—was sold, and twelve thousand, six hundred and thirty-six dollars invested in machinery. We always make it a point to invest as much money in permanent machinery as we receive from sale of stock. By this means our assets are always kept at good figures; they are now $103,000. Of course our liabilities have increased in proportion, but we have plenty to show for them, and this explains the fact, well understood in commercial circles, that the credit of the W. T. P. A. is high—practically unlimited. It meets every financial engagement promptly, and has always an excellent class of assets.

The entire receipts for 1889 from subscription to the various papers were $52,977 as against $41,408 for 1888, showing increased interest in our periodicals. The receipts from other publications during the year were $43,774, an increase of $5,608 over the previous year.

In our jobbing department, as shown by the report of the superintendent of printing, Mr. M. D. Kimball, the receipts from work done for outside parties are about $18,000. As nearly one-fourth the jobs done in this department are for the W. T. P. A., and not included in this estimate, it represents only three-fourths of the work done therein. Neither does this estimate include our regular newspapers and periodicals, nor much of our book work.

We have been successful competitors for some large jobs with several of the largest publishing houses in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. This was notably the case in regard to publishing the "Free Baptist Cyclopædia," the largest job we have ever undertaken. The book is considerably larger than "Glimpses of Fifty Years"; we did all the type-setting and press work and delivered books in less than sixty days after the order was received. As to the way in which the work was done, the editor said that "it was equal to the work on the Century Magazine." A few lines from a letter regarding this work may interest you. Rev. G. A. Burgess, one of the editors, writes: "The excellent quality of all the work, which has been promptly and faithfully furnished as contracted, with the very kind and accommodating treatment we have received from your hands, has made the weeks we have worked together, to us, weeks of pleasant acquaintance. I feel sure that the thrift and good taste of your printing house will insure you a large patronage from those who wish to have religious thought set by reverent and obliging hands."

Just here allow me to make a general answer to many letters received from white-ribboners in various parts of the country. They write that they would like to send their printing to the W. T. P. A., but can get it done cheaper at home. We sometimes cannot compete on small jobs with country offices, because of the much greater expense for type-setting and rent in Chicago than in smaller places. We pay thirty-five cents per thousand ems for composition, while offices outside the large cities do not pay over twenty or twenty-five cents, and our increased expense for rent is in even greater proportion. On large jobs our facilities for purchasing paper, buying it often by the car load direct from the manufactory, offsets this increased cost of type-setting and rent and enables us to do the larger jobs cheaper than smaller offices can.

The greatest feat accomplished in the book-making line was Miss Willard's "Glimpses," which was written, printed and nearly 50,000 copies sold within the year. Mr. Kimball boasts, as well he may, of his efficient corps of assistants, especially Mrs. Blodgett, forewoman of the book-room, who has been found equal to almost any emergency. There are seventy-three employes in this department, and in the whole establishment one hundred and twenty-five. The weekly pay-roll, exclusive of salaries of business manager, superintendent of printing, editors and book-keeper is over $900.

Among the new machinery put in this year, is an entire electrotyping outfit which does our own work in this line at a saving of $200 per month over what it cost us when we hired it done. Although the electrotyping department was only established December 1, 1889, we already have orders for several hundred dollars' worth of work from outside parties. We intend to do this work so well that we shall soon have all that we can do in that line.

We are about to attain the height of our ambition in one direction, a webb press that shall print the 100,000 edition we hope soon to have of THE UNION SIGNAL in less than two days. Such a one is now being built for us, and will probably be in working order by May. We are also investigating the Thorne type-setting machine, with a view to purchasing some time in the future, if it proves able to do what is claimed for it.

With the notice for the stockholders' meeting were sent out three questions: Shall we increase the capital stock to $100,000, change the corporate name to W. C. T. U. Publishing House, and extend the charter ninety-nine years? The vote was almost unanimous for extending the charter, 1,639 to thirty-seven. The change in the corporate name was thoroughly discussed, and finally negatived, the only change made being from "Publication" to "Publishing," so that our initials still remain W. T. P. A. The objections were that the change would make our corporate name consist of six words or initials, instead of four as at present, which all feel to be enough, and the fact that we have built up our trade under the present name, and business would probably suffer from a change. The vote on increasing the capital stock resulted in 1,139 votes in favor of increasing it to $75,000, to 712 in favor of increasing it to $100,000. It will therefore be increased to $75,000, and we will have $25,000 for sale. It will probably soon be sold, as applications are coming in rapidly; any one wishing to purchase should apply at once.

After thorough investigation, it was voted to declare a dividend of seven per cent, and to set aside one thousand dollars or more of last year's profits as a sinking fund.

The ballot for directors resulted in the election of the following ladies: Matilda B. Carse, Mrs. L. A. Hagans, Mary Allen West, Frances E. Willard, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Esther Pugh, Mrs. C. B. Buell, Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Mrs. A. H. Christensen, Mrs. Helen M. Barker, Miss Elisabeth Tobey.

These are all well known to our readers except Mrs. Christensen; we are happy to introduce her as the largest stockholder in the W. T. P. A; a resident of Beaufort, S. C., an enthusiastic white-ribboner and leader of a fine L. T. L. She showed her interest in the Association not only by investing largely in its stock, but by encouraging her Loyal Legion to do likewise. A funny incident occurred in regard to their proxy; last year she explained the matter to the boys and girls, and asked them to decide by ballot who should vote their stock. The girls voted for Miss Willard, but the boys having, as Mrs. Christensen said, formed their opinion of our National President by what the newspapers said of her, would not trust her to vote their stock. Between the times of choosing their proxy last year and this, Miss Willard visited Beaufort, and, as usual, captured the children's hearts. When the time came to choose their proxy this year, Miss Willard was chosen without a dissenting voice.

Miss Willard's election as director was in spite of her protest; and she at once presented her resignation. This was not accepted the first day, but she insisted so strenuously, that on the next day it was accepted, and Mrs. L. D. Carhart, of Iowa, was elected in her place. By the articles of consolidation between OUR UNION and THE SIGNAL, no stock of the W. T. P. A. was to be sold to any one not a regular member of the W. C. T. U. This condition has always been observed, but nothing in the constitution or by-laws expressly enjoined it. A by-law embodying this condition was adopted; also one providing that no stock shall be voted in person or by proxy except by regular members of the W. C. T. U., and that no stock shall be voted which has not appeared on the books of the Association at least thirty days before the stockholders' meeting. A third was adopted, in accordance with the recommendation of the National's Committee on Affiliated Interests, requiring the books of the W. T. P. A. to be examined annually by an expert accountant not connected with the W. T. P. A. A committee consisting of Mrs. Buell, Mrs. Hagans, and Miss Tobey was appointed to investigate the laws of incorporation of other states, and especially of the District of Columbia, to ascertain whether any of them offered more favorable conditions than those of Illinois. This was done in response to the suggestion that now that the W. T. P. A. has become national in its scope, it might be better to have our new charter secured in the District of Columbia.

The secretary was instructed to prepare an envelope-sized leaflet containing the constitution and by-laws of the W. T. P. A., and such other facts concerning it as should be known by stockholders, or persons proposing to purchase stock.

The Board of Directors convened immediately after the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting, and spent another day in consultation and planning for the work of the new year. When the three hard days' work was done, we separated, all feeling renewed confidence in the bright future opening before the W. T. P. A. and new consecration to the work of sending out, through it, "leaves that shall be for the healing, not the hurt, of the nation."

M. A. W.

DO SOMETHING.

"It damages a soul to arouse in it a religious emotion, and not give it a chance to express that emotion in self-sacrifice." So say the wise kindergartners, and so say we of our temperance work.

Sentimental degeneracy, the sure outcome of unused emotion, is as fatal to the morals of our army as home-sickness among soldiers. Trying to puzzle a furloughed brother with a big word, we asked, "What do you cavalry boys do when you have an attack of nostalgia?" "Jump upon our horses and chase the greybacks," was the quick reply.

If a union is in a decline, the best remedy is to do something. If it has members that are too "busy" to spend an afternoon a week in its meetings, plan something practical, and give every one a part, letting the "busiest" lead. If it has on its roll one or more "peculiar" ones who "shy" at every little thing, taking a tangential dash this way or that, and imperiling the safety of the concern by their erratic movements, treat them as farmers do partly broken colts that are forever frisking their nimble heels over the traces. Holding a strong, steady rein, they give the mettlesome creature the lash, so that they will have enough to do to take up and put down their feet, without thinking out any more mischief.

What shall you do, and how? The answer to that question must be solved, like fruit from a vine. As the children say, "You must think it out yourself." A few hints may be suggestive.

1. Study.—Our work is many-sided. It is like a "plantation store" in the South. There is something for everybody. But there is one thing to which your union is specially adapted, one line in which the largest number will be most deeply interested. While in a general way you make yourselves familiar with all our departments, fix upon one that suits best your town and your workers, and settle upon that as the one to push. That you may do this wisely, you must

2. Pray.—Origen says "Begin and end all things in prayer." If our unions are not Christian, they are nothing, and Christians must pray without ceasing. As railroad men have it, we must "run by telegram." The night is dreary. Thousands are perishing beside the road-bed, hurt to death in wrecks. Trains rush by in the darkness. Now and then a "wildcat" claims the right of way. Our only safety is to run into the office at every station and get our orders. If the great dispatcher of trains tells us to go on, the road is clear, we must be sure and make good time. We may not dally by the way.

3. Watch.—An old sea captain tells us that the greatest danger on the ocean is from collisions. We lie down in our berth and go to sleep while the ship plows on through darkness and storm, for we know that out on the bow, beyond the rope that keeps everybody but the officers from coming within twenty-five feet of him, paces the watch with his eyes turned toward all forward points of the compass. You may have to tack from your direct course, so you must watch as well as pray.

4. Persevere.—When God calls a woman to temperance work, it is like a call to the ministry; He does not take it back. When you are on a steamer bound for Liverpool, you cannot get out at a way station and go back home. No matter about the discomfort or danger, you must go on. It is the "faithful unto death" who receive the crown of life.

5. Believe the saloons in your town are like a mountain of iniquity. "Faith as a grain of mustard seed" will remove them. God has trusted you with a place in His rescue crew. Let the waves put their great shoulders under your life boat; let the brine drench you; stay where He puts you as long as you can hold an oar; it is His work to keep the craft right side up, and He "never faints nor is weary." He is rich; so you can have all the money you can use for His glory, "just for the asking." George Muller said, "All I need to know is, does God want this work done? now? by me? All the rest is sure."

Let each union find its special work among soldiers, sailors, railroad people, the fallen, the mothers, the children; whatever it is, let its members study, pray, watch, persevere, believe, and victory is sure. When a Spartan mother gave her son his father's sword, he complained that it was too short. "Then add a step to it," was her reply. If we seem about to fail, let us add a "step" to our energy and faith.

THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

The General Officers of the National W. C. T. U. send greeting to the non-seceding white-ribboners of Iowa W. C. T. U., inviting all who are with the National in its policy of "No sectarianism in religion, no sectionalism in politics, no sex in citizenship, but each and all of us for prohibition by constitutional amendments, national and state," to hold meetings locally and pass resolutions to this effect.

Those local unions already organized, in which a majority stand with the National W. C. T. U., should simply declare this fact, and go on with their work as heretofore, waiting for the organization of the Iowa W. C. T. U., auxiliary to the National W. C. T. U.

We earnestly call the attention of all local and county W. C. T. U's throughout the nation to the fact that when any officers or members secede from our organization, such members have gone out, and such officers have left their positions vacant. The W. C. T. U. remains intact, if it has but one white-ribboner left, therefore do not organize that which is organized already, but let those who go out do the organizing, and let those who remain elect officers and go on with their work as usual. These local auxiliaries should be named, as always, "Woman's Christian Temperance Unions." Report all such organizations promptly to the proper state officials and to the National Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, and to THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, the official organ of the National W. C. T. U.

In response to many inquiries, it should be noted:

1. That the constitution of the National W. C. T. U. has never contained the words "non-partisan" and "non-sectarian," hence these words have never been expunged therefrom.

2. That the National W. C. T. U. has always been organically non-partisan because it has never made the slightest partisan requirement of any state auxiliary or of any local union. The National W. C. T. U. was unwilling to put the limitations and restrictions upon its membership which the Iowa W. C. T. U. imposes, but preferred to leave every society free to express its opinions as to methods of securing prohibition according to its judgment.

3. That loyalty to the National W. C. T. U. does not mean that white-ribboners must indorse the Prohibition party. In Iowa, where Republicans have declared for the "full and complete enforcement" of the Prohibitory law, this would be clearly inconsistent. In Iowa, Dakota, and Kansas the W. C. T. U. lends its influence to the Republican party, because that party is loyal to prohibition, and the policy of the National W. C. T. U. has always been to stand by the party that stands by the home.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, Nat. Prest.
CAROLINE B. BUELL, Cor. Sec.
MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Rec. Sec.
L. M. N. STEVENS, Asst. Rec. Sec.
ESTHER PUGH, Treas.

PARTISAN VERSUS NON-PARTISANSHIP.

As the political press is now trying to make out that Miss Willard is in her expressions self-contradictory concerning the words "partisan" and "non-partisan," we quote what she said on that subject in her last annual address, also in the debate at Chicago:

We object to the misleading prefix or affix "non-partisan" by means of which the dissenting minority seeks to attach to us the stigma of "partisan." We have always been willing to call ourselves "partisan" until that term has been construed to mean that we were shut up to the recognition of a single political organization, and such a definition we will not accept. We have the partisanship that in Illinois makes us lend our influence to the Prohibition party; in South Dakota to the Republican, and nationally to the Prohibition party. But so far as being pledged, everlastingly, to any one political organization is concerned, we are "strictly non-partisan." As has been said a thousand times, we have never added to the tests of membership in the National W. C. T. U., which were, at the beginning, total abstinence and the payment of constitutional dues. Nor has any state added to these tests save Iowa, which has so narrowed the broad basis of the National W. C. T. U. that a woman who sympathizes with the Prohibition party is practically disfellowshiped, while in this convention are Republicans and Democrats, Prohibitionists and Union Labor party members, united in our forty departments of work, and only disagreeing as to the political method by which the liquor system shall be outlawed. For several years it has been our custom to adopt a resolution in the National W. C. T. U. Convention, and in most of the states, to the effect that our good word, good will, and prayers (inasmuch as we have neither money nor votes to give,) shall be with the party that puts forward prohibition as its primary issue, and since the Prohibition party is, in most of the states, and nationally, the only one that does this, we have for five years included its name in our resolutions. But we would just as readily include that of the Republican, Democratic or any other party that would make a declaration similar to this, which all our acts and words as a society have for so many years declared, namely, that the saloon must go.

In the debate at Chicago, Miss Willard said:

Since the president is called in question in the minority report as to her utterances, the expression being, "Inasmuch as the President in her annual address to this body declares this organization non-partisan," I will ask Mrs. Forbes to take the chair that I may speak. It might be suitable for me to say that in looking over the dictionary we find the definition of words changed, as the word "to let," as used in the New Testament, once meant "to hinder." In the definitions of current words certain interpretations put upon them cause them to assume to us a different light and shade, and for that reason it is that we are in a sort of mixed condition about partisan and non-partisan. My opinion is that we are a non-partisan society. But non-partisan, as held by the majority, does not imply that you cannot speak your good word, and show what side you are on in your resolutions adopted annually by the convention, towards such a party in state or nation as stands for, and crystallizes your principles. The other view is that those who represent the majority in this convention often say we are partisan. We are, when we set ourselves over against the definition of non-partisan that our sisters in some states give. They think that non-partisan means that you cannot pass any such resolution. That throws us into a kind of see-saw about it. As Mrs. Lathrap has said, while non-partisan in our organic law, while non-partisan in our department work, if the majority present in the National Convention desire to express their sympathy with a political party, they have a perfect right to do so, and yet the society as a society is non-partisan.

WHAT an age is this in which we live! Even princes must be philanthropic or they are looked down upon. It is in the air; it is the correct thing; it is good form; it is the popular fad. Good will to men has become fashionable. Now while this is not the highest motive it is better to have loving kindness a matter of etiquette than not to have it at all, for it mellows one's nature, and lifts him up to higher things. To have it said of a lady that she lives for herself, is to make her unpopular. This was not so a generation back.

The Watch-Tower.

Inasmuch as there has been ample criticism whenever the National Minutes were not out promptly, it would be most ungracious not to express thankfulness that this year they were out eight weeks after the convention. Every white-ribboner should send fifteen cents to Mrs. Buell for a copy.

***

A nugget of gold, such as the following from Madame Willard's lips should be preserved: "Religion, if you have it, is not easily lost. It is the well-worn channel of thought and action,

"'Time but the impression deeper makes,
As streams their channels wear.'"

***

The Calendar for 1890, issued by Mrs. H. J. Bailey in the interests of her department of peace and arbitration, is taken from original designs made by her private secretary, Mrs. Harry Wood. Mrs. Bailey thus sends her good wishes in cordial greetings to the sisters of the W. C. T. U. and many workers in the Master's vineyard for the uplifting of humanity.

***

A young American lady, Miss Rilla Norton, of Paris, a cousin of Miss Willard, and a thinker sure to be heard from later on, puts the following sentence in a private letter, without a thought of its being given to the public, but it is a remarkable utterance for one young, ardent and untried: "Albert DeMusset, a modern French poet, has said in very beautiful lines, that nothing makes us so great as a great sorrow. Against this view, however, I hold that stronger still is the power over us of a great cause, because it takes us vastly more out of ourselves, and whatever does this, lifts us up, and allies us to the highest forces of the universe."

***

A plan to secure a permanent home for Sorosis, the leading woman's club of New York City as well as of the United States, has taken material form. A joint stock company is to be incorporated which shall issue stock to the amount of 750 shares at $100 each. A monthly collection of eight per cent per share shall be made, and this amount is to be placed in a Trust Company where it will draw interest. The house to be built, or purchased, is to be large enough to furnish a home for the club and provide apartments for offices, thus insuring sufficient rentals to defray the expenses of the building and pay a dividend to the stockholders. Such business enterprises among women are indicative of "better times"—for men as well as for women.

***

Apropos of the above, comes the announcement of a new venture in the line of openings for women's work and advancement, that of "Diana Park," a summer and winter resort, forty-three miles from Denver, Col. This beautiful park, which is owned and managed entirely by women, is situated amid the grand sceneries of the Rockies, 6,000 feet above the sea level, on the direct carriage road from Denver to Colorado Springs, and is said to be a real paradise for children. The capital stock is $20,000 in shares at ten dollars each. All stockholders are entitled to purchase property for their own use at ten per cent discount. Correspondence is solicited by Mrs. Olive Wright, corresponding secretary and general agent, 1650 California street, Denver, Col.

***

Tact is a sense of contact with those about us. It is to have one's feelers out. It is the possession of spiritual antennæ and tentacula. It is the difference between coarseness and refinement, success and failure, spirituality and materiality. It implies a vivid nervous system, not only of the body, but of the soul. Let us not say that a Christian is politic, let us rather say that he is tactful, and remember that tact is simply, as before suggested, a sense of contact. A power to conceive otherhood, as well as selfhood; it is a power that closely allies us with God, and is better than genius, money or fame. It depends largely on cultivation, even as the finger-ends of the blind become, by careful education, so sensitive that they can trace the raised letters of a page. If I could give but one word of advice to young people, I would say, "ask God for tact."

***

Miss Charlotte A. Gray, one of our World's organizers, sends a cheery message from Christiania, Norway, of the progress of the work in that far Northern land. Under date of December 21, Miss Gray writes: "You will be glad to learn that I can now give an address in the Norwegian language, quite independently of either paper or interpreter. Of course I am a long way from perfection, but it is so nice to feel free enough to express my thoughts, and reach people's hearts by the voice and eye together." Slowly but surely is the W. C. T. U. capturing every tongue and planting the banner of gospel temperance in every land. Peace be to those who thus herald the message!

ON DUTY.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Founded 1883.

Motto.—For God and Home and Every Land. Object: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over, and to circulate a petition for the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic drinks and opium, and other social reforms.

All members wear a little knot of white ribbon, and remember the noon hour of prayer for all temperance work and workers, and for the coming of Christ's kingdom.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care Miss Amy Leavitt, 1212 L. St., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Vice Presidents—England, Mrs. Margaret B. Lucas, 7 Charlotte St., Bedford Square, London.

Canada—Mrs. Letitia Youmans, Toronto.

France—Miss De Broen, 3 Rue Clavel, Paris.

China—Mrs. Dr. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.

Japan—Mrs. Kachi Yashima, 28 Nakarokuban cho, Tokio.

Hawaiian Islands—Mrs. Dr. Whitney, Honolulu.

New Zealand—Mrs. Packe, Upper Riccarton, Christ Church.

Queensland, Australia—Mrs. Brentnall, Brisbane.

South Australia—Mrs. Rev. Rice, Adelaide.

Victoria—Mrs. Mary M. Love, Armadale, Melbourne.

Ceylon—Miss M. W. Leitch, Oodooville, Jaffna.

India—Mrs. McDonald, F. C. M. Calcutta. Nat. Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Poona.

Burma—Miss Ruth W. Ranney, Rangoon.

Turkey—Mrs. W. E. Locke, Philippopolis, Bulgaria.

Africa—Mrs. James Denholm, Roodebloem, Capetown.

Mauritius—Mrs. Bishop Royston, Bishop Thorpe, Rose Hill.

Siam—Miss Mary L. Cort, Petchaburee.

Sweden—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm.

Denmark..Mrs. Dr. Selmer, St. Kongensgade, Copenhagen.

Straits Settlement—Mrs. Marie Oldham, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.

World's Organizers—Europe, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, Christiania, Norway.

Northern Europe—Madame Andersson Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm, Sweden.

American Committee—The five General Officers N. W. C. T. U.

Secretaries—England—Mrs. Mary Whitall Costelloe, 40 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, S. W. London, England. America—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Treasurers—England—Mrs. James Gregson, Heart's Hill, Debden Green, Loughton, England. America—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Supt. Department of Temperance Literature and the Press—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Nettelbeck Str., 21, Berlin, Germany.

Supt. Department of Bible Readings Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W., England.

Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Massachusetts.

Supt. Department of Prisons, Police Stations and Almshouses—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.

American Supt. Legal Dept.—Mrs. John P. Newman, 333 C St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Supt. Exposition Dept—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Indianapolis, Ind.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

PLEDGE.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ———; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary; Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Miss Bertha G. Brown, Office Secretary.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.

Treasurer—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle, St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama—Mrs. M. L. Stratford, Montgomery.

Alaska—Mrs. John G. Brady, Sitka.

Arizona—Mrs. S. A. Pearson, Phœnix.

Arkansas—Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, 315½ W. Markham St., Little Rock

California—Mrs. R. R. Johnston. Box 288, Oakland.

California, Southern—Mrs. N. P. J. Button, Riverside.

Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, New Garden.

Carolina, South—Mrs, Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.

Colorado—Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, Longmont.

Connecticut—Mrs. S. B. Forbes. 152 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford

Dakota, North—Miss Addie M. Kinnear, Fargo.

Dakota, South—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Huron.

Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.

District of Columbia—Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, Temple Hotel, Washington.

Florida—Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, Jacksonville.

Georgia—Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Augusta.

Idaho—Mrs. Susan Holbrook. Blackfoot.

Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago.

Indiana—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis.

Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Staples, Tahlequah.

Iowa—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Clinton.

Kansas—Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, Topeka.

Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 Chestnut St., Louisville.

Louisiana—Mrs. E. T. Merrick, New Orleans.

Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. Stroudwater.

Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, Baltimore.

Massachusetts—Miss Elizabeth S. Tobey, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.

Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap. Jackson.

Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart, Red Wing.

Mississippi—Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.

Missouri—Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Kansas City.

Montana—Mrs. R. H. Howey, Helena.

Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.

Nevada—Mrs. D. W. Van Deventer, Virginia City.

New Hampshire—Mrs. N. H. Knox, 263 Hanover St., Manchester.

New Jersey—Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, Ocean Grove.

New Mexico—Mrs. M. C. Raynolds, Las Vegas.

New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 103 East 123d St., New York.

Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.

Oregon—Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.

Pennsylvania—Mrs. Mary H. Jones, 2051 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Rhode Island—Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, Pawtuxet.

Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.

Texas—Mrs. S. C. Acheson, 1419 W. Woodard St., Denison.

Utah—

Vermont—Mrs. Esther T. Housh, Brattleboro.

Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.

West Virginia—Mrs. Jane A. Johnson, Parkersburg.

Washington, Eastern—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.

Washington, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.

Wisconsin—Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, Durand.

Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, Evanston.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell.

Organizers—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.; Miss Henrietta G. Moore, Springfield, O.; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. M. L. Wells, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Frances E. Griffin, Montgomery, Ala; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

American Organizers for World's W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, 830 12th St., N. W. Washington, D. C., Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, Sacramento, Cal.; Miss Charlotte Gray, Christiania Norway; Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kan.; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kan.; Scandinavians, Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Hollanders, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Chinese, Mrs. M. S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, Cal.; Sclavic, Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton Ill.; Department Evangelist, Mrs. C. H. St. John, Beloit, Ka

Work among the Colored People—Mrs. Frances E. Harper, 1009 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Associate, Mrs. S. J. H. Early, 260 S. Cherry St., Nashville, Tenn.

Young Women's Work—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 155 W. 48th St., New York City. Department Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Evans, 155 West 48th St., New York City; Organizers, Miss Ida Clothier, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Miss Jessica Morgan, Oberlin, Ohio; Miss Mary McDowell, Evanston, Ill.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice 1597 Washington St., Boston; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Kindergarten, Mrs. E. L. Hailmann, La Porte, Ind.

II. PREVENTIVE.

Health and Heredity—Dr. Orpha A. Baldwin, Cleveland, O. Lecturers—Health—Dr. Mary Allen, Ithaca, N. Y.; Heredity—Mrs. R. A. Armstrong, Woodland, Cal.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass.; Literary Assistant, Miss Mary L. Benedict; Associate, Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, 165 State St., Portland Me.

Sunday School Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill., or Woodfords, Me.; Secretary, Miss Julia A. Bidwell, Hartford, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City; Advisory Committee, Mrs. Helen E. Brown, Mrs. E. W. Ruliffson, Mrs. E. M. Wymond, Mrs. Dr. A. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Vigelius, Mrs. J. C. Craw, Mrs. M. E. Morgan, Mrs. Dr. H. McLean, Treasurer, 205 Mason St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Temperance Publication Association—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, Editor Department Books and Leaflets, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T. B. Carse, Publisher; Advisory Committee, the National President and Corresponding Secretary.

Editors of The Union Signal—Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Julia A. Ames, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of the Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of The Young Crusader—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers.

The Press—Miss Mary Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, Baltimore, Md.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Kirkwood, Mo.

W. C. T. U. School of Methods—Miss Mary Allen West, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.; For Practical Training to Public Speakers, Mrs. Anna B. Curry, Boston School of Expression.

Department of Narcotics—Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl. St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer, Mrs. James Havens, 673 Broadway, Denver, Col.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Work among Miners, Mrs. D. W. English, Rushville, Ill.; Unfermented Sacramental Wine, Mrs. R. A. Esmond, Syracuse, N. Y. Bible Study, Rev. A. A. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.

Flower Mission—Miss Jennie Casseday, 216 E. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.; Department Secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

Work in Prisons, Jails, Police Stations, Almshouses and Asylums—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Department Secretary, Mrs. H. D. Walker, Providence, R. I.

Work among Railroad Employes—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, McClees' Building, Gansevoort Square, New York City; Secretary, Miss Anna L. Davidson; Associate, Veterans' Branch, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Port Huron, Mich.; Petition Work, Mrs. Lavinia H. Chace, 1310 I St. N. W. Washington, D. C. Evangelist, Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, 40 Prospect St., Orange, N. J.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis. Associate, Mrs. Emma Obenauer, East Saginaw, Mich.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

Promotion of Social Purity—Miss Frances E. Willard; Associates, Mothers' Meetings, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Mrs C. T. Cole: Mt. Pleasant, Iowa; Department Evangelist, Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, Evanston, Ill.; Legal Adviser, Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.; Industrial Homes, Mrs. Lydia R. Clark, Northfield, Minn. Work among Mormon Women, Mrs. Angie F. Newman, Lincoln, Neb.; Lecturer, Mrs. Frances McCready Harris, 218 DeGraw St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Purity in Literature, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, Effingham, Ill.; Travelers' Aid, Miss Maud Remington, Baraboo, Wis.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, 23 Rowland St., Newark, N. J.; Associate, Madame Demorest, 15 East 14th Sf., New York City.

State and County Fairs—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate, Mrs. Marion McBride, 179 Fremont St, Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Mrs. Mary I. Stille, Westchester, Pa.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.

Franchise—Dr. Anna Shaw, Evanston, Ill.; Associate, Alice Stone Blackwell, No. 3 Park St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Lucy E. Anthony, 478 N. 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Lecturer, Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace, Cataract, Ind.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine; Lecturer, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

On Appropriations—Chairman, Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 10 E. 14th St., New York City. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie H. Rastall, Topeka, Kan.

Advisory Committee—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson, Mich.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—Chairman of Committee, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Streator, Ill.

News from the Field.

COLORADO.

GOOD WORK ACCOMPLISHED.

Colorado temperance work is moving along on its various lines. Sunday closing is receiving attention in several counties, and the state and county authorities are becoming interested in the enforcement of state laws.

Two prohibition papers are now circulated in the state, the Agitator, published in Pueblo, and the Challenge again revived in Denver.

At the state convention, the envelope system was adopted as a financial plan purposing to hold a public meeting in November of each year, when free-will offerings are to be solicited by use of the envelope. The La Veta union was the first to respond with an offering.

The plan of work of the La Veta union for the coming year includes gospel meetings and mothers' meetings once a month, Bible readings, ten copies of THE UNION SIGNAL, to be sent to homes where needed, and two dollars per month to the Cottage Home.

Miss M. D. Wilson conducted a "Carnival of Nations" at La Veta that was a success in every way. Miss Wilson has also been doing good work in Del Norte and Durango. A juvenile organization was formed at Durango with eighty signers.

Mrs. H. H. Beach, our state evangelist, has returned from her sojourn in the East since the National Convention, and begins her work in El Paso county in January. The following is a clipping from a Washington paper:

"The festivities of the season at the Fredonia were inaugurated by a reception given by Doctor and Mrs. LaFetra in honor of six prominent women, Mrs. Bittenbender, of Nebraska; Mrs. H. H. Beach, of Colorado; Mrs. J. A. Pickler, of South Dakota; Mrs. S. E. Cameron, of California, and Mrs. J. C. Bateham, of Ohio. All these ladies are actively interested in W. C. T. U. affairs and are prominent members of that organization."

Colorado City union is one of the most active in the state. The building being erected by the society is nearing completion, and is occupied, in part at least, at the beginning of the new year.

This union has already expended $3,000 on the lot and building, and though carrying a debt, the arrangement of the building is such as to bring in an income that it is hoped will meet current expenses, if not more, by renting of the two halls, one upstairs and one down, to religious and reform organizations. Professor Bixlor gave the cantata of "Queen Esther" under the auspices of this union, resulting in giving sixty dollars net to the local union and the same to the southern district.

Colorado City also sends two dollars per month to the Cottage Home. The reorganization of the Y's is contemplated in the near future.

The Pueblo union (the oldest) gives an encouraging report of its work. Their Sunday-school numbers eighty-five. A Loyal Temperance Legion is about to be organized, and the Y. W. C. T. U. has adopted a Chautauqua course of reading. Services are held in the jail every Sunday, and books, papers and literature are distributed.

The city mission of Denver Central union, by the request of several young men, gives Thursday evening of each week to Bible study.

The Fortnightly and Monday Clubs gathered $55 more than was needed to entertain the Woman's Congress, and turned this sum over to the Day Nursery, which most heartily appreciated the gift.

Of the meeting of the Associated Charities held in the Tabor Opera House in Denver, it would be hard to give a satisfactory report. The Denver News designated the audience as "huge and demonstrative," and further says.

"As a trumpet-blast of charity it was a most triumphant success. It encored the $20,000 raised immediately after last year's rather tepid meeting, and insured the 'cashing in' of $40,000 by the committees, whose name is legion and who will appear by every counter and fireside. The fact of the interested presence of every circle, legal, trades, business, ecclesiastical and leisurely, was sufficient guarantee for the wholeness of the outpouring. A stage which held in peaceful communion Judge Decker, Colonel Archie Fisk, J. D. Cornforth, Father Carr, W. D. Brodhead, Rabbi Friedmann, Judge Belford, Charles Thomas, R. O. Gildersleeve, Hermann Strauss, Dr. Denison and Father McDevitt was certainly cosmopolitan, international, interpolitical, catholic and unbiased enough to fitly represent a great city of 150,000 inhabitants. Through the three hours and a half the audience yawned no obtrusive yawn. Orchestra, parquette, family circle, balcony and gallery teemed with the live humanity full of charity and pity. Speaker succeeded speaker, and was greeted with hearty cheers."

The News was not sparing of space in reporting th different lines of charity work, giving nearly nine columns to the different reports. Mrs. Leonard of the city mission gave a paper on "Preventive Work in its Relation to Charity," and Mrs. E. C. Benton, our state recording secretary, gave a full report of the Day Nursery and Kitchen Garden, also the Boys' and Girls' Home. The last is not a founded institution, but a temporary home for boys and girls, where those who need to be taken care of may be kept and trained until they can be placed in suitable homes. Chief of Police Farley states that three hundred boy tramps pass and re-pass through Denver annually.

In 1887 there were 694 minors arrested, and in 1888 the arrests of the same class numbered 668.

The names of eighty deserted wives have come before the Ladies' Relief Society during the past year. Surely there is a crying need for White Cross and social purity work in this western country. Are we so near the border land of Mormonism that we are to be swallowed up by that public sentiment that leaves wives and children without protection? Alas! alas! for the results of evil associations.

The Denver Central union distributed literature at the State Teachers' Association, and were cordially welcomed. Miss Adelaide Sherman, National superintendent of railroad mission work, gave an account of her work in Salida before the same union, and Mrs. Beach of her trip through the East, and of her work there. In Brooklyn she addressed five gospel meetings. While in Washington she took a lunch at the "Shoreham" and read the wine list herself. With this week of prayer Mrs. Beach begins her work in Colorado City, assisting Rev. Mr. Harrington of the M. E. Church in revival services.

E. W. CHAMBERS,
Union Signal Reporter.

OREGON.

NEWS AND NOTES.

Several years ago Miss Narcissa White went with us to speak and organize on Yaquina Bay. We hurried her on from our newly running cars to the little bay steamer, and there gave her first lecture to an interested sea-board audience. Next morning we took her up to a high bluff, overlooking the ocean with dreamy head-lands stretching out on either side, backed by scanty firs and a rich evergreen vegetation cropping out of a dry, sandy soil. "I might fancy myself at Newport," she presently said, "only a few years ago." "Why, you are at Newport," was the answer. "And did I lecture at a place I did not even know the name of?" Well, this Pacific slope Newport with its configuration of coast so like the Atlantic Newport, has been growing up since. Scores of cottages are dotted about on the high bluff, and hundreds of tents are pitched in the warm summer time amid the protecting evergreen, where cool breezes always blow. This infant summer resort was the scene of our first Benton county convention, called by the president, who takes turn with her husband (a Methodist minister) in two pulpits. Mrs. Spangler took advantage of the presence of several W. C. T. U. summer visitors from other counties, that they might help out the first experience for Benton county. She had some disappointments, for one was sick and another was too much recreating to appear. Mrs. Jennie Leet, who worked for some time with Mrs. L. A. P. White, our Oregon pioneer, welcomed us, and Miss Hansee, dean of the Woman's College of the Willamette University, responded heartily. We had some useful little papers read, and interested question and answer following suit, for the Newport union is new and eager to learn.

Mrs. Spangler is a sympathetic and enlightened leader, having been tutored in successful Iowa; and while she was working up her convention, writing much and pacing much up and down the sand cliffs, she kept camp for her husband and friends who with their hands were building the new Methodist church. She cared for her little children, and actually found time to initiate them in the art of fishing.

Thus far had I proceeded with our Oregon jottings, in the late summer, when a tedious attack of fever shut me off from the use of my pen for a long time, and now at the beginning of the new year, what I tell will have to be recollections of what others have told to me. In August, many of our unions worked heartily for Senator Blair's "Sunday Rest Bill." They were incited to this by the inspiring presence of Mr and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts. They gave Oregon nearly a week and did great good wherever they went. About the same time Mrs. Emma Pow Smith had been reviving and establishing some of the unions east of the mountains with very good effect.

Indeed, our state has been rich in such visitors as do us good. I cannot say I did not see Miss Henrietta Moore and Miss Mary Allen West, for they kindly visited me in my room, but I missed their public work. Although laboring so indefatigably in the interim, the work sits lightly on Miss Moore. She looks as fresh and young and vigorous as at the time of the John St. John campaign, when she paid her former visit to our coast. Then many unions were afraid to invite her because of her Third party proclivities; but now she was eagerly sought for wherever she could go.

The glimpses that she dares to give now of her own family history, which would have been too harrowing before Time, the great healer, had stepped between, are full of pathos. They touch sympathetic chords in many hearts, for many have suffered like bitterness.

Following close on Miss Moore, came Mary Allen West, whose work was more within the inner precincts than with the outer public. Miss West's Schools of Methods were prized by all who attended them. They tell me that her aptitude for drawing the members out is wonderful, and is not "drawing out" just what education is?

In the meantime, our self-sacrificing and devoted state president had spent all our beautiful summer months in traveling to the most remote points, to wake up interest in the W. C. T. U., to organize when practicable, or at least to have a Loyal Temperance Legion established, trusting that it may break up ground gradually for future developments. She visited and reawakened old and feeble unions, paving the way for Miss West, that her Schools of Methods might be as successful as they deserve to be These were held wherever possible, in connection with county conventions.

Down on our southern coast, the journeys were chiefly by steamboat. At one place Mrs. Riggs says, "We took the stage for a ride of twenty-two miles right along the ocean beach, the waves frequently washing the wheels. In one instance a large wave, with its strong under-current caught the hind wheels, carrying them around several feet, but allowing us to escape before its successor broke in upon us." On the "Forks of Coos River," these trips had often to be made by moonlight; our state president was rewarded for such broken rest by finding the women of this "river community" so well prepared in heart already that it was easy to lead them on into organization. She adds, "Their difficult mode of travel by their small skiffs, which they enter as fearlessly by night as well as day, surely means that something is going to be done, and that they are impelled by no ordinary courage." At the Oakland convention, Douglas county, Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, so well known in Oregon, appeared for the rescue, the ladies being much discouraged at being unable to have Mrs. E. G. Greene with them, as promised.

In the eastern part of the state, Baker and Umatilla counties held profitable and wide-awake conventions, animated by the presence of Miss West.

L. A. Nash, Union Signal Reporter.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union held its quarterly meeting on Wednesday, January 8, at the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. Mrs LaFetra presided and conducted the devotional exercises, after which she read extracts from the birthday greeting of Miss Willard.

Addresses were made by Mrs. Cameron, of California, Mrs Boring, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Beckler, of Alexandria, Va.

A resolution of thanks was adopted to be sent to the Kentucky legislature for its action in regard to the use of cigarettes Greetings were directed to be sent to the ladies of the Annapolis, Md., W. C. T. U., who are carrying on a much needed work there.

Reports were presented from the departments of evangelistic work, literature and prison work, showing that the heads of these fields of labor had not been idle.

A paper on the use of unfermented wines in churches was read by Mrs Latimore, and the suggestion was made that ladies continue their efforts to secure the use of unfermented wine in those churches that still used intoxicating wines.

The report of the treasurer showed that $406.69 had been received during the quarter, and $351.45 had been expended, leaving a balance of $55.24 in the treasury.

At half past twelve the ladies took a recess, when lunch was served in the Sunday-school room.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. B. R. Catlin, superintendent of Sabbath observance, made a report in which she showed how powerless the people of the District of Columbia were to preserve a proper regard for the Sabbath; that there were absolutely no adequate laws to secure a proper observance of the day. She stated that last October she wrote to the commissioners, asking, in behalf of the W. C. T. U., that the time for the completion of the street railway of Seventh street be extended, so that the workmen need not be forced to work on Sunday. The commissioners replied that they had no authority to interfere, and that there was no law in the District to be enforced against ordinary work here on the Sabbath.

It was stated that for the passage of a Sunday Rest Bill, the union has a petition signed by 158,199 persons, and that President Harrison favors the passage of the bill.

Ida Hinman, Union Signal Reporter.

RHODE ISLAND.

THANK OFFERING DAY.

"In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."

It seems fitting at this season, when every one is looking back over the year that is gone, and forward into the new year, that one day be set apart by our unions in which they shall join in thanksgiving to God for His loving kindness and tender mercies; and with renewed consecration ask His guidance for the coming days. So, according to our custom, we came together.

The meeting was held on the third of January in the chapel of Beneficent Church, Providence. On that day the skies were of deepest blue and the sun shone down in blessing. Our hearts were lifted and our faith renewed. The clouds have gathered dark and threatening at times during the year, but on such a day it is easy to believe that "the blue of heaven is larger than the cloud." God's love is over all, and by ways we cannot always understand, He is leading us on toward the ultimate victory of righteousness.

An interesting feature of the morning session was a chalk talk conducted by Miss E. A. Lawson, who is entering with zeal upon her work as superintendent of scientific temperance instruction in the schools. Her subject was "The House We Live In," and adapting herself to the occasion, she taught by Scripture selections assigned to different ones in the audience, the evil effect of alcohol on the body; the fact that temperance makes the body pure, as religion purifies the soul; and the commandments of God's Word regarding these temples of the Holy Spirit.

The corresponding secretary's report was full of encouragement, showing unabated zeal throughout the unions. Two items may be mentioned as suggestions. A W. C. T. U. meeting in Cumberland was held in a school room by invitation of the teacher, the time after recess being given to them. A chalk talk, by the superintendent of this department, was followed by songs and an exercise from the children. Cards to form a recitation exercise for the next visit were then given out. In North Scituate they hold an open meeting every Saturday evening, at which subjects related to the liquor traffic are freely discussed, each speech being limited to five minutes. Labor reform and immigration as bearing upon the question, are popular themes.

The Thank Offering exercise was conducted, in the enforced absence of Mrs. A. M. Paine, by Mrs. G. F. Martin. It consisted of a responsive service interspersed with singing, after which the offerings of the different unions were presented. The amounts of money were read and the Scripture texts recited. These mottoes were helpful and inspiring, and showed that the true spirit of giving was back of the gift.

Various small camp-fires were lighted by the local unions on December 23, but the state officers thought it well to combine that exercise with the "Thank Offering," so in the afternoon we gathered around to hear the thrilling tales of the early days of the Crusade movement, and how one man with a live coal from God's altar, had set fire to so many hearts all over our land.

Our president opened with a personal reminiscence of work in New Hampshire. A few extracts from a paper by Mrs. E. B. Chace, a pioneer in many reforms, were read, with connecting remarks by Mrs. D Babcock. One of the first movements in the Crusade direction was made at Valley Falls, R. I., in March, 1865, as the result of a lecture by Dio Lewis. Twenty-five women started out and visited every saloon in the place with their appeals. But the keepers said, "We have our licenses; and after all, we are doing no worse than your grocerymen who are selling cider to your boys." The women, shocked and surprised, went immediately to the stores, where they were met with the assertion, "We only keep cider because you require us to do so. It goes into nearly every one of your homes to be used in mince pies." Humbled and convicted, the women went home and signed a pledge that henceforth no alcoholic drink should be used by them as a beverage or in the preparation of food. The next step was to visit the town councils, and this was done repeatedly and persistently, until, as a result of their labors, no licenses were granted in Cumberland or Smithfield for many years.

Miss E. P. Nichols then gave an account of the awakening in Brooklyn. The movement was similar to that in other places, but the pledge taken by them was in advance of that adopted by some of our white-ribboners today. They promised not to patronize any place where liquors were sold. Is not this the only true position for every one of us?

Rev. G. S. Weaver, D. D., who was a resident of Ohio when the first band of women rose from their knees to carry God's message to the saloons in Hillsboro, told how the fire caught and spread in every village, town and city, until it was evident to all, even to those who had doubted the existence of God, that a Divine power was back of it, that it was in truth an outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

One thought running through all the accounts of this wonderful era, with its grand results, was that the first victory gained was over self. Hours, and often days, were spent by these timid women upon their knees before they gained the strength of entire self-surrender, which alone could fit them for the work. And the closing thought was that God is just as ready to bless to-day as He was then, if we do our part.

A well rendered recitation by Miss Phillips, of Phenix, proved her right to the Demorest prize medal which she wore, and gave promise of good results from the contests which will be held throughout the state under W. C. T. U. auspices.

A few more helpful thoughts were given, J. G. Whittier's poem, "The Mantle of St. John De Matha" was read, with its recurring motto, "God's errands never fail," and the meeting closed with a prayer for God's benediction on the coming year.

"God of the Old and New!
Give us the vision true,
The heart of fire;
Strong hands to work for God,
Swift feet with mercy shod,
Treading the path He trod,
Souls to inspire."

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Free Baptists, with whom our president, Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, is connected, have recognized the gospel work which she has been doing so faithfully, by cordially granting her a license to preach.

Mr. W. H. Luther, one of the license commissioners of Providence, has just resigned. Although the papers give as the reason, "press of business," his friends are aware that he has become utterly dissatisfied with the dodges resorted to, and the inability to enforce the prohibitory provisions of the license law.

Miriam Earle, Union Signal Reporter.

TEXAS.

RAYS FROM THE LONE STAR STATE.

The last two months of the old year are shining with hopeful facts for the Texas sisters. We had a larger representation at the National Convention than ever before. Mrs. Lou M. Young and Mrs. Lillie B. Hathaway, of Denison, Mrs. A. P. Boyd, of Paris, and Mrs. D. M. Prendergast, of Mexia, were our delegates. Through the Atlanta Constitution and other prohibition papers, correct reports of the convention were very largely circulated among our people. The Canadian W. C. T. U. has twelve members and nine departments of work. The economic class, connected with this union, meets every week for study in the parlor of the Fay Hotel. The Constitution of the United States, and Bellamy's "Looking Backward," are their present topics of study. F. E. Miller, district attorney, is president of this class, and Mrs. L. M. McKnight is vice-president.

The Greenville Y. W. C. T. U. gave a delightful conversation party in November.

The Mobeetie W. C. T. U. in the same month gave a most popular and profitable sociable.

Mrs S. J. Sweeney, of the Dallas union, with her daughters, sustained the name of our white-ribbon host by keeping "Rest Cottage" for us at the Dallas Fair. Their Band of Hope held memorial services in memory of two departed members.

At Celeste, Hunt county, we have a circle of young ladies who manage a Band of Hope so that it is the pride of the entire community; Mrs. Eula Hunter is its president. Her assistants are, Miss Kate Henslee, Laura Lewis, Annie Carter, Lou V. Hoard, and Miss May England.

The Austin W. C. T. U. elected Mrs. M. E. Reddick president, Mrs. Jennie Dixon, secretary, and Mrs. E. O. McIntyre, treasurer. One of its most faithful members is Mrs H. H. Bowman, formerly of Nevada, Mo. On New Year's eve they gave the state organizer a reception. Although it was a rainy evening there was a good attendance. O. H. Cooper, state superintendent of public schools, and his charming wife were present. Dr. Fanny Leake, formerly of Chicago, gave some entertaining recitations. She is superintendent of prison work, and has also secured a club of ten for The Union Signal. Mrs. Clardy gave an address on Sunday afternoon in the Tenth Street Methodist Church. Her subject was "Kings and Priests on the Earth."

Mrs. R. T. Barber, of San Marcos, is sending out in all directions her circulars concerning work among railroad employes.

The Corsicana W. C. T. U. has met with a severe loss in the death of Mrs. Mary C. Yeates, their superintendent of flower mission. Her Christian virtues are a pleasant memory to our sisterhood and to her husband and family.

The Wortham union is sustaining a Band of Hope. Mrs. Amanda Mallard is president, and Mrs. Lucy Lee organist. Ten new subscribers to The Union Signal have been secured there.

The W. C. T. U. of Mexia was organized early in November. Mrs. Judge Prendergast is president, Mrs. J. L. Smith is vice-president, Mrs. Ruby Yelverton is corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. L. Kennedy, recording secretary, and Mrs. Charles Harris, treasurer. The citizens of Mexia are justly proud of their public school, under charge of Professor Couzens. I had the privilege of addressing the higher grades upon "Health, Business, Citizenship and Pure Pleasures," as the chief aims of a practical education.

At Groesbeck, I enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Fanny Barklay. My parlor meetings were held with Mrs. R. M. Love. Rev. W. S. James, the noted evangelist, was conducting revival services and commanding the respect of the community I had a large audience, and most attentive hearing at the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Professor Overly has charge of the public school, which I had the privilege of addressing.

At Kossé I was sheltered under the roof of Mrs. Alex. Proctor. I addressed their public school, which is in charge of Professor Munroe. I also gave two addresses at night in the Methodist Church. My parlor meetings were conducted at Mrs. Proctor's. The new W. C. T. U. elected the following officers: President, Mrs. W. C. Blalock; corresponding secretary, Miss Maud Elzey; recording secretary, Miss May Proctor; treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Anderson. There was formerly a very active Band of Hope here and a circle of young ladies who did good work during the amendment campaign.

At Bremond I found a hearty welcome at Mrs. Custer's pleasant home. I spoke on two nights at the college, by the courtesy of Professor Wolfe. For two nights I gave my addresses at Mr. Robert Bates' vacant store, which was furnished with chairs and lights for the occasion. My parior meetings were held at Mrs. Custer's.

A few miles on the railroad the brakeman shouts Calvert, and I find myself face to face with our tried friend, Mrs. Montgomery. Her spacious parlor was well adorned with flowers. A large circle of ladies was present. After song and prayer the Bible reading topic was "Ruth and Orpah."

On Sunday afternoon a large audience of all demoninations gathered to listen to words on juvenile temperance work, which department of work has been taken up by the W. C. T. U. Calvert has a beautiful public school building, over which Professor Payne presides with fatherly love. I had the pleasure of addressing each of the seven departments.

My next home was with Mrs. Rushing, at Franklin. Mr. Tonquet arranged for my meetings at the Methodist Church. Professor Baird introduced me to the youth of their public school. Through the courtesy of the sheriff I had the privilege of holding services in the jail with the prisoners.

At Milano, I found Mr. A. E. Russell waiting for me at the depot, to escort me to his home. Mrs. Russell had entertained me before during their local option campaign. I gave two addresses in the Baptist Church, Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs conducting the music. I held two very large ladies' meetings which resulted in the starting of a woman's weekly prayer-meeting. Ten copies of THE UNION SIGNAL were taken.

That devoted Prohibitionist, Rev. A. J. Peeler, with his good wife and their daughter, Mrs. Bates, gave me a hearty welcome at Cameron. Mrs. P. S. Ford opened her parlors for my ladies' meetings. Miss Emma McLennan was a good assistant. My public addresses were held in the Baptist Church and well attended, Mr. Robert Smith serving as organist.

At Caldwell, I was entertained by Mrs. Gillie A. Mecom, who also joined the new union. Mrs. Nannie B. Hudson arranged for my meetings at the Methodist and Baptist Churches. She is the president of the new W. C. T. U; Mrs. M. E. Hitchcock is corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. J. Smook, recording secretary, and Mrs. Maud Morgan, treasurer. I held service at the jail, Mrs. Wilson, the sheriff's wife, and Mrs. Hudson being present. I also addressed the pupils of the public school. A good club for THE UNION SIGNAL was secured. We expect good work from the Caldwell sisters.

Lyons is a thriving town, a few miles south of Caldwell. I was fortunate enough to have two homes there, first, with Mrs. Harry Barnett, and next with Mrs. A. J. Radford. Rev Mr. Dunn and his daughter, a good organist, assisted greatly in making my meetings useful. I held the Crusade meeting December 23. My Christmas dinner was taken with Mrs. Radford. On the next day I enjoyed a ride of four miles to Mrs. Wood's residence, and joined her large family of sons, daughters, grandchildren and friends in Christmas festivities. The roses were blooming out-of-doors. Their Christmas tree had been adorned with cotton blossoms. A club for THE UNION SIGNAL was formed at Lyons.

Here at Manor, I have enjoyed the home of Mrs. Jennie Lane, and passed one delightful night with Mrs. M. E. Parsley. I have had one large audience at night in the Alliance Hall, and one ladies' meeting. The rain has prevented other gatherings, except that I addressed the public school under the supervision of Professor Rogers. For many years Manor has outlawed the saloon. It is the home of Dr. J. D. Fields, president of the State Farmers' Alliance.

Mrs. M. L. Wells, of Tennessee, has been doing some good work at Paris, Denison, and Dallas. Mrs. Boyd sends out our little White Ribbon Monthly from Paris, and we rejoice in its good news. Our state officers are diligently pushing forward our work of faith and labor of love. I am glad that we can begin the year with so many encouraging facts.

MARY M. CLARDY,
Union Signal Reporter.

ILLINOIS.

A WORD IN REGARD TO THE TENNESSEE UNION.

The Inter Ocean of December 2, 1889, contained an article purporting to be an official communication from the Tennessee (Ill.) union, setting forth their indorsement of the non-partisan doctrine, and their "unbounded admiration" of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster. It also claimed that the union denounced the action of the state convention at Decatur, and that they were in favor of re-organization.

The names of the officers of the union, with a half-dozen other members, were signed, giving it the appearance of genuineness.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly," and in this case they ground "exceeding small." It has come to pass that the letter was prepared by a person not a member of the union, taken to different women to sign, and some declare that the document they signed did not contain the sentiments which afterward appeared in the printed copy. The members further declare that as a union they took no such action as is claimed in the article, and that they desire to continue as they have ever been, loyal and true to the W. C. T. U. in all its departments of work.

This explanation is due the earnest Christian women of the Tennessee union, composed as it is of women of all political shades of belief. I have spent two evenings here, and find these women, and the people generally, wide awake upon the prohibition question. Sixteen new members were added to the union. I thoroughly believe that what little friction exists on the non-partisan question in Illinois is caused, as in this instance, by outsiders, and generally by men who are determined, if possible, to break down the W. C. T. U.

The work of the loyal women of the Tennessee union in showing up the unwarrantable interference with their affairs, would make an interesting chapter. Let our women everywhere stand true to our principles and position, and victory will be ours.

MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, State Pres.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

THE Little Rock, Ark., W. C. T. U. is in its new headquarters, 315½ W. Markham street, the kind donation of Mrs. C. A. McDiarmid to the W. C. T. U. and the Suffrage Association.

MAJOR and Mrs. E. T. Scott have been doing work in Detroit, Mich. At the close of an address by Mrs. Scott, January 7, another W. C. T. Union was formed, with Mrs. Elizabeth Stocking, president.

MISS ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD, National superintendent of evangelistic work, will give a series of Bible expositions in Washington, D. C., the last of February. Also in Steuben county, New York, in February. Unions wishing services en route to Washington or in New York state should communicate with her at once.

THE Y. W. C. T. U. of Ravenswood, Ill., passed appropriate resolutions in memory of their beloved co-worker, Miss Mamie Samuels, who left the earthly for the heavenly ranks in November. Beautiful words are spoken in this testimonial regarding the influence of her "cheerful face, generous and loving nature, but above all the pure and beneficial power of her strong Christian soul," to which she gave expression "in the sweet low strains of that voice lifted so often in our midst in praise to God."

THE Franklin county convention, Nebraska, met at Riverton, recently, Mrs. Nellie Owens, president, in the chair. Much interest was manifested and good work done. The delegates were royally entertained at dinner and supper in the basement of the Congregational church, where the convention was held.

NOTICE.

If all W. C. T. Unions in Missouri having reading-rooms will report the same to the secretary at headquarters, Rialto Building, Kansas City, at once, they will hear something of interest to themselves.

ELLEN D. MORRIS.

Official Communications.

SCHOOL OF METHODS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR A NATIONAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

It has long been felt that a permanent School of Methods located at Headquarters was greatly to be desired as a practicable arm of the service in developing the white-ribbon movement. While there is great advantage in having these schools at the summer Chautauquas and other resorts where Christian workers congregate, and while this plan has been carried out to the utmost extent that our facilities permitted, it is also true that a winter school will attract many who for various reasons do not attend the more transient lessons given in the summer. What we want is skilled workers of undoubted experience in all the lines of white-ribbon endeavor. To this end the National superintendent must be at all times accessible, having about her a corp of trained associates, and also the invaluable object lessons of the Chicago W. C. T. U., which is a model in its way, with its daily gospel meeting, anchorage (for women), kindergartens, day nurseries, lodging houses, restaurants and many other branches of work. At Headquarters also is our Publishing House with its immense influence, wide outlook, and many experienced workers, including among them three of the general officers, and five editors; in this city is also Mr. Moody's school for Christian workers. All of our departments are represented in the work going on at Headquarters, in the city or suburbs, and at Rest Cottage, Evanston, which is nothing more or less than a branch of the Headquarters, there is much to see and learn about our many-sided work.

It has been decided to start this work in a modest way, if enough ladies desire to make it practicable. The plan is to have a month's session as an experiment; the forenoons to be devoted to the exercises of the school, the afternoons to study and visiting the institutions named, in which our various lines of work are carried on. The morning's course of study will include Bible temperance and how to conduct the lines of work most needed in average unions. It will be a good preparation for conducting county institutes as well as for doing the regular work of local unions. The school will be in charge of the National superintendent, Mary Allen West, assisted by the general officers and other specialists. Will all ladies who desire to attend such a session of the training school notify me immediately, stating what time between February 1 and May 1 will suit them best? If forty or fifty ladies so desire, we think that all expenses of the school can be met by a tuition fee of three dollars per pupil. Let me hear from you promptly, as the carrying out of this plan depends upon your response.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

FROM THE NATIONAL SUPERINTENDENT.

At the last National Convention, as has before been stated the department of parliamentary usage was consolidated with this department. Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich., remains in charge of this branch of the work in which she has wrought up so great an interest throughout the country. Inquiries concerning this line of work can be addressed to her as usual, and I strongly urge the use of her parliamentary cards by unions. Feeling that physical, especially vocal training, should be made a part of every School of Method, Mrs. S. S. Curry, principal of the Boston School of Expression, was also associated with me in this department, to take charge of that work. She sends the following communication, to which I ask especial attention.

MARY ALLEN WEST, Supt.

SUGGESTIONS FROM MRS. CURRY.

The incorporation of a department of work to provide vocal training for speakers in the School of Methods of the W. C. T. U., shows the earnest, wide-awake spirit of the leaders of this work, and is one of the insignificant things that indicates so much more than it says.

The impulse, both moral and intellectual, given to woman to engage in public work, is calling hundreds of women from the home to the platform. The change is sudden, and if unanticipated must be attended with great injury to the women themselves, and with a minimum of good to the cause. Some of the dangers are: First, the newness of the situation disturbs repose and results in nervousness. Second, arousing sympathy and feeling out of proportion with thought and reason, resulting in a most perverting development of the individual, leading inevitably to bigotry and inability to reason. Third, forced largeness in delivery that reacts very soon and results in all the crudities and falsities known as faults in delivery, often entire loss of voice; to physical disease of the vocal organs or of the nerves. Fourth, a terrible waste of valuable energy and material which if wisely trained to its intended use, would result in great glory to God in the promulgation of His truth.

I wish to offer greeting to my sisters in the work, and in a general way to outline my proposed line of work in the Summer School of Methods. Classes will be organized in the fundamental essentials of training for speakers, including exercises to develop correct use and harmonious action of voice, body and mind. The method of work will be to give general talks or lectures to the whole class—with general training, subdividing the classes for personal work in exercises under qualified assistants.

The extent and scope of work given will of course depend somewhat upon interest in the subject manifest, but all work undertaken will be thorough, practical, and founded on fundamental principles. A special outline will be published in THE UNION SIGNAL as soon as the time of meeting af the several schools is announced. Meantime, all interested are invited to communicate with the School of Expression, Boston, when catalogues and circulars of information will be supplied. We hope much from this opportunity to come face to face with a band of earnest workers eager to know how best to work for the Master, and solicit eager and enthusiastic interest.

Address all inquiries to MRS. S. S. CURRY,
School of Expression, 15½ Beacon St., Boston.

PRISON, JAIL, POLICE AND ALMSHOUSE WORK.

A MESSAGE TO PRISON WORKERS.

In almost all our institutions we find some who would gladly accept leaflets if we could furnish them in their own language, and it is pitiful to see their disappointment when they understand that we have only English reading. One lady distributing tracts in the jail was met by an old man who, with great eagerness signified his wish for something to read, and drew from his pocket a worn leaflet which the lady recognized as one she had given him eighteen months before. She learned that it was the only thing in his own language (Polish) that he had had to read in all that time. I had a similar case with a Swede not long since. I am so glad I can tell you how to meet these needs. Write to Mrs. S. F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kas., our National superintendent of foreign work, and she will do her best to give you the language and topic you desire at very reasonable rates. I like to think how happy you will be in some prison visit with something for all. May the Lord direct your efforts and bless them in His name.

MRS. J. K. BARNEY, Nat. Supt.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP

speaks at Ft. Edward, N. Y., January 21; Burlington, Vt., 22; Philadelphia 23 and 24; Ocean Grove, N. J., 26. Arrangements are being made with Massachusetts for March, and later on with Maine.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE

begins her services in Illinois February 2, at Sheldon. March is to be given in Indiana.

MISS HENRIETTA G. MOORE begins a month's work in Idaho January 20; following this she goes to Montana.

MISS I. C. DE VELLING

speaks at Rathdrum, Idaho, February 2 and 3; Cheney, East Wash., 4.

COL. JOHN SOBIESKI

speaks at St. Louis, Mo., January 19 and for two weeks following.

MRS. HELEN L. BULLOCK speaks at County Lane, N. Y., January 28; Somerset, 29; Olcott, 30.

MRS. R. J. TREGO

will begin evangelistic services at Knoxville, Tenn., February 22; any one desiring her services in that vicinity should apply early.

MRS. C. M. WOODWARD

is at Omaha, Neb., organizing in that city.

MRS. S. M. PERKINS

speaks at Lorain, Ohio, February 19; at Leechburg, 26.

MRS. M. L. WELLS

is in Texas.

WM. H. WHITEHEAD

of Manchester, England, desires a few engagements between Chicago and the Pacific Coast. He comes to our country bearing high commendations, and has been warmly received in New York and Philadelphia.

For dates and terms of all the above, address the
WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Publisher's Dep't.

A Test! A Test!

We have a natural curiosity to know how many subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL read the publishers notes. To test it we will agree to send the paper for five consecutive weeks to any one person you name on a postal card, providing you will tell the party the paper is sent at your request, and also providing you will afterwards see your friend and ask her to subscribe for a year. Now then, how many responses will there be?

D. W. I.
C. A. I.
T. M. O. P. N.
N. T. T. R. I.

Who will translate? Know what is meant? Excuses for not taking THE UNION SIGNAL? Which class is the most numerous? Who will translate and give good answers to each set of initials? We will present a year's subscription for the best response received before March 1.
Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

TAKE MONON ROUTE
for all points South.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure sick-headache.

Don't Buy A Poor Piano.

The Marchal & Smith Piano Company, of New York, send elegant and fashionable pianos direct to the purchaser, saving nearly half in costs. Don't let agents persuade you to buy poor pianos.

Ladies who wish to help promote dress reform should obtain one of the Delsarte Waists advertised in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL. Ladies who are wearing the goods made by the Delsarte Company, say they will wear no others. One thing you can do, and that is send to Mrs. Rew, the manager, 142 23rd St., New York, for full information in regard to these Waists. They want agents in every town in the United States. In writing them please mention seeing the advertisement in THE UNION SIGNAL.

INFANTS' And children's wardrobes made to order. Imported Madras dresses a specialty. Send 2c. stamp for samples and prices. H. J. SPRAGUE & CO., 43 and 45 Franklin St., Chicago.

$29 Saved. A $45.00 Sewing Machine for $16.00. Call on or write to M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., for particulars. Mentioning this paper and get full information.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

SEND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF FOR QUALITY UNSURPASSED STOCK COMPLETE TESTED
GARDEN FLOWER & FARM
PLANTS BULBS SEEDS TOOLS ECT.
READ OUR OFFERS BEFORE BUYING
W. W. BARNARD & CO. CHICAGO.
6-8, N. CLARK ST.
SUCCESSORS TO HIRAM SIBLEY & CO'S SEED AND IMPLEMENT BUSINESS AT CHICAGO.
MAILED FREE

These insoles warm the whole body, keep the vital forces up, magnetize the iron in the blood, and cause a feeling of warmth and comfort over the whole body. If no other result was produced than to insulate the body from the wet, cold earth, the Insoles would be invaluable. In many cases the Insoles alone will cure Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Swelling of the Limbs. $1.00 a pair, or three pairs for $2.00, to any address by mail. Send stamps or currency in letter, stating size of boot or shoe, and we will send free by mail to any part of the world. Send for our book, "A PLAIN ROAD TO HEALTH" Free to any address. MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

ALL ABOUT NEW STATE OF WASHINGTON
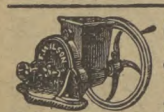
Send stamp for Catechism. ESHELMAN, LLEWELLYN & CO., Seattle,

DO YOU WANT A SALARY Work for us and our publications if you do. We can put you in the way of making money. Write for full particulars. Address.
Woman's Temp. Pub, Ass'n,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.



GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address
Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

Granula possesses merits unknown to those who have never used the food. The proprietors are modest and do not claim anywhere near as much for it as it deserves. Do not wait till you are an invalid before using Granula, but get it now and save yourself from being an invalid.

The First Books of the Year.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY PUBLISH:

SUPERIOR TO CIRCUMSTANCES

By EMILY LUCAS BLACKALL.

A book that grapples boldly with three most vital, most perplexing problems,—the sphere of woman's work, the relations of wage-paying and wage-earning, and the methods to be employed by the church in reaching the people.

"A thoroughly helpful volume for such as have aspirations towards the highest plane of life."—Zion's Advocate.

"The story is one that appeals to every lover of moral heroism."—Home Guardian.

"One of the freshest and most stimulating narratives of home life we have seen."—Chicago Standard.
$1.25.

AIDS TO ENDEAVOR.

Short selections from standard authors, designed for public and private use. With an introduction by REV. FRANCIS E. CLARK, D.D., President of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.
12mo. 207 pp.; cloth, 75 cts., net, gilt edges, $1.00.

WELLSPRINGS OF WISDOM.

Kindling and strength-giving utterances from the words and writings of England's great divine, FREDERICK W. ROBERTSON.
Edited, with an introduction, by ROSE PORTER.
12mo. 242 pp. $1.00.

THOSE RAEBURN GIRLS.

By MRS. A. F. RAFFENSPERGER.

A story for girls and young women who long for something to do,—something that shall make them self-supporting.

It shows how "Those Raeburn Girls" solved the problem nobly and well. 12mo. 328 pp. $1.25.

At the booksellers or sent by the publishers, postpaid on receipt of price.

All heads of families who have not subscribed for the Lothrop Magazines should subscribe now.

Wide Awake, $2.40 a year; Babyland, 50 cents a year; Our Little Men and Women, $1 a year; The Pansy, $1 a year.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY,
Washington St., opposite Bromfield, Boston.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR! 0

NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$1
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$1
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$1
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$1
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$1
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$1
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$1
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$1
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$1
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$1
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$1
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$1
College Songs; 150,000 sold	50c
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$1
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music.	$1

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$1
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$1
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$1
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$1
Popular Dance Music Collection	$1
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$1

The above are all superior books.

Any book mailed for retail price.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

C. H. DITSON & Co.,
867 Broadway, New York.

S. S. SINGING BOOKS.

"BEAUTIFUL SONGS:" Our latest, is being received with the most marked favor. Usually when tested with a dozen other books it is selected.

"LIVING FOUNTAIN:" New and very popular. Hundreds of the best schools have adopted it and praise it in unstinted measure.

"MORNING LIGHT:" — STANDARD. THOUSANDS of schools find just what they want in it.

People who prefer noble, warm, Christian sentiment to mere rattling rhymes, and want substantial, stirring and lasting tunes, find their choice in these books. 35 cents each—one sample copy for examination, only 20 cents.

Send for specimen pages of best Singing books for Choir, Singing School, Day School.

S. W. STRAUB & CO., Publishers,
243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

KISS ME MAMMA I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

Blessed be Drudgery, Gannett.....2 cents.
Natural Religion, Blake.....5 cents.
Is a Scientific Basis for Religion Possible? M. J. Savage.....5 cents.
Unity Publishing Committee, Chicago.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

SCOTT'S FLOWERS

41 Years' Experience in growing our strong and reliable ROSES Grand specialties in PLANTS, BULBS, & FLOWER SEEDS of extra choice quality. Rare Novelties of great beauty. Handsomely illustrated Catalogue for 1890, fully describing many Beautiful New Flowers, sent FREE to any address. Send for it now. ROBERT SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

ROSES AND HARDY PLANTS

OUR SPECIALTIES.

PÆONIES, LILIES, PHLOXES, PINKS; VINES and SHRUBS, (5 sorts of Dbl. Lilacs;) the NEW RED CLEMATIS, KERMISINUS, BEGONIAS, finest collection in the country, BRUANT RACE of GERANIUMS, splendid new family of sun proof bedders. CHRYSANTHEMUMS, all prize taking varieties. FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS, very best quality. All the good New sorts, and best old varieties. PLANTS post-paid by Mail. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Send for our FREE Illustrated Catalogue, and mention this paper.

HILL & CO., RICHMOND, INDIANA.

VAUGHAN'S CHICAGO PARKS FLOWERS, IN SEEDS, PLANTS, BULBS.

Our Catalogue for 1890 TELLS THE WHOLE STORY for the Garden, Lawn and Farm The handsomest, most complete and conservative SEED BOOK of the year. Our CHICAGO PARKS' Strains of FLOWER SEEDS and PLANTS are the finest in America. We mail free everywhere DOLLAR COLLECTIONS of these, among which are VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSY MIXTURE from all the celebrated growers in Europe and America. 5 packets for $1. Pkt. 25 cts. CHICAGO PARK'S BEDDING PANSIES, 12 separate colors for 50 cts. Our MIKADO Collection, 10 best Annuals for 25 cts. VAUGHAN'S CHICAGO PARKS' LAWN GRASS MIXTURE 4 pounds postpaid for $1. Sow early. LINCOLN PARK COLLECTION of 12 choicest Geraniums for $1. Our beautiful Catalogue with every order. We sell all Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, Garden Tools, Field Seeds, Corn, Potatoes, Small Fruits and Hardy Plants. Combine your orders here saving freight, time and expense. Send 10 cents for any kind of Seed and get Catalogue free.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, 146-148 W. Washington St, CHICAGO

NEW STRAWBERRY "LADY RUSK"
The best berry for long distance shipments. Will not rot or melt down if packed dry. Headquarters for all leading varieties of Berry Plants and GRAPE VINES having 300 acres in cultivation. Catalogue free.
WM. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

LADIES YOUR CHOICE. 100,000 DEMOREST CORSETS 100,000 SHOULDER BRACES 100,000 STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE

A MARVELOUS OFFER

By A Reliable House!

Every lady has heard of MME. DEMOREST. Her name is a by-word in every house in the land. Her celebrated Patterns have been in use over 40 years. We are the publishers of the well-known publication,

Mme. Demorest's Illustrated Monthly Fashion Journal

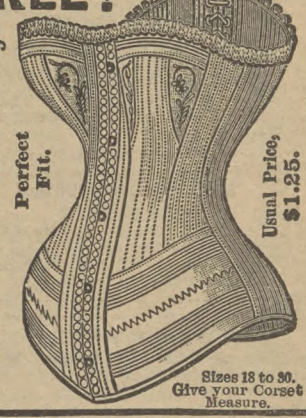
and we wish to increase its circulation 200,000 copies during the next 90 days, and to that end we will give away to new subscribers

100,000 Demorest Celeb'd Corsets " Shoulder Braces " Stocking Supporters FREE

The MME. DEMOREST ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY FASHION JOURNAL is a 36 page paper, beautifully illustrated, covering every possible field of Fashions Fancy Work, Home Decorations, Cooking, etc., each department being under the special supervision of the best known contributors. It is besides replete with matters of interest to mothers, and is furthermore filled with illustrations, stories, sketches, humor and matters of general interest.

FREE!

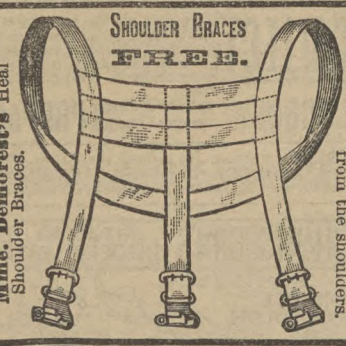
FINE AMERICAN JEAN! Beautiful Ornamental Stitching. Perfect Fit.



Usual Price, $1.25.

Sizes 18 to 30. Give your Corset Measure.

SHOULDER BRACES FREE.



Mme. Demorest's Heal Shoulder Braces.

Every lady should suspend the clothes from the shoulders.

Every line of reading is carefully guarded by an editor, who receives $5,000 per annum, and nothing is published in its columns but the best and purest reading matter. It may be admitted to any household and your children may read it as well as you. It numbers among its subscribers the wives of thousands of clergymen throughout the country. It is the best Fashion paper published in the world. It tells you "What to Wear" "When and How to Wear It." It gives you all the latest styles in Ladies' Hats, Bonnets, etc. It is always abreast of the times, and everything within its pages is new and original. It also contains the latest Fashion news from abroad by our Special London and Paris correspondents

HOW TO OBTAIN The Mme. Demorest Corset FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL and 25 cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 CENTS in all, and we will mail you one of these handsome CORSETS FREE.

STOCKING SUPPORTERS

How To Obtain Two Articles: A PAIR OF SHOULDER BRACES AND Stocking Supporters FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL, and 25 Cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 Cents in all, and we will mail you these two articles, One Pair of SHOULDER BRACES and One Pair of STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE!

REMEMBER THERE IS NO HUMBUG ABOUT THESE OFFERS.

We do exactly as we guarantee. Our house has been established for over 40 years, and we can refer you to any Commercial Agency, Bank, Express Office or Business Firm in the land. Make all remittances either by Draft, Postal Note, Money Order, or Registered Letter. When postal note is not procurable, send stamps. Address all communications to

THE DEMOREST FASHION & SEWING MACHINE CO., 17 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK.

This offer should be taken advantage of at once as we will give away no more than 100,000 of each article. SHOW THIS TO YOUR FRIENDS. IT WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN.

We know the Demorest Fashion and Sewing Machine Co. to be a thoroughly reliable firm and advise our readers to accept their offer.—EDITOR.

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus. East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A. A. Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N. Y. City.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

Stanley's Own Story.
5000 Agents Wanted. New Book. Only authorized volume. Fully illustrated. Over 800 large pages. Complete canvassing outfit and book mailed for only 50 cts. Be quick. National Pub. Co., Chicago.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

Publisher's Notes.

TERMS FOR 1890 — THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Der Deutsch Amerikaner (semi-monthly) German temperance; single copy 50 cents, in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

New Bulletin.

A new Bulletin of Publications is ready. Send for one. Use them to indicate to those not familiar with our publications what leaflets, books, etc., they should order.

"Ye Hatchet Partie"

Know ye that Washington's Birthday is coming? Dost remember that the above named entertainment has been given with great success? Why not gather in some shekels for your local work by giving this or some other entertainment of which we have such a variety to suit all ages and requirements? Ye Hatchet Partie sells at 15 cts. each, $1.50 per dozen. The music required in it can also be had through us.

White Cross Bible Book-Mark (pledge).
In three colors. On cardboard, each, 5 cents; 10 for 35 cents; 25 for 50 cents. On heavy white satin ribbon, 10 cents each; 3 for 25 cents.

Social Purity Pledges.

White Cross, (two colors) per 100	$ .50
Silver Cross, " "	1.00
White Shield, " "	1.00
Daughters of the Temple, "	1.00

THE PURITY CRUSADE.
ITS CONFLICTS AND TRIALS.
(English Edition.)
This work is a thrilling account of the Social Purity movement in England. The lessons taught are valuable to all interested in White Cross Work.
Price ..... $ .25
Five copies 1.00

BOYS AND OTHER BOYS.
LUCY A. SCOTT.
An admirable book for "middle-aged boys," from fourteen to twenty years old. A mother's talks with her son on all vital subjects, friendships, books, personal purity, etc.
Paper ..... $ .25
Muslin ..... .50

Y. W. C. T. U. SUPPLIES.

Suggestions for Y. W. C. T. Unions. Frances J. Barnes. (New Edition.)
Price, each ..... $ .05
Per 100 ..... 3.00

Organization and Auxiliaryship. Frances J. Barnes.
Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... 1.25

List of Books. Frances J. Barnes.
Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... 1.25

Objects and Aims of the Y. W. C. T. U. Susannah Evans Rech.
Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... 1.25

Y. W. C. T. U. Illuminated Pledge Cards.
Per 100 ..... $1.00

Leaving the Home Nest. Alice M. Guernsey.
Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... .90

Hints for Y Entertainments. Mrs. F. S. Evans.
Price, each ..... $ .10

The New Crusade. Frances H. Ensign.
Price, each ..... $ .02
Per 100 ..... 1.00

The White Ribbon Birthday Book,

by Anna A. Gordon. Gilt edges, $1.25; plain edges, $1.

Its bright pages are made still brighter by the words of woman's wit and wisdom. David is the only man permitted a hearing between its covers! Nearly 10,000 have been sold. They make beautiful guest-books as well as birthday books.

Woman's Temperance Publication Ass'n
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A Prominent, Regular Physician
of New York City gives the following directions
For Preventing and Curing
INFLUENZA or "LA GRIPPE"

Evaporate morning and evening a few tablespoonfuls of POND'S EXTRACT and inhale the vapor. Pour the POND'S EXTRACT into a tin cup, which hold over the flame of a lamp; hold the nose over the cup that the vapor may be inhaled. By this treatment the membrane of the nose and throat will be in such condition that it will resist the poisonous action of the germs, which are the cause of this disease; and if the germs have already been inhaled they will be destroyed. The symptoms of "La Grippe" are, inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which may extend to the lungs, with cough, sneezing, running at the nose and perhaps severe aching pains and high fever. These directions are for POND'S EXTRACT only. It may be unsafe to use any other article in this way.

Have Pond's Extract in Readiness.
Made only by
POND'S EXTRACT CO.,
New York and London.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

EVERY LADY WANTS A SILK DRESS

This is your opportunity. A new departure. SILKS direct from the manufacturers to you. Our reduced prices bring the best goods within reach of all. We are the only manufacturers in the U. S. selling direct to consumers. You take no risk. We warrant every piece of goods as represented, or money refunded. See our references. We are the oldest Silk Manufacturers in the U.S. Established in 1838, with over 50 years' experience. We guarantee the CHAFFEE DRESS SILKS, for richness of color, superior finish and wearing qualities, to be unexcelled by any make of Black Silks in the world. We offer these Dress Silks in Gros Grains, Satins, Surahs, Faille Francaise and Aida Cloths, in Blacks only.

Send us a 2c.-stamp (to pay postage) and we will forward you samples of all our styles free with prices, and you can see for yourselves.

O. S. CHAFFEE & SON,
Mansfield Centre, Conn.
Refer, by permission, to First National Bank, Windham National Bank, Dime Savings Bank, Willimantic Savings Institute, of Willimantic, Conn.

RECOLLECT we send to all parts of the U.S. With each Dress Pattern we present the buyer with 1000 Yards Sewing Silk, and enough Silk Braid to bind bottom of dress.

THE GOODS are delivered to you all carrying charges PREPAID

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER!
Cures Lung Affections.
"Dr. Seth Arnold's Cough Killer cured me of a severe lung affection which, according to good physicians in this state, had reached an incipient stage of consumption."—M. D. Stratton, Watertown, N.Y.
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

JAPANESE WARE for Church Fairs. The Formosa Co., 86 State St., Chicago, Ill.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

BABY CARRIAGES C. O. D. Velocipedes or Girl's Tricycles Sent One or more at Wholesale Prices. Express charges prepaid from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison St., CHICAGO. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer SEWING MACHINE 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S "CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

AGENTS LOOK HERE and Farmers with no experience make $2.50 an hour during spare time. A. D. BATES, 164 W. Robbins Ave., Covington, Ky., made $21 one day, $81 one week. So can you. Proofs and catalogue free. J. E. SHEPARD & CO., Cincinnati, O.

MARION WALKER.
I wish to employ a few ladies on salary to take charge of my business at their homes. Light, very fascinating and healthful. Wages $10 per week. Good pay for part time. References given. Address with stamp, MRS. MARION WALKER, Louisville, Ky.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

Family Shoes! FARGO'S $2.50 Calf Shoes for Gentlemen. Fargo's $2.50 Ladies' Boot for Ladies, and "Box Tip" SCHOOL SHOES for Boys and Girls. ☞ Ask your dealer for them. If he does not keep them, send to us for the size and style you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Or send to us for a full description of the Fargo shoes. A Pocket-Mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

TAR-OID
A new method of compounding Tar.
SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM
and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

OUR BUSINESS SHOWED A LARGER INCREASE IN 1889 THAN FOR 18 PREVIOUS YEARS. WHY?

ERE'S A FEW REASONS!
(1) Very popular patterns of cloth. Styles shown only by us.
(2) Improved system of cutting, customer picking out his own shape from 10 examples, in addition to sending measures.
(3) 52 patterns, cut from cloth itself, to select from.
(4) Every garment guaranteed in all points—money promptly refunded for any cause.
(5) Entire outfit as shown above, sent FREE upon application, post-paid.
(6) Increase of our branch stores as far South as New Orleans, and West to Chicago, successfully competing for fine city trade.
(7) Thousands of people telling each other of our honorable treatment of customers, and excellent wear and fit of our clothing.

The promise for 1890 is very bright. We shall strive hard to deserve it.

PLYMOUTH ROCK PANTS CO.
Address all mail to Headquarters, 11 to 17 Eliot St. Annex, 695 Washington St., and 18 Summer St., Boston, Mass.
Branches: 285 Broadway, New York; 943 Penn. Ave., Washington, D. C.; 72 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.; 914 Main St., Richmond, Va.; 225 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md.; 110 Canal St., New Orleans, La.; 104 Montgomery St., Montgomery, Ala.; 39 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.; Burnside Bldg., Worcester, Mass.; Hotel Gilmore, Springfield, Mass.; 198 Westminster St., Providence, R. I.; Old Register Bldg., New Haven, Conn.; 106 No. Main St., Concord, N. H.; 170 River St., Troy, N. Y.

Be your own tailor.
Send for samples and rules for self-measuring.
Men's Suits, $12.00 to $30.00.
Men's Overcoats, $6.00 to $45.00.
Men's Pantaloons, $3.00 to $10.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Suits, $5.00 to $20.00.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Overcoats, $5.00 to $20.00.
Be sure and send for samples of our Combination Suits for boys, ages 4 to 14.
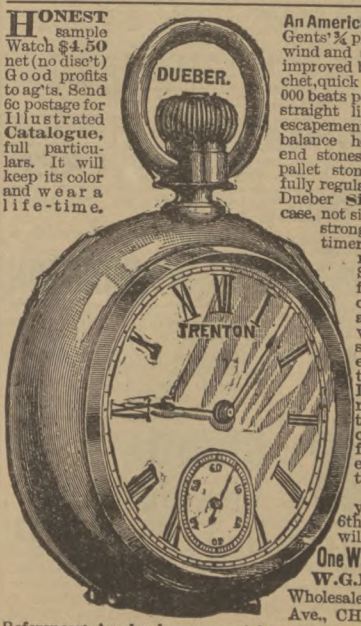
This means suit, extra pants and hat, all for the price of a suit alone, $5.00 & $6.00.
Goods sent C. O. D., with privilege of examining before paying.
PUTNAM CLOTHING HOUSE,
131 & 133 Clark St., 113 & 117 Madison St., N. E. Cor. Clark & Madison.

WHOOPING COUGH DELAVAU'S REMEDY
Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to ag'ts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.



An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18,000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated, in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it.
When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W.G. Morris, Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

Publisher's Dep't.

2X10=20

And Picture Free.

We have 800 artotypes measuring 11x14 inches of Miss Willard's workshop in Rest Cottage, Evanston; we used several thousand of these pictures in 1887. We now make the special offer to send one (regular price 25 cents) for two 10-cent trial subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL. The picture will be sent to you postpaid or to any address that you name. This is a generous offer—take advantage of it at once. The limited number of pictures will soon be called for. All readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will be interested in this unique picture. No further commission than the picture will be given for the two names, and that only while the supply lasts.

BOOKS

That can be safely admitted in your home circle are not so very abundant. Some that are harmless are vapid; some give false and strained ideas of life. We believe it is not claiming too much for the books published by the W. T. P. A., to say that they can be "safely admitted." What are some of them?

Nineteen Beautiful Years,

by Frances E. Willard, 75c.

So well known that you should make it better known.

Boys and Other Boys

AND

Girls of To-Day,

by Mrs. L. R. Scott. Cloth, red edges each 50c.; paper covers, 25c.

No better "advice" books have been written. This is saying a good deal knowing the fondness of giving advice, its cheapness, etc. Good, clean, sweet wholesomeness must result from reading these two volumes.

From a Letter.

"I cannot let the old year die without doing a little more toward putting big nails in Rum's coffin. I consider every UNION SIGNAL put into a family drives one nail in deep. Its missionary work is done in such a kindly, Christlike spirit one can't help but admire it. Yours for Rum's destruction, H. E. BALDWIN."

Mr. Baldwin is the editor of an influential paper in Joliet, Ill., and has many times before sent us new subscribers; this time he sends us three. May his tribe increase! there is need and room for the prayer.

Address, WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Fall of the Christians:

An Historical Romance of Japan in the 17th Century.

By Prof. W. C. Kitchin, Ph. D.

"The Fall of the Christians" is a history of the desperate struggle of Christianity against Paganism in Japan over two hundred and fifty years ago, as related in ancient manuscripts discovered by the author. There were then several thousands of Christians in Japan, and the attempt to exterminate them led to one of the most sanguinary struggles recorded in history. The heroism of the Christians, both men and women, and their fortitude under the most appalling dangers, as portrayed by Professor Kitchin, will enlist the sympathies of the civilized world.

GIVEN FREE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS
SOUVENIR POEMS
—BY—
JOHN G. WHITTIER,
—AND—
JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

THE LEADING WRITERS.

CELEBRATED ARTISTS.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

$2 A YEAR
SIXTEEN PAGES EVERY WEEK

Herbert Ward, Stanley's Companion.

Herbert Ward, the companion of Stanley in his explorations in Africa, is one of the few men connected with Stanley's African explorations who has ever returned alive from the "Dark Continent." Mr. Ward's articles running through eight numbers of the "Ledger" are of the most intensely interesting description, and cover five years of his adventures in Africa, and they will be illustrated by sketches made by Mr. Ward, and by the reproduction of photographs taken by him in Africa. These pictures will throw much light upon the manners and customs of the hitherto unknown cannibal tribes of Africa.

Life in British America, By Rev. E. R. Young.

Being the adventures and experiences of Rev. E. R. Young, the celebrated missionary, and his wife during their residence in the Polar region twelve hundred miles north of St. Paul, in which Dr. Young narrates how he tamed and taught the native wild Indians of the Northwest; how he equipped himself for and how he made his perilous sledging and hazardous canoe trips when visiting all the Indian settlements within five hundred miles of his home.

Nihilism in Russia, By Leo Hartmann, Nihilist.

Leo Hartmann, a fugitive from Russian authorities, has been connected with the most daring feats of the Russian Nihilists. Mr. Hartmann shows how the intelligent people of Russia are becoming Nihilists in consequence of the despotism of the form of government. A participant in plots to kill the Czar, such as the blowing up of the Winter Palace, he is able to give true information as to how this and other great schemes were accomplished. The situation in Russia is sufficient to increase the love of every true American for our form of government.

Into Mischief and Out, By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

This is a story of college life. It describes, in a graphic manner, the troubles which overtake bright students who get into mischief, and their skillful manœuvres to evade the consequences of their conduct.

Other Contributors for 1890 are:

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.	Robert Louis Stevenson.	Rev. Dr. H. M. Field.
Mrs. Margaret Deland.	Anna Sheilds.	M. W. Hazeltine.
Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.	Josephine Pollard.	Thomas Dunn English.
Mrs. Madeleine Vinton Dahlgren.	Amy Randolph.	George F. Parsons.
Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford.	Frank H. Converse.	Col. Thomas W. Knox.
Mrs. Emma Alice Browne.	C. F. Holder.	Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton.
Mary Kyle Dallas.	Dr. Felix L. Oswald.	Rev. Dr. James McCosh.
Marion Harland.	Rev. Emory J. Haynes.	Prof. S. M. Stevens.
Clara Whitridge.	Julian Hawthorne.	Prof. J. H. Comstock.
Judge Albion W. Tourgee.	Prof. W. C. Kitchin.	James Parton.
Marquise Lanza.	Robert Grant.	Harold Frederic.

The Character of the New York Ledger.

The New York Ledger directs its efforts towards crowding out that trashy and injurious literature which is poisoning the minds of American youth. The Ledger appeals to the intelligence of the people, and depends for its support on that taste which prevails for innocent and amusing entertainment and healthful instruction. The Ledger will contain the best Serial and Short Stories, Historical and Biographical Sketches, Travels, Wit and Humor, and everything interesting to the Household.

Subscription money can be sent at our risk by Post Office Money Order, Bank Check or Draft, or an Express Money Order.

Send $2 for a Year's Subscription or 5 Cents for Sample Copy and Illustrated Calendar Announcement.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, 220 William St., New York.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES of Lime and Soda

is endorsed and prescribed by leading physicians because both the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites are the recognized agents in the cure of Consumption. It is as palatable as milk.

Scott's Emulsion is a perfect Emulsion. It is a wonderful Flesh Producer. It is the Best Remedy for CONSUMPTION, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Coughs and Colds.

Ask for Scott's Emulsion and take no other.

FLAVOR YOUR
Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with
BELL'S SPICED SEASONING

THIS SEASONING is made of the granulated leaves of fragrant sweet herbs and choice selected spices, having all the flavors that can be desired, thereby saving the trouble of having to use a dozen different kinds of herbs and spices in order to give the proper flavor. On account of the purity, one tablespoonful is enough to season the dressing to an eight-pound turkey. Full directions with each can. Used by all leading Hotels.

WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs, Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE can be CURED

in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.

FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c

To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 60c., 6 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St, N. Y. City

"DOWN WITH HIGH PRICES."

A $65.00 Sewing Machine,	$18.00
A 500-lb. Platform Scale,	10.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy,	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale,	40.00
A $40.00 Road Cart,	15.00
A $15.00 Buggy Harness	7.50
A 240-lb. Scoop and Platform Scale,	3.00
A 4-lb. Family or Store Scale,	1.00

Catalogue of 1000 useful articles sent FREE. Address

CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

Educational Dep't.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL
FOR
KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,

Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping. Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by MAIL. Circulars free. BRYANT & STRATTON'S, 438 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting N. Y. Turkish Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Signal Notes.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR said, in a public address in October: "I am more and more lost in astonishment when I consider how many leaders of thought in church and state, leading lights of the non-conformists and in the Church of England, who live in the odor of sanctity, but although they know that drink is one of the deadliest curses in England, never lift a single finger for the cause of temperance or subscribe one single sixpence to it. . . . It seems to me in God's battles slackness is infamy. . . . But for the temperance associations we should soon be immersed in such an ocean of immorality, violence and sin as would make this country uninhabitable."

THE gross value of American breweries that have fallen into the hands of British capitalists is stated at fully 9,000,000 pounds.

IT was stated at the convention of the W. C. T. U. held in Ontario, that ninety-three per cent of the young who joined the Bands of Hope remained faithful. Here is light for the future of humanity.

A LOUISVILLE, Ky., exchange notes a local transaction thus: "A wealthy brewer of this city has lately bought seven thousand dollars' worth more property adjoining his already large place. His best customers are buried at the city's expense."

THREE New Zealand women have lately brought out useful patents; one for an improved pastry roller, the second for a flax drawing machine, and the third for a patent flax and wool dresser. At the annual presentation of diplomas at the New Zealand University, four ladies received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

THE governor of Virginia issued orders some time since that not more than eight and a half barrels of beer should be sold each day at the Government saloon in the National Soldiers' Home.

The Pall Mall Gazette publishes an address on temperance in London, by Lady Henry Somerset, in which she pictures the misery occasioned by strong drink in the Whitechapel district, wherein there have been the past year so many mysterious and shocking murders of women: "How can I put before you the sin and misery of that scene? To see the children flocking out of those dens of sin! I state no exaggeration, no overdrawn picture. You have only to read the police reports. Last year you will find in London alone 500 children under ten years old were taken up dead drunk, and there were 1,500 under fourteen, and 2,000 under twenty-one."

IT is also stated regarding Lady Henry Somerset that she has recently struck a blow financially at the liquor trade. She owns a good deal of property let on lease, and several of the leases are about to fall in. Some of these are of public houses. Her ladyship has announced that she will renew no lease of a present public-house unless the tenant will agree to change his business.

THE Glasgow Reformer, a most valuable temperance paper, in a stirring outlook of temperance matters, gives the following unusual item: "At a recent meeting of the Altrincham Board of Guardians, it was reported that in consequence of the doctor prescribing cod liver oil instead of intoxicants, the deaths had been so much reduced that the undertakers refused to make the coffins at the current contract rate."

CHIEF JANSSEN of the Milwaukee, Wis., police has issued rules to his force. Among these are rules prohibiting an officer while on duty, or in uniform, from visiting a saloon, or place where liquor is sold, or known to be kept for sale, or is given away, except when summoned there in connection with his duty as an officer. He must not visit places of bad character except in the discharge of business, and he must not smoke while on duty. He must at all times refrain from using profane, obscene, or abusive language, and will not be allowed to use cruelty or to strike any one in making an arrest or taking charge of an offender, but must use only force sufficient to hold the offender in custody.

ABOUT a year ago, under an impulse received from the Christian Workers' Convention, which had just held its annual session there, a good enterprise for reaching the masses was started in Detroit, Mich. The Casino Theater, an establishment of low tone, and frequented by hundreds of young people, was leased by several gentlemen in the city and converted into a gospel tabernacle. Services have been held seven nights in a week, one evangelist succeeding another in conducting them. At the daily noon prayer-meeting there is an average attendance of fifty. Temperance is kept at the front. Much good has already been accomplished and the circle of influence is widening.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

THE GLUTEN Flour Entire Wheat
the best and most economical flour made, the only cure for Dyspepsia. Recommended by Physicians. Kenosha Mills Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO. Sell Mantels & Tile Work. Call or send your address. Agents wanted. (Liberal commissions.) Room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, and Scrofulous Humors.
Almost as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who, after using it, are very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich, and pure blood,—in fact, rejuvenates the whole system.
FLESH, BLOOD, NERVE, BRAIN.
This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod-liver Oil; it has many imitators, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure, as you value your health, and get the genuine. Manufactured only by Dr. A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

DEAFNESS CURED And NOISES IN HEAD entirely overcome by Peck's Pat. Imprv'd TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS
Whispers, Conversation and Music heard. Comfortable; Self-Adjusting and Unseen. Successful when all other Remedies FAIL. SOLD ONLY by F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, Cor. 14th, New York. CALL or WRITE for ILLUST'D BOOK of PROOFS, FREE. NO AGENTS

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
25cts. a Box
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

RIDGE'S FOOD
The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

FARGO'S $2.50 LADIES' BOOT, MADE IN GOAT and Dongola KID. OPERA and COMMON SENSE LASTS
Ask your dealer for FARGO'S $2.50 Ladies' Boot, and if he does not keep them, send to us for the style and size you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Send for descriptive list of styles. A pocket mirror will be sent to each inquirer. C. H. Fargo & Co., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - - - Prop.

$3 for $1, to ag'ts by mail 12 boxes C. C. Pills for $1. Sells for 25c. a box. J. J. Carns, Carthage, Mo.

REGARDING DR. WILFORD HALL'S HEALTH PAMPHLET AND TREATMENT.
Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman,
PRESIDENT OF THE MISSOURI W. C. T. U., WRITES:
Mr. A. T. Bates, Chicago:
After trying every remedy, for years, to remove constipation and hemorrhoids, and all without avail, I have found a complete cure offered by Dr. W. Hall. I recommend his treatment to all suffering from the hundred ills arising from these causes:
Kansas City, Dec. 24, 1889. C. C. HOFFMAN.

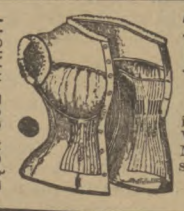
Rev. Emerson Jessup, New Haven, Conn., writes, November 20:
"DEAR DR. HALL.—After four years' acquaintance with your philosophical writings, and having come to believe in your judgment and integrity, I was prepared in advance to accept your hygienic discoveries as containing something of value. But now, after having used your treatment for the past four months, I can simply testify that it is all and even more than you or your enthusiastic patients have represented it to be. No money could deprive me of its advantages. I feel it should be in every family in the whole country." Sincerely yours,
270 Martin Street. EMERSON JESSUP."

I wish to call particular attention to the letters I have published from time to time; coming as they do from prominent, intelligent people who have used the treatment for weeks, or months, there can be no doubt as to their meaning. I gave the treatment a fair trial before accepting the agency, and believe it to be a valuable remedy, not only for invalids, or persons in poor health, but for every family to have in case of fevers, colds, or other sickness, as well as to use as a preventive of disease.
Respectfully, A. T. Bates, 161 La Salle street, Room 46, Chicago. Full information sent on receipt of 2 cent stamp.
Wanted: Intelligent persons who have used this treatment to act as agent in every community.
A. T. BATES.

THIS IS WORTH $3.00
During the next 30 days to any reader of THE UNION SIGNAL who purchases The Universal Health outfit with book of instructions "How to get Well and Keep Well without Resorting to Drugs." Regular price of outfit $10.00. Price to anyone sending this clipping or mentioning that you saw this in the UNION SIGNAL $7.00. Call or address Universal Health Co., 167 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. The above includes a certificate of membership in School of Longevity, for one month.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE" CORDED CORSET WAISTS
are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them.

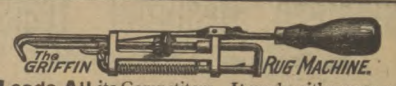


EQUIPOISE WAIST.
A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS,
including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jenness-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue.
Mrs. S. W. Pike,
75 Madison St., Chicago.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Ladies' Friend WASHER
is not given away. To introduce it I will sell at cost where there are no Agents on ten days' trial. If it does not excel in quality and quantity of work, it will cost you nothing. Circulars free. WRINGERS AT COST. AGENTS make $5 to $10 per day. Address
B. F. ARNOLD, M'f'r,
DAYTON, OHIO.



Leads All its Competitors. It works either rags or yarn, is Simple, Durable, and Easy to Operate. Price, by mail, Plain, $1; Nickel Plated, $1.50. Satisfaction Guaranteed or money refunded. Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted.
G. W. GRIFFIN & CO., Franklin Falls, N.H.

THE "FREEMAN" SELF-WRINGING MOP!

"It leads all others" is the verdict of all who see it. A ratchet on this mop helps the hand by retaining the cloth at any stage of the work. Don't touch the water with your hands. Boiling water can be used, also potash, lye etc. if desired. If you desire to wash windows, corners up high, in fact anywhere, the mop, by the means of the ratchet, can be held without the aid of the hand, thus removing the strain. Write for circulars. Sold exclusively through agents throughout the United States. Agents wanted. Write at once for territory—The Racine Malleable & Wrought Iron Co., Racine, Wis.

100 page book, with colored illustrations and many prominent testimonials, among others, Mrs. T. B. Carse, regarding Dr. Peiro's Oxygen treatment, free. Dr. Peiro, 78 State St., Chicago.

CURLING IRON mailed for 10cts. To make new customers. Wood handle; non-conducting thumb spring; polished steel. Worth 50c. Big catalogue free. A. T. Evans & Co., Chicago.

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

STANLEY'S WONDERFUL ADVENTURES
200 illustrations, over 700 pages, beautifully bound. Big wages to agents. Fastest selling book in the field.
ELLIOTT & BEEZLEY,
Philadelphia, Pa. Chicago, Ill.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.
113 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

ESTABLISHED 1859.

PIANOS UNIVERSITY ORGANS
SOLD DIRECT TO FAMILIES, saving the enormous expenses and profits of agents, which double the costs of every first-class Piano they sell.
They Lead the World!
Guaranteed for Six Years.
SENT FOR TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME
ABSOLUTELY PERFECT
ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Agents must sell you an inferior Instrument or charge you double what we ask for an elegant fashionable Piano of approved excellence.
DON'T BUY A POOR PIANO!
BEAUTIFUL AND COMPLETE OUTFIT SENT WITH EACH INSTRUMENT.
PIANOS $150 to $1500.
ESTAB. 1859. CATALOGUES FREE. INCOR. 1877
THE MARCHAL & SMITH PIANO CO.
235 East 21st Street, New York.

PRONOUNCING PARALLEL FAMILY BIBLE
The only Pronouncing Parallel Bible. From new plates, and now for the first time offered to Bible Agents. No such aid as Pronouncing Text has ever been offered to Bible Canvassers before. Every proper name in the whole Bible is properly pronounced. Massive in size, magnificently illustrated, additional matter in great variety. Prices low, discounts liberal. Those first in the field will reap the harvest. Agents wanted everywhere. Send for particulars. CRANSTON & STOWE, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 5.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 30, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Our Friends, the Seceders—Comfort from the Enemy—An Address to the Pan-American Congress 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, A Memory, by Maria Barrett Butler—Charlie, by Harriet Francene Crocker—English Factory Acts in Relation to Women and Children, by Helen Campbell—Methods of Temperance Reform, by Rev. B W. Williams—Recipe for a Wretch, by James Clement Ambrose—Heroic Minorities, by E. P. Marvin—Review of "Truth in the Case" 2, 3, 4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE: Amendment Work in Nebraska—License vs. Prohibition States—The Present Situation in Kansas... 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, A Child's Conclusion—In an Ash Barrel—Crying for the Moon..... 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning February 2, 1890..... 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The Outlook of Faith—New Hampshire's Governor—How She Wrote It—A Visit to the Home of George MacDonald—Centers of the World's Affectionate Thought—A Temperance Boat..... 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: How Shall We Spend the Winter?... ... 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: California, Wisconsin, Hawaii, Michigan, Indiana, Cuttings, New York, Michigan, Oregon—News in a Nutshell..... 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: National Minutes—The Envelope System—Department of Foreign Work—Woman's Lecture Bureau..... 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Canon Wilberforce, accompanied by Mrs. Wilberforce, is visiting India, especially to study the opium question.

Secretary Rusk has taken a firm stand against the giddy vices of the Capital. He teetotally abstains from cards, dice and wine.

The great American institution formerly owned and operated by Adam Forepaugh, has passed into the hands of an English syndicate.

The annual report of the New York Central railroad just out, shows that 10,000,000 passengers were carried over its lines during the year just ended.

The great whisky trust representing a capital of more than $30,000,000 has decided to dissolve, and reincorporate as a plain stock company, under the liberal laws of Illinois.

William Oswell Livingstone, the last living son of Dr. David Livingstone, died recently at St. Albans, England. The week before his death he sent a congratulatory letter to Stanley, who was his warm friend.

The memorial of the African M. E. Zion Church of America was presented to the Senate last week favoring the Blair Educational Bill and asking that it be printed in full in the record. A motion to grant this request was lost.

Miss Emily Faithful, whose life has been devoted to the service of her countrywomen, has been placed upon the pension list of the British government. Miss Faithful has been a good soldier, and it is safe to say no pension was ever more worthily bestowed.

Three new banks have recently been started in Brazil, on the basis of public subscription and stock. The last was established on January 23, with a capital of $100,000,000, which was subscribed in four hours. It is the National Bank of the United States of Brazil.

Mrs. Wanamaker's commendable attempt to mingle pleasure and profit in her social entertainments is proving most successful, predictions to the contrary notwithstanding. Her guests last week listened to one of the choicest musical programs ever rendered in a Washington drawing room. She has plans for a series of readings and musicales during the winter.

"Sunday closing" has now been in effect in Minneapolis for nine months. The number of Sunday arrests during that time has been 408. During the same period previous to the enactment of this law, there were 720 Sunday arrests. By the simplest rules of logic week day and every day closing would effect a much greater proportionate abridgment of the police court docket.

IT is said that the telegraphs in this country are practically owned by one man, and the railroads by only sixty families. A collective ownership of the means of communication and locomotion is insisted on by the great labor organizations of the country, and quite likely to come as an assured fact within the next generation.

GOVERNOR LADD, of Rhode Island, in his annual message, says of the license law which superseded the prohibitory law, taking effect September 1: "There have been a greater number of licenses granted, especially in the cities, than the advocates of high license had anticipated." This is plain confession that Rhode Island did not take counsel with her wise men of clear foresight and good judgment when she yielded to the "advocates of high license."

FOR the enlightenment of the public, our Publishing House has just brought out a clear-cut announcement of the General Officers of the W.C.T. U., giving explicit suggestions concerning what to do in case any effort is made in their neighborhoods to organize seceding temperance societies. It also contains Miss Willard's definitions of partisan and non-partisan as applied to the white-ribbon movement, and her replies to questions from the Hillsboro Question Box in regard to the political situation, besides many other "points." We hope this leaflet will be ordered by tens of thousands and its helpful words printed in the local press of the entire country through the efforts of our alert women of the rank and file. We would also urge the widest circulation of THE UNION SIGNALS containing the "Review of Truth in the Case," commencing January 23. By request we are printing an extra edition to meet this demand.

WRITING in The Arena of Boston, Henry George says, truly enough, that "the rum power is a colossal villainy, and a fearfully dangerous factor in the politics of the country. It controls the two great parties, runs their primaries, largely constitutes their conventions, and furnishes large sums of money from its enormous business and great profits as a corruption fund." He is also correct in saying that the license system is what gives the traffic its power in politics. But we cannot agree with his statement that "there is only one way of eliminating it from politics, and that is by doing away with all restrictions from the Federal tax to the municipal license, and permitting free trade in rum." There is another way, and the only effectual way, and that is to prohibit the traffic altogether. We are opposed to license because the traffic is a crime which it is a crime to license; and because license entrenches and perpetuates the traffic, and is the chief barrier to prohibition. Nor do we agree with Mr. George's opinion that the removal of all restrictions would result in the destruction of the business by making liquor so cheap that there would be no profit in it. Liquor dealers are friendly to the license system, not merely because it increases their profits, but because they know that it is the only thing that reconciles the majority of voters to the existence of the traffic.

SENATOR INGALLS' speech on the adjustment of race difficulties in the South will doubtless stand in history as the most notable oratorical effort of the fifty-first Congress. Grappling with the greatest question which the present administration consents to consider, the Kansas orator threw off meteoric fragments of rhetoric on every breath. The inspiration to eloquence was great. Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Morton were in the Executive Gallery; the wife and daughter of the brilliant senator were there also. Two-thirds of the members of the House came over to listen, and every Southern senator was in his seat, while the public galleries were deeply shaded with representatives of the race which without malice prepense is the cause of the "difficulty." During the entire two hours the attention and interest of this mixed audience did not abate. The speech "makes beautiful reading" in the Congressional Record, but at its close, as at the close of the same gentleman's article on "Prohibition in Kansas," published in the North American Review six months ago, the soul of hearer and reader is unsatisfied. What has this heat of fiery eloquence wrought in the furnace of practical solution? What are his own convictions? Introduction and peroration are not only far apart, but contradictory in sentiment. He begins by declaring our proud race the conquering and the unconquerable. He credits it with giving to humanity religion, literature and civilization. To society it has given home and the family; while the state of its creation is broad enough to secure to individuals the fraternal relations of liberty and equality. In the presence of this lion of humanity what is the outlook for the poor black sheep whose ancestry has given to the world only humble service? The thought comes, possibly, they shall lie down together—the lamb inside. Assimilation, amalgamation, intermarriage, and the fading out of differences which occurs in the case of the German or Italian emigrants would seem impossible to the speaker's thought. At this point Mr. Ingalls' says: "By instinct or design the Caucasian race at every step of its progress from barbarism to enlightenment has refused to mingle its blood with the Mongolian or African. The line of cleavage between whites and blacks grows more distinct in this country." He rejects this solution upon higher ground than that of prejudice, declaring that it would "perpetuate the vices of both races, and the virtues of neither." Arithmetically, there were in 1860 four and one-half millions of negroes in this country; in 1880 there were six and one-half millions; in 2000 there will be fifteen millions; and these, according to the speaker, are to constitute a perpetual, and a perpetually increasing foreign substance in the body politic. It is the law in all living organisms that what cannot be absorbed must be ejected. Otherwise it remains to fester, and maintain a continual sore. In closing, he appeals to the South to "try the experiment of justice; to stack its guns and open its ballot-boxes; to register all voters and count all votes;" this would seem to mean in those communities where the blacks outnumber the whites, and there are many such in the Gulf states, to ask the "unconquered and unconquerable race" to place the reins of local government in the hands of the negro. Mr. Ingalls has only stated the difficulty without removing any of its perplexities. This portentious problem will not be met by Websterian gifts of speech. It calls rather for the homely shrewdness, the deep and lofty sense of equity, and the patriarchal kindness of a Lincoln.

MR. INGALLS postulates some truths broader than the great subject under discussion. He says: "There is nothing so unprofitable as injustice, for God is an unrelenting creditor. Behind the wrong doer stalks the menacing specter of retribution." The ghost of outraged justice often walks over the grave of the real sinner, to settle the account with his children, as in this case. Could the fathers and mothers of the dawning nineteenth century have foreseen the carnage of the sixties, and the awful political perplexities of these times, would they have allowed the black sailed "slaver" to unload its living cargo upon their shores? Would they not rather have "done their own work" indoors and out? Could we foresee the day when God unsheathes His sword upon the liquor traffic, we should hasten to pay our own taxes, without any aid from or remission on account of the revenue from sin. There is a way which seemeth right to the unthinking man, but the end thereof, far in the distance, is death and damnation!

IT were an idle task to attempt to place before our readers any adequate description of Millet's famous picture, "The Angelus," now on exhibition in Chicago. Goëthe said, in regard to the contemplation of such master works from the hand of man, "It gives one a sense of the impossible." It is not by accident that such things are wrought out, nor that the universal heart of humanity is drawn to witness the accomplishment with joy and reverence. Millet had the dower of genius amid the setting of poverty; and this picture is the highest expression of a heroic soul who steadfastly believed in being able always to find the ideal in the real. Much of the power and pathos of the "Angelus" arise from the memory of the brave personality that originated those lifelike, reverent figures set in the foreground of that far-stretching perspective of field, and evening sky, and distant church from whose faintly-outlined steeple one almost hears the notes of the bell calling to prayer. Truly has a recent writer fathomed the artist's desire "to paint a picture which should appeal to the ear as well as to the eye, which should sing like a song as well as shine like a jewel. . . . 'The Angelus' is, perhaps, the purest lyric this painter ever sang. It is a song, a lovely pæan of praise, a free outpouring of the soul, as pure as if it came from the throat of a lark, as frank as if a poet uttered it, as noble as if a saint had thought it." Happy are all who behold this spiritual expression of latest art with the "seeing eye," which pierces even to the heavenly realities and possibilities contained in the most lowly lives, and who listen to those chimes of prayer with the "hearing ear" that recognizes the voice of God, "the same Father over all."

Contributed.

A MEMORY.

BY MARIA BARRETT BUTLER.

A stranger grim paused near my door,
As though to cross the threshold o'er;
My quaking heart his way denied,
"Whom seekest thou?" I faintly cried;—
"My household hath not one to spare,
Thou seest them young and strong and fair;
Pass on to wrinkled age and pain,
Where easy entrance thou shalt gain."
Then, as I paused with blanching cheek,
He said, "It is thyself I seek."

Appalled, I asked with pulse a-thrill,
"Canst prove this call my Master's will?—
Like Christiana, I would claim
A royal mandate in His name;—
Dost thou a gracious 'token' bring?
Hast thou a 'letter' from my King?"
"Nay, nay; the Lord thy Master saith,
'Make ready thou and come by faith.' "
Such unction thrilled his every word,
My yielding soul submissive heard.

By faith, then, did I gird me round,
With face set whither I was bound;
By faith put I new vesture on
For that near time I "must be gone."
My wonted cares I put away,
And planned for dear ones still to stay;
Nor did their blithe hearts need surmise
That death was near in hidden guise.
Till they at last—the parting o'er—
Should see me leave the hither shore.
But lo! my faith He did but try;
While waiting thus the call passed by!

CHARLIE.

BY HARRIET FRANCENE CROCKER.

Great was the rejoicing in the little town of Lawrence when it was known that Charlie Harcom had turned from his evil ways and was leading a new life—a noble, influential life, a bright contrast to the besotted existence he had led before. Not long since he had been released from the county jail where he had been serving a term for drunkenness and violence, and now what a marvellous change! It seemed too good to be true.

One night during the progress of revival meetings he had entered the church and gone forward to the altar in a state of intoxication, his whisky flask in his coat pocket.

Night after night he came, seeking help and strength to overcome the dreadful appetite that from his young boyhood had pursued him like a demon. After weeks of prayer and self-battling, the victory was won. Friends poured in on every hand, loving hearts kept earnest watch over the rescued one, and the Christian people in the town rejoiced with exceeding great joy over this wandering, sin-sick soul reclaimed.

But in the town were saloons. Four times as many saloons as churches, with keepers ever on the alert to entice and destroy, to wreck and ruin immortal souls for the sake of gold. Early in Charlie Harcom's conversion one saloonist, who did not deserve the name of man, sent him a bottle of whisky as he sat at his work in his shop one day. It was a great temptation, but he did not yield. People knew by that stern, set face, white with the battle against desire, how hard the struggle was within.

Gradually the deep lines of dissipation that showed so plainly what his life had been gave way to a nobler expression, and people began to notice with wonder how handsome a man he could be when free from his debasing habit. His was one of the most speaking faces I ever saw. His inner life was reflected on the surface and told to the most casual observer the nature of his heart.

Tall, well-built, and commanding in presence, he was a striking figure anywhere. We, in our little town, were proud of him, of his talents, and of his wonderful reform. He became an honored member of society, an active, earnest worker in the church and Sabbath-school, and a strong influence for good among the young men. Those who did not know his past history would never have dreamed that this fair, upright, genial, earnest man was ever a miserable, drunken, groveling creature who had more than once been an inmate of the prison. Noticeable in his wonderful change was the difference in his social companions. Those who were formerly his chosen friends were never seen with him now. He was received by the best of families, and was a welcome visitor anywhere. Every one liked him.

He became an honorary member of the Y. W. C. T. U., and was regarded by the young ladies as one of their chief helpers in the cause of temperance. Every one knew his sad history, and public sympathy was with him. He built up a prosperous business, and all were glad to patronize him. His prospects for the future were bright and promising, and life became to him what he had once thought could never be. No one could be more devoted to church than he. Every service found him in his accustomed place, an intelligent hearer of the Word of God.

One day—I shall never forget it—the news ran through the town like wild-fire, "Charlie Harcom is drunk again!" Faces grew pale, and breaths were hushed to listen. Oh, it could not be true! there must be some mistake—not Charlie! Women stared at the speaker with tearless eyes, wide open with horror. Men grew grave and stern. Business was partially suspended. A public calamity seemed to have fallen upon the whole village, and a suppressed excitement pervaded the place. People met each other with "Have you heard?" and received their answer in the sorrowful face of the other. Young men who were dissipated themselves collected in little groups here and there on the street, and stood with bowed heads talking in undertones of the sad thing which had befallen Charlie. Every one mourned except the saloon-keepers. Even they, a few of them, had humanity enough to be shocked.

But what had been the cause of all this sorrow? An old chum of his, a vagabond friend of other days, had come into town that morning and tempted him. He had yielded. Why he had yielded he could not have told, himself. In an hour of weakness, perhaps, the temptation had come and the old appetite roused. Perhaps that terrible appetite of his, inherited from a drunken father, had only lain dormant, waiting the right moment.

In one hour he was changed to a hopeless, helpless, desperate man, seeking only to satisfy that devouring demon of thirst. The man who had wrought his ruin was roughly handled by indignant citizens and hurried out of town with threats and curses, but not one word was spoken to the man who had knowingly and deliberately dealt out the poison to Charlie Harcom.

License had held sway in Lawrence ever since its beginning and the people were not yet ready to vote it out. Only a few brave, sturdy hearts had courage to take their stand in the despised minority and cast their vote for prohibition. Earnest-hearted women were working heroically to banish the saloon, but it still remained, calmly triumphant in its consciousness of legal power. What could the churches do against so great a foe? What could the white-ribbon women do? What could courageous voters accomplish against such odds?

But where was Charlie! "Poor Charlie," everybody called him now. Transformed from a man into a mere animal, he staggered from place to place, spending his hard-earned savings for drink, and when they were gone, begging a dime here and there to keep up that raging fire within and drown remembrance—eluding even his best and dearest friends who sought to save him, hiding, dodging, anything to keep away from those who might keep him away from the saloons. But there was one he could not escape—his pastor. Nobly, patiently, faithfully, this earnest, godly man followed him, begged and pleaded with him and implored him to try once more. Through storm and cold he followed at his heels, bore the indignities heaped upon him by rumsellers and by their victim himself, enticed him to his own home and locked the doors to keep him from shame.

Bitter were the tears of remorse he shed when the pastor offered up his fervent prayers in his behalf, but all in vain. All manhood was gone this time—he saw no hope for the future, no ray of light illumining the darkness of the beyond.

In his new life he had loved a swee', young girl. Not even she could save him now. She had gone to him at first and found him in a state of shameful intoxication—him whom she had last seen a noble, upright, Christian man! If the perfume of her pure life could not reach him, nothing could. Swiftly he sank lower and lower. Day after day added to the burden of his shame and disgrace.

His father, who had begun a new life with his son and had been sober, steady and industrious all the months of Charlie's reformed life, fell with him, sank with him, down, down, into deeper, darker excesses than either had ever known. The life of the poor old wife and mother at home was never safe. Her days were spent in agonizing dread, and her nights in witnessing the drunken orgies of her husband and son. Often she was obliged to appeal to the neighbors for help. Death she would have welcomed gladly, joyfully as a loving friend.

One day it was noised abroad that Charlie was in the last stages of delirium tremens. Men shook their heads and said, "It can't last much longer." Women wrung their helpless hands and thought of his mother. Children at their play, talked of him and declared to each other that they would never drink. Ah, children! God protect you from the saloons! Your own fathers will not.

One morning a pistol shot rang out sharply on the air. Men rushed into the little shop and found him lying there. It was all over. Death had come quickly, mercifully. The life that throbbed through that shattered frame but a moment before was gone out forever.

In ten minutes there was not a person in the village who had not heard of the tragedy. Men ran in crowds and stood pityingly around the dead body. A solemn awe seemed to fall upon those who gazed and a breathless silence prevailed. More than one manly eye was tear-wet, more than one heart ached, more than one head was bowed reverently as the aged mother made her way to her boy's side. The crowd broke up in little knots of low-voiced men in earnest conversation. Some said, "It is better so;" others, "Would to God he had died a sober Christian man!" Others could only sigh, "Poor Charlie."

For days a gloom like a pall hung over the town. Women went about their daily work, half-hearted. Men were listless in business and abstracted in thought. Plain, honest thinking was being done in Lawrence.

At the funeral of Charlie Harcom, the pastor who had been his personal friend, attempted to preach a sermon, but failed. Tears choked his utterance and words were useless. It was a temperance sermon in itself, and one which eventually proved to have done more practical good than all the lectures ever delivered in the town.

At the next election no-license carried the day. Earnest-eyed women wearing the little knot of white, labored all day long at the polls. More than one murmuring, "For Charlie's sake," turned the scales in favor of no-license. Even the children bore their part in the work, and the temperance men labored with a resoluteness that meant great results. Great was the joy of the people next morning. No license in Lawrence! Amid the general thanksgiving, many said softly, with saddened, reverent faces, "Poor Charlie, his sad life was not in vain, after all!"

ENGLISH FACTORY ACTS IN RELATION TO WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

II.

Popular obtuseness seems to have been the rule of the past in all questions relating to the employment of women and children, and yet, side by side with this, one finds a series of projected reforms born of the eager work of self-constituted investigators. The philanthropist has had to be the leader and awakener, and the task has been severe beyond belief, this having resulted, in great degree, from the apathy with which all classes looked upon any movement for betterment of conditions. In the smaller manufacturing towns there was some chance of knowing operatives as individuals, and all the real reforms have begun in these, and not in the great centers, where the workers throng, and come to mean only so many machines for turning out a given portion of material. If one were to take simply London as an exponent of what has been done, the heart might well fail, but happily there are other points where pity and justice have had in part their way, and the worker finds every aid that can be brought to bear in giving ease in the day's toil.

My personal experience of English factories and workshops was confined to London, and here, for reasons, a hint of which has just been given, conditions are far worse than in the other great manufacturing cities. In London, women and children suffer not only from the working of the law of competition, but from its working in a greatly restricted sphere, hampered always by the attitude held toward them by employers. The Factory Act demands a fixed amount of space for each worker, yet constantly in London I found these provisions ignored, and all huddled together with barely room for the necessary motions. The lower rooms are usually all that is demanded. Thus in a building devoted to the printing and sending out of a popular weekly of the cheaper sort, the lower rooms met all requisitions as to space and proper ventilation.

"We have nothing to hide," said the manager. "Nothing at all. You may go from top to bottom if you will."

This was said at the end of an hour or two of going from room to room, watching the girls at work at the multitudinous phases involved, and wondering how energy enough remained after twelve hours of it, for getting home.

A flight of dark little stairs led up to a region even darker, and he changed color as we turned toward them.

"This is all temporary," he said hastily. "We are very much crowded for space, and we are going to move soon. We do the best we can in the meantime. It's only temporary."

This was the reason for the darkness. Stumbling up the open stairs, hardly more than a ladder, one came into a half story added to the original building, and so low that the manager bowed his head as he entered; nor was there any point where he could stand freely upright, this well-fed Englishman nearly six feet tall!—For the girls there was no such difficulty, and nearly two hundred were packed into the space, in which folding and stitching machines ran by steam, while at long tables other branches of the same work were going on by hand. The noise and the heat from gas-jets, steam, and the crowd of workers, made the place hideous. The girls themselves appeared in no worse condition than many others seen that day, but all alike were pale and anæmic. Their hours were from 8 a. m., to 8 p. m., with an hour for dinner, usually from one to two. The law also allows half an hour for tea, but in all cases investigated, this time is docked if taken by the girl.

Of other abuses there is no time to speak. Inspectors are powerless before the swarms of workers, even when most thoroughly backed by the law; these swarms resulting from that "congestion of labor" which is coming upon us in New York no less than in London. But with these conditions this word has nothing to do. The question as to which fares the better, un[illegible] the present administration of law—the American [illegible] the English workwoman, or child—has two replies, or rather, two phases of facts must enter into one reply. So far as textile manufactures are concerned, the condition of the English workwoman under present, factory laws, holds some advantages not shared by the American. With us, save at a few favored points, working and sanitary conditions are far less carefully watched. Our inspectors are utterly inadequate in numbers to visit more than once a year, at most, the many factories in our great spaces of country, and our American indifference to all small evils, and ignoring of anything but monster ones, is much in the way of rational action.

On the other hand, a report just now under consideration in Parliament, gives a state of things among the English nail and chain workers, a large proportion of whom are women and children, that has no parallel in in this country; no parallel at least, if we count hours and severity of the labor involved. But even here the wretched little toilers in our tenement houses, and the women and children in Pennsylvania mines, must add their testimony to our share in the same evils and call as loudly for action in their behalf. Such action must come from women, who are rousing to a sense of what is involved in the continuous labor of women and children in factory and workshop, under every evil condition, and who if they study with even slight care the tendencies and consequences of our present system, must in the nature of things seek reform, becoming first, agitators, then organizers; at last, determined and intelligent educators.

METHODS OF TEMPERANCE REFORM.

BY REV. B. W. WILLIAMS.

II. HIGH LICENSE.

Another method of dealing with the liquor traffic is by license laws, which permit the manufacture and sale of liquor, but require those who engage in the business to pay a fee for the privilege of so doing. If the amount stipulated is large, we have what is called "high license"; if not, it is termed "low license." They are the same in principle, and differ only in the price charged for permission to commit the crime. Just how large the prescribed fee must be to constitute high license, has not been very clearly defined. It ranges from $100 to $1,000, and even more in some places. Prohibitionists oppose license, high or low, as being wrong in itself, and injurious to the temperance cause. Its advocates claim for it several advantages; let us see if this claim is well founded.

It is asserted that high license makes the liquor business more decent and respectable, by suppressing illicit venders, and driving out the "low dives," and thus placing it in the hands of better men. This is false; the saloon can never be made respectable. As well try to make a truthful liar or an honest thief. It may be made more attractive, however, and this enhances its power to entice and ruin. Men will frequent the "palace saloon" who would never visit the more disreputable low groggery.

We are told that high license reduces the number of saloons, in many instances; but this does not necessarily imply a diminution of drunkenness. The remaining ones do a larger business, and prove amply sufficient to supply the demand for liquor. They usually enjoy larger sales and greater profits under high license than under low license, because they have a monopoly of the trade. A few large and well equipped saloons may do more damage to a town than many smaller and less pretentious ones.

High license does not lessen the quantity of liquor used. In the year ending June 30, 1888, according to reliable statistics, there were 20,800 fewer saloons in the United States than during the preceding year. This was attributed to high license. But at the same time the consumption of alcoholic liquor was greater by five per cent per capita of the population. The increased price of whisky, occasioned by high license, does not deter the poor inebriate from drinking it; he will have it, regardless of price.

It is urged that high license increases the public revenue. Yes, but the amount of this "blood money" is nothing to compare with the immense cost of the traffic to the country. The people of the United States spend annually $1,000,000,000 for intoxicating liquor; while the indirect cost is doubtless equal to or greater than this. On the whole, it is probable that the revenue derived from license fees would not pay three per cent of the whole cost of intemperance to the state.

I now offer the following objections to, and arguments against, the policy of high license:

1. It does not close the saloon, but seeks only to restrict or regulate it. Christ came to destroy the works of the devil, and not to regulate them.

2. It is vicious in principle. It concedes the evil of the saloon, and yet sanctions it. That which is morally wrong it declares to be legally right.

3. It is ineffective in its operation. While it may, in some instances, reduce the number of drinking places, it does not lessen the quantity of liquor consumed.

4. It makes the state a participant in evil. By legalizing and protecting the saloon, and accepting a revenue from it, it aids the crime of drunkard-making.

5. It is a betrayal of trust. The state is the guardian of its citizens. It betrays the trust imposed in it when for revenue gain it permits a known enemy—the open saloon—to despoil and ruin its citizens.

6. It is a delusion and a snare. It purports to be a step toward prohibition, when in reality, it is a long stride in the opposite direction. For this reason many of the liquor men favor it.

7. It tends to remove the opprobrium popularly attached to the liquor business by making it legal; thus neutralizing to a great extent, the efforts to create public sentiment against it.

8. It fosters and encourages a monopoly of the most vicious and detestable characters. It operates to enrich the few liquor men at the expense of the health, wealth, character, happiness and salvation of multitudes.

9. It deliberately slaps the face of Christian temperance men and women, and favors the lowest down and most disreputable business in the country. Churches, societies and conventions have repeatedly denounced license and demanded absolute prohibition.

10. It must entirely fail to accomplish its professed ultimate object.—the restriction and avoidance of drunkenness—as it provides for the continuance of the saloon, and thereby perpetuates the means of temptation.

RECIPE FOR A WRETCH.

BY JAMES CLEMENT AMBROSE.

If I felt wicked as the fiend, and had an enemy I thirsted to be avenged of in the most cruel manner, and he had sons and daughters, I'd plot to kidnap their virtue, blotch and ruin their bodies, fit them intellectually for the insane asylum, and through-ticket their souls from there to Inferno.

Thus annihilating an innocent generation to blast its ancestor, I would partake of the highest delight possible to the men lowest in infamy, for I would cause mine enemy to grow old before old age, and to wail out all the nights in the year that the offspring of his manly affection had not found their cradle their coffin. And for a draught with his daily meal of humiliation, I'd mingle him a potion from my gloating scorn for his counter entreaties; and I'd gather my hell-mates to jeer at his tears—to laugh in the face of the father who had forgotten to smile.

And that he might not move society to help him, and pinion my malice in the dungeon I'd be fitted for, I'd rally the clans of purpose dark as mine, strike hands with every other condemned of the decalogue; and out of such open relics of Sodom and the Doughface in virtue, I'd make the law-makers of Madam Society, and bid them legalize my desolation of youth and beauty, hope and honor, home and the path to heaven. Like Jacob, I'd pile me rods of greenback and lay them in the gutters and drinking troughs of politicians, that courts and police might be brought forth at the yeaning time, "ring-streaked, speckled and spotted"; yea, I'd make the makers of the law license damnation.

You'll say I couldn't crowd Society into partnership with such depravity. Yes, I could; for it's a partner there now. But to compass my ends, of course I'd have to be as wicked as the devil. Yet I might be that without being singular among men; for by which of all gross crimes do you think I'd execute my crime? Why, by the iniquity that bottoms all the rest—I'd open a saloon—open it in the path of mine enemy's young men, and the young men smiled upon by his daughters! Would n't that do infamy's job? Yea, like two hundred thousand now on the job, thus would I scoff at the Christly prayer, and lead men into temptation by highest warrant of the state, that the wrecks of young drunkards and the victims of young libertines might haggard mine enemy, "curse God and die."

You who are sleeping sentinels may awake and stare wide at my thought; but verily, I suggest nothing new, for the above is the mission of the saloon; and no other pirate craft ever more faithfully worked out its mission—ran down its prey. And if so, can you, brother, think God to be just, yet vote to continue this land-pirate's license? Can you be a friend to the saloon without being the enemy of your own home? If the saloon tempt men to put out the fire on thy neighbor's hearth, canst thou kindle the tempter, yet "love thy neighbor as thyself"? My brother, I'll not vote to open this trap-door to loss of all that's lovely till I hate every man and his Father in heaven, and the gardens of earth grow not one child or woman worth loving.

As I have sometimes put it on the platform, "Isn't a boy worth more to the state than a horse? If so, the state is horse-mad to make horse-stealing a crime, and boy-stealing a lawful trade. Wouldn't you rather a fellow'd steal your horse than your boy? If so, why shoot the horse thief and license the child-stealer? Prove the state right in authorizing me to sell you the cause of drunkenness, and I'll prove you right in getting drunk, right in committing all the crimes of drunken men, and the state no right to punish you therefor. For to license the cause and punish the effect is the logic of fools not of statesmen." In the contest ripening all around, may Conscience be almighty at the polls, that your ballot and mine may be her children!

HEROIC MINORITIES.

BY E. P. MARVIN.

"These miserable minorities!" Such remarks as this are never made by thoughtful and good people. Minorities are generally in the right, especially at first, on all great moral questions, and majorities are in the wrong. There is generally more of brains and conscience in the few than in the many.

Heroic minorities in all ages have vindicated humanity and blessed the world. By divine right and divine might these pioneer minorities labor and wait until they become successful, popular majorities. Then the cowardly trimmers and indolent "tide-riders" come to them like clouds or like doves to their windows.

We had better suffer in a good cause than allow the cause to suffer for lack of our service. Moral and Christian principles are of little value if they are not worth toil, suffering and death. Even the old pagan philosophers said, "The good are few, the bad are many." Voting is much like counting noses to get the aggregate wisdom of a crowd. "Vox populi vox Dei" is a pagan and a Pelagian lie. It would be nearer the truth if written "Vox populi vox Diaboli."

Read Bible history. The voice of the majority defied God's judgment flood, demanded a king contrary to the will of God, and even clamored for the crucifixion of the Son of God! The apostles and early saints were a "contemptible minority." Gideon's band was at first a "contemptible minority," but every man was a condensed giant like David, and they soon came off conquerors.

Every evil and every wrong has been sanctioned by the voice of the people, and every good and right thing condemned. Minorities have had to stand and suffer for truth and righteousness all along the ages, and so it will be until the end.

Was the voice of the atheistic mob that cried, "We must have no monarch in heaven if we would have none on earth," the voice of God? Is the popular voice that annually sanctions gigantic evils, like the rum-traffic, the voice of God? No, no; let no cowardly poltroon despise minorities, and flatter himself that he is always or usually on the Lord's side with the selfish and thoughtless majority. Earth's minorities make heaven's majorities.

"He's a slave who fears to be
In the right with two or three."

Every good cause must have its pioneer minorities, who have the courage of their convictions and who are willing to suffer loss and become

"The focal point of million-fingered shame."

"What is a minority? The chosen heroes of the earth have been in a minority. There is not a social, political, or religious privilege that you enjoy to-day that was not bought for you by the blood and tears and patient suffering of the minority. It is the minority that have vindicated humanity in every struggle. It is a minority that have stood in the van of every moral conflict, and achieved all that is noble in the history of the world. You will find that each generation has been always busy in gathering up the scattered ashes of the martyred heroes of the past to deposit them in the golden urn of a nation's history.

"Look at Scotland, where they are erecting monuments. To whom? To the Covenanters. They were in a minority. Read their history, if you can, without the blood tingling to the tips of your fingers. These were in the minority, that through blood and tears, and hootings and scourgings—dyeing the waters with their blood, and staining the heather with their gore—fought the glorious battle of religious freedom.

"Minority! If a man stand up for the right, though the right be on the scaffold, while the wrong sit in the seat of government; if he stand for the right, though he eat with the right and truth a wretched crust; if he walk with obloquy and scorn in the by-lanes and streets, while the falsehood and wrong ruffle it in silken attire, let him remember that wherever the right and truth are, there are always troops of beautiful angels gathered around him, and God Himself stands within the dim future, and keeps watch over His own.

"If a man stands for the right and truth, though every man's finger be pointed at him, though every woman's lip be curled at him in scorn, he stands in a majority; for God and good angels are with him, and greater are they that are with him than all they that be against him."

The crusade against the hydra monster, Rum, demands men and women who have iron in the blood, granite in the backbone and God in the heart, and when all good people have the courage of their convictions, our contemptible minorities will swell to triumphant majorities and sweep the accursed monster from the land.

"For right is right, since God is God,
And right the day must win.
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

REVIEW OF "TRUTH IN THE CASE."

Prepared by Order of the National Executive Committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP, - Michigan.
MRS. HENRIETTA L. MONROE, Ohio.
MRS. FANNIE RASTALL, - - Kansas.
MISS ELISABETH TOBEY, - - Massachusetts.
Sub. Com.

CONDITIONS OF WRITING "TRUTH IN THE CASE."

To any reader who possesses a keen sense of honor, and a lasting fidelity to friends and principles, the conditions under which "Truth in the Case" was produced and sent out to the world will bring swift judgment against Mrs. Foster especially, and fall with relative weight upon her associates.

It needs only a reading of the book to get something of an insight into the strong and confidential friendship long existing between its author and Miss Willard. Upon no woman has the National President put greater honor, to none has she given more conspicuous and faithful friendship. Any member of the National Executive Committee through the years of this "non-partisan" struggle can testify to the patience of waiting, the charity of judgment, and the clinging to old-time confidence shown by Frances E. Willard. Again and again she has stood for the woman who now assails both her motives and methods, and won to acquiescence those of swifter judgment and warmer speech.

Mrs. Foster owes a debt of fealty the world can never understand, and she has struck her blow at her friend from the sacred center of years of trust and comradeship. Her late discovery that in being the champion of Miss Willard's ideas she has been in the wrong, thus helping to deceive a host of trusting followers; and that this evil was done under the coercion of her great love, will not be counted sufficient reason to justify her own course, or be taken as proper cause for making her confession of known weakness and lack of truth to the whole world, in order to find standing room from which to make war on the W. C. T. U. and her old-time associates in a noble work.

Again, Mrs. Foster has been for several years, and is now, a member of the Executive Committee of the National W. C. T. U.; its battle is her battle, its interest her charge, its secrets her guarded treasures, its trials her burdens; or at least this, to every right minded person, suggests her obligation. Yet Mrs. Foster has not hesitated to use the knowledge and position gained by her official relation to strike the organization she should defend. From this vantage ground she has gone to a nation-wide press unfriendly to the W. C. T. U. to speak against it and its work; has made the Iowa Messenger the organ of views and plans antagonistic to its officers and its policy; has sent leaflets abroad among the unions to divide and disturb, and finally, at the call of "many outside," as well as "inside the union," has made this latest assault.

Mrs. Foster complains bitterly that this has been called "Judas-like work"; the words are severe, but whoever used them may have remembered that it was from the close center of a little company of trusted companions the Master was betrayed.

Some of her associates are nearly as worthy of the same severe words. Mrs. Aldrich has been beloved and trusted in the annual and executive councils; she says words of condemnation for the action of the past on the suffrage question in the teeth of her own record, and finds ground of argument in her own inconsistency.

Mrs. Swift knows from personal experience that inside the furry glove of "non-partisanship" is the iron grip of Republican partyism; she knows the roots that grew this plant of disunion in her own state, and since the 18th of June, 1889, she must see with the rest of the world that "non-partisanship" as represented in "Truth in the Case" is a delusion.

SOME CHARGES CONSIDERED.

"Truth in the Case" contains a mass of petty complaints that need no answer. The great world is too busy to consider them; and those familiar with the workings of the W. C. T. U. know them to be without the foundation of either principle or logic.

We do not claim for the National Union that it has always come to the wisest decision under stress of the discussions thrust upon its annual conventions since 1884. Not always, perhaps, have individuals had the clearest insight when proposing measures to meet the cross-fire of a minority whose chief business has been to parade the "Iowa position," as against the position of the remainder of the United States quite as well represented.

We do claim, however, what history and the records will amply prove, that in all the contests those composing the minority have been the aggressors and have pushed the fight from year to year upon an unwilling majority. Yet all in this action which has had, to put it mildly, the color of insubordination, they have been met in debate with ability and dignity; their memorials have been received and spread on the minutes; their proposed amendments have been considered; they have had abundant time for agitation and discussion, and no single right under the constitution has been denied them.

Words may have been uttered in the heat of debate too earnest to be counted as "highest courtesy," but these incidents should never be charged upon the National Union as part of its decisions or indicating its spirit, for always when final action has been reached, it has come in equity to all.

With such full and open debate revealing all sides of the issue; with Mrs. Foster's well-known powers of persuasion and argument, and her old-time influence with the white-ribbon women; and in face of persecution from without and contest within, the majority has stood, and is still standing, increased in numbers and stability, every year. This has not come, as is charged, by the persuasion of politicians, by "tricks of language or coercion" of leadership, but from fidelity to principles long ago espoused, and growing revelation of the truth of Mrs. Foster's own words uttered in 1881: "Prohibitory legislation, national and state, can only be permanently secured through the agency of a political party making this its central idea."

Let us consider some of the main charges made, and sundry "Truths" not contained in the book of which we speak:

Under the heading, "Genesis of Party Work in the W. C. T. U.," Mrs. Aldrich finds that "Genesis" in Miss Willard's conversion to the Prohibition party, and Mrs. Foster in the ambition of the National President to be a "Joan of Arc" in this great reform. A mind in more judicial mood finds the "Genesis" in the foundation principles of the organization, carried along through the practical work of the years. The present attitude of political opinion in the National Union was inevitable for many reasons more profound than "diplomacy of expression."

1. It was from the beginning an organization of uncompromising Prohibitionists. The total abstinence principles of the white-ribbon host were not one whit stronger than their devotion to the "legal extinction" of the liquor traffic.

2. They saw from the first that "the traffic must finally be suppressed by the ballot," and that "prohibition is the true legislative remedy for the evils of intemperance;" and these were avowed as fixed principles, and without reference to their relation to parties or conditions possible in the future.

3. The legal work upon which of necessity they soon entered, and in which Mrs. Foster led, taught them the close relation between party friendship and whisky success, or whisky friendship and party success, and so the partisan side of the question could not be ignored.

4. The discussion of principles, which experience illustrated, forbade standing always at the Red Sea. "Through the wilderness," was God's road to Canaan.

With the "Genesis" of 1873 to 1878, the Exodus of 1884 was inevitable, for in present conditions the temperance reformer who toils for the political masters of this country must "make bricks without straw." (Ask Hon. Albert Griffin if this is not correct.) Let us now inquire for the "Genesis" of "non-partisanship" in the W. C. T. U. We are told that in 1883, "the chorus of majorities" for prohibition had been reached in Iowa; to secure this end the Republican party championed submission of the question, and a non-partisan ballot won the victory. From these facts, some propositions were deduced which have been adhered to with dogged persistence by the non-partisans in the teeth of such history as had tortured their logic to its death. They said:

1. The Iowa method is the final method for victory in all states.

2. The Republican party in Iowa should have the honor, in its victory for prohibition, and be trusted in other states to bring the same result.

3. The "Iowa position" controlling the action of the state W. C. T. U., bars the National Union from any expression not in harmony with it. In all this argument the attitude of Iowa representatives in the National Union has been too pretentious for modesty, when the claims that can honestly be made are considered.

Kansas was the real leader for constitutional prohibition. The Republican party of that state under the leadership of Gov. St. John, submitted the question, carried it in victory to the polls, and have stood by the law since it was enacted.

Iowa was politically "tricked" out of a splendid triumph, and has but a statute to-day between the saloon and its homes, while even that trembles in the balances, with a Democracy which openly declares for the traffic, and a Republicanism that trembles like a coward in its presence. Did Kansas, with a nobler record than Iowa, come to the National W. C. T. U. with plumes flying, and demand the right to decide its political expression? Nay, verily. With proper grace the Kansas W. C. T. U. might have urged its claim of leadership, but although the union of that state has been loyal to the Republican party, where it was loyal to prohibition, no note of discontent or inharmony has ever sounded from the borders of this true pioneer in constitutional prohibition.

Maine after a time came swinging into line. The Republican party, dominant in the state, submitted the question, and the forces rallied for the non-partisan contest. Mrs. Stevens and her grand state union stood up in that battle as firm as the rocks that guard that coast, and the people won. The Republican party stood by the people and gave the proper legislation, and Maine had a "position."

Did the W. C. T. U. of that state, with its prohibition record of thirty years, come to the National Conventions and demand that Maine should dictate the policy, restrain the action, and color the principles of the National W. C. T. U.? Again, nay. This might have come with seeming fitness, for Maine was really a leader beyond all for prohibition, but no discord came from Maine until the "Iowa position" struck a woman or two in one of the Northern counties.

The W. C. T. U. of Rhode Island was carefully non-partisan when its day of contest came. Mrs. Foster was the favorite leader in that strong and brief campaign which ended in victory; again the Republicans stood by the people, gave them the proper legislation, and the little state had in reality constitutional prohibition.

Did the delegates come to assert the Rhode Island "position" as the only right one? No, never a note of discord from that most conservative state. If Iowa is right, then all these should stand with her, because in like conditions. Now both Dakotas come to the kingdom of statehood and prohibition. Not even Kansas Republicanism can surpass the sentiment and courage of the party in the new commonwealth of South Dakota.

The W. C. T. U. declared fealty to the Republican party so long as it remains faithful to prohibition. But did Mrs. Barker and her delegation come to Chicago to stand out of harmony with the National because of Dakota's position? Hear her words:

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union hesitates not for one single moment to indorse the Republican party of South Dakota because it had the courage to come out and declare for the principles that we as an organization have declared for. But while we recognize the grand position taken by the Republicans of South Dakota, we understand that nationally the W. C. T. U. has no party but the Prohibition party.

Certainly then, Iowa's statutory prohibition with all that led up to it, is not the "Genesis" of non partisanship, for the same conditions have not grown it on other soil.

Mrs. Foster declares on page 39 that in Iowa, "where the Republican party have warranted the largest approbation of the temperance women," the W. C. T. U. has never given it "allegiance."

Read these resolutions, passed at the Iowa Conventions in 1883 and 1884:

Resolved, That we recognize an overruling Providence in the circumstances which led to the advocacy of prohibition by the Republican party, and that we pledge our earnest and faithful coöperation with that political party which shall give the needed prohibitory legislation to best protect our homes from the liquor traffic.

Later they said:

Resolved, We remember with gratitude the party that kept faith with the people with reference to prohibition, and the brave members of the twentieth General Assembly who stood by principle, and by their votes placed prohibition in our statute books and afforded protection to our homes.

Webster defines "allegiance" as "a tie of obligation"; if that tie is not here acknowledged, what language could declare it?

Such "tie of obligation" is all the National Union has had with the Prohibition party, declared in words no stronger than these, yet one is "non-partisan," the other "partisan," by the judgment of "the minority." There flit across the pages of "Truth in the Case," ghosts of certain Democratic and Greenback wearers of the white ribbon who are grieved, we are told, at the position of the National Union, because of their devotion to the principles of these parties.

But such ghosts failed to materialize in the ranks of the minority, and so far as is known the active "non-partisans" are all Republicans in reality, or lending influence that way. If it were noble we could find in some very personal reasons the "Genesis" of this movement against the W. C. T. U. The Non-Partisan League that was born in Massachusetts and died young; the Anti-Saloon Republican League that went into the wilderness bearing the banner of the "Iowa position," and never came to Canaan, are of the same family.

Looking these and many more facts in the face, we find the "Genesis" of "non-partisanship" in Mrs. Foster's conversion to the Republican party position in 1883, since which she has with others been illustrating the "universal joint" in the temperance reform.

POLITICAL ROBBERY.

Mrs. Florence Miller on page 76 sets up a man of straw with the foregoing terrible label. As the point she seeks to make is fully answered in another part of the report of the Committee, we desire only to quote from Bouviers' Law Dictionary: "Majority, the greater number. In every well regulated society the majority has always claimed and exercised the right to govern the whole society in the manner pointed out by fundamental laws; and the minority are bound, whether they have assisted or not, for the obvious reason that opposite wills cannot prevail in the same society on the same subject."

In any progress of opinion, majorities and minorities must be, and the discovery is now made for the first time that majority rule is "robbery."

A PERSONAL WORD FROM MRS. LATHRAP.

I presume to offer personal answer to the allusion made to my words by Mrs. Wilson, of Illinois, in her contribution to "Truth in the Case."

Mrs. Wilson says I began the final paragraph of my speech, in New York, with the words, "Lastly, we are a political organization." This is not true, the words used then and often since are these: "Lastly, the W. C. T. U. is political."

I expressly stated we could not be political actors, as women are not voting citizens, but we have come to be political thinkers, and then very carefully I went over the ground to show why we had thus come to judge in turn the saloon-keeper, the government, the party, and the citizen—all standing together for this awful infamy.

I have always held opinions opposed to the words put upon my lips, and wrote for the Louisville conference a paper fully setting forth my views that only full citizens, or an organization composed of such, can vote themselves, or be voted, into anything but a fictitious relation to a political party, or become in any real sense component parts of it. I believe the W. C. T. U. is non-partisan of necessity, as well as choice.

I have often been misquoted and misrepresented on this point, but it was carefully written out before the public ever heard the utterance in any form, and any one who quotes me as saying the W. C. T. U. is a "political organization," misrepresents both my convictions and their utterance.

Mrs. Tilton illustrates that superior gentleness and courtesy claimed by the non-partisans, when she speaks of Mrs. Hoffman and myself as making "caustic utterances," and so offending the wives of Democrats and Republicans.

I think I can say for Mrs. Hoffman as well as for myself, that we do not expect to win "cheering" from such as are in sympathy with these license parties. We are speaking for the downfall of wrong and the victory for truth, and are not seeking "honor that comes from men."

The report is thus far submitted, and will be followed by specific answers to charges made in "Truth in the Case."

Correspondence.

AMENDMENT WORK IN NEBRASKA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The outlook for carrying the prohibitory amendment is not discouraging. The friends of the cause are moving all over the state. Ministers say to us, "We will help you all we can." New unions are being organized and old ones are taking on new life. New members are coming to us and there seems to be a general desire to work along this line. There is no time but the present for us. We need more organizers in the field. There are large districts that should be thoroughly worked, and an interest awakened by lectures and a judicious distribution of literature.

The greatest drawback in the work of the W. C. T. U. is the want of funds to carry on their efforts in the newer parts of the state where money is so hard to raise to pay even the actual expenses of a lecturer. Nebraska is a state of "magnificent distances," more than four hundred miles in length and two hundred in width, and our hope lies with the rural districts, where there is not so much of the slum element as in the cities and larger towns.

We are organizing the counties as fast as possible for the amendment work. The crying need is for money and workers that have the cause at heart so thoroughly that they will be willing to help us for a modest consideration. We want no sensational or high-priced speakers, but straight amendment work must be done in Nebraska in the months that are to come. Such speakers we most earnestly invite, and will give them our hearty coöperation.

I feel that we have the sympathy of all true temperance people. The position we occupy is so different from other states that have had the prohibitory amendment submitted to them—constitutional prohibition or constitutional license. Such high-handed outrage of all that is good and true, such trampling upon the womanhood of a state was never before known. We were refused municipal suffrage by the legislature because it was said if that were given us, prohibition would be sure to carry.

God grant that the manhood of Nebraska may assert itself at the coming election, and show the politician, the bummer and the irresponsible element that congregate about the saloons, the police courts and the jails, that manhood and womanhood are worth more to the coming generation than English syndicates, whisky trusts or saloon monopolies, with gilded bars, and floors inlaid with gold and silver dollars. That the voters may be awakened to their duty is the work of the W. C. T. U. of Nebraska this year. For this work may we ask God to fit us with an especial preparation to go out to win vote and influence that shall redeem this otherwise grand and beautiful state from the black curse of high license, and place a law in our constitution that shall be a blessing and not a curse to our children.

MARY A. HITCHCOCK,
Pres. Nebraska W. C. T. U.

LICENSE VS. PROHIBITION STATES.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—For the past six weeks I have been making an extended trip through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky, and I desire to speak through your columns of some of the appalling contrasts in these states as compared with Iowa (my home state) in reference to the temperance question.

For the past six years, I have been actively engaged in business in a town of 8,000 inhabitants in Iowa, going daily to my desk in the business center of the city every laboring day of the year, and have had abundant opportunity for observing the workings of prohibitory law. I have discovered during my sojourn in the above-named high-license states in what the prohibitory law has failed.

First, it has failed to surround the vice of intemperance with polished glass, burnished silver and brass, and electric glory such as I saw in the saloon palaces of Chicago. One determined to have an intoxicating drink in Iowa can, perhaps, get it, but he must do so secretly, generally stealing into a back door or alley. A self-respecting man or boy is not tempted by the hidden, secret saloon as by the gilded livery of respectability surrounding the restricted "monopoly" in high-license cities. I find all classes of legitimate trade depressed, and a general cry of hard times in these states, while Iowa, with prices for all agricultural products as low as elsewhere, is financially prosperous, because she has failed to uphold a traffic which diverts her income from the merchant, manufacturer and grocer, to the till of the saloon-keeper. Iowa is out of debt, and has a well-to-do, self-respecting population, with jails growing lonesome and silent for lack of occupants. In one "lock-up" in an interior village, an old German lady is smoking hams because there is no other use for this relic of by-gone days in Iowa. In Cincinnati, Ohio, the matron of a house of detention for drunken women is asking for more extensive accommodations for her patients, being unable to receive all who are brought to the institution. On Saturday night, a month ago, I saw in one of the beer gardens of that city not less than a thousand men, women, girls and boys in all stages of intoxication, and this resort is but one of many such nurseries of vice in that city. I doubt if as many drunken men could be found in the entire state of Iowa as I saw there in a single hour. Iowa has failed to uphold this kind of oppression to her laboring poor.

Everywhere one goes, the traffic exposes itself to eyes and nose—on board cars, in stores, offices and on the streets, until one thinks the exception here is the entirely sober man. Iowa has failed to prohibit a pure atmosphere to this extent. Drunkenness is so common here as to be astonishing and appalling to one accustomed to the better conditions in Iowa, and after what I have seen during the past few weeks in high license states, I call upon the fathers and mothers of Iowa to arise in their might and protest against the repeal of the prohibitory law. High license is a fraud and a failure! The ruin to which the young are exposed and the helplessness of the mothers is so terrible to my mind that I look about me and wonder that they do not grow desperate and start a crusade of torch and bomb! The saloon men openly defy pleading women who interpose in behalf of drunken father and sons. They have the sanction of the state to back them in their defiance. Think of it, the state against the home! and every patriotic son of America who casts his vote for the return of the saloon to Iowa, should blush with shame when he thinks that he has added his influence to that of the host who defy mothers, wives and sisters in the battle against this destroyer of innocence and safety.

Let none ask me to be "conservative" or 'non-partisan" while men are indifferent to such conditions as obtain under a "restrictive" license. It looks to me as if it restricted every good of society and let evil loose upon a community. A vote for high license stamps the man who casts it as a traitor to "God and Home and Native Land," and the day cannot be far distant when a party making the control of the liquor traffic its first principle, a party which will neither be indifferent nor defiant of woman's appeal, will triumph in this land. For the sake of helpless women in high license states, God speed the day.

MARY F. ROBINSON.

THE PRESENT SITUATION IN KANSAS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—From the Topeka Capital of January 2, I condense the following items of Kansas temperance news:

The State Teachers' Association, which met at Topeka during the holidays, and consisted of a thousand teachers, college presidents, and county superintendents, voted, without a dissenting voice, for the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we are now and forever opposed to a re-submission to the prohibitory amendment; and that it is our deliberate conviction that the prohibitory amendment is as firmly imbedded in the constitution of Kansas, and in the hearts of her people as are the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments imbedded in the Federal constitution, and in the hearts of the American people.

Resolved, That we are in hearty sympathy with the law which requires that all children shall be taught the effects of stimulants and narcotics upon the human system, and pledge ourselves to loyal obedience.

This convention was followed by another—a rally of re-submissionists from the various cities. The house was full of people curious to hear what they could say, but it was observed that the two dozen gentlemen on the platform, both Republicans and Democrats, were those who had opposed prohibition from the first. Half a dozen speeches were made, full of boasts that prohibition was a failure, and full of such epithets as "lying hypocrites," "red-nosed cranks," "sweet-scented saints," and "rabid Prohibitionists." They failed, however to arouse much enthusiasm.

The same paper quotes from the Chicago Lever seventy-two answers from district and probate judges to the following questions:

1. What has been the effect of the prohibitory law in Kansas?
2. Are you in favor of continuing the law?
3. What is the sentiment in your locality in regard to re-submission?
4. If re-submitted, will it re-carry?

All but one of these judges replied in substance that the law was a success, and that, although many of them had voted against prohibition, they were now opposed to re-submission.

The "lone dissenter," I am ashamed to say, was the probate Judge of this county. I have known Judge Bean for several years as a moral, temperate man, and I cannot think what motive he can have in thus misrepresenting the situation. He says:

"In answer to query one: The effect of the prohibitory law in Kansas has been the opposite of what the admirers of the law intended when first passed. We are breeding perjurers daily, manufacturing dives in our midst, and these of the vilest type. Men who are honest and upright in any other transaction or circumstance, will take the witness stand, and deliberately perjure themselves, and also take their position in the jury-box and credit such testimony. * * *

"In answer to query second: I am not in favor of continuing the law, and no citizen other than those who are selfish, and hope to accomplish some personal political object is in favor of it.

"In answer to query three: Nine out of ten in this county are for re-submission, and the sentiment is growing.

"In answer to query four: I think it would carry in the state, but not with so large a per cent as in this county. This is from an unbiased standpoint."

His charge of perjury is entirely too sweeping, although he has some grounds for such a statement, for that has been one of the difficulties in convicting the liquor sellers. His charge of insincerity in his reply to the second query is a calumny against more than a third of the voters of this county. His statement that this county would go against prohibition may be true, for it went 800 majority against the amendment; but the majority would not be nearly so large as he thinks. There are many people who voted against the amendment who would now vote for it.

The prohibitory law is a complete success in the greater part of the state; but it is only a partial success in Atchison and other large cities. There is a large German population in this county, which holds the balance of power between the almost equally divided Republican and Democratic parties. Five or six years ago the temperance men united under the leadership of D. C. Milner, H. M. Glancy, and Pardee Butler, and elected county officers who closed the saloons. But Pardee Butler is dead, D. C. Milner has left the county, and the other temperance leaders have become discouraged, or think that the work once done will stay done, and allow local or party issues to divide them. The result is that the whisky ring elect county officers who either oppose, or are indifferent to prohibition. "Joints," or "dives," as the places are called where liquor is secretly sold, are becoming numerous, and difficult to close. Judge Bean is in a position to see the worst side, but he evidently judges the whole county by his immediate associates.

East Atchison, just across the river in Missouri, is so full of saloons that one smells whisky before reaching the east end of the bridge, and wagon loads of beer are frequently hauled across the bridge. But for all that, there are not nearly so many drunken men on the streets of Atchison as before the closing of the saloons. Reformed drinkers can now travel the streets without being allured by the sight and smell of liquor. Nor are the temptations nearly so great for boys as when the saloon was the loafing place of a jolly crowd. But some boys are yet tempted to drink, and some, even of the country boys, think it smart to say that they get a drink of beer whenever they want it.

The Prohibitionists should be vigilant, neither too sanguine nor too much discouraged. In a few years the young men will change the majority.

MRS. ROSETTA B. HASTINGS.
Farmington, Atchison county, Kan.

Our Children.

A CHILD'S CONCLUSION.

BY S. M. B. PIATT

"Mamma," he said, "you ought to know
The place. Its name is wicked, though.
Not China. No. But if you fell
Through China you would be there! Well,

"Fred said somebody very bad,
Named Satan, stayed down there and had
Oh, such a fire to burn things! You
Just never mind. It can't be true,

"Because I've digged and digged to see
Where all that fire could ever be,
And looked and looked down through the dark,
And never saw a single spark.

"But Heaven is sure; because if I
Look up, I always see the sky—
Sometimes the gold-gates shine clear through—
And when you see a thing, it's true!"

U. S. Consulate, Queenstown, Ire. —The Independent.

IN AN ASH BARREL.

BY MABEL GIFFORD.

The "Branch Sunday-school" were going through with their responsive service in their usual monotone. Joanna Kelley, "Harnah,' as Haw's Alley called her, standing a head taller than the rest of Miss Gracie's class, was listening with her usual indifference to the murmur of voices. Her thin, pinched face suddenly took on an alert look; the superintendent was reading.

"Say that agin, mister."

Every head in the school turned towards the voice, but Harnah was no whit abashed.

The superintendent looked surprised, but repeated, "Do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

Harnah stood stiff as a post during the remainder of the service, her faded and patched dress hanging in straight folds about her.

"What's persecute?" she asked the teacher when they had taken their places for the lessons.

This was Miss Gracie's first day at the "Branch." She had come from the "big church," full of enthusiasm for these poor children, whom she had pictured pitiful and timid, clothed in neat but scanty garments.

The first sight of the hard, old-looking faces, and red, grimy little fists, sickened her. She feared they were very bad, as well as very poor. She wished to fire them with zeal for the Master, and took this opportunity to tell them of the martyrs, and the religious wars.

Harnah, waxing warmer and warmer, at last started up, "I'd like to be a martyr; I'd burn; I'd drownd; I'd be cut to bits! Oh, I wish't I was a soldier; I'd fight!"

And then the teacher brought her lesson home. "We can all be Christian soldiers, and fight for the right."

"Who'll we fight?" cried Harnah, her crane-like neck stretching to still greater length in her eagerness.

"Fight your enemies."

"I'll do it! I kin do that."

"Who are your enemies, Joanna?"

"Put Hackett, Stubb Murphey, 'n' lots more," was the prompt answer.

"No," said Miss Gracie, gently, "they are your neighbors. Your enemies are the wicked thoughts and feelings you have towards them or any one, and the wrong things you want to do. These you must fight with all your might. To those you call your enemies, do as you would wish them to do to you. 'Do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you.' "

Harnah had listened with wide-eyed surprise, at first, but now her face was dark and sullen.

"Well then, I sha'n't; I just sha'n't."

The teacher was dismayed at this bold declaration, and feared Joanna was the very hardest of them all; and she looked after her as she marched out, stiff and straight, muttering, "Well I sha'n't, then, I jist sha'n't.

Harnah made no disturbance the next Sabbath during the services, but looked troubled and unhappy.

"What's honor?" she asked abruptly, as one of the scholars repeated the fourth commandment.

"It means we must treat our parents with respect in word and manner, and obey them always."

"H'mp!" exclaimed Harnah scornfully. "Reck'n I'm goin' to 'spect mammy? I hain't nothin ter 'spect her fur, 'less it's fur callin' me names and beatin' o' me. Reck'n I'm goin' to 'bey her? That means goin' ter git gin at Pat Millins' when she tells me, I s'pose. Well I jist sha'n't—not fur nobody. It makes her ugly, 'n' it makes her sick, 'n' we don't have nothin' to eat, 'n' I git beat worser."

Pretty Miss Gracie looked so shocked.

"You can refuse kindly, and say you are sorry to displease her, and try to persuade her not to use the harmful stuff."

A scornful sniff from Harnah said as plain as words, "Much you know about it!"

True enough; the teacher was lost in the dark labyrinths of Harnah's life.

"Ef mammy sasses me, I'll sass her; 'n' ef she slings things, I'll sling em back."

Miss Gracie looked at Harnah so sorrowfully. Harnah watched her stealthily from under her lowered lashes, and never a word more did she utter: but when the class was dismissed, she caught the teacher's dress in one of her hard, red hands.

"Teacher, I guess I'll try it. Ef she sasses me I won't sass back, 'n' ef she slings things, I won't sling 'em back; but I won't git the gin, nohow."

There were tears in the pretty teacher's eyes. "Thank you, Joanna."

"Why does she care?" Harnah kept muttering on her way back to Haw's Alley, "I wish't she didn't care."

Full to overflowing was the alley of human beings. Doors, windows, pavements thronged with them. Little girls with big babies, fat women blocking up door-ways, or with horizontal arms on window ledges; scraggy women telling the news, or wrangling; sodden-faced men with their pipes in their mouths, and idle hands in empty pockets, sauntering from door to door, and peering in at open windows. Wretched creatures, all of them. And away upon the topmost floor of one of these miserable tenement houses lived Harnah; the only difference between the attic where she and "mammy" lived, and the others, being a less degree of uncleanliness.

"Harnah's havin' the dumps," mammy informed the attic-floor neighbors, "all this week 'n' last. I dunno what ails her"; and mammy, as if to create a change in the stagnant atmosphere of her home, hobbled into the room where Harnah sat sullenly gazing out of the window, which was the cleanest spot in the place. Mammy not being able to toil over so many stairs often, took her comfort in viewing all she could of her neighbors' movements from her window.

"Harnah! take this mug down to Pat's Be spry now!"

"I won't," said Harnah; "yer jest knows I won't."

That was exactly what mammy counted on. She forthwith poured out a string of invectives that usually called a similar tirade from Harnah. But now, to her amazement and increasing rage, Harnah answered not a word, only continued looking sullenly out of the window.

"What ails ye?" said the exasperated woman. "Ye are as glum as Satan. Ye was obstinate 'nough before, but now there's no gettin 'long with ye."

"I hain't agoin' to sass ye, but I won't git gin, mammy."

"Ye won't! We'll see," and flying came the most convenient article, which happened to be a stove cover on the hearth.

Harnah dodged, but only received the force of the blow on the side of the head instead of full in the face. She staggered a moment, with her hand to her head, and then reeled out of the open door.

Down, down, down she went, she never knew how, until she reached the last landing. Then she crept around to the back yard and into her haven of refuge—an old ash barrel in a corner. The back yard was little frequented, on account of its limited view of the world. She doubled herself in with a calculation acquired by long practice.

"Much good it does," she muttered, making a pillow of her tattered shawl for her aching head, "much good it does to 'spect mammy. I knowd jest how 'twould be. I only get banged the worse for it. Much she knows 'bout it. Jest let her try it a spell and see. I know one thing, I shan't do no more 'spectin'. I'm mos' kilt," and poor Harnah groaned with the pain in her head, that grew worse every moment.

Suddenly she became aware of voices; excited voices on the other side of the high board fence.

"Jim 'n' Stubb 'n' Bill 'n' me—four on us, is goin' ter pitch inter him ter night, 'tween Pat's 'n' Mis' Murphey's. We ain't goin' ter stan' his sass no longer."

"We kin do it; four on us."

Harnah gave such a sudden stretch of delight at this news and such a chuckle of approval, that the barrel cracked with the force of her feet, and echoed a guttural exclamation that caused the boys to pause and listen.

"Didn't I hear suthin'?" and quick as a cat one boy had mounted the fence, and perching on the top, took a survey of the enclosure. All was silent, and the yard deserted. Only litter and an old ash barrel met his eye. He clambered down, and the voices became indistinct further along the alley.

"Goody!" exclaimed Harnah, after crawling out to look through a knot-hole in the fence to make sure they had gone, and crawling in again systematically, careful to be all out of sight, "Put Hackett 'll git it this time sure, 'n' good 'nough fur him. I'd like ter be one o' them boys!"

Suddenly, solemnly, almost as distinctly as a voice came the words, "Do good to them that hate you, persecute you, and despitefully use you," (that was the way they had crystallized in Harnah's mind). And in the darkness of the ash barrel two sad eyes looked at Harnah. Out flew the feet again against the much-enduring barrel. Then there was silence for the space of five minutes.

(Concluded next week.)

CRYING FOR THE MOON.

In the nurse's arms one night,
In the balmy month of June,
Lay a baby spent and tired
With crying for the moon.
And so softly we smiled,
Said, "Poor, silly little chi'"
He'll know better soon."

Vainly had he tried to leap
Up toward the glowing sky,
And because kind Love restrained
He could only fret and cry;
And we said, and proudly smiled,
"He'll know better, silly child!
Better, by-and-by."

Will he? Please to tell me when;
I don't think it will be soon.
If he's like most other men
He will always want the moon.
As a Boy, he'll want the toys
And ponies of far richer boys;
These will be his moon.

As a Youth, be in distress
For some beauty rich and fair.
For some furniture or dress,
For some toy he counteth rare.
And far older men will say,
"He'll grow wiser every day;
Wiser, unaware."

As a Man, he'll sigh for wealth.
Long for power, and hope for fame
And because he gets them not
Idly murmur, wrongly blame.
Crying still for some great boon
Far above him as the moon;
Babe and man the same.

Oh, 'tis well some mighty arm
Is around us everywhere.
Many a fall we all should have
But for that strong, loving care;
For life has no greater boon
Than the love that whispers "No,"
And that will not let us go
When crying for the moon. —Independent.

The Still Hour.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING FEBRUARY 2, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 2: 25-39; Joshua 8–13.)

Sunday, 2; Luke 2: 25-39. Verse 25. It is worth the effort of early years to come down to old age with a character established in moral goodness and in piety. Our blessed Lord is not only the Consolation of Israel, but of the just and devout everywhere. Verse 27, We should seek to be led by the Spirit; His fruits in our lives are the best evidence that we are thus led. Gal. 5: 22. Verse 29, Are we living so that if we should die today we could depart in peace? Verse 34, We shall fall through unbelief, or rise through faith in the Son of God. Verse 36, God makes no distinction of sexes or classes, in honoring and rewarding the good.

Monday, 3; Josh. 8. Verse 1, In the midst of reverses we should never give way to fear, or cease to trust in God. Chastisements for sin are often made to pave the way for temporal benefits, which are withdrawn or withh ld on account of sin. Verse 30, When successes come in the battles of life, we should dedicate ourselves anew to God, and engage with new zeal in His service. Verse 34. We should not lay plans for the future that do not agree with the law of God.

Tuesday, 4; Josh. 9. Verse 14, In difficult matters, time should be taken to consider, and prayer should be made, that God may direct. Verses 18, 19, Though we have to s ffer for it, promises that are made should be kept. "Always be reliable," is an excellent motto for any one to adopt. Verse 27, Their chastisement brought them into the possession of great religious privileges. "I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Ps. 85: 10.

Wednesday, 5; Josh. 10. Verse 6, We should ever be ready to give help to those to whom we are bound by the obligations of justice, kindness and sympathy. Verse 8, If God is with us, we need not fear all the enemies of His kingdom who combine against us. Verse 9, God's promises of success in no way relieve us from putting forth our best endeavors. Verse 13, If we will trust in God and go forward, the night of death shall not overtake us until our work is accomplished. Shall we be able at death to say: "I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do"? Jno. 17: 4. Verse 24, War has not yet ceased, but how thankful we should be that many of its barbarous usages have passed away.

Thursday, 6; Josh. 11. Verse 4, The Christian has the world, the flesh, and the devil to overcome; and in his last battles with them, before he obtains the final victory, they are apt to show their greatest strength. Verse 6, If these enemies of ours seem to be invincible, we should look to God for help, and not be afraid. Horses and chariots were destroyed, because God required Israel to put their trust in Him, and not provide themselves with, and trust in, military resources. Verse 20, Guilt, from long-continued sinning, finally ripens into hardness of heart, when the Lord gives the wicked over to punishment.

Friday, 7; Josh. 12. Verse 1, It is well for us, at times, to stop and consider the conquests we have made in former years; we thus gather courage to overcome in the present and future. Verse 7, Our dangers are as numerous as these conquered kings, and we must obtain many victories before we can have rest. Scarcely less numerous are our country's dangers, and we have much to do before the whole land is taken from Christ. In order that our nation may be delivered from all its foes, we should take sides with those who are against all existing evils.

Saturday 8; Josh. 13. Verse 1, The years for active work quickly pass away; and whatever good service we can do should be done at once, for the opportunity will not return, and our strength for work will be gone by the coming of old age. Verse 9, No higher honor can come to any of us in this world than that which we have by living so that it can be truly said of us that we are the servants of the Lord. Verse 22 Baalam was an unprincipled, wic ed man, and how foolish it seems, when a life is ended, that a man should live only for self-seeking, and to gratify passion and ambition.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

[Bearing Good Fruit, the Test of a Christian Life. John 15: 2.]

With what emphasis does our Lord speak, in this fifteenth chapter of John, of the need of fruit-bearing, in order that we may be His disciples. We must do the two things: "abide" in Him, and "bear fruit."

1. The bearing of good fruit is the only satisfactory evidence of the spiritual change of regeneration. Every soul that repents and returns to God must do works meet for repentance. Acts 26: 20; II. Cor. 10: 11; Eph. 2: 10.

2. Christians are commanded to bear good fruit. Christ has chosen His people and ordained them, that they should go and bring forth fruit. John 15: 16; Gal. 5: 22, 23; II. Pet 1: 5-8.

3. Not to bear fruit, or to bear bad fruit, is to meet with the condemnation of God. Jno. 15: 2; Matt. 3: 10; Eph. 5: 11. The world is full of sin and sorrow because the fruit that many people are bearing in their lives is bad.

4. A true Christian will not be satisfied by simply bearing good fruit, but will seek to bear much fruit. Jno. 15: 8. Three stages are mentioned in this fifteenth chapter of John—"fruit," "more," "much." Col. 1: 10; I. Cor. 15: 58; Psalm 92: 12-15.

The Household.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S GOVERNOR.

BY MARIAN DOUGLAS.

No sound of music on the air,
No fluttering of banners fair,
No cheering loud, no restless crowd
To throng his way, and press him—
But everywhere one low, glad prayer,
The Governor, God bless him!
From fearless hearts at war with wrong,
From sad hearts that have suffered long
From pure hearts that to Christ belong,
And would with deeds confess Him,
It rises upward like a song,
The Governor, God bless him!

THE OUTLOOK OF FAITH.

BY MARGARET B. PLATT.

He is faithful that promised. Heb. 10: 23.

Like a great rock's cooling shadow,
In a strange and dreary land,
Unto a weary wanderer
As he treads the desert's sand,
E'en as that grateful shadow
Cheereth the traveler's soul
Like a heavenly bow of promise,
As he presseth to the goal.

So doth my Father's message
Seem to my panting soul
As I travel in life's pathway,
Bound for a heavenly goal.
So doth His words of promise
Cheer me upon my way,
As I grope in these fitful shadows
To reach eternal day.

"I will go before and lead thee,"
"The Lord is thy sun and shield,"
"He will give thee grace and glory,"
"Thou the Spirit's sword shalt wield."
"I will strengthen—I will help thee,"
"I will wipe away all tears,"
"As thy days, so shall thy strength be,"
"Thou shalt rest from all thy fears."

"I will ne'er forsake nor leave thee,"
"Fear thou not nor be dismayed,"
"E'en though all the hosts of darkness
"'Gainst thy soul shall stand arrayed."
"They that strive with thee shall perish,
"They shall be ashamed and fear."
"E'er thou callest I will answer,"
"While thou speakest I will hear."

I know that His love is steadfast,
And His promises are sure.
They shall rest in the golden city
Who unto the end endure.
When death's dark night hath faded
In the dawn of an endless day,
They shall wake in the home of the Father
Who were faithful on the way.

Washington, D. C.

HOW SHE WROTE IT.

BY MARGARET A. LAKE.

It was an inspiring morning. Louise was happily off to school, Liebling busy at play in the soft outdoor air and sunshine. She had lent a helping hand both up stairs and down, orders for the day had been given, and mind and heart were at rest as to home duties. She had promised a report for the next issue of the white-ribbon paper of the state union, and this was her time.

She began. Ten lines were soon written, quite to her satisfaction; now for the next point. A ring at the door-bell. "Miss Edith, ma'am; with the dolls for the Fair."

"So kind of Miss Edith; Susan, lay them on the table; I will attend to it." Another line, another ring.

"That poor little boy, ma'am, with papers to sell."

"Tell him we do not want any to-day, Susan; we have a quantity we bought from him last week. And, Susan, do not disturb me again unless it is absolutely necessary."

Three lines more are finished.

"Oh, mamma, organ man's day, I hear him (and this six miles out!); some pennies, please, for the monkey! I can get your pocketbook." The pocketbook is brought, and two little souls are made radiantly happy with pennies for the monkey. Point number two is completed!

"Oh, mamma, mamma, the monkey's just lovely; do come out and see him!" It is impossible to resist the little pleader, and the monkey certainly is "lovely."

A few more lines. Tramp, stamp, rush, crush, breeze, oh, it is only Louise and half the school with her; it must be recess time. "We've come for the Century and Longfellow's poems, mamma; both needed at school!" And the room is full of brightness and sweetness, and chatter and laugh, and then it is quiet again. "Oh, Louise has forgotten a note she was to have taken to school!" She flies to the door, not a child is in sight. She rings the bell. "Is Louise there, or has she gone to school again?"

"Yes, ma'am, she has gone to school again." Would that Louise would go to school so expeditiously in the mornings!

Ah! there is the grocer's boy, he will take it. That is off her mind, and she re-enters the library. "I'm very sorry, ma'am, but there isn't milk enough to make the custard you ordered for dessert, though I thought there was when you told me"

"Very well, Susan, then we will have the fruit alone."

Oh, the open door has tempted the mischievous wind, and notes and papers are merrily dancing about the room. She gathers them up and re-arranges them, but she wishes a motion to adjourn were in order, with no unfinished business left for another session.

Where is the sheet on which she was writing. and what was the last she wrote? Was it of "moral cripples" she was writing, or "crippled morals" she really cannot remember. Over and over her writing desk, through her portfolio, under table and chairs she searched for the missing paper, out on the piazza where she had gone to look for Louise, upstairs where she had not gone; could Louise have carried it off!

"Oh, dear!" she begins mentally, but—"my times are in Thy hand," flashes through her mind, Ah, your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him, and how great her need of patience! And she settles herself in her chair, and calmly awaits His time. Not praying, not pleading, simply realizing His presence, His power. And her strength is renewed, her weariness is gone, and all is peace. She opens her portfolio again and there lies the missing paper.

A VISIT TO THE HOME OF GEORGE MACDONALD.

BY HANNAH WHITALL SMITH.

I have just been to Bordighora, Switzerland, to visit George MacDonald in his charming home. I described this house in a letter last year, andwill not repeat now except to say that the beautiful drawing-room I spoke of then looked more beautiful than ever. There was a wood fire in the great wide chimney, and the kettle for afternoon tea was boiled over it, hanging to a great old chain, gypsy fashion. I do not know how large the room really is, but I guessed it must be at least seventy-five feet long by about forty feet wide. Its especial charm is its homey-ness. It is full of all sorts of cozy corners and sofas and window-seats and little tables, and looks as if it held out arms of invitation to all the world to come and make itself at home there. It is just the sort of room to be a fit setting for the beautiful old patriarch who graces it with his presence. He looked, the day we were there, as benign and fatherly as one would imagine a gray-haired old angel would be; and you could not help feeling as if all the lovely old men in his books must unconsciously be simple reproductions of his own personality.

There was the usual company of young people, their own three daughters, and some young English girls sent out for their health, and we all had afternoon tea together, and talked of many subjects of interest. Among the rest,they showed us some most wonderful "voice figures," that is, figures produced on a certain prepared paste spread thinly on a membrane by singing. A Mrs. Watts Hughes, at the head of a Boys' Home at Islington, had discovered that by sounding a certain note in singing through a tube onto this paste, made very thin, she could produce various beautiful figures. The Spectator of October 26, describes the process It says: "She sings into the tube a low note of her voice—a note not very loud,but firm and willful. The effect on the paste is immediate. Tiny globules are thrown up into the air, and sputtering and leaping, all alive with the motions caused by the vibrations of her voice, crowd into the center of the membrane making a little round heap like the center of a daisy. Mrs. Hughes then changes the character of the note she is singing, though not its pitch. Instead of the note of firm, peremptory character, she sings a very sustained and insidious sound. Then, from the round center of white paste will fly out, at unequal distances, little tentative starlike jets. Sometimes two or three such furtive attempts at the start will have been made, when, suddenly, a perfect and symmetrical row of petals will start out and create, with the center, a lovely little exquisitely-finished, daisy-like form. Sometimes even three rows of petals will be the answer to the song note, whereas, at other times, the one row will be imperfect, and will require singing in again to the center before a regular row will produce itself.'

Other forms of flowers and shells, etc., are produced by other notes and altered methods of singing. We saw at Mr. MacDonald's a daisy perfect in form,and also several other wonderful figures. I could not but wonder whether this might not be a glimpse into the meaning of "for every idle word we shall be brought into judgment." Whether it may not be that every sound of our voice produces a voice-picture somewhere. This would be a dreadful thought if we did not know that there is another and Almighty Voice which speaks as never man spake, that, spoken into our lives, will change and beautify all our poor, voice-pictures into the glorious likeness of His thoughts and His ways. More than ever did I realize that we need to have Him speak in us and through us if our voices are really thus making pictures as we speak.

CENTERS OF THE WORLD'S AFFECTIONATE THOUGHT.

BY FRANCES J. BAKER.

Mt. Vernon, Cleveland, Springfield, New York and Fremont are fast becoming Meccas of American hearts.

In 1876 we marched in the national procession to the tomb of the Father of Our Country, and thought on the growing admiration which attends his name throughout the world, an apotheosis kind of fame awarded the great spirits of earth whom Providence chooses for grand national duties.

In Cleveland, ten years afterward, we stood before the grated door of the receiving vault which had for months been the custodian of the sleeping dust of the second martyred President. The sentinel had ceased his tramp, the soldiers had returned to camp, the trees with their bare arms, together with the cold marble, voiced the awful silence of the dead. The brown casket contained the earthly form, flowers fresh from Mendon were laid on it, and faded ones surrounded the bier. Not far away the magnificent memorial temple, or shrine, was rising from the summit of a knoll, a fitting tribute "From a grateful country in memory of James A. Garfield, the twentieth President of the United States of America, Scholar, Soldier, Statesman, Patriot."

The spring of 1887 found us in Springfield. The week before, the middle of April, on the twenty-second anniversary of the death of the martyr President, his body and that of his wife were moved from their hiding place immediately under the obelisk, and placed permanently in a vault especially prepared for them in the north hall of the monument. While the concrete cement was hardening, a guard was stationed at the vault to prevent a repetition of the vandalism of '78. Shortly after that attempt to steal the remains of Abraham Lincoln they were secretly turned over to the Lincoln Guard of Honor for safe keeping, and so effectually did they guard the trust, that for eight long years the secret was shared by only a few persons. It being generally supposed the remains were lying in the sarcophagus originally prepared for them.

A thousand floral pieces had been sent Mrs. Lincoln from different parts of this country, and from England, Scotland and Ireland. In Memorial Hall were many mementos, some very pleasing, others very ghastly. It will be remembered that the actress, Laura Keene, took his head in her lap after the fatal bullet of J. Wilkes Booth had done its deadly work. The dress she wore was white silk, and a piece of it, reddened with spots of Lincoln's blood, was framed and hung on the wall. A facsimile of the Emancipation Proclamation, the original having been burned in Chicago, is seen here, also a photographic copy of a letter to the little girl who "thought he would look better if he let his whiskers grow."

Letters of condolence to Mrs. Lincoln are preserved in bound volumes. A piece of a bridge he helped to build in 1832, a chair re-seated with hickory bark in 1834, now covered with wire and caged up from relic hunters; the surveying instruments used by him in 1837; also a table from his law office in Springfield; these all illustrate the history of the man from his humble days to the Chief Executive of the United States. There was also a cast of the hand that signed the document that set four millions free. The "old home" which had sheltered the dead moral hero, and in which his family was born, is not far away, and in it the very same cradle that rocked "Robert" and "Willie" and "Tad." Several well-filled cases contain the cartoons of the campaign of 1860, hundreds of sermons, eulogies, magazines and pamphlets, addresses, etc., on the life of Lincoln; a collection by various authors had been made of ninety-one lives and 200 autograph manuscripts, reminiscences by noted persons. There were also two hundred and forty medals of one hundred and seventy one varieties—copper, bronze, gilt, brass, pewter, nickel silver and gold. From a hewed oak log in the house where Lincoln's earlier manhood days were spent, a rustic stand was made fastened with silver plated bolts, and upon it, on an elaborate and highly finished top, is the mourning marble slab, chiseled with the four lines written by Whittier with a wooden pen made from the door-sills and mounted with gold:

"Let Man Be Free! The mighty word
He spake was not his own;
The spirit of the highest stirred
His mortal lips alone!"

Some time, where the Hudson meets the ocean, a mausoleum deep and wide will be made, a shrine for the millions yet to be whose pilgrim feet will gather there, and who, musing on the conqueror, hero, patriot, Ulysses S. Grant, will gather strength to stand for freedom's holy trust.

When the memorial of that "ideal woman of Home and Church and State," Lucy Webb Hayes, is reared, which it is as certain to be as that the national flag was lowered at half-mast when the people stood with uncovered heads "amid the singing of birds," as "earth to earth, and dust to dust," was said at her grave in quiet Fremont; when her memorial is built, by women, perhaps, it may not be a magnificent shaft, but, possibly, a school where coming generations will be taught that same heaven-born liberty in truth, and courage to dare to do the right—then we will add Fremont to these growing centers of affectionate thought, and together with all the Christian and temperance world, rise up and call her blessed.

A TEMPERANCE BOAT.

BY MRS. CLARA SMITH COLTON.

The recent terrible storm on Lake Michigan which overtook the three large lake vessels, the Aurora, the Adams and the Dows, and resulted in the loss of the latter,brings to mind some temperance facts in regard to the owner of the boats, Mr. John Corrigan, of Cleveland.

When the enormous holds of lake vessels are to be loaded or unloaded, the workmen ask, almost demand, that the boat owners shall set out a supply of beer, tobacco and whisky,to be consumed by the "loaders" during the three days that the work usually requires. The boat-owner, or captain, who furnishes the freest flow of beer is the most popular. And not to comply with the demand for "setting up the drinks and cigars all around" is to incur the disfavor of the sailors and loaders, and is liable to lead to difficulty in securing workmen.

But Mr. Corrigan stood firm against the practice of treating. "You, men, say it is hot work unloading the copper ore; why do you want to make yourselves hotter by drinking this burning stuff, and then go staggering home to-night to abuse your families? I tell you I won't have a drop of it around. But when you're through with the work, I'll give every man a ticket for a meal at the best restaurant in the city."

At the launching of the great sailing vessel, the Aurora, three years ago in Cleveland, Mr. Corrigan would not have the usual ceremony of breaking a bottle of wine over the bow in christening a boat. "Wine is a bad thing," he said. "I want none of it on my new boat." Mr. Corrigan's daughter, when the proper moment came, pronounced the name "Aurora," and, in the presence of the hundreds assembled, poured a bottle of water over the bow of the vessel, and the majestic "Aurora" moved from the scaffolding and floated out upon the blue and sunlit waters of Lake Erie a temperance boat.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.—II. Timothy 1: 7.

OUR FRIENDS, THE SECEDERS.

"The humanness of the saints" is always finding fresh illustration as history unrolls. The white light of God's truth shines through the stained glass windows of the brain; the personal equation is counted in, and at the cross-roads of opinion good friends separate and good causes set up new finger-boards.

The different churches are our most striking illustration of this infirmity of noble minds, but the leaders in great reforms are almost as pronounced in their divergence from each other as were the men whose honest differences in Christian teaching led countless martyrs to the stake. When He who is our Life shall appear with resurrection power, then doubtless shall the watchmen see eye to eye, and in anything in which He has already truly appeared to the inmost soul of any one of us, we have received in that thing the power of His resurrection, and do now see eye to eye with Him. But few and far between are these elect and precious souls.

In the annals of the anti-slavery movement, Garrison and Phillips came to a parting of the ways; the Home Rule struggle in England sundered those brotherly leaders, Gladstone and Bright; but still the work went on, for while men pass in endless procession across the stage, the measures they incarnate find in the heart of God and of humanity their steadfast home.

For these and many other reasons we do not regard the secession of our sisters who met last week in Cleveland as anything surprising, and certainly not as anything disastrous. They went out from us because they were no longer of us, leaving our organization more solid, effective and harmonious than it could otherwise have been. We do not regard their movement as one of strong significance, except as emphasizing the hold of the W. C. T. U. upon their thought and upon that of the public, to whom they must appeal. For after voting to call themselves the "American Women's Christian Temperance Alliance," and changing this to the "National Crusaders," they finally came back to that friendly old name, sacred and tender, the "National Woman's Christian Temperance Union," prefixing to it their uninspiring epithet, "Non-partisan." That they had any right to use our name we do not believe. Expert legal counsellors assure us that this was a violation of the statutes protecting corporations. But that it is better to suffer than to do a wrong, is our view of the question, though the National Executive Committee may deem it best to serve out an injunction, and so may the states, forbidding the use of our name; this is a question yet to be determined.

In declaring themselves "non-sectarian" it seems to us their action was hardly that taught in the "Golden Rule," for by so doing they leave the implication that the W. C. T. U. has been sectarian, than which nothing is farther from the truth, while by inserting the word "non-partisan," they imply that the great movement from which they have seceded has been partisan. If the adoption of resolutions in favor of the party that promises prohibition is a partisan action, which, in itself considered, it is, we frankly admit that for six years past it has been so. But we claim that Iowa, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and many Southern states have been palpable proofs that we do not require the pronouncing of any party shibboleth whatever, but leave all our auxiliaries free to act according to their light. In our departments of work, and all our rules and regulations, the National W. C. T. U. has always been non-partisan, but in its annual resolutions, openly partisan to the extent of a friendly declaration which this year recognized what Republicans had done in the Dakotas, and what the Prohibition party had promised to do nationally when it should come to power. We do not expect that party to achieve considerable results, except as an educator of public opinion, until, with changed name, widened outlook, and enlarged constituency, it merges into the Reform or Home Protection party of the nation's future. We are ready to accept whatever of criticism or contradiction may be involved in this attitude toward that righteousness in politics which means God's Spirit determining the ballot of the sovereign citizen, and we believe the truest hearts of the nation beat in harmony with the W. C. T. U. when we declare in the name of Christ and His gospel for no sectarianism in religion, no sectionalism in politics, no sex in citizenship, but total prohibition of the liquor traffic by state and national law.

That our seceding sisters, whether purposely or not, have organized a movement in the interest of the dominant party of the hour, and are really partisans of the most decided character, we sincerely believe from the antecedents, record and associations of their leader, from the warm welcome given them by the Republican press throughout the nation, and from the peculiarities that have characterized their movement from its beginning. To thoughtful white-ribboners in Pennsylvania there must be an unpleasant significance in the attitude of the Republican press of that state (which less than a year ago was in the throes of its constitutional amendment campaign) where they find the same papers that were the bitterest opponents of prohibition rejoicing in this "non-partisan movement" of temperance women!

The Republican press of the six states that throttled our constitutional prohibition amendments in 1889 is practically a unit against the W. C. T. U. and in favor of the faction that has seceded. This one unquestioned fact is to our minds the red light on this side track of non-partisanism, warning the Crusade engine to keep to the main line and go thundering on toward its central station, PROHIBITION. For nobody can deny that so long as saloon-keepers and saints, distillers and doctors of divinity brewers and brethren in the church, put the same ticket into the ballot-box, so long will the liquor traffic continue to hold its own, and only by a new political party that gathers good men into one fold on the great question of home's protection and liquor's outlawing, can we hope to win the day.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster: "She deserves the thanks alike of the Prohibitionists and the Republicans. Her latest movement is clearly in the interest of temperance legislation, and of the Republican party as a political organization. It was a clear case of killing two birds with one stone."

So much for a great Republican daily's view of "non-partisanship" in its true inwardness. The Pittsburg Dispatch says: "The declaration (of the new society) in favor of local option will evoke friendship in temperance circles, although the work of carrying an act for that purpose may require a rather severe stretch of the resolution to 'keep out of politics.'" Yea, verily! The warp of law is legislation, and the woof of legislation is politics. Ballots are cast for candidates, and if they were not would be blank cartridges. The National W. C. T. U. frankly accepts the situation—the non-partisans decline it, in the interest of Republicanism!

Prohibition, while a measurable success without woman's ballot to back it up, is nowhere so pronounced in its efficiency as in Kansas where women vote. Hence we are pronouncedly in favor of equal suffrage as a form of prohibition, and believe this by the Australian ballot system, is the final hope of the Republic along the line of prohibitory law and municipal redemption.

There is one fact of special significance in the Cleveland meeting—the Southern states were conspicuous by their absence—indeed, were totally unrepresented. Those women, strong and tender, to whom we have been going since 1880 with messages of sisterly goodwill, stood loyal to the leadership and spirit of the first band of Northern women they ever knew. The cry of "politics" could not daunt them. Even "women's rights" was powerless to dismay; for, as they have often said to some of us: "We tried secession once, and found it didn't work. No matter who goes out, we shall stay in." It is our deliberate judgment that Northern women in Iowa and Pennsylvania may profit by their example.

The course to be pursued by our local W. C. T. Unions is plain. Each should be at once incorporated, that no property held in its name may be alienated by seceders. Any who go out from us must do the organizing; we are organized already, and our local unions have but to remain as they are, holding to their name and status, though Republicans at the North and Democrats at the South, fearing the rise of the political prohibition movement, will do their utmost to induce our members to go out. Very few will follow this advice; of our ten thousand societies not over one hundred have gone, outside of Iowa, where there are about two hundred and fifty local unions, of which it is believed one half will remain with the National W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. has no apologies to make for its positions; they were taken with a deliberation solemn and intelligent; they are the outcome of earnest prayer to God, and we will live by them if we may, die by them if we must. Let all those like-minded with us, whose faces have the future's glow upon them, declare the fealty with which God inspires them to the whole cause of temperance as set forth in our many helpful and blessed departments; in our wide-spread literature; our plain and open declarations of purpose and intention; but in all our work let us study "the things that make for peace and the things wherewith one may edify another," "for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." We have no time to waste in harsh words of each other; THE CURSE is on our nation; countless thousands turn upon us faces full of tender expectation and sacred faith; be it ours to fritter away no force in friction, but by God's grace to turn all our forces into momentum against the only enemy we recognize, and that is the saloon itself entrenched in ignorance and appetite, in power and politics; this we will fight as we would fight a fire, with everything that can antagonize its fierce, relentless flame.

The forty women from eleven states (outside Ohio) who met at Cleveland a week ago, declared against having so many departments; very well; more than ever we hold to our "Do-everything policy." They declared against the formation of a new church; the W. C. T. U. never dreamed of such a venture as that, but stands all the more for the complete equality of man and woman within the church, the human spirit's earthly home. They decided that their leaders, forming the Executive Committee, shall not vote at their annual convention; we think this wholly original measure (and it is their only one, so far as noted,) contrary to all experience, and, in the nature of the case, absurd. The W. C. T. U. will walk by the same rule, mind the same things as of yore, and so we go on our way rejoicing, with a hand of Christian friendship stretched out to our seceding friends, and a hand of steady grasp bearing aloft the white banner of the organized Crusaders, and inscribed, "For God and Home and Native Land."

Falter who must, follow who dare, and may God defend the right.

COMFORT FROM THE ENEMY.

What will be the effect on the temperance cause of the sale of so many American breweries to the English? Good, we predict. The fact that the enormous profits of the distilleries go out of the country instead of being disbursed here, is a strong point in support of our opinion. We believe that the foreign ownership of distilleries will largely decrease their political power, and few things would bring greater gain to the temperance cause than that Divorce the breweries and distilleries from politics and send the money they make out of the country, and the wrath of the people would soon make quick work with these factories of death. The government's partnership in them, especially in the distilleries, protects them from this wrath, to a certain extent, and their financial and political power work in the same direction; destroy these, and it will remove the glamour from the eyes of enough voters to dissolve the firm of United States & Liquor Traffic.

Another reason why we rejoice over the purchase of so many breweries by the English Syndicate, is that it seems to us a sign that the brewers are foreseeing the coming storm and are running to cover. In no other way can we explain their willingness to sell what is known to be good paying property. Flouring mills and other businesses that have been purchased by the syndicates sometimes pay well and sometimes do not; but whoever heard of a brewery that did not pay good dividends? The liquor dealers' associations look out for that by their pools preventing over-production, and the like.

For several years the liquor papers have sounded premonitory warnings with which, from time to time, we have encouraged our readers. Read this utterance of the Southwest, a leading liquor organ, in the light of the extensive sale of breweries, and see if it does not have a deeper significance than when first published, July 14, 1888:

Prohibition will inevitably be the state and national issue in 1892. The following report of a Senate Committee is the keynote of the campaigns immediately succeeding the one now opened. And the plain, cold, hard indications are that prohibition will win by a large majority.

Why? Not because the principle is a correct one; not because it is right while the breweries, give direct and indirect employment to hundreds of thousands of farmers, teamsters, stock raisers, skilled and unskilled laborers; not because the people are willing to resign their personal liberty to drink the honest, healthful, strength-giving brew of the hop and barley; not because the majority of voters are bigots and cranks, but because the men who have millions invested in breweries, horses, machinery and all modern essentials to making and merchandising good beer are being outgeneraled by the Prohibitionists. The Prohibitionists have live, well edited, aggressive journals in nearly every county in the state. Their state organs in Ohio and Indiana are sending out tens of thousands of extra copies of their editions to merchants, farmers, professional men and laborers of all classes each week—all paid for by the men who back their opinions by subscribing a few dollars each to the newspaper fund. They are helping to make public sentiment. They even force brewers to help support prohibition. Instance—the enormous subscription to the Centennial Exposition in this city by the breweries and saloons, and a big slice of the fund going to the support of the church and prohibition press, and not a nickel to the only brewers' journal in the state! And the brewers tamely submitting to this injustice, and cool, taunting insolence from a churchianity run enterprise, run at their expense!

We speak what we know to be facts. Our remarks may not be palatable, but unless they are heeded and action is taken in the direction we indicate, in less than five years our big breweries will be like the distilleries now closed by the whisky pool—and no renters.

FOR RENT,

The following dispatch to The Enquirer is the crack of doom to the brewing interests, unless they heed the signs of the time, lake lessons from the enemy and join in taking united and active measures. Support of their press is the most important measure of all.

Then follows the report of the Senate Committee on the national prohibition amendment.

This editorial, in one of the most influential of the enemy's journals, shows two things: That the liquor power is badly scared, and not by non-partisan temperance, but by prohibition straight; and that it does not wish to have prohibition the state and national issue in 1892. Paul Schuster, the genial editor of the Champion, to which we are under many obligations for encouraging paragraphs, sends forth this piteous appeal:

The editor of the Champion's hair has turned gray, his head partially bald, his beard snowwhite in the last ten years, chiefly on account of his worrying himself into a constant stew over the liquor dealers' blindness to his signals of alarms and their deafness to his warning voice. And still we say unto ye: Through the press, from the rostrum, the regular vigorous campaign work and open discussion in the rural districts of the prohibition question—through these means, not alone, but chiefly, can you fight successfully for your rights and your liberties.

We cannot without tedious repetitions enter into all the details of the several scores of county conventions or ratification meetings held in nearly every state of the Union almost uninterruptedly during the last two months.

But this much is sure and certain, that it is high time that the liquor trade everywhere should take notice of this growing plague which, while it threatens the impossible destruction of their business, will nevertheless greatly embarrass and hamper them in the pursuit of their lawful avocation.

This has been the tone of the leading organs for the last two years. We cannot but believe that the condition which led to such utterances had much to do with the sale of American breweries to English syndicates.

AN ADDRESS TO THE PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

[The following Address has been sent by the General Officers of the W. C. T. U. to the Pan-American Congress.]

HEADQUARTERS WORLD'S AND NAT. W. C. T. U., CHICAGO, ILL., Jan. 22, 1890.

To the South American, Central American, and Mexican Commissioners of the Pan-American Congress:

HONORED BROTHERS:—The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union greeted your arrival in our native land with great good-will, and has watched your travels with profound interest. We were glad that the peaceful panorama of this Republic's material civilization was unrolled before you, and sorry that its higher and more enduring forces could not be equally displayed. We read with regret of the almost continuous banquetings in which intoxicating liquors held a place so prominent, for such customs are but a relic of European, and not an indigenous feature of our Western civilization.

A distinguished Englishman returning to his country after a careful study of our own, on being asked what he had seen that was most unlike England, answered, "The wineless dinner tables of the great middle class." We are glad that in the home of that typical citizen of the United States, Clement Studebaker, of Indiana, you saw this most hopeful of our national sights.

Life insurance statistics show that the average longevity of the moderate drinker is thirty-five years and a half, while that of the total abstainer from intoxicating liquors is sixty-four years.

A nation that has made the sale of alcoholics a crime against constitutional or statutory law in seven of its forty-two states, and by local enactments over nearly one-half of its populated area, fails to illustrate its distinctive national features when it places intoxicating liquors before its guests.

As patriots, proud of our country and devoted to its development, we desire to bring to your attention the foregoing facts for the sake of those beautiful countries south of us, the interests of which are equally sacred in your sight.

Hon. James G. Blaine, our honored Secretary of State, who presides over your deliberations and who has so long been a citizen of Maine, the pioneer prohibition state of this Republic, has declared that the outlawing of the liquor traffic in that commonwealth, more than a generation since, was a great blessing to the people. The following are also his words:

"It can be said with truth that there is no equal number of people in the Anglo-Saxon world among whom so small an amount of intoxicating liquor is consumed as among the inhabitants of Maine."

It is the testimony of the governors of states in which the sale of intoxicants has been prohibited, that the jails and poorhouses are well-nigh empty, and the moral and financial interests of the people immeasurably increased.

Will you permit us respectfully to urge upon your attention the study of our prohibitory as compared with our non-prohibitory states, for we believe that no other line of investigation open to you in the great Republic promises so much of blessing to your own respective countries.

And because the chief corner stone of the state is the hearth-stone, we also urge you to visit our colleges for women, and we rejoice that you saw at Ann Arbor, Mich., the chief of our co-educational universities where women are trained for professional life as well as drilled to habits of scholarship, for it is, as you know, the United States idea that home can only come to its true dignity and power when the wife and mother is an equal partner in all that appertains to the sacred interests of the larger home of society and government. The mothers and daughters of the Republic, confederated by means of our societies in ten thousand towns and villages, send you their greeting. Within a year your countries will all be traversed by Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, our "round-the-world missionary," who has already invested seven years in temperance work in Australia, Asia, Africa and Europe. She will tell your people of our total abstinence pledge, of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, work for prohibition—state and national, and of our Woman's Publishing House in Chicago, that circulated 130,000,000 pages in 1889. We bespeak for Mrs Leavitt the welcome that her mission of good-will to your homes will render certain if it is only understood, and we pray that God may crown with success the three great movements of our time which are fast passing out of the hands of philanthropists and into those of statesmen, viz.: The temperance, the woman and the labor questions, all of which are equal fractions of that one mighty whole—the human question.

Yours in the fight for a clear brain, and praying for the triumph of universal brotherhood.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
Pres. World's and Nat. W. C. T. U.
MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,
Sec. World's W. C. T. U.
CAROLINE B. BUELL,
Cor. Sec. Nat. W. C. T. U.

MRS. JUDGE BAXTER, president of the W. C. T. U. of Nashville, is at the head of a ladies' committee to buy the Hermitage, General Andrew Jackson's famous home, twelve miles from Nashville, Tenn. This includes the house and the tomb of the general and his wife, with twenty-five acres surrounding it. Extreme dilapidation now prevails at this world-famed spot, forty-four years having left its imprint on the place. It is a noble purpose that animates these women patriots. As has been truly said, "No man in private life so possessed the hearts of all around him; no public man of this country ever returned to private life with such a mastery over the affections of the people. He united physical courage and moral courage beyond almost any man of whom history keeps the record." His fame is the heritage of no party, but of the entire nation. Old Hickory is a universal character. There is something pathetic in the inscription placed by General Jackson on the tomb of his wife, especially the following sentence: "Her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her Creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death when he bore her from the arms of her husband, did but transport her to the arms of her God." Whatever increases the ties that bind the North and the South, is good. Whatever tends to build up national patriotism is beneficent. Great characters incarnate great ideas, and only by their study do the young and ardent spirits of the on-coming generation become polarized toward their country, humanity, and the great issues of which they are to form a part. We are glad that Mrs. Baxter and her coadjutors have set about this needed enterprise, and we wish it all success.

A GREAT metropolitan daily in a leading editorial declares whisky to be the chief cause of poverty. With characteristic consistency the same paper advocates a scheme by which the government not only grants a permit to the business of pauper-making, but shares in the questionable profits.

The Watch-Tower.

Miss Helen L. Hood and Mrs. Millie Andrews Bell were among the interested visitors at the Cleveland convention.

***

A teacher received after an interval of thirty years from a beloved pupil a letter with the following sentence which has matter of reflection for us all: " 'Have I been good to-day?' is a question you taught me to ask myself every night; 'Have I been nice to somebody to-day?' "

***

The other day I saw on the title page of the Bible of a dear friend this sentence: "My newspaper, fresh every morning from the press of God." It occurred to me, why could we not have a Bible reading on "God's Newspaper"? It is there whether we have found it or not, with its correspondence, its editorials, its advertisements, personals, etc. Who will furnish us a Bible reading on this live theme?

***

The Archæological Institute that has taken in hand to explore and excavate the site of ancient Delphi, has associated with the names of most distinguished men, historians and scholars, that of Elizabeth C. Agassiz, Julia Ward Howe, and Alice Freeman Palmer. The latter name is especially endeared to all white-ribbon women. It marks the new and on-coming age that in an enterprise of this character women should be so prominently associated with leading men, to the level of which it would have been thought twenty-five years ago it was impossible for them to rise.

***

Does Mt. Blanc make the Grundenwald jealous? Surely not; one is the unapproached mountain of Europe, the other is the high and beautiful Alp, but it doubtless looks over with joy at the majestic whiteness of its towering neighbor. Does the Vernal Fall look with disdain upon El Capitan? By no means; their spheres are different. Each is beautiful in its season, and in its place. The lily would not waste its time or sweetness envying the rose. The horse and deer have no feud whatever. Nature is without jealousy. Only man descends to a passion so base, so senseless, because he can get nothing out of it. Its breath is always a blight, and upon none more than upon him who breathes it.

***

All the delegates to the National Convention will remember little Blatchford Kavanaugh, the boy soprano of Grace Episcopal choir, who charmed them with his sweet song, "In Verdure Clad." A few evenings ago he sang for Madame Patti, who expressed her delight in superlative terms. "Marvelous! simply marvelous!" exclaimed the great singer, "I never heard such a voice from a boy!" She predicts a great future for the young artist.

***

Mrs. M. L. Wells, one of the seven National organizers, has been six weeks in Texas reorganizing, strengthening, and extending the W. C. T. U. It is a difficult field, but Mrs. Wells is an able speaker and a plucky woman, therefore just the one to undertake this work. She goes on from Texas via San Antonio to California, and unions in that region should be on the lookout for one of the most helpful coadjutors who has ever lifted upon them the light of her countenance.

***

The press is making all it can of the fact that some parties, irresponsible and unknown, hissed in the great tabernacle where thousands were gathered, when Mrs. Foster spoke. The lady herself said, "That was a partisan hiss,"—agreed; but neither she nor any one else has a particle of proof that it was a white-ribboner's hiss, and yet this is the impression universally given. I notice that while the hiss is industriously talked and written about, the gracious words spoken by our president and others concerning the seceders are nowhere reproduced. Among them are the following from Miss Willard's closing prayer, reported by the stenographers in THE DAILY UNION SIGNAL: "May we think with kindness and good-will of those who have gone out from us, and may we all see how little all these things really are, and that the truly great things are of God's Spirit alone, that these reach to that which is within the veil; and may the peace of God dwell in our hearts, that we may grow less worldly all the time and constantly more other-worldly."

***

Miss Emma M. Taylor, of Woburn, Mass., who is a staunch white-ribboner, and whose communion wine is being appreciated by pastors of churches who feel the need of a pure, unfermented wine, writes: "Through Miss Willard's influence, Miss Bessie Gordon has secured me an order for two dozen bottles for an East Boston Church, whose deacon wrote after using it: 'We found your wine superior to any we have used for years, and we will not forget to speak of it to neighboring churches.' "

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

HOW SHALL WE SPEND THE WINTER?

BY BELLE M. BRAIN.

In one of his novels, Charles Reade tells of a large sundial, perhaps the noblest and grandest in all England, that two hundred years ago was placed on the face of the Quad at All Souls' College, Oxford. Over the long pointers, in large letters of gold, were written these words: Pereunt et imputantur, which refer to the house below, and literally mean, "They perish, and go down to our account." They are true words, and have been placed here as a warning to the students not to waste the seed-time of their youth, which can never come twice to any one.

The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and the winter lies stretched out before us. What shall its record be? Our clocks seem to cry aloud, and say of the hours whose passing they record, Pere-unt-et-impu-tantur! Pere-unt-et-impu-tantur! "They perish, and go down to our account." How shall the account read? The hours will perish, but in us lies the power to decide what their account shall be. It is ours to make the choice whether they shall be wasted or filled with worthy deeds. This coming winter will bring a perfect whirl of gayety. Theatres will offer their attractions, dancing and card parties and other social engagements will demand an unlimited amount of both time and money—temptations of all kinds will be on every hand. Saloons and billiard parlors, with their gambling tables, will offer bright, warm rooms, just as attractive as possible, where it will seem so pleasant to spend a social evening with jolly companions.

Who can tell how many young lives will be wrecked this very winter?

On the other hand, the Sabbath-schools and all the various young people's societies will endeavor to push on with new zeal, and will need our help. The Young Men's Christian Associations will open their doors to every young man, and ask his assistance in all of its many branches.

Temperance workers will push forward in their crusade against intemperance, and in their steady aim for social purity, and will call loudly for us to join in their noble work.

Among the poor and needy, redoubled effort must be put forth during the winter months in order to relieve suffering. Here, too, our help will be sadly needed.

Thus we see two distinct lines, two distinct ways in which we may spend our time—either for Christ or self. Each one of us must make the choice, and in deciding, it will be well for us to weigh results. Suppose we choose to spend the winter for ourselves, with the one aim of having a royal good time, no matter at what cost. When it is over, what have we to show for it? Nothing, absolutely nothing, save perhaps a weary body, and a few memories not always pleasant. How sadly will our clocks ring out the hours whose waste they record—"Pere-unt-et-impu-tantur! Pere-unt-et-impu-tantur!"

But on the other hand, suppose we choose Christ, and spend the coming season in loving service for Him. We will not find it sad, gloomy work, but we will find in it pleasure so keen and pure that we will feel that we have never tasted pleasure before. There is no joy like that which a life of service to Christ brings. And at the close how much is left to us! Not only the pleasant memories, but a great and lasting treasure laid up where it will be safe, and for which some day we shall receive our reward. We will find it very true that "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for Christ's sake shall find it."

Ah, if we did but realize the power that in us lies! Did we but realize the souls we might be the means of saving, and the influences we might set in motion; did we but realize the great things God could do with us if we would only put ourselves into His hands, to be used as He directs, yea, though we be but the very least of His children, surely we would consecrate ourselves and all that we have to Him, and choose to fill the coming months full to overflowing with loving service for Him who gave His life for us.

Shall we not earnestly and prayerfully ask Paul's question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and then, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it."

Springfield, O.

SELF-DECEPTION.—You picture to yourself the beauty of bravery and steadfastness. You let your imagination wander in delight over the memory of martyrs who have died for Truth. And, then, some little, wretched, disagreeable duty comes, which is your martyrdom, the lamp for your oil; and if you will not do it, how your oil is spilt! How flat and thin and unilluminated your sentiment about the martyrs runs out over your self-indulgent life!—Phillips Brooks.

News from the Field.

CALIFORNIA.

WHITE-RIBBONERS MARCHING ON.

The California W. C. T. U. is wide awake, and pushing the work admirably. Mrs. R. R. Johnston, the able general, is marshaling her forces in solid phalanx against the saloon, and no general ever had more willing and loving lieutenants to aid him than has she.

Crusade camp-fires were lighted all over the state, and an increased temperance zeal is the noteworthy result. The Oakland camp-fire, presided over by the state president, was especially good, and addresses from prominent ministers of all denominations were fairly bristling with demands for national prohibition. Dr. E. S. Chapman, himself one of the Ohio Crusaders, vividly described these memorable days, and heartily wished for a second such Pentecostal season. He put the solution of the problem in a nutshell, by saying, "Arouse the church to united action, and the liquor traffic will be voted out in one election."

The San Jose watch-fire, presided over by our former state president, Mrs. S. J. Churchill, and the San Francisco meeting with state corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. J. Spencer, leading, were most interesting.

Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, as state lecturer, did splendid service on a six weeks' tour in Fresno and Tulare counties, where she organized five new unions, added many members to organized societies, and raised over one thousand dollars for pushing the work, notably $800 for a reading room at Fresno. Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," and such is the fruit from the consecrated service of Mrs. Stevens.

Mrs. Henrietta Skelton did grand service last year in California, and has just reported unions organized in Sonoma county. Temperance has no more devoted apostle than Mrs. Skelton, "our Bismarck." Emma Pow Smith is also working nobly. Rev. Drs. M. C. Briggs, A. Calhoun, and N. R. Johnston will prosecute Sabbath observance work, and are organizing unions auxiliary to the American Sabbath Union.

Major Hilton has done excellent service in gospel temperance work through the state, especially good reports coming from Mrs. F. A. Armstrong, of Woodland, the associate lecturer in the department of health and heredity. Stanislaus, Contra Costa, and Fresno counties have all held encouraging annual conventions. Mrs. Johnston seems to be almost omnipresent, for she seems to attend them all without regard to conflicting dates.

Dr. R. H. McDonald, the well-known temperance philanthropist, has again aided the cause by offering through the Voice $250 for prize essays in regard to temperance reform as affecting the labor question. If this prize money brings influence to bear upon the thoughtful, as the $1,500 he offered to the public-school children for essays on liquor and tobacco, it will, indeed, be a splendid investment. The Christmas times at the doctor's free kindergartens, superintended by his energetic son R. H. McDonald, Jr., gladdened hundreds of little hearts. Mrs. McDonald Spencer, his only daughter, consecrates her fine voice and musical education to the temperance cause.

Mrs. Nellie Eyster, superintendent of juvenile work, has issued a charming new book, "The Colonial Boy," which will be especially interesting to white-ribboners for its able solution of the Indian problem, namely, Christian education.

Rev. C. W. Wendte spoke recently in praise of woman in the ministry, especially eulogizing Miss Willard and the influence of the W. C. T. U. in developing womanhood. M. G. C. Edholm spoke of the admirable Bible study under Dean Alfred Wright, of Boston, and the great influence which the W. C. T. U. evangelists who graduate therefrom will exert.

The Prohibitionists are wheeling into line, ready for the "spring temperance work," which by and by will be, indeed, the "spring house-cleaning," and will nominate a full state ticket.

At the quarterly executive meeting of the California W. C. T. U., held January 7, the following goodly amount of business was dispatched:

Mrs. R. R. Johnston led earnest devotions. Mrs. Carver, county president of San Francisco, gave a glowing account of the New Year reception to sailors, many of the tars taking the pledge.

Mrs. Gove, of Oakland, state superintendent of prison work, reported excellent service by mother-hearted women in visiting the various prisons in the state.

Mrs. M. C. Hart, of San Jose, gave treasurer's report and the following life memberships representing each $25: Miss Ella Knowland and J. R. Knowland, of Alameda, by Mrs. Knowland, state auditor; Mrs. Martha Buck and Mrs. Viola R. Tay, by the Napa union, and Mrs. L. M. Moody, by the Santa Rosa union. Mrs. Eyster reported a generous donation from Dr. R. H. McDonald for the juvenile work, of which she is superintendent. A vote of thanks was tendered all these donors.

Mrs. Weed, of Berkeley, told of the work done there for the enforcement of the law, forbidding the sale of liquor near the university, and wished the aid and influence of the state union. This was readily granted and the new department created, and Mrs. Weed was appointed superintendent. Active measures for the entire suppression of saloons within the two-mile limit will be taken at once.

Mrs. Eden, superintendent of work among the seamen, told of the cruelties practiced by drunken officers on seamen, and asked that the California Woman's Christian Temperance Union should memorialize Secretary Windom asking that habitual intoxication make an officer ineligible as commander of national vessels. Such a motion was carried.

The report that a mail carrier had burned a package of letters in a saloon to lighten his load, was discussed, and a similar memorial for sober letter carriers will be sent to Post-master General Wanamaker.

Obscene pictures were heartily denounced by the ladies, and steps for their suppression will be taken.

Mrs. Johnston said she had been invited by Captain Cotton and Major Robinson to address temperance meetings among the soldiers.

Mrs. L. P. Williams, of San Francisco, was made superintendent of Indian affairs. Mrs. McCullen, of Fort Bragg, of work among the lumbermen, and Mrs. Emma Pow Smith of the department in aid of working girls.

Mrs. Nellie B. Eyster told of the work in this department being done by the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union, and urged the coöperation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Brownelle, superintendent of the young women's work, gave a flattering report of the good results accomplished by Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, state lecturer, in her recent tour through Fresno and Tulare counties.

It was decided to send $25 to the Dakota amendment campaign for prohibition.

Mrs. Johnston spoke of the outlook for temperance, encouraging all to earnest work, and the meeting adjourned until the first Tuesday in April.

M. G. C. EDHOLM.

WISCONSIN.

STATE MOTTO: WHAT OUGHT TO BE DONE, CAN BE DONE.

Although you have not heard from me for more than two months, I assure you that we in Wisconsin are at work. Since I last wrote, the interest in the Demorest Medal contests has been growing. Several unions have reported very successful contests, and among the number is the Wide-Awake society at Baraboo. Their third contest has been reported, and they were then planning a fourth. At the third one, held in November, which was in every way a very successful entertainment, a pleasant feature was thus reported:

"As each contestant withdrew from the platform, he or she was presented with a large bouquet of vari-colored chrysanthemums, tied with white ribbons, and bearing a card upon which was written the name, 'With the compliments of the Baraboo W. C. T. U.' "

The Milwaukee union have begun a good work at the National Soldiers' Home. The following brief account of their first visit will, I believe, be of interest to all:

"A committee, waiting upon the commandant of that institution, received a courteous reception, and cordial invitation to hold a meeting with the veterans.

"This opening seems one of great promise, and it was with no little hope as well as solicitude, that a delegation from our society met the comfortable omnibus from the 'Home,' which was to convey us thither. Our driver was a pleasant-faced, gentlemanly old soldier, who seemed glad to be our escort. The day was perfect, the ride delightful, and the beautiful grounds at the institution, ablaze everywhere with floral designs of military significance, arranged to do honor to the G. A. R., whose reunion in our city was just past. Upon entering the chapel in the main building we found our audience of three hundred 'vets' in blue, awaiting us. Our president, Mrs. Herr, conducted the service, which consisted of Scripture reading and comment, prayer, the singing of familiar hymns, and addresses from several of the ladies.

"I will not trespass upon your space by an extended report of the drift of this meeting, except to say that the addresses were calculated to touch the men at many points, as the spiritual and physiological bearings of the temperance question were considered. A tender plea was made in behalf of the mothers, wives and sisters of these heroic men into whose faces we were looking—a plea in memory of childhood homes, and the prayers that had hallowed them through those bloody years of war—a plea in view of the great reunion just passed, and the mighty debt the nation owes the thinning ranks of brave hearts that stood between us and the bayonets and bullets of our misguided brethren of the South—a plea in view of the enfeebled wills and wrecked bodies which alcohol must always leave behind it!

"Such an attentive audience one does not often face. One old soldier responded, expressing his thankfulness that we had come on such an errand, and bewailed the awful captivity in which he and so many of his comrades were held. All over the chapel voices were heard, inviting us to come again. 'Wish you would come just as often as you can!' 'Come every week!' One refined, pleasant-faced man remarked to me, as we came out: 'I'm glad you ladies have come out. We're a benighted set here!' "

We have recently taken up as a state, the department of work among soldiers and sailors.

The third district held its convention as planned, and a successful meeting it proved. Mrs. M. A. B. Smith, of Madison, the new district president, is very bright and efficient, and we expect that soon her district will be as thoroughly organized as any in the state.

The eighth district convention held at New Richmond was altogether enjoyable and helpful. This was the seventh annual meeting of that district. The work is well planned, and a district organizer, Miss Lois Russell, is paid a salary to give her time to the work. The W. C. T. U. State Work was made the district organ, delegates pledged themselves to secure subscribers for it, and the district is to coöperate with other districts in every plan to make the paper a success.

The ninth district convention, held late in the summer, but reported too late for my last letter, was an enthusiastic one. The plans of work adopted for the coming year were wise and practical.

From the sixth district, the president, Mrs. S. A. Rounds, writes thus hopefully:

"Our union in Eureka has more than doubled its membership since the state convention. We are not sure but in our aspirations we shall be grasping after that prize banner! One very important factor in our great uplift and renewed life, is the work of Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, of Iowa, National evangelist. She gave to this sixth district three weeks of earnest, efficient labor in September. She remained in Eureka one week, holding two meetings each day with ever increasing audiences and interest. People not usually interested in temperance, came miles to listen to her Christian words of wisdom. In Berlin, where she remained a week, she did a grand work, and also in Appleton and Neenah. Then her appointments called her to Texas."

Another helpful and encouraging phase of our work is the growing interest in the unions in mothers' meetings. The union at Eureka just mentioned, holds a mothers' meeting once a month, and many outside the membership attend and are deeply interested.

The fifth district, although the smallest in the state as to number of unions and of members, is doing a brave work. The "W. C. T. U. Home for Women" at Eau Claire is supported by contributions of money and supplies, each of our nine districts paying $100 per year, the city of Eau Claire making up the balance needed. Mrs. Shepard, president of the district, writes that the fifth district has made up its $100.

Among the counties, good conventions have been reported, since my last, in Stark, Columbia, Dunn, Jackson, St. Croix, Walworth, and Waushara, besides Rock, which has not been reported.

Losses by death have been sustained by some of our unions. Racine has lost a valued member in the death of Mrs. M. L. Dean, who was for two years their faithful and efficient president. Mrs. Dean was also for several years state superintendent of the evangelistic department. One of the Racine members writes: "To the W. C. T. U. she was entirely devoted, and in its service was unwearied. After weeks of great suffering she fell asleep, and upon her breast as she lay in the casket was seen the white ribbon, which in life she loved to wear. The Racine union feel their loss to be irreparable. We can only pray that the Lord of the harvest will call other laborers into the vineyard to fill the places of those whom continually we miss from our side."

Many of our unions celebrated the Crusade anniversary, and it proved a "means of grace" to every loyal member. Very interesting services were held by the Madison W. C. T. U. This union has of late been making an earnest, but as yet unsuccessful, effort to secure the Sunday closing of the city's saloons.

Not long since, the Menomonee union held a "Mother Goose" entertainment which was a success financially, and in every way. The union at Tomahawk hopes to carry off the prize banner at our next state convention. In seven months its per cent of gain in membership is eighty.

Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, our state president, has visited many of the unions since the National Convention, and has given a new inspiration to the members, and a fresh impulse to the work wherever she has been.

The lumbermen's department affords a great home and foreign missionary field to our white-ribboners, and good, practical work is being done. At latest report, over fifty unions had taken two camps each, to supply with good literature during the winter. To every large camp, two unions have promised their watch-care. The woodsmen's missionary, employed by the W. C. T. U., aided by contributions from others, so that they can pay him a salary, does excellent work, and gospel temperance will exercise its saving power in our northern woods. More camps will be reached this winter than ever before. This is a work that appeals to every Christian man and woman.

Yes, the members of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. are in earnest. In spite of "hard times" and the consequent depressing influences, they work "right on." Surely they shall have their reward.

EMMA J. CURTIS,
Union Signal Reporter.

HAWAII.

W. C. T. U. ANNIVERSARY AT HONOLULU.

The public annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. which was held in the Y. M. C. A. hall in November, was a most enjoyable occasion. The platform was tastefully decorated with beautiful flowers, potted ferns and palms, and an audience of about one hundred and fifty thoroughly enjoyed the well prepared reports, and the able address from the president, Mrs. J. M. Whitney.

The meeting was opened with Scripture reading by the Rev. H. H. Gowen, president of the Blue Ribbon League, accompanied with most appropriate lessons drawn from the selection, which was the narrative of the afflicted mother who came to Jesus in behalf of her daughter grievously vexed with a devil, who was at first apparently repulsed by the Lord, but finally rewarded with the welcome words: "O woman, great is thy faith," etc. The earnest prayer that followed will be remembered as an inspiration by all the workers in this cause through the year.

The report of the recording secretary, Mrs. Jay Greene, opened with a very strong plea (in view of the small now we were able to make of aggressive work the past year) for more effort to secure legislative aid in temperance. She then gave a review of the various lines of work done by committees during the year, expressing the feeling that "our work can never be called a dead letter so long as we support such a worker among the Hawaiians as Miss Mary E. Green."

The treasurer, Mrs. L. B. Coan, presented her statements of the funds of the year, showing that the society had met all its liabilities, and in addition raised a special contribution towards the expenses of Miss Ackerman, the delegate worker of the World's W. C. T. U., who was here in February on her way to Australia, besides leaving a small surplus in the treasury.

Miss Green's report followed, introduced by some easy, off-hand remarks in her usual lively, undaunted manner, showing that she certainly can never show "the white feather" to King Alcohol. Her report which will be printed in full later, gave items from all her lines of work and many societies around the other islands.

The president's address was one of much information, giving a clear account of the temperance situation in the United States, with a résumé of the efforts made during the last year to secure prohibition. Although the temperance campaign has not been very successful, having sustained some heavy defeats, she argued that it was no cause for discouragement, proving from history that defeats were oftentimes precursors of victory, showing that the tremendous massing of efforts on the side of the liquor interest and their jubilation over present victories, shows their recognition of the power that is arraigned against them. Her eloquent appeal to fresh and determined war against this foe of the home was truly inspiring, and the address elicited long applause.

The exercises were varied with choice music, both vocal and instrumental, and closed with singing one verse of "God be with you till we meet again." After this a short social gathering followed, with the serving of hot coffee and cake in much good fellowship.

WHITE-RIBBONER.

MICHIGAN.

CRUSADE CAMP-FIRE.

This year January came to us with outdoor daisies and pansies in full bloom; indoors—"la grippe."

But not all our workers are laid aside. Our indefatigable president was just home for the holidays, and then off for eastern engagements, the papers being, if critical at all, most kindly so of the brave words of one who needs must stand for us in the forefront of battle.

Our corresponding secretary, though as far off as Washington, keeps us all in constant remembrance. Our organizers, Mrs. Moots and Miss Newcomb have been through most of the districts organizing and reorganizing. Miss Newcomb's dress reform lectures are so well received than one invariably calls for another.

Crusade day was observed in nearly every union of the state. The very fine program arranged for us in THE UNION SIGNAL made this a very easy thing to do. In Flint we had a union meeting gotten up by the North Side union. To four of the original crusaders was sent a tastefully prepared invitation to be present, and tell the story of the Flint Crusade; those who came were presented with a bunch of holly, tied with white ribbon. Their story was very interesting, especially of the buying out of a saloon by Mrs. Morrison and the thanksgiving day as the women with willing hands broke the bottles and let the vile poison flow into the Main street gutter. One thing was noticeable in the telling of each story, they all bore testimony to the respectful treatment received in all their crusading.

Following these experiences was read, "The Leader's Story," and then eight or nine appropriate selections were read, varied by music, after which we adjourned to tea. We were favored in having with us Rev. H. S. White, pastor of the Garland Street Church, where the meeting was held. The repast was abundant, but the best thing was the "intellectual salad bowl, filled with slips of green tissue paper enclosing a sentiment; there were fifty of these, prepared by different ones, as they were opened and read, in turn, by those participating. The greatest number of sentiments chosen were found to be from the pen of Mary Allen West, the next in number from Esther Pugh.

After tea we gathered again in the church parlors, and Mrs. Livermore's article on the Crusade was read by the state recording secretary.

So anew reconsecrated, we gird ourselves for the battle for God and home and native land, and step firmly out into the unseen year.

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
Union Signal Reporter.

INDIANA.

NEWS AND NOTES.

We had many visitors at the National Convention, several hundred, not only from the towns lying nearest Chicago, but remote portions of the state—north, east, south and west, not merely the white-ribboners expected to be there, but those not identified with the organization—men and women, young and old. It was very gratifying, indeed to see young men there, wholly absorbed in the work of convention, return to their homes brave defenders and ardent admirers of the white-ribbon cause; ready to repudiate with scorn and contempt the unjust and most untrue criticisms of a partisan press "on the recent W. C. T. U. convention in Chicago."

The prevailing sentiment over the state is that we are ready to go to work. The indications are that we shall make a strong and a long pull all together for "God and Home and Native Land" in 1890.

As far as we can learn, the old Crusade fires were lighted and many new ones by the eleventh hour workers. The bystanders could bear witness that these women had built on the Solid Rock, and the word of His power was the voice they obeyed. Song and prayer and exhortation gave evidence of a clear vision as to the commission received on that Crusade morning when they knelt in saloons, praying God to remove, and not to regulate them. In His name they will work and pray to remove them until the glad day comes, in the face of the edict sent out by the Indianapolis Journal November 8, to the voters of the party it represents to the effect that they must "stop fooling with prohibition, and as a finality settle down to high license and local option, because the saloon can be regulated, but can not be prohibited."

Unless some unforeseen current turns the tide, Indiana will double her W. C. T. U. organization this year, and more than double her prohibition vote. The Demorest medal work is growing in volume and favor constantly, and effort will be made to introduce it into every county of the state, and as additional stimulus, second and third premiums will be given in the large gold contests by the local managers.

The most conservative of our temperance reformers and agitators were moved to call a convention to meet in our capital city for the purpose of finding the best methods to secure prohibition. It is true, this convention came and went, and no added light was given to the advance guard, still as a good result it may quicken the pace of those in the rear which will make for harmony among the defenders of the home against the saloon.

MARY E. BALCH, Union Signal Reporter.

CUTTINGS.

LUCY H. WASHINGTON.

Hannah Whitall Smith said once upon a time in convention that every W. C. T. U. woman should have a place somewhere, all her own, where she could do her writing and keep her papers, where no meddlers were ever to be allowed. Just such a place has come to me, down the chimney or through the key-hole, or from somewhere, in the shape of a charming writing-desk in antique oak, having all sorts of convenient niches, tills and drawers. Dining or sitting-room table, sewing-machine leaf, window-sill, lap, or a purloined corner of my husband's study table, have served thus far. Now, I have a place; and am fully prepared "neither to borrow nor lend." A cutting shall go early from this valued desk.

Reminiscences of the Crusade have called to mind and led me to put upon record in connection with the review, a note concerning the work in Jacksonville, Ill. Perhaps in no place in the state was Crusade work more earnestly prosecuted than in this educational center. An all-day prayer-meeting was followed by a daily meeting which filled the churches where held. We did not expect to go to the saloons, but asked God to lead us, and He led us there. Day after day, for weeks, with some of the most faithful hearts I have ever known, I joined in saloon, prison and house visitation. A general revival attended, or grew out of the work. It changed the current of many lives. Returning from the Crusade to the present, allow me to report work as local president of Port Jervis. A town of twelve thousand in population, a "railroad town," nestled amid the mountains where three states meet, it has seventy saloons, but never until recently a W. C. T. U. While in Washington, I was made president of the new union when I had not even "been approached" or "placed myself in the hands of my friends." I am serving for a time, trusting there may be a change in administration soon. Several lines of department work are taken up, and a space in local papers secured. A missionary from the Sandwich Islands, visiting friends here, upon invitation addressed us, who gave a most interesting account of the work of our round-the-world missionaries, Mrs. Leavitt and Miss Ackerman.

Said our corresponding secretary (who subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL), "Had I known or thought about the daily convention reports, I would have subscribed for fifty sets for distribution in homes in Port Jervis." Let delegates take note and take lists to National Convention next time. Convention Sunday I spent in Aurora, Ill., and addressed a large congregation there. The following Sabbath I addressed the State Industrial School, at Rochester, comprising seven hundred, introduced by my son, who is the superintendent. An engagement of ten days was recently filled in Sullivan county, in which ten addresses were given, six women's meetings held, four schools visited and a Loyal Temperance Legion organized.

NEW YORK.

NIAGARA COUNTY CONVENTION.

The last convention of the W. C. T. U. was held at Orangeport. Two unions, Gasport and Orangeport, united in entertaining this convention, and right royally they did it. All the officers and many of the superintendents of departments were present, beside many delegates and visitors.

A new feature was introduced in this meeting, and was generally helpful. This was a "spice box" in charge of our first vice-president, Mrs. Ruth Frost. It consisted of three-minute speeches from different ones, every one being expected to respond as her name was called. No preparation had been made for this, and as a natural consequence many bright thoughts and "spicy" sayings were brought out. A paper was read by Mrs. Crozier, of Pekin, which was an earnest appeal to all Christian temperance workers to continue in the good work. Words of welcome were spoken by Mrs. Pease, president of Orangeport, and Mrs. Kayner, president of Gasport. Mrs. Myers, of Pendleton, made the response in behalf of the county. Mrs. E. G. Dietrick gave a most interesting account of Cattaraugus county convention, which she attended as a fraternal delegate, bringing to us the best thoughts and plans of work discussed at the convention. A paper on "Dress Reform" was read by the corresponding secretary, and was well received. The address of the evening was given by Mrs. L. P. Davies, president of Livingston county, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Abbie E. Hufstader. Mrs. Davies gave us a most excellent address, which received the best attention of the large audience.

On the morning of the second day the subject of narcotics was presented by the county superintendent, Mrs. L. S. Freeman, and arrangements made for a series of twenty lectures to be given throughout the county, by our state superintendent, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock. The morning and afternoon were well filled with very interesting matter concerning our present and future work. Mrs. L. J. Gross, of Somerset, gave us a most admirable report of the state convention recently held at Auburn.

Invitations for the next convention were received, and it was decided to accept the first one, which was at Ransomville, the dates for holding the convention to be February 27 and 28. After a hearty vote of thanks to our entertainers, the convention adjourned, feeling that God's blessing had rested upon us during the two days spent in doing His work.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM, Cor. Sec.

WORK AT LOCKPORT.

Lockport City union gave an entertainment in November, known as the "Deestrick Skule," and cleared $76. As one way to help on the cause, we decided to use some of our money in subscribing for THE UNION SIGNAL for one year for every minister in the city who did not already take the paper. The secretary also wrote a letter to each one, asking his acceptance of the gift, and that it should be carefully read. In addition to this, our union has bought fifty copies of the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL for gratuitious distribution. So we try to educate.

In one of your issues mention was made of suffering in South Dakota. One of our ladies, Mrs. Colt, wrote for particulars to Governor Mellette, and on receiving his reply telling us where to send, we dispatched this week two barrels of clothing of excellent quality, on which we pay the freight. We also unite with other temperance societies in maintaining a gospel temperance meeting every Sunday afternoon. In 1889, fifty-six copies of THE UNION SIGNAL were taken by our members and their friends. Please regard us as thoroughly alive to the work.

EMMA G. DIETRICK, Sec.

DELAWARE COUNTY CONVENTION.

A semi-annual convention was held at Masonville the 15th and 16th of October. The first evening, the Loyal Temperance Legion and the Band of Hope gave us a very pleasant entertainment. Mrs. Riddell, superintendent of juvenile work, was there with object lessons, and introduced some interesting and edifying experiments.

Mrs. Frances V. Douglas was with us the second afternoon and evening. In the afternoon she spoke to us on "Methods of Work." Her address in the evening was spoken of very highly by the large audience with which the Presbyterian church was packed.

The reports of the superintendents of departments were full and very interesting.

The ladies of Masonville entertained the convention grandly, the meals being served in the spacious dining-room of the Baptist church. The committee on resolutions presented an excellent paper which gave no uncertain sound on questions pertaining to woman's franchise. It was promptly and unanimously adopted.

MRS. S. E. SCUDDER, Rec. Sec.

MICHIGAN.

CIRCULAR LETTER.

To the White Ribbon Women of Michigan:

As I read the report of our National superintendent of work among foreigners, I am moved to exhort you to more effort in the distribution of foreign literature. While Michigan may not have her share of the five million of foreigners in this country, nearly every union can do something for this department.

Mrs. Grubb has seventeen different tracts in German, same in Holland, twenty in Scandinavian, besides a proportionate number in Bohemian, Welsh, French, Italian, Finnish, Spanish, Chinese and Portuguese; eighty-six different leaflets in all, and they contain every phase of the temperance work, which sell at $1.15 for 1,000 pages. We ought also to cultivate the children of the foreigner, giving them English as well as foreign literature.

And now that Michigan is foremost in holding medal contests, invite the children of foreigners to take part; this will bring out the parents, and help to make temperance sentiment among them.

I would especially urge every temperance woman who has any one in her employ that can read German, to subscribe for the Deutsch-Amerikaner, as I know by experience that fifty cents can be invested in no better way than to help in this missionary branch of our work. We are told that we must Americanize these people or they will foreignize our land and country.

Literature may be ordered from the following persons: National superintendent, Mrs. S. F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kas.; Secretary, Miss S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kas.; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton, Ill.; Scandinavian, Mrs. R. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Holland, Mrs. M. S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Polish, Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, N. M.; Chinese, Mrs. M. S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, California.

In sending for literature, send to Mrs. Grubb for German, Welsh, Italian, French, Bohemian, Portuguese, Finnish and Scandinavian. To Mrs. Ostergren for Scandinavian also, and to the other superintendents for those in their departments; $1.15 per 1,000 pages, postpaid. Please send the money when ordering, as it makes double work collecting so many small sums. When the tracts are sent by express, paid by the receiver, the tracts are $1 per 1,000 pages, if a variety is ordered.

ANNIS M. HOOD,
State Supt. Literature.

OREGON.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY.

As we had two W. C. T. U. secretaries on the ro.. im on the occasion of the Crusade anniversary held in Portland, we had expected ere this to see some report of the same. It may seem a little late, but we do not like to feel that the occasion has gone altogether unnoticed The day was one seldom equaled in Oregon for storm overhead and disagreeableness under foot, and because of this the audience was small, the only surprise being that there were half as many present as there were. The churches were represented by five ministers of as many different denominations, all seated on the platform, four of whom took part in the program.

The story of the origin of the Crusade was told by the state president of the W. C. T. U., who also presided on the occasion. "The Crusade in Portland" was pleasingly and significantly given by Rev. T. L. Eliot, of the Unitarian Church, and general "Crusade Reminiscences" by Rev. T. E. Clapp, of the Congregational Church. Dr. Gordon, of the Baptist Church, also made a brief but forcible address. Altogether the effect was all that could be desired under the circumstances; One who sat in the audience, and because of that was a better judge of the effect, said there was a real inspiration in the occasion, and we find the influence has been to arouse a desire on the part of many for frequent mass meetings in the interest of temperance. Our prayer is for a revival of the Crusade fire, which we are sure will be followed by a permanent uplift to the work. ANNA R. RIGGS.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MISS JESSIE A. MORGAN, National Y. W. C. T. U. organizer, will return to Ohio early in February. She could fill appointments in southern New York and northern Pennsylvania, if application is made to her at once at Natick, Mass. This is an excellent opportunity for Y unions to secure a good speaker.

MRS. MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT'S address is in care of Miss Amy Leavitt, No. 1226 Massachusetts Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

ON New Year's Eve the people of Marseilles, Ill., had the privilege (of which they largely availed themselves) of attending the first Y. W. C. T. U. reception ever held in the town. This society, hardly six weeks old, has a membership of seventy-three, and is one of the direct results of the efforts of Colonel Woodford, while holding gospel temperance meetings here last November. The W. C. T. U. under whose auspices he worked was increased during the meetings to more than double its former membership.

FROM Kansas City comes the following: "A lovely reception was tendered our state president, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, by the Central W. C. T. U. of Kansas City, January 7, in the parlors of the First Congregational Church. Mrs. Ira Lewis, hostess, with reception committee, gave cordial welcome to each lady as she entered the beautiful rooms, rendered doubly so by the sparkling fire in the grate, fragrant cut flowers, and potted plants, which adorned table and mantel, presenting a strong contrast to the snowy whiteness without. Representative ladies from the city churches; white-ribbon sisters, and the Y's gathered to honor one who has endeared herself to the hearts and homes of Missouri, and all were delighted to clasp hands with Mrs. Hoffman and extend loving greeting. Pastor Hopkins not only looked down upon the brilliant scene from the fine portrait adorning the room, but in bodily form attested to the high appreciation of the guest of the afternoon. Conversation, music, vocal and instrumental, with bountiful, dainty refreshments, served in a most acceptable manner, closed the hours of a gathering pleasant to look back upon by the large number present."

MRS. LAURA ORMISTON CHANT will sail from London January 29, reaching New York February 7. Only a few engagements thus far have been made for her, and unions desiring her services should apply at once to the Woman's Lecture Bureau, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

THE Crusade anniversary was held by the W. C. T. U. at the Baptist Church, Lyons, Mich., Sunday evening, December 22, with a good attendance and profitable time.

A COLORADO correspondent writes: "The president of the Colorado W. C. T. U., Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, is passing through deep waters. A few weeks since, her husband's mother died in her home, and Mrs. Thompson has been ill herself. January 5, her sister, Mrs. Minnie Davis, died, after only a few days' sickness, and Mrs. Thompson was too ill to visit her while sick, or even to attend her funeral, and now her nephew, son of Mrs. Davis, is sick with pneumonia. Though the waves of affliction roll high about the Christian, yet his hope and trust can raise the spirit of courage and comfort in one's own soul and in others to look up and beyond toward the bright hereafter. Mrs. S. J. Robbins, our state corresponding secretary, is also sick with pleurisy. We are glad to know that both our officers are now improving, and will soon be ready for the accomplishment of aggressive work."

MRS. HELEN B. HARFORD, state organizer for Missouri, has completed a tour of the tenth district, speaking in every town of any size. She has also made a thorough canvass of the eleventh district, arousing to more earnest action the unions in Steelville, Salem, Dixon, Richland and Lebanon. She organized new unions in Jefferson City, Pacific, Cabool, Houston and Licking. From these districts she sends a list of sixty-three new yearly subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. She will be in the first district through January.

THERE was organized at Shenandoah, Iowa, January 6, a Prohibition League, by ladies who are in sympathy with the National, proposing to do local temperance work for the present, and wait future developments. Thirty-four names were enrolled. Much interest is manifested by those whose hearts are in the work, anxious and ready to do anything to advance the temperance cause in Iowa.

IN the death of Miss Sallie A. Stroup, Johnstown, Pa., lost one of its most estimable young ladies. Among her acquaintances she was held in the highest esteem for her true womanly qualities and amiable disposition. She was a prominent worker in the Y branch of the W. C. T. U., having been superintendent of the flower mission, and performed her duties with energy and ability. During the great calamity she endeared herself to many by her brave and gentle actions, so as to win the unqualified esteem and regard of all with whom she came in contact. For at least two weeks after the flood, and perhaps a longer time, she assisted at the Bedford Street Hospital in such a way as to bring brightness and happiness to many a weary sufferer. Her death was caused by typhoid fever, contracted while doing missionary work in the stricken city. Miss Stroup was a faithful student in the Evangelistic Course of Study, and conscientiously wrought all her work. This is the first death in the class of 1892.

Official Communications.

NATIONAL MINUTES.

Will those desiring the National Minutes for 1889 kindly send the money for the same with the order. The price is fifteen cents. It costs ten cents to send through the mail and by the time we have sent a bill and returned the receipt, that which is left can hardly be called a "saved remnant."

MINUTES 1874-1877.

Minutes of the first four National Conventions of the W. C. T. U. on sale at this office. Price forty cents for the four. Order of Caroline B. Buell, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

THE ENVELOPE SYSTEM.

Several inquiries have come to me as to why the treasurer's outfit for this system should cost five dollars. It contains 2,600 envelopes, enough for fifty persons for one year, as each person must have one envelope per week; these are all numbered, so that all accounts may be kept with system, and the numbering, as any printer will tell you, is the expensive part. There is an account book arranged to dovetail exactly with the envelopes and the printed directions. But the real cost to us is the fact that it is a patented arrangement, and the National only charges enough in addition to the actual cost to ourselves, to save us from loss on postage or express. It can be commenced at any time of year, and I do hope our unions will try it, as far preferable to the uncertain and haphazard ways, often very laborious, to which we must generally resort. It will be sent to any address prepaid on receipt of five dollars. Send to Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle street, Chicago.

DEPARTMEMT OF FOREIGN WORK.

The question of equal suffrage is now pending in South Dakota, and every person interested in this cause is turning with eager eyes to this young state, hoping that she will prove equal to the emergency, as she did for prohibition. But, "As the Scandinavians go, so goes Dakota," has passed into a proverb in that largely foreign state. Realizing this, the wise people sent for large quantities of Scandinavian literature early in the campaign; 125,000 pages of foreign tracts were sent to the two Dakotas last summer, twenty-seven dollars worth of which was donated by the department of work among foreigners.

The result proved how useful these were in forming sentiment and changing opinions. All summer came accounts to me of how much good they were doing. Said one woman in describing the eagerness of these people for tracts in their own language: "They can't wait for them in the meetings where they are distributed. They reach out and beg for them." And their testimony warrants this account. They have said repeatedly, even the most intelligent among them, ministers who speak and read the English language, "Why, I never thought anything about this question till I read these tracts. I never thought on that side of the question. It never presented itself to me in that way before."

Now we must meet this problem of equal suffrage in the same way. Mrs. Barker, president of the state W. C. T. U., writes to me, "We must have woman suffrage tracts." But I have never published these, because heretofore we have had no call for them. They will cost about fifteen dollars apiece, and we ought to have four or five different kinds to follow each other up. I cannot do this unless I can have some guarantee that there will be sufficient orders to meet at least part of the cost. Dakota is poor and must be helped. If the friends of suffrage will send me one dollar each for this work, so that fifty or sixty dollars can be obtained, I will get out four tracts costing about sixty dollars, and will send one thousand pages for one dollar. This does not pay for the postage (which I will donate).

Let us make the effort; but there is no time to lose. I must know at once in order to have them published. I am writing one now, and have written to intelligent Swedish people who are in favor of woman suffrage to write others, and we can have them off in less than a month if we can get the orders. We ought to send at least 100,000 pages to do good work. Who will give a dollar for this work? SOPHIA F. GRUBB,
Nat. Supt. Work among Foreigners.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.	Hon. John P. St. John.
Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Miss I. C. DeVelling.
Miss Henrietta G. Moore.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward.
Mrs. Marian B. Baxter.	Rev. W. H. Boole, D.D.
Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.	Rev. C. H. St. John.
Mother Stewart	Mr. A. G. Wolfenbarger.
Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.	Prof. A. B. Huckins.
Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.	Mrs. R. J. Trego.
Mrs. S. M. Perkins.	Mrs. M. L. Wells.
Mary Seymour Howell.	Mrs. L. E. W. Harper.

HINTS TO LOCAL UNIONS.

Each union should have a lecture committee consisting of not less than three, whose chairman should have power to call them together at any time, and these should be empowered by the union to say whether a speaker should come or not, so the matter could be settled at once and so save delay.

In answering letters or applying for speaker, state what railroad you are on, or if distant from railroad, state nearest depot, and by what conveyance a speaker can reach you; also if you have a telegraph station.

If a lecturer is wanted for a convention, state where it is to be held and at what hour the lecturer is expected to speak. We are often obliged to refuse speakers, even after lengthy correspondence, which we always regret, but those desiring the speaker do not always understand that every engagement for a speaker must be concluded before the Sunday preceding the evening of the meeting, else the best opportunity for advertising, or one of the best, by notices from the pulpits, has passed. If our friends would remember this, a great deal of trouble would be saved. If the Bureau can furnish a speaker, a telegram will always be sent before the preceding Sunday, if there is not time for a letter to carry the information.

Sometimes we get inquiries for a lecturer, and the week draws near the close before the terms, dates, etc. are arranged, and perhaps another point is wanting the same speaker for the same evening. We send a telegram asking an answer, that we may know at once. We wait day after day, the second chance is lost, and then comes a letter saying, "We are very sorry, but we cannot arrange." A dispatch, as we had requested, would have saved a great deal of worry and more trouble, and the second place could have had the speaker.

Moral.—Always reply to a telegram if it says answer

For dates and terms of all the above, address the

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Publisher's Notes.

The Challenge Accepted.

The issues of Jan. 23 and 30 are notable ones. The committee appointed by the National W.C.T.U. to answer Mrs. Foster's "Truth in the Case" make their first statement. It will be followed by further statements until the answer is complete. You will only need to read the first two to know that the answer will be final and thorough. "It must needs be that offenses come"—and so many people are offended at the W. C. T. U. that one cannot help feeling that it must absolutely be in the right. God's truth has always been an offense, His cause has never been a popular one, and now from the bitterness and anger heaped on the W. C. T. U. because it has not hesitated to attack the evils of drinking, even when located very near the White House, it does seem that it must be very near the right. If money poured in on it from the rich—if flattering newspaper notices were given—if courted by society and society people, there would be no trouble whatever—no anger, no opposition. So then if God be for us, who can be against us? We do not think, or suppose that the committee thinks, these articles will vindicate the W. C. T. U. in the minds of all, or lessen the storm of opposition, but here and there will be found those who will see that so far as it knew the right, the W. C. T.U. has tried to walk in it. We have printed an extra edition of the papers, knowing they would be called for. See to it that your unbelieving friends get an opportunity to read these articles. The prices rule as before, viz.: 10 copies each $.02; 100 copies $1.70; 1,000 copies $14.00.

2X10=20

And Picture Free.

We have 800 artotypes measuring 11x14 inches of Miss Willard's workshop in Rest Cottage, Evanston; we used several thousand of these pictures in 1887. We now make the special offer to send one (regular price 25 cents) for two 10-cent trial subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL. The picture will be sent to you postpaid or to any address that you name. This is a generous offer—take advantage of it at once. The limited number of pictures will soon be called for. All readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will be interested in this unique picture. No further commission than the picture will be given for the two names, and that only while the supply lasts.

D. W. I.
C. A. I.
T. M. O. P. N.
N. T. T. R. I.

Who will translate? Know what is meant? Excuses for not taking THE UNION SIGNAL? Which class is the most numerous? Who will translate and give good answers to each set of initials? We will present a year's subscription for the best response received before March 1.

The "Mother's Portfolio" is already becoming a popular book for mothers of young children. It is the only work of the kind containing Kindergarten Methods, Nursery Occupations, Music, Games and Stories for young children in which amusement and instruction is combined. A grand book for agents. Circulars free. Sent postpaid for $2.25. Address Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

"SPLENDID"! All say, using Willcox Cuff Holder. Every reader of this paper can have a pair by sending 10 cents to S. P. and S. H. Willcox, Fairhaven, Mass. Lady Agents Wanted.

I have one of Sherman Tangenberg & Co.'s "Flour Bins," and am greatly pleased with it. It is a cleanly, economical room and trouble-saving device.

MRS. GEO. C. HALL.

See Advertisement in another column.

A Great Convenience.

Experience proves that a great deal of human suffering can be overcome by the external application of electro magnetism. We see that Dr. Scott (known throughout the world for his deep study of this subject) has been able to combine in a popular, porous plaster, the principles of electro-magnetism, so that most diseases can be cured or the pain alleviated,

By placing this plaster on the part of the body affected such diseases as Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pleurisy, Bronchitis. Asthma, severe coughs and colds in the chest as well as kidney troubles can be cured. The Dr. recommends, in connection with the plasters, his electro-magnetic Insoles; and to introduce his electric plasters, he will send a pair of Electric Insoles FREE to any one who will forward one dollar to Dr. Scott, 842 Broadway, New York City, for four of his plasters. His card appears in this issue of our paper; read it carefully. Absolute confidence may be placed in the Dr's offer. He is well known throughout the United States among Druggists and all the Commercial Agencies. If you have any kind of a pain about you, no matter what it is, you will find the plaster (especially if used in connection with the Insoles) will relieve you, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, absolutely cure you. It is, indeed, a great convenience to be cured in this way, as it saves all the annoyance which comes from taking strong medicines, and enables you to attend to your daily duties while the process of curing goes on in its quiet, painless way.

CRAFTS' "CIVIL SABBATH." Addresses on "Sunday Saloon," "Liberty," "Sunday Rest Law.," "Amusements," Replies to Adventists, Present Sunday Laws of all States, etc. 128 pp. quarto 35 cts. Authors' Publishing Co., 150 Nassau St. N.Y

PROHIBITION COLONY

AT NEWHALL, LOS ANGELES CO., CAL.

If you have lung trouble, Catarrh, Asthma, or Malaria, and want to be cured, or if you are only seeking for a faultless climate, and rich soil, where all kinds of semi-tropical fruit is grown in greatest abundance, and immense crops of small grain and vegetables are produced, or if you simply wish to make a paying investment, or desire to settle in one of the loveliest spots on earth, send us your address, and we will forward to you full information free, and gladly answer any special inquiries, not only about our prohibition colony, but about this noted land of sunshine and flowers.

St. John, Katzenstine & Yarnell,
CALIFORNIA BANK BUILDING,
LOS ANGELES, - - - CAL.

BONDS
FOR SALE.
$275,000 City of Fort Worth, Tex., 5s.
$100,000 City of San Bernardino, Cal., 6s.
$50,000 City of Wichita, Kan., 5s.
$45,000 County of Buffalo, Neb., 5s.
Also other Choice 4 to 7 Per Cent Securities.
WRITE FOR LISTS AND PRICES.
Land Warrants and Scrip Applicable to Gov't Land.
Banking in all Branches. Your Business Solicited.
S. A. KEAN & CO., Bankers,
100 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.
115 Broadway, New York.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL
WILL EMPLOY
a man or woman in every town to act as a special agent, secure names to whom we can mail sample copies, display posters, and secure subscriptions. Send for our latest terms, more liberal than ever before.
We offer a splendid money making position to the right person. For 10 cents we will mail sample copies of recent dates, terms to agents, large illustrated premium catalogue, &c.
CURTIS PUBLISHING CO.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.
A Marvelous Triumph Over Disease Without Medicine.
A PERSONAL LETTER.

The following letter was not written to us but to F. H. Miller, Esq., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, Appleton City, Mo.:

"F. H. Miller, Esq., Appleton City, Mo., Dear Sir. —I send by this mail Dr. Hall's Pamphlet. I have been using the treatment for two months and no language can express the benefits received. Two months ago I was one of the most miserable dyspeptics in the world. I paid Dr. VanMeter, Charleston, Ill., $100.00 in cash for medicine that did no good. I also paid Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., $50.00 and received no real benefit. I have studied medicine for years with the view of obtaining relief. I have made three overland trips to Texas, hoping to stay these inroads of disease. My condition gradually grew worse—until my feet were cold all the time and a distressing cough that was fast wearing me out. To this was added the most distressing COLIC or NEURALGIA of the stomach, so that scores of times I had to take my bed. I had no appetite and could scarcely drag my wearied body around. I sent for the treatment, not even my wife knowing about it. It required about a week to get the full benefit of it. I began to improve at once—dyspepsia passed away. In a month's time my cough was gone. I can now eat anything I can get—meats, pickles, milk, cake, pie, etc., and can eat it for supper. Before beginning I had to get up from five to ten times per night; now I get up once at midnight. My sleep is just as sweet as that of a child. I never felt better in my life. The change is simply marvelous; beyond description. * * *

"With esteem, E. J. Morrison."

Gunn City, Mo.

A. T. Bates, Agent, 161 La Salle street, Room 46, Chicago. Full information sent on receipt of 2 cent stamp.

Wanted: Intelligent persons who have used this treatment to act as agent in every community.

A. T. BATES.

Over $800,000 of the Stock
OF THE East Tennessee Land Co.
CLINTON B. FISK, President.
Taken by Over 250 Stockholders.

A moderate amount of advertising has awakened widespread interest in this Great Enterprise and has insured the early coöperation of many hundreds of people. The first sale of Lots will be held on the 26th of next month, and at that the best advantages will be

LIMITED TO STOCKHOLDERS

whose Stock is convertible into Lots or Lands at a premium of one-third.

In other words, $100 of Stock can buy what it will require $133.33 in cash to pay for, until July 1. The East Tennessee Land Company's prime purpose is to benefit its stockholders. Such purpose will be rigidly adhered to, and all who meditate settlement upon this Company's territory should become stockholders at once, likewise all who seek safe and growing investment.

Shares $50 Each, Selling at Par!
Discount of 5 per cent. allowed Readers of this for full cash-in-advance Payments until February 10th.

This is really a handsome advance dividend allowed each investor buying stock this month.

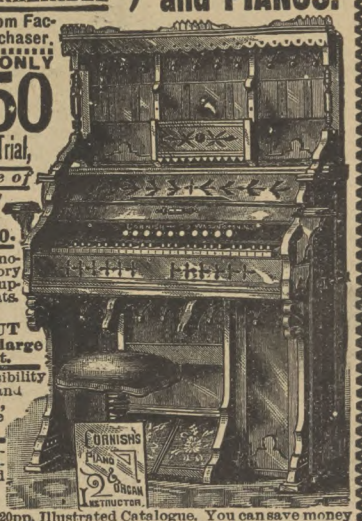
Full particulars as to location, railroad facilities (already ample), climate, soil, timber supplies, water power, city site, town site, Financial Plans, Prohibition Policy, etc., may be had in the Illustrated Prospectus, sent free to any address. Full particulars will be given all Stockholders of the Preliminary Sale of Lots, and of the Public Opening of Harriman, the new Industrial City, fifty miles from Knoxville, eighty miles from Chattanooga, in the midst of a magnificent mineral and agricultural region. Men familiar with the inauguration of new Southern towns believe it will excel all others in the quickness and the reliability of its growth. Prohibition in Title Deeds will insure a sober, thrifty population.

Every stock subscription must authorize the Secretary to subscribe for a specified number of shares upon the books of the Company.

Make all remittances payable to the order of A. W. WAGNALLS, Treasurer, but these should be sent, as also all other communications to

A. A. HOPKINS, Secretary,
96 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

CORNISH'S (OLD ESTABLISHED AND RELIABLE) ORGANS and PIANOS.
The only firm of Manufacturers in America selling direct to Consumer. From Factory to Family at Wholesale Rates on Terms to suit Purchaser.
$75 ORGAN (EXACTLY LIKE THIS CUT) SOLD FOR $15.00 CASH FOR ONLY $50 After TEN DAYS' Trial, and the balance of price, $35, to be paid in 7 monthly installments of $5 each. OR IF CASH IS SENT WITH ORDER, WE WILL SPECIALLY ACCEPT $45.00.



CORNISH'S Specially designed Cabinet Organ, Style "Canopiletta," No. 10,000, contains 3 sets Orchestral toned Resonatory Pipe Quality Reeds; 5 Octaves; 10 Solo Stops; 2 Octave Couplers (Bass and Treble), 2 Knee Swells and all late improvements.
Dimensions.—65 in. high, 48 long, 21 wide.
WARRANTED FOR TEN LONG YEARS. SOLID WALNUT CASE, HIGHLY FINISHED. Handsome Stool and large Instruction Book, making a Complete Musical Outfit.
HOW TO ORDER.—Send a reference as to your responsibility from any Banker, Postmaster, Merchant or Express Agent, and Organ will be shipped at once on Ten Days' Test Trial, and if not, after trial, satisfactory, you can return it and we will pay freight charges both ways. ☞ You run no Risk.
REFERENCES.—FIRST NATIONAL BANK, WASHINGTON, N. J., any Commercial Agency in the U. S., and thousands of persons who for the last 20 years have purchased instruments of our manufacture.
NO MONEY REQUIRED UNTIL YOU ARE SATISFIED.
We want every reader of this paper to write to-day for our 20pp. Illustrated Catalogue. You can save money Write whether you want to buy now or not. Our Catalogue will interest you and you can get it for nothing.
Address: (Mention Paper.) CORNISH & CO. (OLD ESTABLISHED AND RELIABLE,) WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

A Test! A Test!

We have a natural curiosity to know how many subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL read the publisher's notes. To test it we will agree to send the paper for five consecutive weeks to any one person you name on a postal card, providing you will tell the party the paper is sent at your request, and also providing you will afterwards see your friend and ask her to subscribe for a year. Now then, how many responses will there be?

Mother—Home—Heaven.

The picture offered, Defregger's Madonna, is received with expressions of delight and admiration. We can not any longer continue the offer to send it for $1.00 with THE UNION SIGNAL, but to new subscribers it will be sent with the paper, a year, for $1.35; to old subscribers $1.50. Remember we send this fine photogravure flat, protected by boards, express charges prepaid, and that you could not buy it at an art store short of $2.00 at least. Our original copy cost $6.00. It is a lovely picture, and will always be a source of pleasure to you.

New Bulletin.

A new Bulletin of Publications is ready. Send for one. Use them to indicate to those not familiar with our publications what leaflets, books, etc., they should order.

"Ye Hatchet Partie"

Know ye that Washington's Birthday is coming? Dost remember that the above named entertainment has been given with great success? Why not gather in some shekels for your local work by giving this or some other entertainment of which we have such a variety to suit all ages and requirements? Ye Hatchet Partie sells at 15 cts each, $1.50 per dozen. The music required in it can also be had through us.

AGITATION LEAFLETS.

A series of seven leaflets with blank spaces for the name of the town in which you live. We will print in the number of saloons and the town's name, so that a local agitation can be aroused. Send three cents for a sample package. They have been tested and found good.

Price per 1,000, specially printed, $2.00. Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

The Summing Up Report.

We give below sixteen pledges to send ten names to THE UNION SIGNAL. We have delayed giving this last report till we were sure all pledges were in and could also give the total net gain for the year. We have added to our list 32,000 new names during 1889. We are now printing an edition of 80,000 per week. Of course we regret not reaching the 100,000 mark. About the reasons therefor we shall have nothing to say—we didn't reach it and that's all there is to say. But a snowball grows by rolling it—the larger it is the larger it gets, simply by pushing along. We have only 20,000 new names to secure and the splendid 100,000 mark will be gained. Shall it be done this year? To be sure—let us say by July 1st. Let us make this snowball (a sort of white-ribbon one) roll successfully right into the warm months without a thought of melting—it-s not that kind of a snowball! Now that the strictly non-partisan sisters are about to set their snowball a rolling it is time that you awake to the necessity of showing the faith in you. Not but that there is plenty of room for both snowballs in the country—the new one will serve beautifully to keep the Republicans sure that they are good temperance folks—and the other one, at present the largest one—serves to keep folks kind of stirred up, some angrily, some thoughtfully.

Oh yes, plenty room, plenty of saloons to fight, plenty of false ideas about high license, plenty of hearts breaking, plenty of homes to be ruined in the next decade. The cause needs all the help of all kinds that it can get. The printed page sixteen pages a week, fifty-two times a year, is the most potent factor of the fight. You who believe in rolling the ball till it crushes out a legalized rum and beer traffic, listen to this call to again buckle on the armor. Between Christmas and "La Grippe," you have laid it aside. Put it on. Start that ball again, and do it by getting THE UNION SIGNAL read in homes where now it is not known.

How?

1. Take time to think over your friends and acquaintances to whom the paper should be going. Make a list of their names.

2. Provide yourself with sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL with whose contents you are entirely familiar.

3. Proceed to push out, systematically following up the list, and enthusiastically presenting the claims of the paper. Point out the articles you like, read a paragraph here and there, be so alert and alive about is that your enthusiasm will be infectious.

4. Do the best you can to get the new name and the dollar, but if you cannot do that get the trial subscription for ten cents. Be sure you get the ten cents. "Why not give that out of your own pocket? I could afford it." True, but the papers would be thrown aside or disdainfully glanced over. The transfer of that precious lucre will make all the difference in the world as to the respect given to the paper.

5. You can get ten out of every fifteen persons you approach if you go at them this way, and we don't ask you to do it for nothing. Write us for terms and you will find that we make it possible for you to earn your missionary money by doing good temperance work. Is not that a combination of good works? Watch these columns for new plans of work. Some one has said, "Isn't it a mistake to make so many and such varied offers?" To which we reply, "Yes, it's a mistake if there's any better way to add an average of 20,000 new names each year; bring along the way to make that increase 30,000 names, and we will gratefully adopt it and it only!" Hope you're not tired reading this "sermonette" Hope the result will be that you will be brought to say

"I'll help push that ball!"

Roll, roll, rolling!

The following persons join Miss Willard in pledging ten new names:

Mrs. Mary M. Hillman East Charlemont, Mass.
Mrs. L. B Noyes Pittsfield, Ill.
Mrs. M. E Darrow, Oakland, Cal.
S. E. Steele, Columbus, Ind.
Mrs. M. B. Harvey, Diagonal City, Iowa.
Mrs. B. Goodenough, Worcester. N. Y

Unions pledged to send in ten names;

Y Eskridge, Kan.
South Haven, Mich.
Rodman, N. Y.
Sto kwell, Ind.
Salem, N. J.
Atwater Station, Ohio.
Midway, Pa.
Mechanicsburgh, Ohio.
"Cumberland" Abbott Run, R. I.
Port Deposit, Md.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, CATARRH, ALL PAIN AND ALL INFLAMMATIONS.
POND'S EXTRACT
IS THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE CHEST, AND THE COMFORT OF MOTHERS. BE SURE TO GET THE GENUINE.

INFANTS' And children's wardrobes made to order. Imported Madras dresses a specialty. Send 2c. stamp for samples and prices. H. J. SPRAGUE & CO., 43 and 45 Franklin St., Chicago.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

THIS IS WORTH $3.00
During the next 30 days to any reader of THE UNION SIGNAL who purchases The Universal Health outfit with book of instructions "How to get Well and Keep Well without Resorting to Drugs." Regular price of outfit $10.00. Price to anyone sending this clipping or mentioning that you saw this in the UNION SIGNAL 7.00. Call or address Universal Health Co., 167 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. The above includes a certificate of membership in School of Longevity, for one month.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE "FREEMAN"
SELF-WRINGING MOP!

"It lead all others" is the verdict of all who see it. A ratchet on this mop helps the hand by retaining the cloth at any stage of the work. Don't touch the water with your hands. Boiling water can be used, also potash, lye etc. if desired. If you desire to wash windows, corners up high, in fact anywhere, the mop, by the means of the ratchet, can be held without the aid of the hand, thus removing the strain. Write for circulars. Sold exclusively through agents throughout the United States. Agents wanted. Write at once for territory—The Racine Malleable & Wrought Iron Co., Racine Wis.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

$16

FREE TRADE PRICES
No Protection! No Monopolies!
$45 SEWING MACHINES | NOW ONLY $16
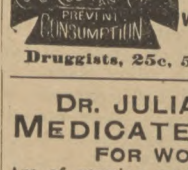
We are now selling our Western Improved Singer Sewing Machine —same as cut—complete with all attachments and warranted for five years for only $16. Send for circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.



Dr. T. B. Myers of David City, Neb., writes:
"DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER! is the best remedy for Whooping Cough and Measles I ever saw."
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

JAPANESE WARE for Church Fairs. The Formosa Co., 86 State St., Chicago, Ill.

$3 for $1, to ag'ts by mail 12 boxes C. C. Pills for $1. Sells for 25c. a box. J. J. Carns, Carthage, Mo.

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

BABY CARRIAGES C. O. D.
Velocipedes or Girl's Tricycles Sent
One or more at Wholesale Prices. Express charges prepaid from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison St., CHICAGO. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer SEWING MACHINE 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

Stanley's Own Story.
5000 Agents Wanted. New Book. Only authorized volume. Fully illustrated. Over 800 large pages. Complete canvassing outfit and book mailed for only 50 cts. Be quick. National Pub. Co., Chicago.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co.,
235 East 21st St., N. Y.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 5 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 713 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S
"CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

DEAFNESS CURED by Peck's Pat. INVISIBLE TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable. Successful where all Remedies FAIL. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y.

CURLING IRON mailed for 10cts. To make new customers. Wood handle; non-conducting thumb spring; polished steel. Worth 50c. Big catalogue free. A. T. Evans & Co., Chicago.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 75,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

DELAVAU'S WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY
Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR! 0
NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$1
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$1
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$1
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$1
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$1
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$1
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$1
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$1
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$1
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$1
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$1
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$1
College Songs; 150,000 sold	50c
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$1
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music	$1

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$1
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$1
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$1
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$1
Popular Dance Music Collection	$1
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$1

The above are all superior books.
Any book mailed for retail price.
Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.
C. H. DITSON & Co., 867 Broadway, New York.

S. S. SINGING BOOKS.
"BEAUTIFUL SONGS:" Our latest, is being received with the most marked favor. Usually when tested with a dozen other books it is selected.
"LIVING FOUNTAIN:" New and very popular. Hundreds of the best schools have adopted it and praise it in unstinted measure.
"MORNING LIGHT:" — STANDARD. THOUSANDS of schools find just what they want in it.
People who prefer noble, warm, Christian sentiment to mere rattling rhymes, and want substantial, stirring and lasting tunes, find their choice in these books. 35 cents each—one sample copy for examination, only 20 cents.
Send for specimen pages of best Singing books for Choir, Singing School, Day School.
S. W. STRAUB & CO., Publishers,
243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

KISS ME MAMMA I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

Unity. A weekly journal of reverent free thought, yearly $1; sample 2 cents. Chicago.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

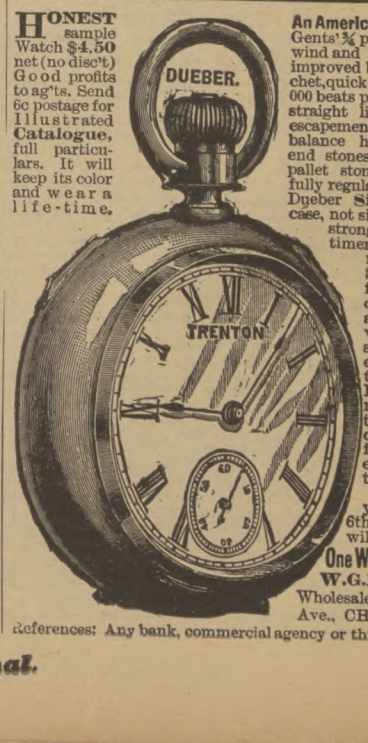
TAR-OID
A new method of compounding Tar.
SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM and all Skin Diseases. Send 2 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

ASTHMA CURED
SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE
Instantly relieves the most violent attack No waiting for results. Its action is immediate, direct and certain, and a cure is the result in all curable cases A single trial convinces the most skeptical. Price 50c. and $1.00, of druggists or by mail Trial package Free to any address. Dr. R. SCHIFFMANN, St. Paul, Minn.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to ag'ts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.



An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it.
When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W. G. Morris, Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Have we caught your attention by the above starry cut? And may we hold it for a few minutes? We consider that it is high time the guns were again "pinted" at that 100,000 mark. No rest will be known till it is reached, neither side, yours nor ours! So, then, friend, we make our new—attractive—and wonderfully generous

Star Offers!

If given 50,000 short-term subscribers the 100,000 mark will be reached before July 1st. These offers are made in the faith that they will result in getting that number of trial subscriptions, and are good to July 1st, 1890, only. We offer splendid premiums in return for work you do for the paper, and remember that all the work you do for it you are doing for your home and your native land. We propose to send you a "Star Certificate" every time you send us ten or over ten-cent names with $1.00 or over. These certificates are to be kept by you till such time as you have attained the number desired by you, and can then be sent in and exchanged for any premium you are entitled to. There are just two requirements.

First. You must enroll your name as a "Star Offer worker."

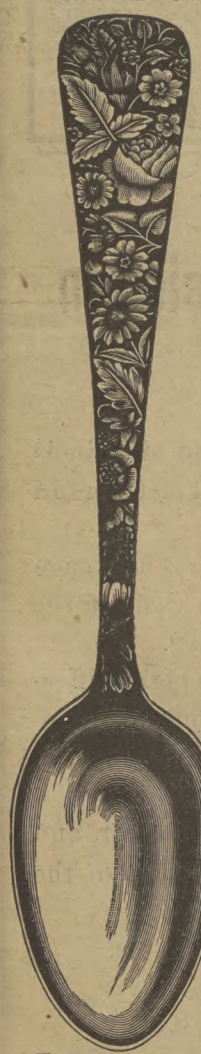
Second. You must send in the full amount of ten cents for each name, and not less than ten names at one time.

There is no objection to your getting others to help you up to the 500 names if you choose, but all the names must be sent in by one person, and the correspondence be with that person. The names need not be from one post-office only; that is, you could engage the services of a friend in another place, providing the work is done through you.

A union might agree to take up the work and canvass the town with great care by making a house-to-house canvass, and so add greatly to its own aggressiveness. If you are a salaried agent, your orders in this line of work will be credited to you, providing you use the salaried agents blank with each lot of names sent.

Star Premium Offers,



For 10 names.—Two first-class paper-bound books by Miss Willard, viz.: "Nineteen Beautiful Years" and "Woman in the Pulpit."

For 25 names.—One handsomely engraved gold thimble, or one elegant solid silver tea spoon, oxidized handle (see cut).

For 50 names.—A year's subscription to any $2.00 or $2.50 magazine, such as Demorest's, The Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, etc.

For 75 names.—A year's subscription to either Harper's Magazine, Harper's Bazar, Century or Scribner's, or a solid silver tablespoon, same beautiful design as that shown in the cut of the teaspoon.

For 100 names.—A new, ladies' size, Waterbury watch, or four solid silver teaspoons, with your initial engraved on them.

For 200 names.—A handsome silver chatelaine watch, good time piece, or eight solid silver teaspoons, or three solid silver tablespoons, with free engraved initial.

For 300 names.—A good set of dishes, English ware; beautiful pattern of flowers; 128 pieces (to be sent by express, carefully packed, at your expense) or 12 solid silver teaspoons, or 4 solid silver tablespoons, with engraved initial.

For 400 names.—A ladies' gold watch, guaranteed good time piece, American jewelled movement, warranted for twenty years, or 16 silver teaspoons, or 7 silver tablespoons, engraved initial.

For 500 names.—The watch, as above, with a handsome chain, or 20 silver teaspoons, 9 silver tablespoons, or a set of handsome china dishes, 100 pieces, beautifully decorated, value easily $40.00. Must be sent by express at your expense.

Please Notice!

You can hold the certificates as long as you like, and claim any premiums due from them whenever you wish. If, for instance, you have certificates for fifty names, you can send them in and order the year's subscription to one of the magazines named under the 50 list, or you could have two of the 25 cent premiums, either two gold thimbles or two silver spoons, or one of each. Remember each Star Certificate represents ten or more names sent in at ten cents each, and must be carefully kept by you and sent in when you order the premium you are entitled to. These offers do not mean that we expect only one club of 200 names, one of 500, etc. Anybody that is alive and energetic can get up a big club—the more the merrier. So

Get at Work.
Get your Friends at Work.
Get your Union Interested.

Send a postal card saying that you will be a "Star Offer" worker.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

TAKE MONON ROUTE
for all points South.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a weak stomach

If you have a
COLD or COUGH,
acute or leading to
CONSUMPTION,
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE COD LIVER OIL
AND HYPOPHOSPHITES
OF LIME AND SODA
IS SURE CURE FOR IT.
This preparation contains the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites and fine Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. Used by physicians all the world over. It is as palatable as milk. Three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil. A perfect Emulsion, better than all others made. For all forms of Wasting Diseases, Bronchitis,
CONSUMPTION,
Scrofula, and as a Flesh Producer there is nothing like SCOTT'S EMULSION.
It is sold by all Druggists. Let no one by profuse explanation or impudent entreaty induce you to accept a substitute.

Buyers of Mantels, Fireplace and Tile work will consult their interest by visiting our rooms or sending us their address before purchasing. We furnish a mantel like cut for $25.00 Liberal commission to agents.
THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO., Charles L. Page, Pres.
Down town show room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago. See our blower attachment.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL
FOR
KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,
Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting N. Y. Turkish Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

PRONOUNCING PARALLEL FAMILY BIBLE
The only Pronouncing Parallel Bible. From new plates, and now for the first time offered to Bible Agents. No such aid as Pronouncing Text has ever been offered to Bible Canvassers before. Every proper name in the whole Bible is properly pronounced. Massive in size, magnificently illustrated, additional matter in great variety. Prices low, discounts liberal. Those first in the field will reap the harvest. Agents wanted everywhere. Send for particulars. CRANSTON & STOWE, CHICAGO, ILL.

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS! $35. ORGANS!
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.

From Rev. Jas. H. Potts, D.D., editor of Michigan "Christian Advocate," Detroit, Mich: "To say that we are delighted with the Piano does not express the fact. We are jubilant. If all your instruments are as fine in appearance and as pleasing in tone as this one, your patrons will rise by the hundred."

FLAVOR YOUR
Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with
BELL'S SPICED SEASONING
Directions for Making a Nice Dressing: Take one pint of soaked bread, and season with two teaspoonfuls of salt and BELL'S POULTRY SPICE to suit the taste (on account of the purity, not more than a tablespoonful of the dressing for an eight pound turkey), also one tablespoonful of butter or fat salt pork cut up very fine. An egg well worked in will make the dressing cut up nicely. ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT.
WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs. Boston, Mass.

WILSON'S "GRAND RAINBOW" COLLECTION OF RARE AND BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS
11 PKS. 25 Cts.

We claim to be one of the largest growers and importers of Flower Seeds in America. In order to introduce them as widely as possible we make this UNPRECEDENTED OFFER. For 25c. in postage stamps or money we will send by mail one pkt. each of the following Valuable Seeds: New Diamond Aster, very handsome colors; Mixed Balsams, immense size, double as a rose; Calliopsis, Golden Wave, new, very showy; New Hybrid Gaillardia, unrivaled for beauty; Phloxdrumundii Grandiflora Splendens, 15 distinct shades; GIANT SHOW PANSIES, immense size, rich and velvety; New Mammoth Verbena, 12 choice colors; New Giant Zinnia, largest in the world; 10 Seeds of ANNUAL NUTMEG PLANT, great value, never before offered; Amaranthus Gibbosus, highly ornamental; one Beautiful Everlasting Flower, 11 full-size pkts., with directions for culture, for 25c.. 5 Collections, $1.00. Catalogue with each order. SAMUEL WILSON, Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa.

BURPEE'S GEM COLLECTION FOR 1890
Contains one regular size packet each of the rare and lovely blue Torenia Fournieri,—the gorgeous new Shirley Poppies,—the fragrant Little Gem Sweet Alyssum,—many varieties mixed of Choice Double Asters,—the unequaled strain of Burpee's Superb Camellia-Flowered Balsams,—Finest Mixed Chinese and Japanese Pinks,—Extra fine Mixed New and Beautiful Ipomoeas,—Choice Mixed Pansies,—Fordhook strain of Superfine Petunia Hybrida,—and twelve grand New Sweet Peas Mixed, in all TEN VARIETIES best new and popular ANNUALS for 25 cts. or FIVE GEM COLLECTIONS mailed for $1.00.
Try to get up a Club. Illustration and directions for growing printed upon each packet. Purchased separately at retail, the ten packets in our 25 cent Gem Collection would cost 85 cents, and this SPECIAL OFFER is made to induce all to try ORDER NOW and ask for BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1890, handsomely illustrated with beautiful colored plates, tells all about THE BEST SEEDS! including NEW VEGETABLES and FLOWERS of real merit, which cannot be obtained elsewhere.
BURPEE'S SEEDS.
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia Pa.

SICK HEADACHE

can be CURED
in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.
FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.
Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.
Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

"DOWN WITH HIGH PRICES."

A $65.00 Sewing Machine,	$18.00
A 500-lb. Platform Scale,	10.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy,	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale,	40.00
A $40.00 Road Cart,	15.00
A $15.00 Buggy Harness	7.50
A 240-lb. Scoop and Platform Scale,	3.00
A 4-lb. Family or Store Scale,	1.00

Catalogue of 1000 useful articles sent FREE. Address
CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

BUY THE WRINGER THAT SAVES OUR PURCHASE GEAR THE MOST LABOR

Saves half the labor of other wringers, and costs but little more.
EMPIRE Does not GREASE The CLOTHES.
Solid White Rubber Rolls. Warranted.
Also "Daisy" and "Volunteer" Wringers, Clothes Drying Bars, etc. Agents wanted everywhere. Empire Wringer Co., Auburn, N. Y.

BUYERS CATALOGUE SHOULD HAVE OUR 486 PAGE
All kinds of Merchandise at WHOLESALE PRICES Write for Particulars.
The Cash Buyers' Mercantile Union, 162 LA SALLE ST. Chicago, Ill.

SEEDS 6 pkts of my choicest Flower Seeds, 10c. Beautiful catalogue free.
F. B. MILLS, Thorn Hill, N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S GREENHOUSES
OUR 1890 CATALOGUE
TELLS THE WHOLE STORY
for the Garden, Lawn and Farm. The most Complete Handsome and Conservative Seed Book of the year. We Grow Plants, Bulbs, Seeds, Shrubs and Small Fruits. By Combining your wants we save you Freight, Time and Expense. Our Chicago Parks Lawn Seed and Bedding Plants (the finest in the World), International Pansies, Giant Golden Heart Celery, Osage Melon, and other specialties have a National reputation. New Greenhouses. We carry the largest stock of Gardening Tools in America, and can save you one-third on these alone. Five pkts. "Chicago Parks" bedding Pansies in separate colors for 25 cts.; 12 "Chicago Park" Geraniums for $1; 4 lbs. "Chicago Park" Lawn Grass Seed $1; 33 pkts. Popular Vegetables, $1. Mailed FREE everywhere with Catalogue. Box 688, 146 W. Washington St.
CHICAGO.

FREE
Prettiest BOOK ever Printed.
SEEDS ONE cent a PACKET, and upwards according to rarity, scarcity, or cost. Cheapest of any by oz. & lb. 1000 000 extras. Catalogue free. R. H. Shumway Rockford Ill.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable; celebrated for Purity and Strong Germinating Qualities. Only 2 and 3c per large package, and novelty extras with all orders. Mammoth Seed Farms! One Acre of Solid Glass! Write for my Beautiful Illustrated Catalogue, Free.
H. W. BUCKBEE,
Rockford Seed Farm. • ROCKFORD, ILL.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Signal Notes.

THE consciousness of duty performed gives us music at midnight.—George Herbert.

FREE meals are proposed for twenty-five thousand London school children who do not have sufficient food at home.

THE announcement reads strangely, when one remembers the hoary age of Rome, that her chief thoroughfares and public places are to be illuminated by electric lights, the power for generating which is to be obtained from the famous Tivoli Falls.

THE city of Boston has four women in her school board, and two colored men in her common council.

IT has been resolved to form a National Union of British Temperance Choral Societies.

JOHN BURNS declared concerning the pawnbrokers of the East End, London: "Five pawnbrokers out of six issued notices to the effect that they would charge no interest on articles pledged with them during the strike."

IT is estimated by a correspondent in the Chicago Tribune that at least sixty per cent of the multitude of type-writers in the city are women, as are twenty-five per cent of the type-setters, fifty per cent of the telegraph operators, and about seventy per cent of the employes in the dry goods stores.

MISS EMILY FAITHFUL and Mrs. Annie Besant are both reported to be about to visit America, with a view to investigating the industrial and political status of women in this country.

THE Attorney-General of Kansas says, concerning the effect of prohibition: "The county jails throughout the state are comparatively empty, and the number of convicts in the penitentiary is growing less."

IT is said that women in New Orleans enter more occupations unusual to the sex than in any other city. They become merchants, hunters, florists, dairy farmers and manufacturers, and all make a good living.

THE "cigarette law," passed by the legislature of South Carolina, at its recent session, makes it unlawful for any person or persons, by himself or themselves, to sell, furnish, give or provide, any minor or minors under the age of eighteen years, with cigarettes, tobacco, or cigarette paper, or any substitute therefor; and that any person or persons violating the provisions of this section, either in person or by agent or in any other way, shall be held and deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon indictment and conviction therefor, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 nor less than $25, or by imprisonment for a term of not more than one year nor less than two months, or both, in the discretion of the court; one-half of the fine to be paid to the informer of the offense, and the other half to the treasurer of the county in which such conviction shall be had.

IN a vigorous and startling article, which appeared some time since from the pen of Margaret E. Stewart in the Herald and Presbyter, occurs the following burning passage:

"A few years ago, in a lonely hut in Central Africa, a worn-out man died upon his knees, praying in the fervor of a consecrated, loyal soul, 'Oh, let Thy kingdom come!' He had opened, he thought, the great, Dark Continent to the onward march of Christian civilization and the light of God's truth. Christendom shouted for joy, and the procession started across the sea.

"Watch it. One missionary, 70,000 gallons of rum; one missionary, 70,000 gallons more of rum; another missionary, another 70,000 gallons; and so on and on it goes, rum and missionaries, missionaries and rum. Thus we touch the great Congo state. Watch again. One convert to Christ, a hundred drunkards; one more, a hundred more. The missionary's heart grows sick, it cries out, 'Oh, Christians at home, for the love of Christ, stop the rum!' But, as the climate does its exhaustive work, and one by one the brave workers sink beneath the burning sun, hearts at home are discouraged, and the next ship goes only with rum—without the missionary.

"Under the madness of intoxicating liquor sent from Massachusetts, two hundred of those people (of Congo) slaughtered each other in a single day. Again we are told of a single gallon of this drink causing a fight in which fifty were killed. Judas sold his Lord for seventeen dollars, but America hurries fifty souls to the bar of God for ninety cents."

FREE TO ALL

WHAT IS IT?

In order to quickly introduce the celebrated English Dr. Scott's Electric Porous Plaster to the readers of this paper, the Pall Mall Electric Association, of London, make the following liberal offer

GOOD FOR 60 DAYS
—BUT FIRST ASK FOR THE— PLASTERS IN YOUR DRUG STORE.

and if you cannot get them remit $1.00 and you will receive four of these famous Electric Plasters by mail, postpaid, together with a pair of DR. SCOTT'S GENUINE ELECTRIC INSOLES FREE and a copy of that valuable Book, the Doctor's Story. Cut this adv't out and keep it to remind you DON'T DELAY.

EVERY DRUGGIST WILL RETURN THE MONEY IF IT FAILS, SO WILL WE.

AGENTS WANTED.

Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters have established a wonderful reputation for their marvelous efficacy in CURING QUICKLY

COLDS, COUGHS, ALL CHEST AND LUNG TROUBLES, | NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM KIDNEY, LIVER, STOMACH | TROUBLES, SPRAINS, ACHES AND BRUISES.

NO COLD FEET

Price, 50 Cents.

A WORD ABOUT OUR ELECTRIC INSOLES.

They are simple in construction, astonishing in their effect, they prevent and assist in curing many forms of disease arising from wet and cold feet in winter, keeping the feet at one even temperature, prevent chilling, sweating and consequent discomforts. A grand adjunct when worn with our Plasters. Thousands suffer to-day the result of wet and cold feet which might easily and positively have been prevented by this simple remedy.

Remit $1.00 to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y., mentioning this paper, and you will promptly receive, postpaid

FOUR PLASTERS,	Retail, - -	$1.00
ONE PAIR INSOLES,	Free, - - -	.50
ONE DR'S STORY,	Free, - - -	.25
		$1.75

☞ Mention size of shoe you wear. Write us to-day. It is an opportunity that may never occur again.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

THE GLUTEN Entire Wheat Flour the best and most economical flour made, the only cure for Dyspepsia. Recommended by Physicians. Kenosha Mills Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago.

LADIES DO NOT OVERLOOK THIS.
Something needed in every home. The perfection Flour Bin and Sieve. Takes up but little room, made of tin, is ornamental and indispensable, does away with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops and sieves. A few turns of the handle, and you have enough for a baking. Satisfaction guaranteed, sent by express on receipt of wholesale price, holding 100 lbs. $2.00; 50 lbs, $1.50; 25 lbs, $1.25. Agents Wanted. Sherman, Tangenberg & Co., 160 West Lake St., Chicago Ill.

CATALOGUE FREE
For Agents, Illustrating Useful Household articles & good selling Novelties.
LAUBE COOKER CO., PARK RIDGE, ILL.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHALS UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made. Circulars and prices on application to mf'rg's. A. M. HOWES & CO.,
65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

The PALMYRA (New York) KNIFE CO., will mail for introduction an Elegant Pearl Handled ladies' knife, finest steel, for ONLY 26c. Regular price 50c. Send at once.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

HOLMAN'S PADS.
Holman's Liver Pads cure Malaria,
Holman's Liver Pads cure Biliousness,
Holman's Liver Pads cure La Grippe.
All druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of $2.00.
HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.,
81 John St., N. Y.

Silk Satin & Plush Remnants for Crazy Patch. a large pkg. pretty pieces, assorted col. & our ill. story paper 3 mos 10c. The Little Giant, St. Louis

8TH WONDER and other new positively fastest sellers on earth. Sold only by EMPIRE MFG. CO., 62 Varick Street, N. Y. Agents, either sex, write at once for outfit.

RIDGE'S FOOD The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

KNITTING MACHINE

The New Branson Knitting Machine is the most perfect machine invented for either family or manufacturers' use. Seamless Hosiery of all sizes, with heel and toe complete, of either cotton or wool, also single and double Mittens are knit on these machines. Boys and girls of 12 years operate them, and in factories turn out 4 dozen pairs a day each. A family can make a living with one of these machines. Descriptive circulars sent free.
Jesse L. Branson,
30 East 4th Street, CINCINNATI, OHIO.
Send 25 cents for pair of woolen socks, stockings or mittens knit on machine. Give size.

Ask your dealer for FARGO'S $2.50 Ladies' Boot, and if he does not keep them, send to us for the style and size you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Send for descriptive list of styles. A pocket mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO.,
Chicago.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE"
CORDED CORSET WAISTS
are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them

JERSEY FITTING,

Union under-garments. In wool, silk and wool, Jaeger, Jaeger and silk, and pure silk.
Send stamp for prices and samples.
Illustrated catalogue of Hygienic garments free.
MISS E. C. PAGE,
30 E. 14th St., New York.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE.
REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!
GOLDEN ROD —IN— COLORS!
WE will send you this BEAUTIFUL STUDY (Our National Flower) GOLDEN ROD in COLORS! and a list of LIDA CLARKSON'S COLORED STUDIES, also our 1890 PREMIUM LIST, and a three months' trial subscription to Ingalls' Home Magazine, (a finely-illustrated 64-page $1 Monthly Magazine, devoted to FANCY WORK, ART PAINTING, etc., etc.) all for ten 2c. stamps (20 cents). We make this liberal offer to introduce the Magazine into new homes.
Address J. F. INGALLS, Publisher, Lynn, Mass.
OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA

Has made its annual report to the Auditor of State of Illinois for 1889, showing that we had Dec. 31st, 1889, 4206 members in good standing, and $9,794,500 of insurance in force.

Our guarantee fund, invested in 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds, amounted to $10,550.00. And there was in cash in the hands of our Trustee for the mortuary fund, $1,644.09.

We paid nine death-losses in full, coming from eight different States, and amounting to $16,000. We had only one unpaid death-loss of $1,000, which was reported late in December.

Our death-rate was five per thousand.

Our growth has been unprecedented during the year, and the great success of our Association is a demonstration of the value of Total Abstinence as a factor in Life Insurance.

We furnish the cheapest reliable insurance obtainable.

For particulars address.

A. BONNELL, Sec'y,
903 ROYAL INSURANCE BUILDING,
CHICAGO, ILL.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 6.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February 6, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: The Task Before Us—Temperance History—Nicotine and the Clergy 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, God in Love is Over All, by J. E. Rankin, LL.D.—Address to American Women, by William T. Stead—The Pan-American Congress, by Joseph Cook—Is Alcohol a Stimulant?—Review of "Truth in the Case" 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Sights and Insights in a Lecturer's Experience—A Plea for Coffee—Strong Interdictions of Hindu Sages Against Drinking—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, A Lesson—In An Ash Barrel 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning February 9, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, February—Bread or a Stone—A Woman's Allowance—Shall Christ be King of the Nation—A Bit of Ribbon—Step and Step—The Post of Duty is the Place of Blessing 7
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Georgia, Maryland, Kansas, North Carolina, Missouri, An Arkansas Echo of the First Praying Band, New York, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Illinois, South Dakota—News in a Nutshell—A Correction—Miss I. C. De Velling's Lecture Appointments in Eastern Washington 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Promotion of Social Purity—Receipts for Temperance Temple 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15, 16, 17
SIGNAL NOTES: 18

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Ballamy's "Looking Backward" has just been translated into German.

No progress was made last week by the World's Fair committee at Washington.

A "cigarette trust" with a capital of $25,000,000, is the latest proposed gigantic combination of capital.

The English brewery syndicate has purchased four Toledo, O., breweries, for which they paid $3,000,000.

The passage of the bill to refund the direct tax paid by the various states during the war will reduce "the surplus" $20,000,000.

Two important drink bills are before the Danish Parliament. One, a proposal for increased taxation on drink, has become a party question.

Kenosha, Wis., was devastated Sunday morning by a terrific fire, as was also Danbury, Conn., hundreds of thousands of dollars being consumed in the property of each place.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler has resigned the pastorate of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, to take effect the first of April, at which time he will have completed thirty consecutive years of service.

Death has once more entered the home of James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, and on February 2 claimed the eldest daughter, Mrs. Alice Blaine Coppinger, who had been ill since her brother Walker's death.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mr. Christian of Virginia vs. the State of North Carolina, involves an important constitutional question. Can a state be sued without its consent, and be rendered liable for damages? The Supreme Court decides that it cannot.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe is rapidly nearing life's close, and although her vitality is remarkable, she is not expected to live many weeks longer. Her quiet home in Hartford, Conn., is the center of that large part of the world who regard the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as one of the greatest of women.

A GOOD motto for these days is that which Cromwell gave his Ironsides, "Trust God, and keep your powder dry."

"WE cannot make men sober by law," says an objector, and to this the logical reply will be, "No, but you can stop making men drunk by law."

A LATE passer by on Sunday night, discovered smoke issuing from the windows of the residence of Mr. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy. He immediately notified the fire department. The family were aroused by the breaking in of the firemen who, upon reaching Mrs. Tracy's room found her trying to drag her unconscious husband to the window. As they removed him, she, becoming frantic with the heat and smoke, rushed to the window, and jumping out, was crushed on the pavement. Her daughter leaped from another window receiving serious injuries. Two servants were found dead in their rooms. This tragedy, added to the double bereavement in Secretary Blaine's household, casts deep gloom upon cabinet circles.

THE twenty-second annual convention of woman suffragists called by the National American Woman Suffrage Association to assemble in Washington February 18, 19, 20, and 21, promises to be the most interesting and fruitful meeting ever held by these brave and earnest apostles of freedom. Having learned in the school of experience the weakness of divided effort, the re-united society again presents solid columns and unbroken front. There is prospect of a very large attendance. Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton will deliver the annual address and sail for Europe the day following. Her home in future will be with her daughter who lives in London. Mrs. Stanton is seventy-four years of age, and it seems doubtful if she will ever again appear upon this platform in behalf of the cause to which she has given the full service of her long life. The retiring of this veteran from the American work lends pathetic interest to the occasion.

THERE has been a misapprehension in some minds because the exact figures in our annual reports as to the numbers of our members and auxiliaries is less than the estimates thereof. But this is the case in almost every society extending over so wide an area as ours. Nor is the reason far to seek. For instance: A local W. C. T. U. has two hundred members, but when its annual meeting is held, only one hundred and seventy-five have actually paid the dues of that year, hence only that number is reported to the state treasurer and by her to the National Corresponding Secretary. A state of things analogous to this exists in almost every local society of whatever sort. Then as to local auxiliaries: there are scores of these that fall into a temporary lapse of reporting, and almost of organic life, but they are roused up again, often late in the year—too late to be reported, while many others in small towns and villages, or distant and largely unworked districts, are not reported at all. For this reason an estimate is made as to numbers, otherwise great injustice would be done to the actual volume of workers and work.

THE outlook for reforms at Washington is somewhat better than usual. Senator Blair's Educational Bill and the Commission of Inquiry as to the alcoholic liquor traffic, both of which have repeatedly passed the Senate only to find pall bearers in the House Committees, will each find a majority of the latter in their favor, and are likely to be not only reported but enacted. The International Copyright Bill, which passed the Senate of the last Congress but failed in the House for want of time, will doubtless soon become a law. The Breckenridge Sunday Rest Bill for the District of Columbia backed by the District Commissioners and the President, can hardly fail, though it may have to fight. Two laws intended to be halters for the Louisiana lottery have been introduced in the Senate; one by Senator Wilson, shutting out of the mails all newspapers containing lottery advertisements; the other by Senator Colquitt, providing for the forfeiture of charters of national banks that guarantee the payment of lottery prizes. All who believe in honesty should give these bills their support, and by every possible means re-enforce the good citizens of Louisiana, who are seeking to prevent the national robber from getting a new lease of life from the state, when the charter expires in 1893.

"JANET JENNINGS" in a letter to the Independent, gossips charmingly, and to good purpose, of state dinners, cabinet receptions, and "teas" in Washington. After paying the usual tribute to President and Mrs. Hayes, as the most generous in their hospitality of all the incumbents of the White House, and mentioning the fact that Mrs. Hayes was the only one who ever had conviction and courage to banish wine from the Presidential table upon all occasions, she lays a bit of laurel upon the name of Frances Cleveland, who never allowed a wine glass at her plate, and then passes on to the outer circles. In making the rounds of the cabinet receptions, Vice-President Morton's house was the only one where wine was served. It need hardly be said that there is no room for the punch bowl on Postmaster John Wanamaker's table, neither do ex-Secretary and Mrs. Teller ever serve liquors upon any occasion. The writer thinks if the number of temperance houses in the senatorial circle were known, it would cause general surprise, and she makes the assertion that of all social questions the wine question has made greatest advance, and the advance is toward practical temperance. Senator Spooner turns down his glass when a guest, and never serves wine or punch; he has three sons, of whom he says: "My boys shall never see their father drink wine." Senators Frye, Blair, Stockbridge, Ingalls, and McPherson are in the list of truly "honorable" dignitaries who do not prostitute their high position to purposes of debauchery.

SENATOR INGALLS' already famous speech, as given in the Congressional Record, contains a pertinent paragraph not noted in the abridged reports of the daily press. In view of the issue now upon us, this is most significant: "Wendell Phillips, Lloyd Garrison, and Lovejoy were as right in 1850 as they were in 1860, but their appeals fell upon deaf ears in the land of the Puritans. They were mobbed, despitefully treated, reviled and outlawed by the highest social classes. The conscience of New England was never thoroughly aroused to the immorality of African slavery until it ceased to be profitable, and the North did not finally determine to destroy the system until convinced that its continuance threatened not only their industrial independence, but their political supremacy." Frances Willard, John P. St. John, and Haddock were as right in 1884 as they will be in the year of victory. Their appeals, also, "fell upon deaf ears in the land of the Puritans." They were reviled, despitefully treated, and hung in effigy. One of them was the chosen victim of the midnight assassin, as in the illustrious trio mentioned above. Their hour will come, too, for eulogy in the Senate of the United States, and for canonization in the hearts of their countrymen. Has not Mr. Ingalls laid bare the secret of defeat in recent amendment contests? Who doubts that the orator of a future Congress will proclaim the shame of this generation in some such blasting words as these: "The conscience of the American people was never thoroughly aroused to the immorality of the liquor traffic until it ceased to be profitable"?

ONE of the most practical philanthropies to be found in any land is the "Lette-haus" of Berlin. It was founded by Dr. Adolphe Lette in the desire to aid unprotected women, and prepare them for honest self-support. Since his death, some twenty years ago, the institution has been under the supervision of his daughter. The Empress Frederick is a patroness, offering prize medals, counseling with the directresses of the various departments, and in many ways lending the weight of her influence. One branch is a commercial institute giving, in a two years' course, instruction in book-keeping, stenography, banking, and all branches relating to business, besides French and English. The tuition is forty dollars per year. The art school prepares teachers as well as artisans in all kinds of industrial and ornamental drawing and painting, modeling in clay, and designing for gold, silver and bronze work. In the industrial school is taught the cutting and making of every sort of garment; plain and fancy needlework, lace making, crocheting, French flower-making, hair dressing and laundry work. In the school of cookery the classification and analysis of foods is taught. Samples of good and bad materials are shown and the pupil instructed to distinguish between them. Economy is inculcated there beyond the comprehension of an American cook. Type setting is also taught. A rooming house accommodates two hundred pupils, and a café attached serves them meals at a nominal price. Four years ago a "housekeeping school" was opened for the purpose of training domestics for general service. It began with twelve pupils and now has sixty, who lodge in the school, paying about twenty-five dollars a year for board, besides a large day attendance. So admirable is the management, that at these low rates of board and tuition, the institution is self-supporting, and 1,300 pupils have availed themselves of its advantages during the past year. There is a circulating library, an art exchange, and a loaning bank, where small sums of money are advanced at low rate of interest, to pupils who wish to go into business but lack funds. Last year over eight hundred women obtained positions through its employment bureau. Where is the royal patron or patroness who will make possible the establishment of such a philanthropy in America, and by lifting working girls to the dignified plane of intelligent and efficient self-support save many souls from the death of degradation? So may the vexed "servant girl question" be solved for both mistress and maid.

Contributed.

GOD IN LOVE IS OVER ALL.

[From the German.]

BY J. E. RANKIN, LL.D.

God in love is over all.
In the sunshine on snow mountains,
In the flashing streams and fountains,
In the light that swathes earth's ball;
God in love is over all.

God in love is over all.
In the rays of morning glancing,
In the spring-tints so entrancing,
In the thrush's tender call;
God in love is over all.

God in love is over all.
In the spheres in their high motion,
In earth's voices, air and ocean,
In the echoing thunder's hall;
God in love is over all.

God in love is over all.
In the gentle zephyr's blowing,
In the path, the eagle's going;
Watching e'en the sparrow's fall;
God in love is over all.

ADDRESS TO AMERICAN WOMEN.

BY WILLIAM T. STEAD.

[This letter from the great English Champion of Womanhood, to the National W. C. T. U. Convention at Chicago, was unaccountably delayed, and is now given to our readers in the hope that it may thus reach those to whom it was originally addressed.—ED.]

My regret at not being able to speak to you face to face, is tempered by the consolation of being allowed by your president to address to you by letter a word of encouragement and of counsel. Writing on the slope of the Pincian hill on the summit of which Messalina perished, after earning an infamous place among the worst women of the old world, I gladly hail the opportunity of sending a greeting of good cheer to those who stand in the foremost ranks of the best women of the new world. From Messalina to Miss Willard—the world has progressed somewhat, and although the pace seems slow enough, ground has been covered to lead us to thank God and take courage.

To me the most important, and by far the most hopeful movement of our time, is that which is at last securing for women the right to rank as human beings with equal right to equal justice, equal privileges and equal opportunities with the hitherto dominant section of humanity. The great word of the French revolution, which closed the old regime, was the rights of man. The great word of the new era, on the threshold of which we are standing, is the rights of women. The assertion of the principle that there shall no longer be two measures and two standards of right and of wrong, of justice or of injustice, was made in 1789 against the system of caste. The same principle has now to be asserted in the region of sex. It has, as its natural complement, the application of the law, a career open to all who have the capacity, to both halves of the human race. We have not reached the point when it will be regarded as preposterous to exclude a capable person from the highest office in church and state merely because that person is not of one or the other sex. as it now would seem absurd to ostracize all persons who are not of aristocratic descent, but we are getting on, and there is no better gauge of the progress of our civilization than the extent to which our laws defining the rights and privileges of citizenship are becoming color-blind as to sex.

Another great source of encouragement is the immense re-inforcement which science in its demonstration of the working of the law of heredity has brought to all those who are contending for justice for woman. Strange though it appears, it is nevertheless indisputable that to this day, the elementary truth that every child is more or less of an equation between the mental, moral and physical qualities of both his parents, is ignored by the immense majority of the human race. The fact that the woman, when degraded into the mere plaything or the drudge of man, avenges herself unconsciously by transmitting a full measure of her degradation to his sons is obvious. But, instead of regarding every prospective parent as the transmitter to posterity of the sum of all its inherited and acquired capacities, virtues and vices, it is too often supposed to be sufficient to allot different virtues to different sexes. We have taught men to be brave, and women to be chaste. But the child of the cowardly woman and the immoral man starts afresh at the bottom of the ladder, with its full share of the inherited cowardice of the one and the vicious propensities of the other. And then marvel at the slowness of the progress of the race! How is it possible for progress to be more rapid when each sex is taught that it is a matter of no consequence whether or not it neutralizes in posterity the virtues of the other? It is time we were done with this one-legged system, this eternal goose step to which we have been so long condemned. Science teaches us that even if we care nothing for our girls, we must educate the mothers of our boys, not merely in book learning, but in all the manly virtues which we wish to be reproduced in these sons. We must no longer have a different decalogue for the two sexes. The moral law is one that applies equally to both men and women. We have now to teach our women to add to their chastity bravery, and our men to add to their bravery chastity. Otherwise we can no more expect a higher standard in our children than we can expect to pour pure water from a pitcher which we have half filled at a cesspool.

So much for encouragement. Now for counsel as to the future. There are two spheres in which action can be taken; one comparatively small, the other co-extensive with human life. The first is the domain of legislation, the second that of education and public opinion. I have watched with interest and anxiety the efforts made in the various American states to raise the age of consent for girls. I have rejoiced to note the success which has followed these efforts in some states. I have marvelled at the supineness, or worse, which has rendered the attempt abortive in others. Alike on grounds of science and of morality, the man who is guilty of compassing the ruin of the immature girl is a criminal, and should be treated as such. I hope you will not relax your exertions until you have made every legislature in the Union do its duty in this respect.

But when all has been done by the law which the law can do, the great work in hand will remain almost untouched. That work, roughly speaking, may be defined as that of bringing up man's standard of morality to the woman's level. If that is not done, then beyond all gainsaying, the woman will level down her standard to that of the man. Unless we are prepared to see our daughters sowing their wild oats, we must stop the raising of that kind of crop by their brothers. The ideal of female chastity has been artificially fostered for centuries, until it has come to be regarded as almost the only virtue required of a woman. That is irrational, and an archaic survival from the time when woman was the mere chattel, kept by her owner under lock and key in the harem or the zenana. It will pass, nay, it is already passing. One of the inevitable consequences of the woman's movement is, that woman in this respect, as in others, will please herself. Nor will it be surprising if, in the beginnings of her freedom, she should imitate the errors and practice the vices of her brothers. This is the great danger ahead, a danger which nothing can avert, save the resolute insistence upon the obligation of the one law for both sexes. If we cannot level up the men, the women will level down. Our daughters will be in time as immoral as their brothers. Morality, like water, will find its own level, and the water-tight bulkheads, which hitherto have kept the morals of the sexes at different elevations, are leaking at every pore.

The success of our movement depends upon the extent to which it cuts itself absolutely clear from the old idea that the only safety for the morality of man was to keep him as far as possible out of the society of women. We proceed upon an exactly opposite tack. We proclaim that there is no security for the morality of man equal to that of close and intimate association with good women, and that morality as a matter of fact perishes in every realm from which the influence of woman is shut out. So far from seeking to secure purity by practicing seclusion, we believe that the more points of contact and of common interest which can be established between men and women, the less danger is there that they will establish immoral relations.

The development of the brotherly-sisterly ideal is the goal at which we are aiming. Hence we would multiply in every direction points of contact between men and women. Give them more objects of common interest and more opportunities of meeting on common ground, unite them more closely in all public work, accustom them to as intimate friendships and to as enduring partnerships between each other as there are now between men and men, and every step taken in that direction will leave farther and farther in the background the old false and degrading notions of the past.

Until this century electricity was only known to our race in the form of the lightning which shattered the oak and rent the temple, amid the crash of thunder. To-day the thunderbolt is tamed and the lightning carries the messages and acts as universal handmaid of man. We have not got rid of thunderstorms, but we have utilized electricity. So it will be with sex. We shall not get rid of the crimes and follies which attend its abuse, but we are beginning to discover its uses. The one great hope of the world lies here.

I wish to say an earnest word to the women of America who are intrusted with so prominent a place in the vanguard of human progress. I have observed with real dismay, the growth of a strange and unnatural prejudice in the minds of some women in your country against marriage.

I hope that the doctrines propounded with the utmost earnestness and propagated with the utmost energy, have not bitten deeply into the life of any but a very few of the women of America. But as some of those who receive them may be among the best and most influential of their sex, I venture to speak on this matter. One of the most disastrous reactions against the extreme immorality of Imperial Rome was the extent to which the early church exalted celibacy at the expense of marriage. We have not worked out clear from all the evil consequences of that exaggerated recoil even to this day. It would be a fatal blunder if, in the attempt to promote a purer life in our own times, any of us were to fall into the old error of regarding marriage with feelings at all akin to those which prevailed in the first centuries of our era. Sex is the great basic fact f life. No system which ignores it can last. Every attempt to set up a morality at variance with this law of nature, is predoomed to a disastrous failure. The true human unit is neither man nor woman, it is both man and woman. Marriage is the true and perfect state. No greater harm could be done to the cause which we have so much at heart than the spread of the doctrine, which is entertained more or less widely by many women, that there is something shameful in marriage.

When the inspired writer desired to express the highest and the holiest conception of spiritual blessedness, he could not discover any illustration more fitting than that of husband and the wife. The church is to her Lord what the bride is to the bridegroom. And when in the fullness of time, it was ordained that the Lord of glory should take flesh and dwell among men, it was in this region alone that the great mystery of the incarnation was accomplished. Marriage and maternity are and will always remain the greatest factors in a woman's life. The more we exalt purity, the more must we honor marriage and make it honorable. That is my last word to the convention.

Rome, Italy.

THE PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

BY JOSEPH COOK.

There is on this continent now no slave and no king. Four hundred years ago Columbus discovered America, but it is hardly too much to say that North America has not yet discovered South America. Our trade with the Republics that are making such astonishing progress south of the equator, is scandalously small. In proportion to population, Uruguay, as Whittaker's Almanac affirms, is the best foreign customer of Great Britain. England subsidizes lines of steamships to advance her already vast South American trade. Every proposal to give national aid to American steamship lines on the high seas has hitherto failed. We grant enormous subsidies to railroads, but none to ships. Intercommunication by land government encourages by gifts of millions of dollars, but treats with coldness, parsimony, and positive neglect, intercommunication by sea.

The meeting of the Pan-American Congress is a strategic opportunity for the advancement of American international commerce. Secretary Blaine has long been fully alive to the high importance of this occasion. The country at large and Congress as a whole are far from being sufficiently alert in entering this open door. Subsequent generations will wonder that the practical citizens of this Republic so long allowed British rivalry to crowd North America out of her natural commercial relations with South America.

Slavery has been swept out of the valley of the Mississippi, and also from that of the Amazon. The valley of the Congo is open to civilization. The combination of these three great events has been brought about by no human power. It is evident that Providence has great designs, of which the development of America, under free labor, forms a part. It is the duty of all lovers of freedom to second these designs. The leaders of the slaveholders' rebellion had the secret purpose of building up around the Gulf of Mexico, and under the equator in South America, an empire founded on human bondage. This purpose has been frustrated forever. But it remains a truth of history that white men have never labored continuously in fields on which the snow never falls. The bronze and the black races must be the toilers of the tropics. Millions of colored laborers are needed to develop the vast industrial and commercial capacities of equitorial America. By consecrating this continent to free labor, Providence, no doubt, means to educate the colored populations of our hottest climates. It probably means, also, to train on this side of the Atlantic industrial, educational and religious missionaries for the Dark Continent.

Those regions which the upholders of slavery intended to make a house of bondage are likely to be employed by Providence as a school-room for future leaders of the colored population throughout the world. Only physical toil can develop the almost inexhaustible resources of tropical South America. That toil will educate a race of independent colored workingmen, and will give wealth to the organizers of their industry.

A great struggle, no doubt, will yet be necessary to save the toiling population of the tropics from peonage, and the unjust domination of unscrupulous white minorities. Perhaps this struggle may contain bloody episodes. Out of it the bronze and black populations will come forth educated as leaders of the races to which they belong. These results are not too great to be hoped for from the influence of political liberty, diffused education and Protestant Christianity.

South America, however, lies largely in the temperate zone. The Argentine Republic has a climate as well adapted to give vigor to its population as that of the northern half of the United States; so has Chili; so has Uruguay. Already the commercial centers of these republics are attaining commanding commercial importance. The banking houses of Buenos Ayres are as palatial as those of New York. So many Catholics in the most advanced Republics of South America have practically ceased to be Romanists, that education is making admirable progress in spite of the opposition of the clerical party. In many South American states Romish parochial schools have been abolished. A fine is exacted in Chili from any one who sends a pupil to a monk or nun for regular instruction. Jesuits have been expelled from all positions of authority in politics and education. Protestants of North America, and especially of this Republic, have much to learn from the alert caution of enlightened Catholic laymen in South America in resisting Jesuit aggression.

It is a cheering sign of the times, that arbitration as a remedy for war is now proposed by the Pan-American Congress as a rule for the whole continent. It will not be surprising if railway intercommunication is opened within a few years across the Isthmus of Panama, between the two halves of our hemisphere. More important, however, than the highest commercial and political advantages are the educational, industrial and religious promises of enlarged intercourse between all the Republics of America, Let them lock hands. Under the light of Northern Bear and Southern Cross let them work out for themselves by the Divine blessing destiny that shall be an inspiration and pattern to humanity in every zone.

IS ALCOHOL A STIMULANT?

A SYMPOSIUM BY EMINENT PHYSICIANS.

Few scientists at the present day would venture the assertion that alcohol is the "elixir of life." But, notwithstanding this fact, the teachings of the past have become so firmly impressed on the popular mind, that many still claim the drug to be a "stimulant" in small doses, and a narcotic in large ones. This theory, which opens the way to the indiscriminate use of liquor, on the plea of its stimulating effects, is boldly controverted by modern investigators of such eminence in science and medicine that their conclusions must rest unchallenged until their opponents can prove them wrong—which they have not yet done.

It is the purpose of this article to present a résumé of these conclusions, for the consideration of candid and thoughtful minds.

Dr. N. S. Davis, of Chicago, President of the International Medical Congress held in Washington, 1886, says:

"The effects of alcohol are simply those of an anæsthetic and organic sedative. Like ether or chloroform, its presence diminishes the sensibility of the nervous system and brain, thereby rendering the individual less conscious of all outward and exterior impressions. It is this anæsthetic effect of alcohol that has led to all popular errors and contradictory uses which have proved so destructive to human health and happiness. It has long been one of the paradoxes of human action, that the same individual would resort to the same alcoholic drink to warm him in winter, protect him from the heat in summer, to strengthen when weak and weary, and to soothe and cheer when afflicted in body or mind. With the fact now before us, the explanation is evident. The alcohol does not relieve the individual from cold by increasing his temperature; nor from heat by cooling him; nor from weakness and exhaustion by nourishing his tissues; nor yet from affliction by increasing nerve power, but simply by diminishing the sensibility of his nerve structures, and thereby lessening his consciousness of impressions, whether from heat, or cold, or weariness, or pain. In other words, the presence of the alcohol has not yet in any degree lessened the effects of the evils to which he is exposed; but has diminished his consciousness of their existence, and thereby impaired his judgment concerning the degree of their action on him.

"It is the diminution of nerve sensibility that renders the individual first, light, airy, and hilarious, giving the popular idea of excitement or stimulation; second, dull, hesitating, or incoherent in thought or speech, and unsteady or swaggering in gait, a stage popularly recognized as incipient intoxication; and, third, brings on entire unconsciousness and muscular paralysis, constituting dead-drunkenness or complete anæsthesia. These successive stages are developed in direct ratio to the quantity taken."

Dr. James Barr, in a clinical lecture delivered at the Northern Hospital, London, and published in the London Lancet of January 14, 1888, said that Dr. Samuel Wilks, over twenty years ago, "showed that alcohol was not a stimulant in the proper sense of the term, but a sedative."

This quotation Dr. Barr prefaces by saying that not one word which Dr. Wilks then stated has ever been seriously controverted and certainly never disputed.

"Tonics," he adds, "improve the vascular tone, alcohol diminishes it, yet the idea of its tonic and supporting influence is so strongly rooted in the public mind that it is often difficult to restrain the friends of patients from administering it in cases where it would be highly injurious."

In his Cantor Lectures on Alcohol, delivered before the Edinburgh Society of Arts, Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, M. A., F. R. S., an eminent London physician, says: "Certain chemical agents can so influence the organic nervous chain as to disturb its functions, after the manner of a pure physical act. · · · [The nitrite of amyl] by its action on the organic nerves, paralyzes the vessels of the minute circulation; finding this to obtain with one chemical agent, I traced it in others, and found a class of chemical substances, all of which have this same power of relaxing the blood-vessels at their extreme parts. · · · Alcohol possesses the self-same power. By this influence it produces all those peculiar effects which in every-day life are so frequently illustrated. It paralyzes the minute blood-vessels and allows them to become dilated with the flowing blood.

"If you attend a large dinner party, you will observe after the first few courses, when the wine is beginning to circulate, a progressive change in some of those about you who have taken wine. The face begins to get flushed, the eye brightens, and the murmur of conversation becomes loud. What is the reason of that flushing of countenance? It is the same as the flush from blushing, or the reaction from cold, or from the nitrite of amyl. It is the dilatation of vessels, following upon the reduction of nervous control, which reduction has been induced by the alcohol. In a word, the first stage, the stage of vascular excitement from alcohol, has been established.

"The action of the alcohol extending so far does not stop there. With the disturbance of power in the extreme vessels, more disturbance is set up in the other organs, and the first organ that shares it is the heart. With each beat of the heart a certain degree of resistance is offered by the vessels when their nervous supply is perfect, and the stroke of the heart is moderated in respect both to tension and to time. But when the vessels are rendered relaxed, the resistance is removed, the heart begins to run quicker, like a watch from which the pallets have been removed, and the heart-stroke, losing nothing in force, is greatly increased in frequency, with a weakened recoil stroke."

In the London Lancet of March 10, 1888, Dr. George Harley, F. R. S., professor in University College, London, writes:

"Alcohol, when taken in small quantity, is in general, said to act as a direct cardiac stimulant, and its stimulating effect is supposed to be due to its possessing the faculty of increasing the muscular power of the heart. I take an entirely different view of the matter, and shall now endeavor to show how the increase in the force of the heart's movements, the quickening of the pulse, the flushing of the face, the congestion of the retinal blood-vessels, as well as all the other visible appearances of accelerated cardiac functional activity, are in reality in no wise due to the stimulating action of alcohol, either on the heart's muscular tissue, or the nerves supplying it, but actually to the very reverse, namely, its paralyzing effects on the cardiac nerve mechanism.

"This may appear a strange idea to those unfamiliar with the advanced theories regarding the accelerating and restraining heart's nerve forces. Nevertheless, it is quite consonant with the results of modern physiological investigations, which go far to prove that every function of organic life * * * acts under the immediate influence of a bifold nerve mechanism. For example, the human heart is endowed with two entirely different and opposing centers of nerve force, and so retroactive are their respective functions that the sole duty of the one appears to be to regulate and control the functions of the other. To the former has been given the name of the inhibitory, or restraining mechanism; to the latter, that of the exciting, or accelerating nerve agency. * * * Alcohol acts on the heart, I believe, in precisely the same manner as atropia does, although less strongly. That is to say, it quickens the heart's action, as well as apparently increases its power, by paralyzing its restraining, or inhibitory, nerve mechanism.

"This, however, is only the primary action of alcohol on the cardiac organ, for no sooner is the quantity administered sufficiently increased, than all its at first apparently stimulating effects vanish. From its now possessing adequate power to paralyze the accelerating as well as the retarding cardiac nerve mechanism, the heart's action, therefore, now becomes diminished, pari passu with the amount of the paralyzing agent employed, until at length (if a sufficiency be given), the cardiac movements are totally arrested and death closes the scene."

Prof. John Fiske, of Cambridge, Mass., is authority for the statement that "The flushing of the face [produced by alcohol] is caused by the paralysis of the cervical branch of the sympathetic nerve. This symptom usually occurs some time before the conspicuous manifestation of the ordinary signs of intoxication, which result from paralysis of the cerebrum; we may search in vain among the phenomena of intoxication for any genuine evidences of that heightened mental activity which is said to be followed by a depressive recoil. There is no recoil, there is no stimulation. There is nothing but paralytic disorder from the moment narcosis begins."

The late A. B. Palmer, M. D., LL.D., of the University of Michigan, author of a treatise on "The Science and Practice of Medicine," which takes high rank among other works on the subject, says:

"In disease the inhibitory or restraining nerves are often paralyzed, or weakened, leading to certain increased, unrestrained, and irregular actions, readily mistaken for stimulation, or the manifestation of real increase of power. Paralysis of the splanchnic nerve causes increased peristaltic motion of the intestines, and the paralysis of the inhibitory nerve of the heart increases the frequency of its beat; but in neither of these cases has the real power of the organ been increased, only a restraining, governing influence been removed; and like the removal of a pendulum from a clock, or the balance-wheel from a watch, the same, or even a less force, will cause a more rapid motion of the machinery. Increased but exhausting activities in different directions, often result from positive weakness, and increased sympathetic actions are generally evidences of exhaustion or debility.

"The importance of these facts in understanding the action of various agents, medicinal or toxic, must be apparent. Overlooking them has given rise to serious errors in regard to the effects of alcohol, opium, and various other narcotic substances."

One of the highest authorities on poison, Professor Christison, affirms that "alcohol constitutes a powerful narcotic poison." Even Dr. Anstie, who is quoted with satisfaction by the friends of alcohol, in his "Stimulants and Narcotics" (London, 1864), denies even the temporary strengthening of the body from alcohol, and arrives at "one distinct conclusion, the importance of which seems very great—namely, that (as in the case of chloroform and ether) the symptoms which are commonly described as evidences of excitement, depending on the stimulation of the nervous system preliminary to the occurrence of narcosis, are in reality an essential part of the narcotic, i. e., the paralytic phenomena."

Dr. James Edmunds says: "Alcohol is never a stimulant at all when we come to examine it. It never acts like anything but a paralyzer. What are the reasons for which it has been argued that alcohol in small doses is a stimulant, instead of a narcotic, as it is in full doses? These: that while in the one the brain is paralyzed, in the other the man will talk faster; that while in the one the man's heart is paralyzed and his vessels distended, in the other the man's heart acts more vigorously, and his pulse beats more strongly. And it is inferred, that because his heart beats more strongly, and the blood-vessels seem to be more active, the circulation must go on more actively, and that in cases of fainting and in case of accident the circulation will be kept up where otherwise it would fail. Let me ask if there is not a more probable explanation of the force with which the heart acts under the influence of a small dose of alcohol, than that of supposing that the influence is in the one case that of a narcotic, in the other that of a stimulant.

"We have an analogy in the act of breathing. When we see a man breathing quietly, we know that he is comfortable, but when we see a man with asthma, we know that the air cannot get into his chest, nor its circulation go on right in his lungs. What do we see? We see him breathing with most wonderful vigor, let us call it? Is that any better for the man? Is that any indication that he has got more air? No physiologist would for a moment suggest that it was. He would say that the terrible breathing we see where an asthmatic patient leans out of the window and strains all his breathing muscles to gasp for air, was an indication he could not get air into him, instead of an indication he got more air. Yet, this is a precisely analogous illustration, and the parallel will hold if we analyze it by every scientific and physiological test. . . .

"In case of slow suffocation by carbonic acid gas, death is caused by a gradual asphyxia, so precisely like that caused by extreme drunkenness that nothing but the actual presence of alcohol in the body would enable the physician to tell one from the other. But until the narcosis has extended to every part of the body, we get effects like those primary effects of alcohol which are called stimulating, that is, we get violent and rapid pulsation of the heart, etc., etc. Yet carbonic acid gas is the most perfect type of narcotic poison.

"The so-called stimulating effects of alcohol are really only finer shades of that same narcotic influence which produces general stupefaction and universal paralysis when the agent is given in large doses."

In the Medical Temperance Journal of April, 1882, Dr. J. J. Ridge, after a full description of elaborate experiments, says: "Alcohol has clearly no right to be called a stimulant. It is a narcotic from first to last, as Dr. Wilks and others have heretofore asserted, and the symptoms of stimulation are only the result of a peculiar balanced condition of many functions, between accelerating and checking nerves; the narcotizing of a checking nerve producing for the time being the same visible effect as the stimulation of an accelerating nerve."

In Our Day for September, 1888, Professor C. Bunge, of the Chair of Physiological Chemistry in the University of Basle, Switzerland, says: "In general, let it be understood that all the workings of alcohol in the system, which usually are considered as excitement or stimulation, are only the indications of paralysis."

We submit that until this "expert testimony," with its reasons for the same so clearly stated, is proven false, the claim that "alcohol is a stimulant," or that it is "both a stimulant and a narcotic," is not sustained. Modern research, making special study of the inhibitory nerves of the body and the effect of alcohol upon them, discards the phrase, "alcoholic stimulants," and explains the effects of alcohol on the living body by its narcotic nature.

REVIEW OF "TRUTH IN THE CASE."

Prepared by Order of the National Executive Committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP, - Michigan.
MRS. HENRIETTA L. MONROE, Ohio.
MRS. FANNIE RASTALL, - - Kansas.
MISS ELISABETH TOBEY, - - Massachusetts.
Sub. Com.

TRUTH APPLIED.

The pamphlet entitled "The Truth in the Case," issued by the President of the Iowa union, is a remarkable production in more ways than one. The effort to offset "Facts" (a leaflet issued by our General Officers) with "Truth," apparently required the suppression of a part of the facts and the misconstruction of others.

Referring to the by-law which declares that "No state union shall be bound by any principles espoused by the N. W. C. T. U.," on page 14, Mrs. Foster says: "It has not governed the policy of the National union. Iowa, which has been pronounced in opposition to this policy, has been called a 'refractory child,' and Iowa women who have made open protest against this policy have been called 'obstructionists.' This is the truth in the case."

Pages 78 to 112 are devoted to personal opinions of women in Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Connecticut, Arkansas, California, Nebraska, Maine, and Massachussetts, in an endeavor to prove "Iowa not alone." Why are these not called "refractory children" and "obstructionists"? Because a difference of opinion does not make them such, and because in no state outside of Iowa has the minority been so "refractory" as to publicly, and aggressively, and persistently, antagonize the policy of the National, or to "obstruct" convention work in the determination to compel a constantly increasing majority to accept the views of a constantly decreasing minority.

On the same page (14), Mrs. Foster refers to a by-law adopted in 1888 (it was 1886), forbidding discussion on party questions in the National Convention, and says: "This by-law was without parallel in the history of popular legislative bodies. It declares any resolution referring to our attitude toward political parties shall be decided by vote without discussion. It was adopted by a large majority without a word of protest from the National President."

Statement by Mrs. Rastall.

As the originator of that by-law, which has so frequently been called the "gag-law," I would ask why Mrs. Foster did not give the entire motion a place in her book, as the preamble gave a good and sufficient reason for the presentation of the motion which it preceded, and thus give the whole "Truth in the Case"? The why of it is as follows:

During the constitutional amendment campaign in Kansas, Mrs. Foster aided materially in platform work, and won our admiration for her wonderful ability and legal acumen, as she argued for constitutional prohibition; she was one of the few national workers I had met and admired previous to the St. Louis National convention—the first I had the privilege to attend. At the Kansas state convention immediately preceding the St. Louis meeting, our political influence had been considered, and the state union had declared that its sympathies were with that party in state and nation which would outlaw the saloon and protect the home. How could W. C. T. U. women, uninfluenced by partisans in home or society, do otherwise? Even Mrs Foster confessed her honest impulses were as ours, when at the Anti-Saloon Republican Convention in Cooper Institute, New York, in May 1888, she declared:

"I do not wonder that so many of the W. C. T. U., the grandest organization of women in existence, headed by the noble lady who leads them, Frances E. Willard, who stands without a peer, have gone over to the Third party. Do you ask why I have not lost my head and gone with the rest! I might have gone but for my environments, but for my own dear husband. It took almost authority to hold me."

Those who were not held by "authority," but by conviction, were amazed at this St. Louis convention, at the position taken by Mrs. Foster and others, on that memorable Saturday, when the debate, continuing from ten o'clock a. m. until five p. m., with intermissions only for prayer and for lunch, ended in pledging our influence to that party which declared for our principles by a vote of one hundred and eighty-eight to forty-eight. But none dreamed that the question was unsettled, or that year after year in executive committee and in open session, by every device known to political manipulators, the question would be obtruded again and again. We learned of Mrs. Foster that "she was more skilled in political matters" than any of us, or else she had skilled political advisers, as she used the ability we admired only to antagonize or annoy. Nearly as much time was consumed at the Philadelphia and Minneapolis conventions as was given to the original debate, with a constantly increasing majority vote to sustain national action; but no new arguments were introduced—nothing but a recapitulation of those submitted at St. Louis, never again so impressive. Weary indeed, were those who desired that, having declared our convictions, our attention be given to our educational and evangelistic work. As the debate dragged along at the Minneapolis convention, I wrote the following, and submitted it as soon as opportunity offered:

"Having for three years thoroughly discussed and established by a large majority vote our position in regard to the Prohibition party,

"Resolved, That hereafter any resolution referring to our attitude toward political parties be decided by vote without discussion."

That is the whole truth.

"Miss Willard did not protest."

Why should she? Mrs. Foster did not. Why not? Miss Willard had not considered it; and if she had protested she might have given cause for the charge made on page 24, that she plans to control convention action. It was not necessary for Miss Willard to protest. The convention was composed of women who think for themselves. This certainly was an independent action. The originator and those who voted for it alone are responsible. And what a relief it seemed. The audible sigh escaping from almost every member of the convention when this by-law was read testified to appreciation of an effort to prevent "obstruction."

After this action, as stated by Mrs. Rastall, Mrs. Foster gave notice that she, or some one in her place, would, at the next meeting, move an amendment to the constitution declaring the National W. C. T. U. non-partisan. Of course this would re-open the question. But the convention is superior to any member of it, and has the right to decide what motion it will entertain and consider, and no one will deny its right to "table" anything it wills not to consider. Mrs. Aldrich was the "some one," and it was remarked that, at the Nashville convention she was a "standing protest against prohibition."

The action of the obstructing minority justified the passage of the by-law. It was not anchored in the constitution, as the minority desired their "gag" should be, as stated by Mrs. Ellen M. Watson. (See Penn. White Ribbon, November, 1889.)

"I was your corresponding secretary for ten years, * * * and wanted a constitution that would prevent unfriendly discussion."

The results in Iowa of a non-partisan constitution prove it to be a more effective "gag" than a by-law.

Mrs. Foster declares this by-law to be "without a parallel in the history of popular legislative bodies." The occasion was without parallel in philanthropic or religious bodies.

The National W. C. T. U. is not a legislative body. It makes no laws and refuses to govern. Its constitutional law is all that is binding upon its constituency, and that is voluntarily assumed. It governs only itself—that it must do. Plans of work and principles recommended are simply advisory. It is in no sense a "legislative body," and Mrs. Foster knows it. Its conduct must be without parallel, as is the organization itself.

Mrs. Foster's discussion of non-sectarianism as compared with non-partisanship, is exceedingly delusive. The attitudes of the W. C. T. U. toward the church and toward the state, are not and cannot be parallel. There is absolutely no similarity; there can be no comparison. The church has a conscience; the state has none. The church is controlled by righteousness; the state by public policy. The church antagonizes and destroys evil; the state obeys popular dictation. The church declares for no compromise with sin, as the only way to secure a reign of righteousness. A published determination to uphold a party regardless of its declared principles is out of harmony with Christian relationships, and indicates a subserviency to policy, not principle. A few temperance pleaders within the party have little influence against the solid ranks of liquor dictators. On page 19, Mrs. Foster says: "Every temperance woman should oppose the action of any party, but not oppose the party." How can one be done without the other, and the opposition be felt? It is waste of time to oppose the action of the party unless you do it at the polls. No other opposition counts. Opposition that has influence must jeopardize success. The kindest thing Christians can now do for the Republican party is to so unite in support of prohibition that the success of the party would be endangered until it recognized their demands and supported their principles, and thus compel it to again be the party of great moral ideas and the champion of the greatest reform of the age. Who, then, among us would antagonize it? Meantime, how can we antagonize the action of a party without antagonizing the party? Have Iowa women learned how to antagonize the action of the National W. C. T. U. without antagonizing the organization? I think not. It is to be regretted that Mrs. Foster's intimacy with political methods incline her to an effort to shape the action of the National W. C. T. U. by the system which governs them—policy—instead of being controlled by the abstract principles of righteousness.

On page 26, in discussing the same leaflet, Mrs. Aldrich says:

"This absurd and unreasonable homage paid to our National President · · · was once significantly illustrated in an executive committee meeting, where the renomination of a superintendent of one of the departments was being considered. · · · Objections to her renomination were earnestly presented, among others, that this lady had declared that Miss Willard was not a safe leader, and when the convention rose to receive the president elect, this superintendent remained in her seat. Could party spirit ever descend to anything more pitiful? And this was soberly presented as a reason why this superintendent should be deposed."

Where was the party spirit? In the heart of the superintendent who refused to recognize the National President? A lady fit to occupy the important office referred to, should be the embodiment of a courtesy which overcomes personal feeling. But does Mrs. Aldrich hold the National officers or the executive committee responsible for a reason brought before them by one of their number which did not control action? Was not that superintendent renominated in spite of these considerations? Mrs. Aldrich would not credit us with the fact that the minority have presented protests and reasons for protests which have not influenced action. Why did not Mrs. Aldrich tell the whole truth, and assure her readers that these reasons were not allowed to influence the action of the National executive committee, but that, despite the most violent opposition, one-eighth of the superintendents nominated by the executive committee belong to the protesting minority, which at the Chicago convention had a representation of less than one-twentieth of the whole number in attendance. And who betrayed the action of the executive committee?

Correspondence.

SIGHTS AND INSIGHTS IN A LECTURER'S EXPERIENCE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—We have had a series of county and district conventions in Missouri since the National Convention at Chicago. I have been present at most of these, and find our women as firm, true and loyal as ever, in spite of "wars and rumors of war," more of the latter than the former. My work for the last two months has been in some of the most conservative, non-progressive towns of the state. These have colleges or state institutions, or both. In Lexington there are three schools for girls, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist. One of our most aggressive W. C. T. U. workers is connected with the latter. Missouri wants her daughters educated, but every one of her denominational schools for girls (and their name is "legion") is under the direction of men principals or presidents, most of whom are thoroughly grounded in the good old Pauline doctrine of woman's silence and subjection. Not a woman stands at the head of a denominational school in the state. As was truly said in the General Conference in New York, "Every woman admitted to such a place would displace some man."

While in Lexington I learned that at the last State Association of the Baptist Church, the proposition to do away with the Woman's Board of Missions in that church was brought forward and boldly championed by some of its ablest ministers. I asked, "Will the women disband their board?" And the answer was, "Never!"

The pastor of the M. E. Church South at Lexington, declared before I came that he could not coöperate with the W. C. T. U., because in their convention they declared for woman's suffrage; that he would prefer the saloons to enfranchised womanhood—a remark, by the way, not original with him—but first uttered by a Kansas City divine. These good brothers have the preference of their hearts, the saloons, and not enfranchised womanhood.

Rev. M. A. Gault, of Iowa, western agent of the National Reform Association, recently conferred with the clergy of St. Joseph about holding a convention there in the interests of the National Sunday Rest Bill. A Presbyterian pastor was heartily in favor of the meeting until he learned that our National and state superintendents of Sabbath observance, Mrs. Bateham and Mrs. Shaw, were to be present, and take part, when he positively declined having anything to do with it, and gave his reason; i. e., Paul's command for woman's silence. Yet even that good, but narrow man encourages women not permitted to speak or pray in his church prayer-meetings to go out to the uttermost parts of the earth, preaching and teaching the Gospel to heathendom.

That stalwart Presbyterian and friend to woman, Rev. Geo. P. Hays, of Kansas City, invited Mrs. Sophia Grubb to speak in his church, and afterwards secured her a hearing before the Ministers' Alliance of Kansas City. Another Presbyterian pastor (not a stalwart) protested, and to the credit of the intelligence of that Alliance, was the only minister who would not hear Mrs. Grubb. He declared that he "should blush to the bone to hear a woman speak in meeting." I could laugh were not my pity so great. At Warsaw, Mo., I found the Farmers' Alliance, of Benton county, in annual convention. The W. C. T. U. asked it to adjourn its evening meeting, giving the union use of the court-house for the lecture, which it did, and attended our meeting in a body. I spoke very plainly on prohibition and equal suffrage, and received the most respectful attention from these plain working-men. Before closing their meeting the next day, they unanimously passed a resolution of thanks for the W. C. T. U. lecture, and bade the speaker Godspeed in her work for "temperance and equal rights." This from the farmers of central Missouri.

At last we have a union at Jefferson City, thanks to the persistence of our state organizer, Mrs. Harford. Years ago we formed a union there, but it was frightened to death by the rumor of woman suffrage. Our capital, and many towns along, and near the Missouri river, have been the very hardest parts of the state to reach. In them are our state institutions, and most of them have colleges and schools. They have been, and are to-day, the very Gibraltar of unreasoning prejudice. In all these places are true, good and sensible women. Just as soon as they begin to read THE UNION SIGNAL, or some progressive woman's journal, and learn what advance woman is making all over the world, "a change comes o'er the spirit of their dream;" they begin to think and decide for themselves, even to the reading and judging of Scripture. The day has dawned, even in Missouri, when woman will resent any and all attempts to define and fix her sphere in church and state; rightly deeming herself the only capable judge in that matter.

At Fayette, where the union dared not even whisper such a terrible thing as equal suffrage, and were afraid to let me speak for fear I should breathe it, we held the sixth district convention. The president of the M. E. College there, invited me to conduct chapel services, an honor never before accorded to woman. I was sorry my train left so early I could not accept the invitation.

At Fulton is located one of our insane asylums, also an asylum for deaf and dumb; Westminster College for young men and a synodical school for girls. Our everlamented Rose Phillips often tried to make an appointment for me there. A few would gladly have welcomed me, but prejudice was so bitter, and opposition so strong that every effort failed. Finally, young Dr. Vaughn, Prohibitionist and Presbyterian, (a good combination) invited me to Fulton. He hired a hall, advertised the meeting, met the speaker at the train, and "took her to his own house" where she found his wife in hearty accord with all the young husband had done.

The young doctor found some trouble in securing a minister willing to "pray at a woman's meeting," but Dr. Wright, whose wife is Julia McNair, was present, and did not hesitate at all to pray, even under such delicate circumstances! I was introduced by N. D. Thurmond, ex-legislator, who bravely and gallantly broke all the ice and gave me clear sailing with the audience.

I believe Mesdames Wright, Reed and Vaughn have come to the kingdom of Fulton for such a time as this. I did not fail to express my belief.

CLARA C. HOFFMAN.

A PLEA FOR COFFEE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—An article on coffee at the polls in THE UNION SIGNAL for December 5, has just come to my notice, and I wish others to know how much good our work in that line has done. The following was sent by a voter in a distant part of the town to a county paper last spring: "A new and very pleasant feature was introduced into the Belmont town meetings by the ladies of the W. C. T. U., who furnished lunch and hot coffee free to all who wished them. The meetings and surroundings were the most quiet and orderly that have been known in Belmont for years."

On two election days we sold lunch and coffee in a room which the voters would pass on their way to the hall. We were well patronized, and though there was some "chaff," it was mostly good-natured; and but very few smoked in the vicinity after they saw us. At another election, not having the use of the same room, we did not furnish lunch. Liquor was abundant; fights, insults, and inmates in the lobby were the results.

A voter who met one of our women said, "We missed you at the last election and had a pretty hard time," and made her promise that we would furnish coffee at the spring election. Being refused the use of the anteroom by the owner of the hall (we have no town hall) we prepared fifteen gallons of coffee which, with doughnuts, were sent to the hall at noon, after most of the voting was done, by young men who thanked us for the privilege of helping. They also distributed literature. The coffee was sent for the purpose of doing good, not for obtaining votes, as it was understood that every boy and young man present too young to vote was to be supplied with all the coffee he wanted.

The policeman's wife said at night that her husband had found it very different from the last election; he had had nothing to do that day. We do not say that the difference was wholly the result of our work, but we do believe that God blessed our efforts and permitted the voters of this town to see the difference between the influence of coffee and intoxicants. Contributions were sent in sufficient to defray all expenses, many of them from the voters themselves. We cannot estimate the good accomplished, but we believe it is much better to distribute the coffee freely, and not to voters alone

LIZZIE A. YOUNG.

STRONG INTERDICTIONS OF HINDU SAGES AGAINST DRINKING.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—From the following few strong interdictions of our Sastras (religious law books) the ladies of America can have some idea of the strong opposition of the Hindu sages of old against drinking customs. But our British Government, which professes itself as a benefactor of the people it governs, is introducing drinking habits among a well-known abstaining people, the Hindus and Mussulmans, for the sake of revenue.

(1) You should not drink spirituous liquors; nor should you give them to any one, or take them from any one, although offered to you.—The Veda, the most sacred book of the Hindus.

(2) The following acts are considered as most heinous sins—killing a Brahman, drinking spirits, living in undue familiarity with the wife of your spiritual guide, and being in the company of any of the above mentioned sinners for one year.—Laws of Manu, the greatest law-giver of the Hindus, 11th Chap., 55th stanza.

(3) If a Brahman, a Kshatriya, or Vaisya (that is, any one belonging to the priest, warrior or tradesman castes, which are the three highest castes among the Hindus—the sudra, namely the servant caste, being the lowest of the order) drink spirits out of evil propensities, he should drink burning spirit. By dying in this manner, he shall be free from sin.—Do, 11th Chap., 91st and 92nd stanzas.

(4) The gods do not take the Brahman lady who drinks spirits to her husband (in after life).—The Vedas.

(5) If a wicked Brahman, out of his obscured common sense once drinks spirituous liquor, he shall be out of virtue, and shall be plunged into the sin of killing a Brahman. He shall be damned in this and after life.—The Mahabharata, the greatest sacred epic poem of the Hindus, 1st part, 79th Chap.

(6) The actions, which are seen in the administration of all poisons, are more effective in the alcoholic poison.—Charaka, one of the greatest ancient physicians of India.

JNAN CHANDRA BASAK.

Calcutta, India.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

Mrs. Nathaniel Baxter, of Nashville, the honored secretary of the state W. C. T. U. of Tennessee, pledged $100 last June to the Temple fund. She has just paid $50. At that time she wrote: "I want to have my name engraved on the panels in the Memorial Hall of the Temple, so that when my grandchildren shall be in quest of their pedigree they will find my name in the right place." These were brave and noble words. In some cases it is vain display when we give a sum of money to a good cause to herald our generosity t the world by having our name published. Under other circumstances it is the greatest heroism, as in the case f Mrs. Baxter, and other noble women and men who have given $100 towards the Temple. They give their name and money as a protest against the most appalling curse of the age, a curse that has the sanction of both law, custom and fashion, and which commands almost as much money as all the industries of the country put together. It requires heroism indeed to stand up against such a foe. I know we are told in holy writ, "Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth," but there is also the command, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." It often costs men life and fortune to thus choose, and it costs much to-day to stand forth against church and state, custom, wealth and fashion, and range one's self on the side of prohibition.

***

In consideration of the above fact we are sorry that any should hesitate about allowing their name to be used in recording their gift, and we hope a modest white ribboner from Wauseon, Ohio, who has just sent a check for $25 on a pledge for $100, will allow her name to appear when she pays the balance. She says, "I hope we will not be disappointed in the laying of the corner-stone in May. I am so anxious for the work to commence."

There would not be the slightest fear of work on the building commencing soon if all white ribboners who can afford it would follow her example, of pledging their names to the "Hundred Dollar Band," and send in as much money on their pledges as possible. We have now about an hundred names in this band. We must have a thousand. Let those who are thinking about placing their names on this roll of honor, do so at once. We also request that all who have pledges, will send in installments on their pledges as soon as possible, as the money will be required early in the spring.

***

The unions are coming forward nobly with their $100 pledges. The president of the Houlton, Me., W. C. T. U., Mrs. Geo. B. Page, writes in sending for fifty mite-boxes: "We hope in this way to complete our gift of $100 to the Temple this year. We think the scheme the grandest yet, and may God speed the undertaking." This union has already paid on their pledges $60.39.

Mrs. Dell E. Gamer, treasurer of the Le Mars, Ia., W. C. T. U., sends a check for $5, and says that the Le Mars union will try to send $100 for the Temple fund before January 1891.

The following unions in Illinois that have not yet been reported are at work and no doubt will yet each raise a $100, most of them have sent in some money: The Illini W. C. T. U. of Warrensburg; the North Chicago W. C. T. U., the Sterling W. C. T. U., the Windsor W. C. T. U.

The Lorain, Ohio, W. C. T. U. also sends $10; Greenfield, Mass., sends $5; North Adams, Mass., sends $1. This union has but five members. The Hampden, Mass., W. C. T. U., through Mrs. H. E. Sessions, sends $3. She says: "From our little union for the Temperance Temple. It is but a mite, but drops make the ocean." The Hitchcock, Dakota, W. C. T. U., has sent $20, and no doubt in time will finish their $100. The W. C. T. U. Chapin Auxiliary, Washington, D. C., sends $10. Cleveland, Ohio, has at least two loyal W. C. T. U's., both have sent towards the Temple fund. In fact the Central W. C. T. U. of Cleveland was one of the first unions to pledge a $100, and what is still better, they went bravely at work and made money by holding a bazaar, and paid up the entire $100 over a year ago.

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

A LESSON.

A dying buttercup cried to the sun:
"What am I good for? What have I done
To make life worth the living?
You hang aloft in the great blue sky,
Lighting the world with your one big eye,
And you—you are always giving.
But I bloom here in the meadow grass;
The babies smile on me as they pass.
But my life will soon be done, alas!
And what was the use of living?"

The sun looked down on the little sun
That shone in the grass; it was only one
Among a great many others.
Said he: "It is wrong to thus despair.
The great All-Father placed you there,
You and your little brothers;
He meant you should blossom there in the grass
For the babies to smile on as they pass,
Or to be in the bunches that each small lass
Carries to tired mothers.

"God hung me here in the great blue sky
To light the world with my one big eye,
And show men how they're living;
But He put you down on the meadow lot.
The earth is fairer than if you were not;
Beauty and joy you're giving.
I must see to the work He has given me;
You do what the dear Lord asks of thee;
Then all will be as it ought to be,
And life will be worth the living."

—Harper's Young People.

IN AN ASH BARREL.

BY MABEL GIFFORD

(Concluded.)

Put Hackett was Harnah's most hated enemy, her chief tormenter. He called her "Brick-top" on account ot her red hair; he called her "Spitfire" for her quick temper and lively tongue, and many other names equally insulting to poor Harnah. He "set on" all the rest, for he was a bully, and so a sort of leader of the alley, though disliked by all, both old and young.

After the five minutes' silence, came a voice from the barrel, "Well, I sha'n't then, I jest sha'n't!"

There were long silences after this, broken by sudden jerks and emphatic mutterings.

Harnah never felt so out of sorts in her life. There was no sun shining through the cracks making the motes dance, and her head pained her so that she could not sleep, and she ached with the long confinement in her cramped condition.

She listened, and when the sounds in the alley indicated the greatest security from discovery, she undoubled herself and clambered over the fence to go to kind-hearted Mrs. Murphey, who often gave Harnah of her children's dinner. For refusing to go to "Pat's," meant no dinner, no supper, and a beating at night.

Mrs. Murphey condoled with Harnah, and bathed the big bump, giving her the largest share of the children's dinner.

Harnah had no heart to play to-day, so she soon returned to her ash barrel, where, her head being eased, she fell asleep.

When she awoke and looked out, it was dark, very dark, and a drizzling rain falling.

A sudden terror seized her; what time might it be!

Slowly, painfully, she dragged her stiff and aching limbs once more over the high fence, and made her way up the alley. Near the head of it was an empty house with a pile of lumber near for its repairing. Thither she made her way, and sat, a shadow among the shadows, crouched under the friendly pile, keeping sharp watch of the crossing.

She calculated, by the indications about her, that it was not yet late; and after a long, a very long time it seemed to her, the city clock struck nine.

"He'll be late ter night, 'count o' the mud," she said to herself, "trade'll be good."

There she sat and was slowly saturated with the steady drizzle, not being able to get under the boards far enough to keep dry and at the same time have a good view of the crossing. After another long watch, quick footsteps and a lively whistle gladdened poor chilled Harnah.

"Hist!"

There was a sudden halt, and a voice like a challenge called,

"Who's there?"

"What! Brick-top? What's up?"

"I say, Put, don't go no further. There's a pack on 'em waitin' ter thrash ye, down the alley."

"None o' yer gassin' now, Brick-top. What's that in yer han'?" he demanded suspiciously.

Harnah held out a good-sized stone. "Ef eny one hindered me, they was goin' ter git that."

Put leaned down and looked sharply into the girl's face. He knew well enough how Harnah hated him. For her to be up there at that time of night must mean mischief. But as he scanned her face so closely, he noticed a look he never had seen there before.

"Yer don't b'lieve me; come over here 'n' I'll tell ye all 'bout it."

In the shelter of the old door-way, she told him of the dialogue she overheard that morning.

"That's all," she concluded; "yer better not go home ter night. There's a fine lodgin' in under them boards," and Harnah had vanished into the darkness of the rain and mist.

Put stood irresolute. "Ef she's playin' eny trick, she'll wish't she'd never been bornd," he muttered, looking warily up and down the alley.

She seemed honest, and yet it might only be a blind.

Put did not quite like to remain where he was, still less he relished the idea of going on. He was big and strong, but had no means of defence excepting his two hands.

"Ef I only had a club, I'd risk 'em!"

He stood there until the wet began to be uncomfortable, then squeezed himself under the boards, and in a twinkling was fast asleep.

No such bliss awaited Harnah, who made her way once more to her barrel. Fire burned in her veins, torments ran riot in her brain.

"Suthin' ails me," she moaned. "I was most froze, 'n' now I'm burnin' up." But there was no raging in her heart now, and Miss Gracie's eyes looked out of the dark, smiling through tears, "Thank you, Joanna."

The next morning mammy's door flew open with a bang, and a sorry heap of tatters, wet and muddy, tumbled into the room, and from the heap a piteous voice, "Suthin' ails me, mammy."

"I knowd it! I knowd she warn't nat'r'l," and mammy who had begun to be alarmed at Harnah's long absence, and feared she had run away as she had often threatened, was only too glad to see her back in any condition. She could hardly get along without Harnah, and really loved her in her way.

She dragged her to the heap of straw one side of the room, pulled off the sodden rags, put on the faded "Sunday gown," and tried to smooth the matted hair from the throbbing temples, starting back at sight of the dark swelling brought to view.

The big brown eyes, that always looked too large for the thin face, opened wide, and looked strangely at the woman bending over her. Then a voice, strange, too, for it was gentle and so unlike Harnah's, said, "No, mammy, I won't sass ye, but I won't—Oh, how I fit! see! there he goes. Persecute them that hate ye, Miss Gracie said so. She's so sweet, 'n' her dress's so soft, an' she cares."

"What ails the child?" asked the attic neighbor who had come in unobserved.

"She's got the Sunday-school in her head. She ain't going there no more," said mammy, with a frown, covering the big bump with the tangled locks.

It was soon noised all through the alley that Marm Kelley's Harnah had got the fever in her head. A little boy going up the alley at a lively pace, ran plump into Put Hackett coming down the alley, and whistling cheerily.

"Harnah's got the fever in her head. Hain't yer glad?"

Put stopped whistling, boxed the boy soundly, and went straight to the miserable attic where Harnah lay moaning and muttering.

He took no notice of the women gathered there. "Harnah, it's Put; don't ye know me? I've come ter tell ye I won't call ye Brick-top no more. You're a brick without no top, 'n' the pluckiest girl in Haw's Alley. I always liked ter pester yer 'cause yer was so spunky. But I won't no more, 'n' I'll stan' up fer yer every time."

The women stared in half-incredulous amazement, but Harnah only gazed at him blankly, then closed her eyes, and muttered, "Do good ter them that hate ye." Then, after a pause, "Well, I sha'n't then; I jest sha'n't."

The next day was Sunday, and what was the Branch Sunday-school's astonishment to see the bully of Haw's Alley enter and seat himself very coolly, without a word to any one.

When the school was called to order, he arose,—to the awe of the little boys,—and in his big voice said, "Harnah Kelley b'longs here. She's got the fever in her head bad. She's sick up at Marm Kelley's on a heap o' straw."

He turned about to leave the room, when Miss Gracie spoke, and taking him aside learned the story as far as Put knew it.

Very soon after a pretty young lady with tears in her eyes, and a wise-looking doctor, stood by the heap of straw, listening to Harnah. There was a moment's recognition. "I tried 'spectin' mammy, Miss Gracie, but it didn't do no good," then she wandered off again.

"What's this?" asked the doctor, as a movement of the uneasy head revealed the hideous bruise.

"Temper," said mammy, miserable mammy! "Harnah's a good gal mostly, but her temper's very bad."

"If that had been a little this way, it would probably have caused instant death," observed the doctor quietly, to Miss Gracie. Then to mammy, cowering and trembling, "Your daughter is in a very critical condition, and needs the best of care. I shall send a woman here who understands sickness; you must not interfere with her."

Mammy's tortured conscience could bear no more.

"Oh, Mister! I did it. I banged her head with the stove cover. 'Twas all on account of the drink," pointing to a tall brown mug, nicked and cracked, on the rough boards that served as a table. "Mis' Gink, she had gin me a sup the mornin.' It always gits inter my temper, 'n eny one knows that a sup o' drink is no good 'cept ter set yer fierce fer more, 'n' she wouldn't get it. The Lord fergive me! I never'll drink a drop more ef so He'll spare my lam' ter me. Deary me! deary me! that ever I lived ter see the day."

There were many sad days when all, even Miss Gracie and the doctor, feared for Harnah's life; but she lived, and Haw's Alley knows her no more. She and mammy have moved into a comfortable tenement in a quiet street.

There is no brown mug in the new home. Mammy is respectable and industrious, takes washings, and Harnah helps her. Harnah is neither sullen nor "obstinate" now; she is a firm believer in the fourth commandment and the Golden Rule—and her Sunday-school teacher; and Miss Gracie has not yet met total depravity in her class. She smiles more wisely than of old and is not easily dismayed.

Put Hackett is mammy's boarder, and she will tell any one who takes the trouble to inquire, that he is "steady and honest and pays his board reg'lar." He is not a boot-black now; he works on the wharf and is paid by the week.

Harnah never goes ragged or hungry now, and she and Put go to Sunday-school and evening school.

She has no further use for the ash barrel, for she has a neat little room of her own, where she fights her battles.

The Still Hour.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING FEBRUARY 9, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 2:40-52; Joshua 14-19.)

Sunday 9; Luke 2:40-52. Verse 40, A blessed example for children to imitate; they should grow stronger in what is good, and be wise to flee from everything evil and sinful. Verse 46, Children should take a great interest in learning all they can from those who are older and wiser; especially should they learn from Christ by studying His words in the New Testament. Verse 48, Even good children may innocently cause grief. Verse 49, Are we engaged in our Father's business? Verse 52, It is sad to see children who only grow in stature, and who give no evidence of a growth in wisdom and favor. They were beautiful and innocent as little children, but as young people they are coarse and vulgar and vile.

Monday 10; Josh. 14. Verse 7, It is a great blessing in old age to have past good deeds to remember. Verse 8, By the study of the Bible, we should know what God requires of us; it should be our aim each day to wholly follow the Lord our God. Verse 10, Those who live good lives have much comfort in old age by reflecting on God's protecting care, and the fulfillment of His promises. Verses 11 and 12, A Christian ought to obey God's laws relating to his body, and prepare the way for good health and usefulness when he is old.

Tuesday 11; Josh. 15. Verse 12, What we have in this world is a gift from God; and we should never cease to be grateful for all temporal and spiritual blessings. Jam. 1:17. Verse 19, This world is a "southland," without springs. We shall go through it famished if we do not find our way to the "living water" provided for the thirsty. Jno. 7:37; 4:10, 14. In the water of life that Christ gives, there are the "nether springs" of present joy and peace, and the "upper springs" of heavenly anticipation.

Wednesday 12; Josh. 16. Verse 4, These brethren had their land drawn in one lot, so that they might continue to dwell together. It is a beautiful thing where the unity of the family continues on through the adult lives of the children. Verse 10, This letting the Canaanites dwell among them and taking tribute, proved to be a fatal policy. It is the same with churches where, for financial gain, they invite the world to share with them its dissipations and amusements.

Thursday 13; Josh. 17. Verse 4, These daughters in their circumstances inherited the rights of sons. This is one of the early intimations of the better things that were to come to women by the unfolding light of God's revealed Word. The history of the race is full of cruelty and injustice to women. Verse 12, They "could not," because they lacked faith and zeal in God's service. If we love ease and are indolent, we can do nothing to overcome the enemies of our souls, and to conquer the world for Christ. Verse 15, Unbelief and cowardice lead us to complain of our lot, though we have a great deal more than we profitably use.

Friday, 14; Josh. 18. Verse 1, In everything that pertains to building up the Church of Christ, all the people should unite. It is a bad thing for a local church where only a few take an interest and do the work. For more than 300 years the tabernacle remained in Shiloh. Verses 3, 4, We should ever be on the lookout to see how much remains to be done by us, before all the land can be occupied for Christ. Our country would not be endangered by the evils and sins which threaten to ruin us, if the churches were not "slack to go to possess the land."

Saturday, 15; Josh. 19. Verse 9, The inheritance of Judah was determined before the people had a correct idea of the extent of the land, and this tribe received too much and justice now required a modification of their possession. As soon as we learn our mistakes, we should take steps to correct them. Verses 49 and 50, It is wrong for religious or political leaders to take advantage of the feelings of a willing and grateful people to take all they can get without regard to justice and right. There is no "Word of the Lord" for taking that for which we have not returned an equivalent to the community. Verse 51, The twelve portions of the land were subdivided, so that a piece of land was apportioned to every family in each tribe. Thus a population of more than two millions of people were all made equal in rank, and nearly so in condition. It was an unparalleled thing to do, and the effect was marvelous. The wandering tribes at once became a settled nation of peaceful and industrious agriculturists.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

The Warning of God's Word. Matt. 7:13-29. It is well to meditate much upon God's promises, and upon all the bright and hopeful things which abound in the Word of God; but no one should be guilty of the mistake of neglecting its warnings. Many thus endanger their own souls, and bring others into peril. Consider well the warnings our Lord gives in the lesson:

1. Against Worldliness. Read verses 13 and 14, and consider who are the "few" and who are the "many." To which class do you belong?

2. Against False Teachers. Read verses 15-20. Look at the fruits of the vain philosophies and delusions of our own times, and learn the lesson to "beware of false prophets."

3. Against False Hopes. Read verses 21-23. The judgment day will doubtless reveal that the hopes of many are worth nothing. They are worth nothing unless they are founded upon the everlasting truth of the Gospel.

4. Against False Foundations. Read verses 24-27. There is no folly equal to that of building on foundations that will fail in the time of our real need. Jesus Christ is the Rock of Ages, upon whom we can build with safety. I Cor. 3:11. Eph. 2:20.

The Household.

FEBRUARY.

BY HELEN HUNT JACKSON.

Still lie the sheltering snows, undimmed and white;
And reigns the winter's pregnant silence still:
No sign of spring, save that the catkins fill,
And willow stems grow daily red and bright.
These are the days when ancients held a rite
Of expiation for the the old year's ill,
And prayer to purify the new year's will:
Fit days,—ere yet the spring rains blur the sight,
Ere yet the bounding blood grows hot with haste
And dreaming thoughts grow heavy with a greed
The ardent summer's joy to have and taste:
Fit days—to take to last year's losses heed,
To reckon clear the new life's sterner need;
Fit days—for Feast of Expiation placed!

BREAD OR A STONE.

BY EMMA P. SEABURY.

Prisoned we are within these walls of time,
And through our bars we yearn with hungry eyes,
For all the angels' freedom of the skies.
We cannot fly, we cannot even climb,
We hear their psalms antiphonal sublime,
Beloved, where our souls must agonize
In longing, loneliness and sacrifice.
We ask why are these fetters; what our crime?
We reach out for the touch of some warm hand,
Responsive to the clasping of our own,
Our mutual needs crave human sympathy,
How few we find who see or understand.
Instead of bread they give to us a stone,
Oh! say my friend, which you will give to me?

A WOMAN'S ALLOWANCE.

BY ZENAS DANE.

A year or two before I was married, I boarded one winter with a very excellent family in a Western village. The husband and father was a good man, but he had what his wife called his "touchy points," and, good and honest man though he was, some of these "touchy points" were a life-long source of actual sorrow to his wife, who was a good and faithful wife and mother, tidy, thrifty, and ever watchful of the common interests of the family. She was economical to the last degree, and most industrious. She seemed to me to be a model wife. Her husband thought so, too, and would have angrily resented any imputation to the contrary. He taught his children to honor and love their mother, although failing, as it seemed to me, in manifesting love and honor for her himself at all times; but these times were only when his "touchiest point" had been pressed upon.

One day I accidentally heard the wife say to her eldest daughter, "No, dear, I cannot ask your father for money for a new hat for you. You know how very touchy he is on that point. I sometimes lie awake half the night trying to devise some method of scrimping or saving so that I need not say the word 'money' to your father. Nothing hurts him so much as to be asked for a little money. I dread to think of asking him for anything."

I was engaged to Mrs. Dane at that time, and I made a solemn vow that she should have a purse of her own, and that it should never go empty if I had anything to put in it. We have now been married six years, and I have faithfully adhered to that resolution. And there is no "fixed sum" about it. Household expenses vary at different seasons of the year and under various circumstances. Ten dollars, will, perhaps, cover all the expenses one week, and the next may be a "canning," or a "company" week, and several extra dollars will be required. In any case, I resent the idea that my wife is a mere pensioner on my bounty; I reject the imputation that she has not common sense enough to know the value of money, and dare not be trusted with it. I am not a "woman's righter," in the popular sense of the term, but I thank the Lord that I am man enough to recognize the fact that my wife, as my wife and the mother of my children, has rights, money-spending rights, that I have no ousiness interfering with. Every good wife should have this right as a royal marriage prerogative. I regard Mrs. Dane as an equal partner in the contract under which we have become a firm for life. We share profits and losses alike. There is one money drawer to which we both have free access. I have not the inclination or the right to limit my wife in her daily expenditures so long as those expenditures are within reason. Most wives and mothers honestly earn all they spend. A woman who does her duty as a wife and mother earns more than money can pay for. It must be very humiliating to a woman to have to humbly and tremblingly ask her husband for the money she must have for her actual daily expenses. Any sensitive, womanly woman must feel it something of a degradation to have to thus ask or even coax for money given grudgingly and complainingly at last.

Women are often compelled to practice mean, niggardly, cruel economy in order to make their expenses come within the limit fixed by inexorable husbands, who would furiously resent any interference with their own expenditures.

I believe that this simple question of the wife's allowance has wrecked the happiness of many a household. Men are so often blind and unfeeling and unreasonable in this matter. The majority of women can safely be trusted. Let the husbands of wives thus worthy trust them and this trust will not often be abused.

My own personal experience has been that money is safer with women than with men. Most women can beat a man "all to pieces" making a bargain, and the marketmen and grocers seldom get ahead of them, whereas most men are careless purchasers.

SHALL CHRIST BE KING OF THE NATION?

BY JENNY BLAND BEAUCHAMP.

Every loyal Christian heart must answer this question in the affirmative. But in what sense will Christ be the king of this nation?

The proud, world-renowned city of Florence, at one time, moved by the eloquence of Savonarola, actually elected Jesus Christ, king of Florence. They did it by a fair count and a free vote, just as a nation would declare its allegiance to a foreign prince. They had dethroned the perfidious Medici, and, removing the shields of the King of France and the Pope of Rome, placed the name of Jesus on a tablet over the entrance into the palace. Did that make Him king of Florence?

Would it make Jesus king of America to put His name on the tablet of our constitution? Jesus Himself rejects such hypocrisy, saying, "Why call ye me Lord! Lord! and do not the things I command." We could not make Him king of America by making the distinctively New Testament laws civil laws. The distinctively New Testament laws are baptism and the Lord's Supper, and laws in regard to church order and church officers. The laws primarily founded upon the decalogue are not distinctively New Testament laws; nor is the new commandment, "ye shall love one another," for the Savior tells us this is a brief compendium of the moral law. Nor can we make Him king of this nation by incorporating the morality of the gospel into our civil code. For instance, how could we convict and punish a man for what the Savior defines the crime of adultery? The laws of Christ were made for a spiritual kingdom, and could not possibly be executed by a civil magistrate. Jesus was an obedient subject of the Hebrew commonwealth, paid His taxes, fled when the Jews would have made Him a king, and refused to support His authority by the secular sword.

We do not worship a dead Christ. Jesus lives and is today more intimately connected with the affairs of the nations than when he walked the hills of Judea. He is not here in person, but the church is here to represent His body. He has not changed His idea in regard to secular matters, so the church should not accept any civil authority. We are all agreed on that point. All nations are to be given to Christ; Jesus is going to reign over the hearts of His people through the gospel. The gospel will supersede the law, i. e., the moral law and our civil code is primarily based upon this. The gospel will so permeate the masses as to be a controlling factor in government. The gospel contains all the morality of the decalogue. If the law compels one to go a mile, a free man in Christ Jesus will go two. If it takes away his coat he will let it have his cloak too. He will do this because of the abounding love in his heart. So far from injuring his neighbor he will seek in all possible ways to bless and benefit mankind.

The gospel will bring in the universal reign of love. Love not only fulfills the law but in its beneficence goes far beyond it. When men are holy, wars will cease, litigation will cease. The criminal officers will lose their occupation for there will be no civil offenses. The secular sword will rust in its sheath. Jails and penitentiaries will stand open for want of an inmate. The judge will convene the court only to find nothing on the docket. The state, rid of the depredations of evil doers, will be free to work out her mission on a higher plane. She will expend her wealth and her energies in directing and ennobling her people—in educating the young, in improving and beautifying the public domain, in fulfilling her beneficent mission among the nations. Then our temples of justice will be converted into temples of love. The reign of love will actually supersede the reign of law. Then will Christ be the king of this nation and the civil power, acknowledging His allegiance, will exclaim with the apostate Julian, "Oh Gallilean, thou hast conquered!"

So Christ will become King of this nation, not by putting His name in the constitution, nor by making New Testament laws the fundamental laws of the land, nor by turning court-houses into churches, nor magistrates into bishops. His reign will not come in by civil commotion. It will come silently as the dew, and gently as the blessed sunlight.

"He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass; as showers that water the earth."

"In His days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."

In the councils of eternity the Father and the Son entered into a covenant called the covenant of redemption. By virtue of this covenant the Son was to make an atonement for sin by the death on the cross, in consideration of which the Father was to give Him all the nations of the earth. "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession."

So the nation that finally rejects His authority is doomed to destruction. "Be wise now therefore, oh ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little."

A BIT OF RIBBON.

BY M. ALICE BROWN.

Only a bit of ribbon, but joy illumined the faces and fresh hope filled the hearts of the poor street waifs as it fluttered, a banner of purity over the little audience of two, where were dropped words of kindly counsel so earnest that they resolved themselves into plans for aid that should be really helpful, and until it disappeared the bright, beseeching eyes gazed as if it had been a ray of light brighter than the sunbeams fallen upon their darkened lives.

Down through the wards of a hospital it was borne and wan faces lighted with a smile, while the look of pain vanished for the moment, for they well knew what the approach of this tiny emblem heralded. Then along the prison corridors, and the inmates of the dreary cells arose from their comfortless couches, and peering through the narrow grating, gave it kindly greeting for the hope and brightness its coming had sometimes brought to their wrecked lives.

It crossed and recrossed the path of a wayward and homeless one, until by and by it became to him a beacon light, while 'neath its shadow he listened to suggestions for a present shelter, and heard tender, earnest whisperings of the better home builded for all who truly yearn for its rest. A tarnished young life fixed her gaze upon it, while a sweet, persuasive voice and kindly helping hands won her back to the better path. In the haunts of vice, crime-hardened ones saw, sheltered in its folds more of purity than was wont to meet their gaze, and as their eyes feasted upon it, the gentle ministrations of the standard bearer lifted their thoughts to the abiding and blessed purity.

Thus onward and onward, wherever it could find entrance as a herald of better things, if need be down low and lonely ways, a star of hope wherever it appeared, while benedictions were showered upon its pathway. Need I tell you the secret of its power and influence? Do you not know that it was a white ribbon moved by the heart throbs of its wearer whose sweet services to humanity had thrown around it such a halo of magic and made it a delight to so many weary eyes?

STEP AND STEP.

"It is very mortifying," said a lady well along in life, "to have your children outgrow you in intellectual attainment. I can't consent that it should be so in my case, and that is why I am taking this course of lectures in English literature. When my sons and daughters come home from college and talk of Homer and the great Greek and Latin authors, I must be able to share in the conversation, and so I read the translations in Bohn's Classical Library."

This mother will command the respect, intellectual no less than moral, of her children as long as she lives. She will not cease to be their guide, their counselor, their companion and friend, so long as she walks beside them here.

Drawing out her methods of training her children from the beginning, they were found to be on this wise. During their infancy she kept up to a limited extent her habits of reading formed previous to marriage. She had books in her nursery, in her kitchen, to pick up and refresh herself withal when a moment's leisure permitted. When the children went to school, she looked over their lessons with them, helped them over hard places, and thus reviewed the studies of her own youth and kept fresh in them. When they went away to college she took up lines of reading that should keep her in intellectual sympathy with them.

To do all this she had to choose between alternatives both very desirable. She could not embroider and ruffle her clothing and theirs, and at the same time embroider her mind and theirs with gems of knowledge; so she dressed them plainly. She could not indulge in an elaborate style of living, and have time to devote to their studies; so she lived simply. Thus placing ever the spiritual above the physical, yet giving the physical its full meed of attention, she was able to prolong indefinitely the period of her own mental growth and foster wisely all the interests of her family.

At no time in life do children need judicious fathering and mothering more than when they stand on the threshold of manhood and womanhood, when they are taking upon themselves the responsibilities of adult life. If at this time the father and mother can be to them as an elder brother and sister, and as parents too, the happiness of all concerned is as efficiently secured as it is possible to be.

THE POST OF DUTY IS THE PLACE OF BLESSING.

EXCERPTS FROM BIBLE LESSON BY MRS. SARAH B. COOPER.

Although there were very few in all the vast crowd at Bethlehem who were interested in the wonderful advent of Christ, there were hosts of unseen friends on high to join the lowly shepherds in their glorious acclaim of joy. Even so is it now. The great whirling world may care very little for the unseen realities, but there is, nevertheless, a great multitude of the heavenly host who are at work with the saints below, in bringing forward the things that pertain to the kingdom of God. It is so in all great movements. The temperance cause will certainly be victorious over all enemies, because its ultimate end is to hasten the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ. The unseen helpers are at work with the lowly shepherd worshipers of earth.

These shepherds were at their post of duty when the heavenly helpers were revealed. And whoever would catch the blessing from on high, must be at the post of duty. A truly religious person is never so religious, as when in the very thick of work. A religion that does not exalt and ennoble life, in every attitude and aspect, is a dead religion, and the sooner it is relinquished, the better. Our religion must glorify our work. We do not need to go apart from our work to get at our religion. Wherever the post of duty is, there should our religion keep us company; showing itself in fidelity, trustworthiness, courage, patience, and generous kindness. And there will it find all true Christian soldiers, fighting a good fight,

"Content, like men at arms, to fight
Each with his fronting foe."

Religion is soul-health. It is the very climate of the soul. It is the atmosphere in which the soul lives. And the humblest ones of earth may forever rejoice in the fact, that the first homage paid to the Incarnate Son of God came from the humble watchers on Bethlehem's plains. And whoever makes it the supreme business of life to help the poor and the needy in the destitute places—the mangers of this world—will surely find Christ in the manger, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

THE UNION SIGNAL.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.

MARY ALLEN WEST,

JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.

161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth.—Isaiah 62: 1.

THE TASK BEFORE US.

The task before the temperance reformers of this country is to convince the people of the iniquity of legal toleration of the liquor traffic by the states and the nation. While total abstinence for the individual should still be urged, greater stress should now be laid upon total prohibition by the state. For a hundred years nearly all the work of this reform was confined to the promotion of temperance and total abstinence, and with excellent results. When the work began, drinking was much more common than now, and not at all disreputable. In 1823 the annual consumption of distilled spirits per capita was seven and one-half gallons, as against about one and one-fourth now. Even the churches tolerated drinking and the sale of drink by their members, and occasional excesses by church officials were not unknown. Now there is no church in which intoxication would not be a bar to membership, and in most denominations moderate drinking is prohibited. Moreover, so great has been the progress of education on this line, that there is probably not one of the patrons of our 200,000 saloons but would admit that drinking to intoxication is wrong; and while there is still a multitude who would defend the moderate use of intoxicants as harmless, if not beneficial, the army of total abstainers is continually increasing.

During the greater part of this hundred years of effort and encouraging success on the lines of personal temperance and total abstinence, but little was said or done in the direction of legal prohibition. Prior to 1850, people scarcely dreamed of outlawing the liquor traffic. Through the efforts of Neal Dow, the "Columbus of Prohibition," the Maine law declaring the trade a nuisance, was enacted in 1851. But outside of Maine, the people have been slow in following the example of that state; and it is only within the last twenty years that there has been any general agitation for prohibition of the manufacture as well as the sale by the states and the nation. As the result of this disproportionate attention to the two lines of effort, there is not so general a conviction that the traffic should be totally prohibited, as there is that drinking is wrong, and we have this anomaly: Thousands of voters who claim to be Christian men, and who personally abstain from drink as ruinous to body and soul, voting to legalize the traffic and keep open dens which lure their fellowmen to destruction. This is an anomaly and an inconsistency so strange, so shocking, that it will be the wonder and shame of posterity that Christian men could be capable of it.

Of course there are other causes contributing to produce this contradiction of total abstainers voting to perpetuate the traffic besides lack of education concerning the iniquity of legalizing it, such as false theories of personal liberty, of the value of high license as a restrictive measure, and inability to prohibit the business entirely. The fact that the rum power holds the balance of power between the two leading parties, and can by giving its support to, or withholding it from one or the other, insure its success or defeat, enables it to call to its aid the machinery, wealth and influence of both parties to disseminate and defend these falsehoods, and persuade even good men to believe them. The mightiest god in the United States is the party fetich. Within a year we have heard a venerable doctor of divinity, of devout and saintly life, declare that the continuance of his party in power is of more importance than any other issue before the American people. The immense wealth the parties command to make public opinion by subsidizing the press is potent in keeping temperance men in the liquor parties. Money now controls our elections, and the rum power is quite able to furnish all that is needed to protect itself. Next to devotion to "party" is the delusion that the liquor traffic can be crippled, weakened and finally destroyed by high license restrictions. This error is being rapidly dissipated by the actual workings of high license, and a little longer trial will suffice to convince the people that it is powerless as a remedy.

But all the sophistries by which the rum power has hitherto befogged the minds of temperance men, will vanish before the popular conviction that legal toleration of the traffic is wrong. To produce this conviction is the most important work of the hour. Temperance men everywhere must be made to see that it is just as disreputable and wicked to vote for, or neglect to vote against, legalizing the traffic as it is to get drunk. They must be made to see that every man who fails to do all in his power to outlaw the business of making drunkards, is an accomplice in that business, and is as guilty of putting the bottle to his neighbor's lips as those who sell drink under the sanction of his vote. The men who make and sell liquid poison are only the agents of the men who vote, and the chief responsibility rests not upon those who carry on the business, but upon those who legalize it. The sin of getting drunk, great as it is, is venial in comparison with the sin of voting to legalize or tolerate in any form the business of making drunkards. When all the men who feel that it is a disgrace and a sin to drink, are made to see that, in the sight of God and an unsophisticated conscience, it is equally disgraceful and wicked to consent to the legal existence of the traffic, it will be speedily and forever outlawed.

Thanks to the temperance societies and the churches, the first thing essential to this consummation—the prevalence of the conviction that the use of alcohol as a beverage is wrong—has been secured. But the conviction of duty must penetrate further than the obligation of total abstinence. It must include the responsibility of the individual for legalized temptation of others. The latter follows logically and inevitably from the former. If it is the personal duty of a man to abstain, it follows that he should assist others to abstain, also, and that it is a sin and a crime for him to facilitate the use of intoxicants by acquiescence in their manufacture and sale under the protection of the law.

There is something preposterous in the very thought that the temperance reform should be merely a servant to wait upon the miseries caused by the drink traffic, and do nothing to dry up the fountain of those miseries. Prevention is better than cure. People can and must be made to see the criminal absurdity of keeping two hundred thousand gin mills running, and at the same time supporting innumerable expensive agencies for saving or punishing the victims of these crime factories. We should not do less, but more, to rescue the perishing and promote total abstinence; but the time has come for the concentration of effort to convince every voter that he cannot be guiltless in the sight of God and posterity unless he uses his franchise and all his influence to outlaw and abolish the alcoholic drink traffic. This is the great work for the churches, for Christian teachers and temperance societies to do now and henceforth, until it is accomplished; and to all, the word comes with divine authority: "This ought ye to have done and not to leave the other undone."

TEMPERANCE HISTORY.

It is sometimes well for this rushing, self-conscious generation to stop long enough to look back through the centuries and discover what the ancients accomplished along lines that we imagine were opened by us. Such a backward glance is afforded by Dr. Dawson Burns' new book, "Temperance History," of which the first volume lies on our table. It comes from the National Temperance Publication Depot, London, 33 Paternoster Row, E. C., and forms a valuable addition to temperance literature. Few writers have made more important contributions to this cause than Dr. Burns. On this side the Atlantic he is probably best known as co-author with Dr. Lees, of the Temperance Bible Commentary; he has written largely on Biblical temperance, his latest work in this direction being "Bible Temperance and the Revised Version"; he has also ably discussed the legislative and economic phases of the great reform. He is an indefatigable searcher after facts, and in the volume before us gives many that are new to well-read temperance workers.

Total abstinence dates from the earliest ages, there being in different nations classes pledged to it so far back as history runs. For example, the Nazarites among the children of Israel, the Suevi among the Gauls, and the Macrobians among the Ethiopians; these last were noted for beauty, strength and longevity, their average term of life being an hundred and twenty years; their drink was milk.

Dr. Burns traces prohibition back to B. C. 2300; indeed by legendary lore to the Garden of Eden; an ancient fable ascribes an intoxicating and sensualizing quality to the "forbidden fruit." Milton embodies this thought in "Paradise Lost." However this may be, it is certain that in very early times intoxicating drinks were made from fruits, the sap of certain trees, and even grains.

Chinese books refer the production of "Kiu," an intoxicating drink, to the time of Yu, founder of the first dynasty, B. C., 2300 at least; its use had become so prevalent in his time that he promulgated the first "prohibitory amendment" on record, joined with the prediction that the use of intoxicants would be the cause of great ruin. The record significantly adds that the prohibition of Kiu was followed by a rain of gold lasting three days. About twelve hundred years later another famous Chinese ruler issued a law forbidding the use of Kiu except in special specified emergencies. The Hindoo Shastras declare, "He who, whether Brahmin, soldier or trader, drinks intoxicating liquor, or who, when engaged in the performance of religious rites, causes his wife to drink it with him, is an offender." One of the precepts of Buddhism is "Obey the laws, and walk steadily in the path of purity, and drink not liquors that intoxicate or disturb the reason." Why these simple precepts of human teachers have sufficed to keep great nations temperate till drunkenness was taught them, or forced upon them, by professedly Christian nations, while the direct commands of God have not sufficed to keep these nations from wallowing in the slough of drunkenness, is an unfathomable mystery. The commands are familiar; priests were solemnly warned not to drink wine; so were kings; so were all men. The establishment of the order of the Nazarites, which probably included the Prophetic order, and the command to all not to look upon the wine when it is red, all inculcate the principle of total abstinence more strongly than do the Shastras or the Vedas.

That the Greeks knew the benefits of total abstinence is shown by Homer's making Hector refuse the cup of strong drink even when offered by his mother; he also speaks of the Hippomolgi, or Abii, as "the most upright of men," and accounts for it by describing them as "milk-nourished." Plato in his "Laws," makes one of the speakers recommend, with the approval of all present, that no wine should be drunk by persons engaged in important business, whether in war, civil affairs, or in common life.

Rome enforced prohibition on her women, and in the days of her power her men drank but sparingly; even in her social degeneracy, due in large measure to voluptuous living, she was wise enough to provide her soldiers with nothing stronger than posca, an acid drink, not intoxicating.

In speaking of the Suevi, before mentioned, Cæsar states that they were one of the most warlike tribes of Gaul, and that they did not permit wine to be imported amongst them at all, because they thought it rendered men effeminate and unfitted them for labor. He gives a similar account of the Nervii.

The passages of the Koran that have kept Mohammedan nations comparatively free from the alcohol curse are contained in chapters 2 and 5. The longer and more comprehensive one reads as follows: "True believer, truly wine, lots and images and divining arrows are an abomination and the work of Satan; therefore avoid them, that ye may prosper. Satan seeks to sow dissension and discord among you by means of wine and lots, and to divert you from remembering God, and from prayer; will ye not abstain from them?" That four-fold command against the four most prevalent vices of the time was strictly observed during the early centuries of Mohammedanism, and undoubtedly contributed largely to the rapid extension of the Saracen empire.

Dr. Burns thinks that taking into account the authority still wielded by Brahminism, Buddhism and Mohammedanism, over a large majority of the human race, it is probable that the civilized portion of the world have always contained more total abstainers than drinkers of intoxicants.

Almost in our own time we have had a striking lesson of the benefits of total abstinence to a race; the Maories of New Zealand were, at the time of their discovery by Europeans, unsurpassed for physical strength and longevity; they were absolutely ignorant of any intoxicant and drank only water. The deadly fire-water, introduced to them by Europeans, has nearly wrought their extermination; the remnant remaining is now returning to the total abstinence of their fathers as their only hope of preservation.

In England as early as 1725, the Royal College of Physicians presented a remonstrance against the common sale of spirits; the medical profession at large joined heartily in this protest. That same year, Benjamin Franklin, then working at his trade in London, demonstrated that a water drinker could do more work, better work, and stick to it longer, than could a beer drinker.

It is a notable fact that some of the strongest arraignments of King Alcohol come from Ireland, and that one of the earliest total abstinence societies was established there, at Skibbereen, in the south part of the island, as early as 1817, or before Jeffrey Sedwards, a nailer, became an abstainer and persuaded twelve of his mates to join him; they held meetings at each others' houses for some time, gradually increasing in numbers, and after a time forming themselves into "The Abstinence Society." This met in school-rooms till these becoming too strait for them, the members, by personal labor, built themselves a hall; this was in 1824; it served them well till 1854, when it was burned. The society often marched in procession through Skibbereen and neighboring towns; it was both a forerunner and an active participant in the Father Mathew movement. Its founder, dying at a good old age in 1861, lived long enough to witness a great increase both in the evil he combated and in efforts for its extermination.

Bishop Berkeley in his "Minute Philosopher," published in Ireland in 1732, makes Crito relate the fable told by a Swiss philosopher showing that in a competition between the two demons, Brandy and Gunpowder, as to which could accomplish the most destruction, Brandy comes off conqueror. Elsewhere the good Bishop speaks of "that execrable plague of distilled liquors which do all, without exception, operate as a slow poison, preying upon the vitals and wasting the health and strength of body and soul." Other things in his writings make us feel sure that our good Bishop Ireland must be in the direct line of apostolic succession from Bishop Berkeley.

John Wesley, whose temperance principles are so well known and who strengthened a naturally weak constitution by total abstinence, tells us that while in Ireland in 1760, he visited several settlements of total abstaining Germans, the like of which he thought it would be hard to find in either England or Ireland. He says: "There is no cursing or swearing, no Sabbath breaking, no drunkenness, no ale houses." John Wesley's rule against using any ardent spirits, except as a medicine, was incorporated into the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its organization, 1784, and has had much to do with the position held by that great body to-day. It is related of Bishop Asbury that so strong were his temperance principles that he would never take ardent spirits, even when, as was once the case, they were prescribed for him by Dr. Rush himself.

It is related of Father Thurston, a good old Baptist preacher residing in Newport, R. I., just an hundred years ago, that he followed Paul's example in supporting himself by working at a trade; his trade was that of a cooper; the most lucrative work in it at that time was making barrels for carrying New England rum to the West Indies; Father Thurston stoutly refused to let one of his barrels go on this detestable mission. It is said that this self-denying opposition to the liquor traffic was the first thing to impress Dr. Channing, then a student at Newport, with the sinfulness of the traffic.

The book from which these incidents are culled is volume first of what Dr. Burns designs to make a four-volumed history of the temperance movement.

NICOTINE AND THE CLERGY.

The New York Herald has long been famous for journalistic enterprise, and we are glad to see it in quest of truth concerning moral issues. It has been asking the opinion of eminent ministers as to the use of tobacco, and lately published their replies. These devout men unanimously agree that the proper use of tobacco is not to daze the human brain, or scent the human breath.

Rev. Wm. R. Alger, of Boston, says:

Smoking is a vice, because it is master of labor, time and health; intoxicating liquor and tobacco are the chief enemies of the human race, therefore no clergyman can be held guiltless who does not set a personal example in opposition to both.

Canon Farrar's reply is characteristic:

It seems to me that when man has so many natural wants, it is not desirable to add to them another want, which can only be regarded as artificial.

Good Chaplain McCabe asks:

How can a man reprove boys for smoking if he does it himself? No, save us from clergymen who smoke! I am glad the Methodist Church has decided not to admit young men to her ministry who are addicted to the practice.

Dr. Cuyler says he never smoked a cigar in his life, and never expects to, and assures the inquiring Herald he "fears that some valuable lives have ended in smoke; and there are times when a cigar in a minister's mouth does not help the gospel that comes out of it, and is not a wholesome 'ensample to the flock.'"

Joseph Cook's answer reveals his fine sense of equity, and also his courage in fastening guilt where it belongs, although the guilty one be "reverend":

More than one important religious denomination, notably the Methodist, now regularly makes inquiry of candidates for the ministry as to their habits concerning the use of tobacco. A large number of conferences refuse to accept habitual smokers as preachers. I believe there should be a reform in this matter of smoking among young men, but nothing prevents it so much as the practice of a few distinguished preachers, whose habits in other respects are exemplary, but who in regard to smoking, set a bad example to the young.

Edward Beecher denounces the use of tobacco as an unqualified sin:

My deepest feeling is excited by the great extent to which ministers of the Gospel are involved in the sin of using tobacco. It not only injures them physically but mentally. Against unanswerable evidence of the widespread evils—physical, intellectual and moral—they subject themselves to a habit of ruinous self-indulgence, and do all that example can do to induce others to do the same. Then of what avail is it for them to preach to men to deny ungodliness and every worldly lust? While ministers of the Gospel oppose one with vivid eloquence, they advocate the other by example, and are a rampart to defend it against all assaults.

Newman Hall, the great friend and teacher of the London workingmen, gives his opinion of the weed, and his experience with it in his own quaint style:

I began to smoke at eight years of age, and left off the same day. The cane cut from the hedge made me sick, and all my experience since has made me more sick of what I regard a dirty, costly, tyrannical and unhealthy habit. The practice should be especially avoided by ministers. There are in every church some who will be pained by such an example, some who may be injured by following it. It often leads to drinking, wastes time and costs money which is needed for better objects.

Lyman Abbott's reply is argumentative and exhaustive, we can only quote it fragmentarily, at its strongest points as they appear to us:

The physical evils that result from the tobacco habit are notorious. The moral evils appear to me also serious. Whatever may be the imagined benefit of smoking to overworked men (and women? If it is a sedative, who need it more than the wives and mothers?), it is by substantially universal consent an injury to the young. And yet not only the young men in our stores and colleges, but the boys in their teens are inveterate smokers.

The minister should teach by his life; he should set an example which he is willing his congregation should follow; he should walk in the paths in which he desires that the boys and young men who look up to him should walk. As I personally do not wish to see the boys in my Sunday-schools, nor the young men in my church and congregation smoking, I do not propose to set them the example of the smoker. And I cannot but think that, on the one hand, if all ministers were of this opinion, and set a universal example against the cigar, it would count for something; and on the other hand, that there is a certain incongruity in a smoking clergyman preaching a sermon on crucifying the lusts of the flesh or denying ourselves for the sake of our neighbors.

The venerable Dr. McCosh, believing with all consistent Presbyterians that woman's influenee is mighty and to be feared, declares that,

Smoking will be put down when young ladies declare that they will not look with favor on a young man who smokes, and when congregations declare that they will not take a minister who smokes.

MRS. LAURA ORMISTON CHANT sailed on the 29th of January for a trip through the United States, under the auspices of the World's W. C. T. U. Her engagements being made by the Woman's Lecture Bureau, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago. Mrs. Chant is pronounced by competent authority the finest woman speaker in Great Britain. She is equally welcome in all different temperance societies, White Cross societies, and churches. She has the gift of eloquence combined with the utmost womanly refinement and tenderness. In a recent letter to a friend, Mrs. Chant said: "I am waiting eagerly to hear what are my marching orders. I am going out on faith, nothing doubting. It makes my heart beat to think of seeing you all again, we had so grand a time when I was with you before, and I hope for a still better one now. I believe it will be possible to evolve some plan for more consolidated World work than has yet been possible." We warmly welcome Mrs. Chant to America, where she will find perhaps the broadest outlook for a woman of exceptional gifts and career that the world furnishes.

IT should be stated that in the condensing of departments at the Chicago Convention, nothing whatever that was invidious was intended by omitting any superintendent. The departments were grouped, and those that could be allied to others were so related. For instance, under the Evangelistic head was placed that veteran white-ribboner and successful superintendent, Mrs. R. A. Esmond, whose special work it is to introduce the use of unintoxicating wine at the Lord's table. Mrs. Esmond goes on with her work as usual, though her name is now found in the Evangelistic group. There are many instances analogous to this. We venture to predict, however, that several of the "condensed" departments, for none were dropped, will be restored to their full dimensions at the next National meeting.

The Watch-Tower.

Destiny has two ways of crushing us, by refusing us our desires, and by fulfilling them; but he who only wills what God wills escapes both catastrophes.

***

It is now stated upon good authority that "la grippe" originated in China. What has become of the Chinese exclusion act?

***

To Rev. Dr. Joseph Ward, of South Dakota, is due the Puritan motto for that state, "Under God the people rule." His motto for the college of which he was president was, "Christ for the world, the world for Christ."

***

Dr. Orpha Baldwin, of Ohio, superintendent of the department of hygiene in the National W. C. T. U., has gone to her new home in the state of Washington, stopping along the line and giving a temperance treat in the way of a speech to the towns in Idaho, and all along the route. Mrs. Susan E. Holbrook, the president, is about to go on an organizing trip through the territory.

***

Rev. Alfred A. Wright sends this characteristic note:

DEAR EDITOR:—Please set in motion, if you have not already done it, the wave that shall lift the W. C. T. U. ship right up alongside the one Columbus navigated, and which in some form or other will be the attraction of the World's Fair in 1892. He did nothing but discover America; the W. C. T. U. discovered woman.

***

Harper's Drawer for January has this story; doesn't it remind you of a certain great political convention? Merchant (to Tony):—"Here, say, Tony, how about this? You are not going to make enough to pay both me and the debt you owe to Mr. K——. What are you going to do about it?" Tony.—"Well, I tell you, Mas' Eugine, I been 'volvin' dat question in my mine fur nigh two weeks, and dis is de way I solve it: I'm gwine to pay you, an' gwine sy'pathize with Mr. K——."

***

Mrs. E. D. C. Mair, state superintendent of the railroad work at Pittsburgh, has the following apt Scripture as her motto. It is famously appropriate to these modern days, and will grow more and more so as invention goes on: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."—Nah. 2: 4.

***

Mrs. McClees Little has at 55 Twelfth Street, New York, a prayer room, nicely seated, furnished and embellished, which is like a moral Pharos in the midst of great darkness. New and second-hand literature is here furnished to soldiers and sailors, and they are urged to attend the meetings held in the Mission Hall every evening. The secretary, Miss Davidson, is on hand from ten to two o'clock daily. White-ribboners in New York City will be glad to visit these headquarters.

***

A great circle of loving hearts will sympathize with our National evangelist, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, and our National press superintendent, Miss Mary Henry, in the loss of that blessed saint, Mrs. Mary Allis Henry, mother and grandmother of these well known workers. She died January 28, at their home in Evanston, aged 76. As the wife of a Methodist pioneer preacher, this woman of sweet spirit and stanch faith had toiled for Christ and His church when Illinois was "the new west"—half a century ago. All her years were full of dignity, patience and peace.

***

The saloon-keepers of a number of towns and cities have been perpetrating a practical joke on themselves by adopting a yellow ribbon for their badge in mockery of the W. C. T. U. white ribbon, thereby "jumping from the frying-pan into the fire," by advertising themselves as woman suffragists, or in other words, "their own worst enemies."

***

County superintendents of public schools in Minnesota have during the past year received reports of the second school year under scientific temperance instruction laws. Henry G. Blanch, teacher of Concord village school, writes the superintendent of that county: "My observations upon the subject are that temperance-hygiene has become of as much, or even more, importance than many other branches of school work; and the majority of the parents wish their children to be thoroughly instructed in it. As to its educational value, I consider it of more importance to the boy who is in danger of contracting the habit of chewing or smoking, or the use of intoxicating drinks, than is United States History or arithmetic, even." This is a type of many reports wafted to the Watch Tower. In this, as in other branches, the interest of the pupil depends largely upon the enthusiasm of the instructor. Moral: Win the school ma'ams! ON DUTY.

News from the Field.

GEORGIA.

JOTTINGS.

Before entering upon the work of the New Year, I ask a little space for some incidents that marked the closing weeks of the old year. We of the Atlanta union had looked forward to the Piedmont Exposition as an opportunity of replenishing our depleted treasury, and at the same time of furnishing to the masses temperance reading matter, by means of a W. C. T. U. lunch room and literature table, as in 1887, but our request for restaurant privileges was refused, though we were told we might distribute reading matter. So we stayed inside the city, and sold lunches and gave away leaflets and papers at a room in the Old Capitol. We realized no pecuniary profit, but trust we were the means of benefiting many in a moral sense by our mottoes and banners, by THE UNION SIGNALS and other W. T. P. A. publications, and by literature from Miss Colman. Mr. Barker of The Southern Star made us a generous donation of many copies of his paper, which we as freely gave away.

Curious to see with my own eyes what the Exposition looked like under whisky rule, as compared with the prohibition times of two years before, I went out and spent a few hours upon the grounds. It cannot be denied that there were noble exhibits of the mineral, agricultural, mechanical, and merchantile resources of this favored Piedmont region; but the most gorgeous and prominent exhibit was that of the Christian Moerlein Brewing Company of Cincinnati, which Mr. Small, in a striking lecture on "The Red Devil," told his hearers took annually from Georgia millions of dollars. The Atlanta and Savannah Brewing companies had also extensive exhibits, and besides these there were three spaces devoted to domestic wines. On the grounds were three liquor saloons paying the directors several thousands of dollars. With shame and sorrow I was turning away, sick at heart that nowhere was the banner of temperance to be seen, when most unexpectedly I came upon the familiar face of Mrs. J. G. Thrower, who was propped up in an easy chair near by where Mr. Thrower was exhibiting the "Invalid Lift," a contrivance which he has invented for moving the most helpless invalid without pain or weariness to the sick, or physical strain to their attendants. Mr. Thrower conceived this idea while waiting upon his invalid wife, and to her it is a source of unspeakable comfort. During the Exposition, he distributed a large number of cards from the National Temperance Society.

Prominent among the events of the waning year was the meeting of the National Assembly of the Knights of Labor. A delegation from the Atlanta W. C. T. U. was most courteously received. We were met at the door by Mrs. Leonora Barry and other lady delegates, and escorted into the hall, where we were introduced by Mr. Powderly to the assembled Knights. We read a set of brief resolutions in behalf of the local and state unions (officially signed), commending the repeated declarations of the Knights of Labor in favor of "equal pay for equal work, no matter whether that work be done by women or by men," and acknowledging our pleasure at Mr. Powderly's total abstinence principles. The response of Mr. Powderly was strong and beautiful, delivered in a graceful, candid and polished manner. He said the "Knights of Labor did not claim to be a temperance society, but that they excluded liquor-sellers from membership." Said he, "I am not a Prohibitionist in its usual sense, but personally I am and always have been a total abstainer. We do not say ou · members shall not drink if they feel inclined, but by absolutely forbidding the use of liquors in our assemblies, and its sale at our social gatherings and entertainments, we set a good example and so inculcate temperance in the most practical manner. In regard to the Sunday law, we go even farther than you, for we ask one day for humanity and one for the Creator. We want the Saturday as well as the Sunday. We have always been in favor of the Sunday law." He asked us to assist them in their work in behalf of the women and children, especially the effort "to keep children out of the factories that they may go to school, where they ought to be."

Mr. Powderly is a remarkable man, and we were struck not only by his chivalric bearing towards women, but by the air of courtesy to our sex that characterized the entire assembly. On another occasion I was present when the convention received a delegation from the State Farmers' Alliance. An address was made by President Livingston, and an invitation extended to the National Alliance at St. Louis.

Among the Knights of Labor were members of the Catholic Total Abstinence Society of America, and this proved to be the auspicious time for organizing a branch society in Atlanta, which was done by Mr. Kehoe of Connecticut, forty-seven persons taking the total abstinence pledge. The society has for its president Mr. Thomas F. Corrigan, a young lawyer of well-known prohibition principles.

A long-felt want is now being supplied by Sunday afternoon temperance meetings, held at 9½ Alabama St., by a committee composed of such stanch prohibitionists as Dr. Harry Huzza, A. A. DeLoach, J. R. Albert, and Azmon Murphey. In previous years the gospel temperance services were held almost exclusively by the W. C. T. U. And, in passing, I want to say that in these dark days of high license whisky horrors, the Atlanta unions still "hold the fort," if not very aggressive. The North Side union is to be commended for its faithful jail work; Mrs. S. A. Kilby and Mrs. D. O. Dougherty making weekly visits; while the South Side union, under Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Mitchell, looks after temperance instruction in mission work.

From Augusta there is glorious news. The reaping time has come for Mrs. Sibley, Mrs. Claiborne Snead, Mrs. J. Jefferson Thomas, Mrs. Margaret Chandler, and other "elect ladies" who have so long and unfalteringly labored there. Mrs. Sibley writes that three years ago Christian women (W. C. T. U's among them) began to hold prayer-meetings in the back room of a grocery store, located near one of the worst parts of the city. A fallen woman of the neighborhood attempted, by swearing and violent conduct, to break up the meetings. In the recent great revival, she came to this same little prayer-meeting and confessed her sins, and has opened her house as a refuge to the penitent of her class. In the midst of the revival interest came Rev. Henry D. Howren, in response to a previous invitation from Mrs. Sibley, and preached to immense crowds at the Opera House, and to the colored people in their churches. The Episcopal ministers have also preached temperance sermons.

Not long ago the Augusta Chronicle contained an exquisite editorial article concerning Mrs. Chapin and her work. And now comes the municipal election, which is considered a victory for reform, all the whisky candidates but one having been defeated. Since the outrages on Christmas day, the colored people are advocating prohibition, and it would not be at all surprising if Augusta should order a local option election.

In Savannah, "the city near the sea," Mrs. Webb still perseveres in the good work, and sets an example for the other city unions in her zeal for the erection of W. C. T. U. headquarters.

Even the little town of Decatur, in which I live, is now and then aroused on the great question of the day. The W. C. T. U. has recently superintended another Demorest medal contest, the prize being won by Hattie Sexton, a young girl who rendered with fine effect that admirable satire on high license, "How to Curtail the Liquor Traffic." The pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Mr. Gaines, has recently from his pulpit, in a most solemn sermon on "Christian Influence," told his congregation that nothing short of total abstinence from all intoxicants, as well as from worldly amusements, is consistent with Christian character and example.

Many other items that might interest your readers, especially the Georgians, crowd in upon my mind, but they must be reserved for another time

MISSOURI STOKES.

MARYLAND.

NEWS AND NOTES.

Like Oliver Twist, Maryland "asked for more," after having Dr. Anna Shaw at the state convention. Unlike Oliver, however, the demand came from intense satisfaction with the tidbits served, and not from the insufficiency, of the "commons" allotted by the "dietary."

Hence various places in the state, Tomson, Annapolis, Frostburgh, Queenstown, Westminster, Phœnix, Cumberland, Chestertown, and Mt. Washington, and various churches in Baltimore, Union Square, Monument Street, Madison Avenue, and Eutaw Place, Baptist, have been favored with the presence of this woman of remarkable talents, and several engagements for February were made some time since.

Miss Shaw's visit to one of the places mentioned, one that came under my close personal observation—a conservative suburban village, with Episcopal and Presbyterian elements predominating, was productive of most interesting results. Her address was a revelation indeed to many who had never before heard a woman speak in public, and from all quarters, some most unexpected, are still heard warmest encomiums upon that memorable speech. A reception by the "Lend a Hand Club" of Mt. Washington, was one of the pleasant features of her visit to that beautiful place.

Crusade Day was observed in Baltimore at the Y. M. C. A., Mrs. S. H. Manny presiding, from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m. Edwin Higgins, president of the Maryland State Temperance Alliance, Rev. W. G. Herbert, also of the Alliance, Revs. E. A. Lawrence and W. H. Thompson of the Congregational Church, Rev. G. C. Bacon, and G. W. Reid of the M. E. Church, and Mr. E. B. Ludwig of Ohio of the North American Good Templars took part in the exercises. Dr. Anna Shaw was also present and spoke ably on "Our Opportunities." A number of the state delegates to the National Convention, gave various points and incidents concerning the convention, Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod made a touching address, followed by the reading of an original poem; several interesting, original papers were read by members of the union, and singing and other religious exercises completed the full and varied program.

The union has been pleased to welcome to Baltimore an ally in the work, the Rev. E. A. Lawrence, son of "Meta Lander," that uncompromising antagonist of tobacco. Mr. Lawrence accepted the charge of the Eutaw Place Congregational Church some time since.

Christmas was observed at the Free Kindergarten, Baltimore, in the usual delightful manner—a tree, appropriate exercises, gifts, and a feast. The savings of the children during the year amounted to $60, and these "nickels" transformed into numerous comfortable looking bundles, containing dress goods, flannel, muslin, and other useful articles, played a prominent part in the exercises.

A fine crayon portrait of Mrs. Welsh, the valued head-kindergartner here since the beginning of the work in 1873, was recently presented to the kindergarten by Miss Pollock, principal of the Froebel Institute, Washington, D. C. Miss Pollock writes: "One of the joys of this Christmas season has been that I could send to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Free Kindergarten in Baltimore, the portrait of her who is its inspiration, a life-like reproduction to these little ones of this beloved kindergarten mother, the representation to them of all that is motherly, noble, true, tender and Christ-like in their lives."

It is gratifying to know that this kindergarten has been the inspiration, one after another, of the numerous free kindergartens that have been established in Baltimore since this one proved that "the good they do is incalculable," and that Mrs. Welsh and Miss Cathcart have assisted in the organization of each in turn. Work throughout the state, has met with a sad loss through the illness of Miss Magruder, who was appointed state organizer at the last annual meeting. Miss Magruder gave promise of valuable and effective work, her success among the Y's being an earnest of what might be expected in this direction. It is hoped that her indisposition will be but temporary.

The cry for high license has grown more vigorous than ever since the legislature assembled (January first), which in this state occurs only every two years. Argument was heard, January 15, by the senate finance committee on the high license bill proposed by representatives from the "Committee of One Hundred," that body of well-known and estimable citizens of Baltimore, who have organized for the purpose of securing this invaluable aid to public morality. The regular stock arguments were advanced, "crime will be minimized," the sale of liquor will be placed in the hands of a more respectable class; laborers will be less likely to spend their hard earnings, with fewer temptations," etc., etc.

Prohibition out and out, even in the present state of public sentiment here, would be far less difficult of enforcement, than this bill with its numberless provisos, restrictions and regulations. There is small probability of its passage in its original shape.

The grand jury of the criminal court of Baltimore, which adjourned January 11, reached the following brilliant conclusion: "The great number of Sunday liquor cases coming before the grand jury with but few true bills and fewer convictions, teach us that there is but one course to lessen this evil, and that is the enactment of high license,"

A declaration from the medical fraternity that high license will stay the ravages of "la grippe" is next in order. Verily, our men seem to have "become as little children" in—credulity. In all this we have scored one great point; all those who clamor for high license concede that it is the liquor traffic as now conducted which "loads down the courts with business, calls for the maintenance of an expensive police force, and fills the jails, almhouses and penitentiaries with inmates."

The saloon-keepers of Baltimore are aroused, and 350 met recently and effected an organization for "the protection and advancement of their business interests." They are "not against reasonable high license," we are told, but "against too high license."

On the other side, the secretary of the state Prohibition party reports decided activity throughout the state and in Baltimore city, with encouraging reports from the counties. A committee has been appointed to oppose the high-license bill to be presented to the legislature, and to confer with the State Temperance Alliance and the W. C. T. U. as to concerted action before the legislature.

A wide-awake Prohibition clergyman pronounces the outlook here encouraging, the advance in temperance sentiment greatly on the increase, in spite of press reports to the contrary. M. A. L., Union Signal Reporter.

KANSAS.

GLEANINGS.

The W. C. T. U. is gaining ground in Kansas, there having been a large number of new unions organized since our state convention in October, nearly as many as during the entire previous year. The eighth district alone has been increased by eight unions, two Y's and several Loyal Temperance Legions. Of course we, like other states, have those unions that, when they may have accomplished what they supposed to be their "mission," are ready to "rest from their labors," but as a rule the unions are active in all good works, and at present are preparing themselves to give the re-submissionists the strongest opposition, should they open a campaign.

The liquor dealers of Kansas City have, for some time, been flooding the state with their circulars, seeking orders from those who are supposed by them to be "perishing of thirst." A number of these documents have fallen into my hands, and I have taken the liberty of using their inclosed "return envelope," to send back to them such arguments against their unholy traffic as I thought might be for their personal good. I have literally "bombarded" them with prohibition "bombs"; have kept the address of each, and intend to remind them from time to time, that some one still has an interest in their welfare. I give this item simply as a suggestion to others to "go and do likewise."

Mrs. Dora Evans recently spent a week in Douglas, Butler county, doing a good work there. The Good Templars as a body attended one of her evening meetings, escorted thither by a brass band. At one of her young people's meetings, girls, between the ages of fourteen and seventeen, pledged themselves not to use slang, chew gum, or go with young men of questionable character; may they keep their pledge! At an evening mass meeting they raised $25 to pay Mrs. Evans for her work.

Nemaha county held a convention January 2 and 3. Three interesting essays were on the program, and the evening address of Mrs. Chase on "Re-submission" was well received. Officers elected were: President, Mrs. H. A. Wagoner; secretary, Dr. Emily Slosson; treasurer, Mrs. Vickery.

Lima county convened at Pleasanton in December, with good attendance of delegates and superintendents, Mrs. E. M. Adams, county president. Mrs. L. B. Smith, the district president, was with them, adding much to the interest of each session. She also gave the principal address of the evening. Professor Darling, with about twenty-five of his pupils from the public school, kindly gave a model recitation on the effects of alcohol on the human system, showing by their ready replies that at least one Kansas teacher had faithfully fulfilled his duty according to law on scientific temperance. I trust there are many more like him.

At the evening session the Pleasanton Lodge, I. O. G. T., marched in, carrying their banner, having this inscription, "Always Prohibition. Never Re-submission." Then came the Loyal Temperance Legion, with their superintendent, Mrs. Austin, who marched and countermarched, singing as only children can sing, "As we go marching for temperance." The convention was welcomed by the mayor of the city, whose brave, honest words were indeed cheering. The fraternal delegate from the I. O. G. T. voiced the greetings, and pledged the coöperation of its members. The pastors of the various churches added encouragement by their presence and their stirring words of cheer. Miss Soward, of Mound City, gave a recitation full of tender pathos, and the bitter anguish caused by the saloon.

From Mrs. Julia Chase, superintendent of the department of work among soldiers, comes such an interesting report, that I would gladly give it in full did space permit. The "Veterans' Union" at the Soldiers' Home has at present ninety active, and many more pledged members. The Catholic priest promises to give them an address soon, also to bring with him the Cathedral choir to sing. Other good speakers from the city often go out and assist at their meetings. The men are much encouraged, though the saloon is still in "running order."

The union at the prison now numbers two hundred and fifty members, while more than fifty have been discharged and are now free. The leader of the union orchestra is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music, and is master of the violin. It is a rare treat to listen to the music at their bi-monthly meetings. At their meeting on New Year's Day, the Veterans' Union presented them with a handsome Bible. Cards with appropriate texts were presented by Mrs. Chase to all members of these unions, also to the one lately organized in the garrison at Ft. Leavenworth. Our W. C. T. U's are urged to send them good papers and selections for use at their meetings.

A gold medal contest, under the auspices of Rastall union, Coffee county, was held December 13. The speakers have been invited to repeat their addresses at several different points in the state, and they expect to go to Emporia soon.

No class of citizens of Kansas are stronger in upholding the prohibitory law than the teachers. At the last convention of the State Teachers' Association, nearly 1,200 teachers being present, the following resolution was enthusiastically adopted, only one man rising when negative votes were called for. (How lonely he must have felt!)

"WHEREAS, The prohibitory amendment to the constitution of Kansas has, by driving the saloon beyond her borders, wrought happiness and comfort to thousands of homes, has brought thousands of sober, industrious people to us from other states and from other lands, has reduced crime and pauperism, has made it easier for us to govern and to teach the children of the commonwealth, and has elevated Kansas to a plane of civilization never reached by any other people in the history of the world; therefore,

"Resolved, That we are now and forever opposed to a re-submission of the prohibitory amendment, and that it is our deliberate conviction that the prohibitory amendment is as firmly imbedded in the constitution of Kansas and in the hearts of her people as are the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments imbedded in the federal constitution and in the hearts of the American people."

MRS. S. S. WEATHERBY,
Union Signal Reporter.

NORTH CAROLINA.

GLEANINGS AMONG THE UNIONS.

The work is very varied in our state. The Durham union has been especially active in the flower mission, sending relief to many, and especially making the inmates of the almshouse happy by their presence and gifts, and by the services held.

The Concord union has shown its spirit by befriending a friendless young man through a long and serious illness, supplying the necessities and luxuries as only motherly women know how to do.

The members of the Washington union did an unusual thing when they presented the editor of their town paper with a Bible suitably inscribed. How much pleasanter are tokens of appreciation than epithets of abuse! This same union held special services at the almshouse on Christmas day. At the conclusion of the exercises the contents of a huge basket were distributed among the inmates, and the "pleased surprise" and "hearty thanks" and the happy hearts of the white-ribboners make us wonder if any others had such a "merry Christmas."

The New Garden union had an interesting memorial meeting. There were several exercises, chief among which was an address by Mrs. Winston. The audience listened attentively to the recital of the early history of the W. C. T. U., and all felt that we had a good meeting.

The Greensboro union held their memorial services in the Presbyterian Church. From first to last the large audience gave profound attention, evincing that the temperance sentiment is by no means extinct in Greensboro.

The Asheville union has a new president, Miss Aston, who is well known over the state as superintendent of the Y's, having made an organizing tour last October. If she carries the enthusiasm as local president that she has as Y superintendent, it will be fortunate for any un on to have her as president. The W. C. T. U. is just now arranging for temperance kindergarten work in the public schools.

I cannot here speak of Winston, High Point, Archdale or other old unions long established in the work, nor of the new societies at Hendersonville, Taylorsville and Waynesville, but hope to do so at another time.

MARY C. WOODY, Union Signal Reporter.

MISSOURI.

SIXTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The convention of the sixth district was held in Fayette, December 5 and 6. We, as a union, would like to express the pleasure and profit derived from the holding of the convention here, ably conducted by our district president, Miss E. P. Babb.

Our beloved state president, Mrs. Clara Hoffman, was with us, and gave us a fine address in her graphic, vigorous style, making us all feel the necessity of earnest thought and action. Mr. Gault was also present during the convention, and gave us timely words and counsel.

We wish especially to speak of the great help and encouragement from the earnest words of Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, who was with us for a week. Such an earnest, consecrated woman wields an influence which must be felt for time and eternity. We have had troubles in our union on the woman suffrage question, and Mrs. Henry did much to reconcile hitherto antagonistic forces, and to show that it is a serious misfortune to let one question destroy the unity, power and usefulness of our organization.

The presence of this great-hearted, motherly soul has been a benediction to us; and that our young men appreciated her talk with them, and also that of Mrs. Hoffman, will be seen by the following extracts from the Central College Collegian:

"On the evening of November 30th, in Centenary chapel, a large and appreciative audience greeted Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, of Evanston, Ill. Her services were secured by the W. C. T. U., being one of their national evangelists. Her lecture, 'What is the Worth of a Boy,' was well received, and pronounced by many as being the best lecture from any woman that they had ever heard. Those who went expecting to find something to ridicule and condemn were disappointed. Even those who by their prejudice and antiquated ideas of woman had made themselves vindicative to the noble work of this tireless band, for once held their peace and felt their shame."

"Mrs. Clara Hoffman lectured at the Opera House on Dec. 6th. Without doubt it was the best lecture from a woman we ever heard. She showed, and showed plainly, that the great evil which they fight, lay at the door of the church, that the 'fastidious' Christian was responsible for the shame and degradation which fill our land. We had no thought of being interested in what might be spoken—in fact, we did not intend to be—but her address was so honest, plain, and just, that the most indifferent were surely profited. We profess nothing, but wish more of those who do could have tasted a little of her medicine; for it might have helped their poor little souls—those, who are ever ready and eager to misrepresent and depreciate this organization, simply because they differ from the views of some of its members."

MRS. W. A. FRANTZ, Cor. Sec.

AN ARKANSAS ECHO OF THE FIRST PRAYING BAND.

One of the chief women among the historic seventy that pioneered the path of the Crusade, wrote this letter to a friend in Hillsboro, Ohio, last December:

I see in THE UNION SIGNAL that you are to have a "Camp-fire" in Hillsboro in honor of the Crusade of '73. How that does wake the echoes in my mind, and for the past few days I have been living those memories over again; those wonderful times! In fancy I look right into the faces of Mesdames Thompson, McDowell, Fenner, Trimble, Collins, Sams, Scott, Gregg, Mather, Perkins, Doggett, Sayler, Evans, Cowden, McSurely, Haggard, West, Gardner and Crace, Mrs. Wilson and daughters, Mrs. Monroe and daughters, all those lovely singers—how they do come up before me! I believe I could mention every name in the band.

Then those prayers and hymns, kneeling on the pavements in the snow and cold, sometimes all the bells ringing while our hearts were aching! Do you remember an all-day meeting at Mr. Dunn's "Palace" drug store, one bitter cold day, when Mrs. John A. Smith entertained us with such an elegant lunch? We don't forget the "Tabernacle," the injunction, and the trial, too! Seems to me I could write a volume about those old Crusade times—our various rooms, meetings, cadets (Will has his gun yet), Band of Hope entertainments, all-day meetings, amendment meetings, committees, City Hall meetings, Murphy meetings, jail work, etc., etc. How I would enjoy being with you at this anniversary, and nothing but a little short pocket-book prevents me.

What a precious memorial service you can have—so many of the dear ones have been translated—but they will lean far over the battlements in the glory world, and shout "hallelujahs!" as you celebrate your victories in Jesus' name. I can almost hear Gen. McDowell sweeping the strings of his harp to the theme he grew so eloquent over one night in the Presbyterian Church; "If any two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." O bless the Lord, my sister, that little band builded wiser than they knew. Look at the work to-day! Neither Hillsboro nor Ohio can contain it but like a stone cut out of the mountain without hands, it is rolling on to fill the whole earth. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord." Praise His name, we'll go on battling for the Lord, in His blessed work, and He will surely give us the victory.

We feel the influence of it away here in Arkansas—not a saloon in our town, but a good W. C. T. U., (of which I have the honor to be president.) an L. T. L. of over two hundred members, received the banner at the state convention last April at Little Rock. I attended the state convention and we are preparing for a "Camp-Fire"; I wish you could send us a fagot, or that you could come and see the miles of stalwart oaks and stately pines that we have to build with and just wagon loads of pine knots for "chinkin"—how they blaze, too!

Please give my love to Mrs. Thompson and all my dear friends. We'll finish this talk over on the other shore.

Yours lovingly,
SISTER PICKERING.

NEW YORK.

A GRAND NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The W .C. T. U. of Syracuse gave a New Year's dinner to over two thousand poor children of the city, between the ages of five and fifteen. It was a new departure in temperance work and awakened a lively interest in the community. The dinner consisted of roast turkey, roast beef, potatoes, celery, cranberry sauce, biscuits and butter, coffee and milk for drink, and mince pies and oranges for desert. A large empty store in the Grand Opera House was fitted up with benches and tables to seat five hundred children at once, although at the first dinner, which was at 11 a. m., there were five hundred and fifty-six children, by actual count. Two thousand tickets had been issued by the W. C. T. U., and four times the tables were set and emptied before all the children with tickets were fed. Then the tables were set again and those without tickets, mostly boys, were brought in and as bountifully supplied as the rest. It was estimated that nearly, if not quite, three thousand persons, young and old, partook of that dinner. Each child as it passed out was given an orange and picture card, and temperance leaflet or paper.

After each dinner was finished, before the children arose to go, some one of our gentlemen helpers gave them a little "after dinner speech," asking them to join with him in a New Year's resolution, not to drink, smoke nor swear, to go to Sunday-school, be obedient and good generally for the year to come, and try to get others to do the same. The promises were heartily given, with three cheers for the ladies of the W. C. T. U.

To feed this multitude, had been provided six hundred pounds of turkey, six hundred of beef, five bushels of potatoes, three thousand biscuits, a barrel of cranberries, three hundred mince pies, and many boxes of oranges. The room where dinner was served was free, the money to buy the provisions raised by a committee of gentlemen; one of the aldermen of the city carved turkey till all were done, an ex-mayor presided and made speeches, and a college professor and business men took off their coats and worked with might and main to make the dinner the grand success that it was. Reporters from the daily papers were there, and gave the public lively descriptions of the matter, and everybody connected or interested seemed merry, and decidedly agreed that it was a "happy New Year." "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," was sung as a fitting close to this day of joyful tc"

M. J. I. VILAS, Supt. of Press.

MICHIGAN.

To the Superintendents of Evangelistic Work in the Third District:

I wish to ask you to send me your addresses at once. I am anxious for the success of this line of work, as it is in reality the foundation of all others. May this year be crowned with great victories—obtained only by the entire consecration of the workers, and an undying love for the cause of the Master. Let any union which has no superintendent of this work appoint one at your next meeting. I refer you, dear sister workers, to the official letter in THE UNION SIGNAL of December 26, 1889, Evangelistic Department, by Elizabeth W. Greenwood, where your work is very clearly explained and planned; which plans, if well adhered to, accompanied by a love for the work, and the aid of the Holy Spirit, cannot fail to prove a grand and glorious success. May God help us and prepare us for our duties!

MRS. L. A. BURGDORF,
Dist. Supt. of Evang. Dept.

PENNSYLVANIA.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY AT CARMICHAELS.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Woman's Crusade was appropriately observed by all the unions in Greene county. In Carmichaels, services were held on Sabbath evening in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Miss M. E. McClintock, presiding. The Crusade Psalm was read by Miss I. P. Jamison; prayer was offered by Mrs. E. J. Acklin. The "Woman's Crusade" was read by Mrs. A. S. Laidley, the "Leader's story" was given by Miss S. A. Diem. Greetings from Mother Thompson were read by Miss Mary Pennington; "A Reminiscence of the Crusade" was read by Miss Francie Nickeson; an excellent selection was also read by Mrs. Mary McGinnis. Remarks were made by Rev. E. S. Campbell, the pastor of the church, who made the closing prayer. A large audience was present that seemed deeply interested in hearing again the story of the Crusade.

The union here has never been strong, yet for eight years a few faithful ones have held aloft the white banner of prohibition. Sixteen copies of THE UNION SIGNAL are now taken.

A WHITE-RIBBONER.

ILLINOIS.

HANCOCK COUNTY CONVENTION.

The midwinter convention of the W. C. T. U. held in Bowen, January 14–16, was one of the most profitable and interesting meetings ever held by this organization.

Reports were heard from fifteen different departments, and much interest was manifested. Among other business transacted, it was decided to establish W. C. T. U. headquarters during fair time on each of our three fair grounds; to hold an all-day grove-meeting on the camp ground near Carthage, on the day prior to the opening of the annual camp-meeting; to offer a prize of $7.00 for the best, and $3.00 for the second best essay, written by the school children of the county, on "The Evil Effects of Alcohol on the Human System," and to hold a convention of the Loyal Temperance Legions of the county in Carthage, on flower mission day, June 9, a prominent feature of the meeting to be the distributing of flowers by the children, to the inmates of the county jail and almshouse.

Mrs. Rounds and Miss Mary Mahon were present, and added much to the interest of the meeting.

LURA VIOLA THOMPSON, Sec.

WORK IN BLOOMINGTON AND THE FOURTEENTH DISTRICT

Greetings to the great white-ribbon army! I am holding a "praise meeting" this morning, all alone in my heart, while I realize that "Thus far the Lord has led us on," and the fullness of His promise, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Surely the "fresh memorials of His grace" are abundant.

We should be most ungrateful if we should fail to give thanks continually for the blessings that have crowned the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the evident works of God's gracious favor.

While we are displaying the banner our Master has given us, we may hear Him saying, "Fear not;" "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper;" so let us enlarge the place of our tent and lengthen our cords, for there ought to be a wonderful increase in our membership this year, and there will be if we are faithful workers.

I believe our Bloomington union was reported last year as having the largest membership of any in the state, and we are glad to say we are radicals, and keep that fact well at the front, too. "Non-partisan"—of course we are non-partisan, like our National leader, Miss Willard, and our Illinois leaders; we are non-partisan enough to help in any honest effort to strike deadly blows at the licensed dram-shop. While we spell Prohibition with a capital P, and enter into no compromises with evil doers, we rejoice in every agency that has for its aim the destruction of the liquor traffic, and will lend a hand to any good, honest work for that end. Our union sent prohibition literature weekly into Dakota during the amendment struggle there, and said, "God bless the party there that dares to stand for the right!"

This fourteenth district is radical and outspoken, too, and has the largest membership of any in the state. I do not mean that every member indorses what is called "Third Party," but as that is not our test of membership, we can all go on with our chosen work. Many of us do not know to what party others belonged formerly; we all know we are for the safety of our homes now, and against the liquor traffic, and everything that upholds it, and so we work on together, even if all are not party Prohibitionists. Our union has prospered under this kind of non-partisanship. We have enlarged our borders and moved into new quarters, where we now have an entire corner building—three stories and basement. We have seventeen rooms above the first story, and call our place the "W. C. T. U. Parlor and White-Ribbon Inn." We have eight persons employed in charge of this place besides the occasional assistance of members of the union.

Gospel meetings are held here every Sunday afternoon. We have a nice piano, for which we paid $300. The fitting up of our new quarters has cost several hundred dollars, but everything is paid for and we have a bright, cheery place and a hearty welcome to all who seek it, and they are many. We invite all friends of the W. C. T. U. to call at our headquarters when in the city. Our place is on the post-office block, corner of Front and Madison streets. But I imagine some good sister asks, "Does it pay for expenses?" Yes, it does. It always pays to be radical for the right, though not always perhaps, at first, in dollars and cents, but it pays to be consistent. There is no uncertain sound here. Our "mothers' meetings" are held in homes that invite them and are a blessed part of our W. C. T. U. work. Much interest has been taken the past year in the "Woman's Industrial Home" for our county. The calls for work are abundant, and we try to sow beside all waters. Mrs. Barney's meetings here, lately, were blessed and will not soon be forgotten.

MRS. G. H. READ.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

AN EXPLANATION.

In my appeal to suffrage friends, recently, I said we had received but $50 from outside, and that from Miss Willard. I was speaking especially of South Dakota.

The facts are, Miss Willard sent us $100, contributed by Dr. R. H. McDonald, of San Francisco, that stanch friend of the W. C. T. U. and prohibition, for our Dakota work; but before the money reached us, the one territorial union had become two state unions, hence the $100 was equally divided between the two unions. The help was timely, and the thanks of the W. C. T. U. of both the new states are due to Dr. McDonald and Miss Willard, and I hereby extend them.

H. M. BARKER, State Supt.

NOTICE.

All unions in South Dakota are requested to send to Mrs. M. B. Horning, St. Lawrence, for Demorest medals and other supplies. It only delays to send to Mrs. Woodbury, as she directs all back to superintendent of medal contest.

M. B. HORNING, State Supt.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. C. M. WOODWARD has been battling her way single-handed and alone in Omaha, Neb., during the month of January, and as a reward of her labors has organized three unions. The M. E. ministers indorsed the W. C. T. U. through her efforts, and welcomed her to their homes and churches, thus greatly aiding her work.

EXTRACT from a letter of a teacher in New Mexico: "We have a W. C. T. U. here of fourteen members, some of the Mexican women walking six miles to the meeting. No one realizes more than these women the terrors of intemperance, and they seem so glad that something is being done to ameliorate their condition, although many of the women drink, too. I have organized a Loyal Temperance Legion among my little folks, which they enjoy very much. I have been trying to get the saloons to close, but cannot tell how it will turn out yet."

THE Y. W. C. T. U., the Loyal Temperance Legion and the Prohibition Club, of Mt. Washington, Md., united in celebrating Sunday December 22, as Crusade Day. The exercises were held in the M. E. Church, and were opened at 11 a. m., with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. C. Babcock—one of the warmest advocates of prohibition in the state—from the text, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." The afternoon exercises were participated in by the children. Miss Mewshaw, president of the union, presided, and gave an interesting account of the beginning of the Crusade. Mrs. Lake, state corresponding secretary, also spoke of the Crusade, and of various points of interest connected with the work. Both meetings were largely attended.

LAURA M. JOHNS, of Salina, Kan., writes as follows: "Dr. Anna H. Shaw will give the month of March to Kansas. She is to come a few days earlier and stay a few days later than the first arrangement provided for; this leaves a half dozen dates yet to be filled. Any union desiring her lectures should apply promptly to me. Points upon or near the U. P. R. R., not farther west than Ellsworth, and that part of the Rock Island and Santa Fé lines running from the U. P. to the south line of the state, the San Francisco and Southern Kansas preferred, being the route laid out for the month's work.

A RESOLUTION of heartfelt thanks was passed recently by the Little Rock, Arkansas, W. C. T. U., to Mrs. Clara A. McDiarmid, for the gift of the beautiful rooms in that city which now constitute the state headquarters.

THE W. C. T. U. of Flora, Ill., celebrated the Crusade anniversary on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, December 21, 22 and 23, the first being a children's meeting, on Sunday a gospel temperance meeting, the exercises being participated in by all the ministers in the city; also the reading of appropriate selections by Mrs. Flint, Mrs. Sweet, and Miss Helen Sheridan; and on Monday the union held a prayer and praise meeting, all of these being full of interest.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, secretary of the Woman's Lecture Bureau, spoke at Toronto, Canada, Sunday, January 19, under the auspices of the Young Men's Prohibition Club. The Toronto Empire, in reporting the meeting, says: "Mrs. Emmons speaks well and to the point, and kept her auditors interested as she expounded some pretty clear views on the temperance question. The pulpit and press should lend more assistance in carrying on the warfare against liquor, and she ventured to predict that in the near future ministers would have to pay more attention to this important question, or seek some other calling."

A RECENT visitor to Toronto bears this good testimony: "When one has spent a Sabbath in the city of Toronto, the wish is that the whole world were like it. The restfulness of the very atmosphere seems to say it is God's day, and calls one to worship Him. No sound of street-car or news-boy, no sound except that of the chime of bells from the church steeples. Should man be so forgetful of his outward appearance as to not get his accustomed shave, he finds that he must either do it himself or wait until Monday morning. Should the busy house wife neglect the buying of her Sunday dinner on Saturday, she finds herself reduced to the necessity of using what was left over, as no business of any kind is carried on from midnight Saturday until six o'clock Monday morning. Even the saloons are 'hermetically sealed' during those hours, as my host informed me during my Sabbath in that city. Truly it is a veritable day of rest."

A CORRECTION.

A typographical error in my article on scientific temperance instruction printed in THE UNION SIGNAL, January 9, makes me say that "much of the so-called moral instruction that is now being given in the public schools is incomplete, inaccurate and inadequate." What I did say and have reason to know is lamentably true, is that "much of the so-called oral scientific temperance instruction that is now being given in the public schools is incomplete, inaccurate and inadequate," and therefore text books should be used.

MARY H. HUNT.

MISS I. C. DE VELLING'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN EASTERN WASHINGTON.

February 6, Rockford; 7, Waverly; 8, 9, Latah; 10, 11, Farmington; 12, Garfield; 13, Palouse; 14, Pullman; 15, Uniontown; 16, Colton; 17, Genesee; 18, Lewiston; Asotin county, five days; 25, 26, Colfax; 27, Ewartsville; March 1, Pomeroy; 2, Pataha; 3, Waitsburg; 4, Huntsville; 5, 6, Dayton; 7, Prescott; 8, 9, Walla Walla; 10, Dixie; 11, Wallula; 12, Pasco; 14, Endicott; 15, Elberton; 16, Garfield; 17, Oakesdale; 18, Rosalia; 19, Pine City; 21, Sraguue; 22, 23, Spokane Falls; 24, Cheney; 25, Medical Lake; 26, Deep Creek Falls; 27, Davenport; 29, Stevens; 30, Sprague; 31, Ritzville.

Official Communications.

PROMOTION OF SOCIAL PURITY.

THE TRAVELER'S AID.

The worker in social purity lines very soon learns that a large number of girls are ruined because of the necessity of leaving their homes and traveling alone to seek employment in large cities. Unprotected and wholly ignorant of the many snares laid for their feet, it is small wonder that simple village girls prove easy prey for the vultures of society ever in search of victims. There is the greatest need of our devising some means of protecting the girls thus exposed to dangers which, unaided, they could hardly hope to escape. To meet this need we are trying to organize a Traveler's Aid, fashioned somewhat after the plan of the Traveler's Aid Society of England, which has been working effectively along this line for some years. We most earnestly hope that every union in the country will take up this important branch of the social purity work.

I offer below some suggestions which may be helpful in starting the work which, on account of being new to us, must be largely experimental at the outset. As a branch of the social purity department, it should be carried on under the general supervision of the superintendents of that department. In large cities, where there is more than one union, the several superintendents of social purity could form a Traveler's Aid Committee to devise ways and means, and systematize the work for that city. As this work will vary somewhat, according to the size of the place, we will consider the subject under the following heads:

1. In large cities. It is here that the hardest and most important work must be done. An agent should be employed who will give all her time to visiting the different railway stations. An occasional visit will be of little use. If possible, every through train should be met and a careful watch kept for opportunities to render assistance. If we would defeat the efforts of evil-doers we must be as vigilant as they. Where there is only one depot used by all roads, the work will be more easy; and in all cases it may be simplified by securing the coöperation of the waiting women, and, so far as possible, the other depot officials. Let them know that you stand ready to help friendless girls, and induce them to send to you any such who may come under their notice, or to take charge of them until your agent can be sent for. The person who has this matter in charge should be ready to meet at the station any girl whose friends have requested by letter or by telegram that she be cared for, or of whose arrival she has been notified by a Traveler's Aid worker in another place. She must take the girl under her protection, and see that she is turned over in safety to the care of her friends; or if she has no friends in the city, she should be sent to a respectable lodging house until she can be provided with honest work. No rules of invariable action can be laid down. The circumstances will vary with each case, and all will depend upon the tact and loving interest of the individual worker. When arrangements have been previously made for meeting a girl at the station, it may be understood that she will, if able to pay it, be charged a small fee, enough to defray the expenses incurred in her behalf.

2. In large towns. Here the character of the work will be much the same as in the cities. In factory towns, especially, there is need of unremitting watchfulness, as the girls flock to such places in large numbers. In some smaller towns in lumbering districts, the same work must be done. Here girls are constantly being tricked into coming, in the hope of securing honest work, only to be imprisoned in dens of infamy. You may not be able to save those who are going from choice into such a life, but you can see to it that none go unwittingly or unwillingly. In such towns there are rarely more than three or four trains a day, and it is imperative that every train be met.

3. In small villages this vigilance work will not be necessary, but none the less an important task remains to be done. Remember that the city houses of ill-fame are recruited from the country districts. Organize your Traveler's Aid in every village; then let it be known that you stand ready to help any girl who is thinking of going to the city; that you can give her complete directions as to how to proceed, or that you will communicate with your worker in the city, and see that she is met upon her arrival there, and taken safely to her destination. Have the name and address of your worker published occasionally in your local paper, with a brief notice of the work, and in every way spread the knowledge among those whom you wish to help.

For the successful operation of this plan of work it is very important that all Traveler's Aid workers be promptly put into communication with each other. If this can be done, we may have a network covering the entire country, a sort of "underground railway," by means of which girls, or little children, or aged people, who are obliged to travel, may be passed from hand to hand across the entire continent, with no risk of incurring the dangers which often threaten helpless travelers. But particularly we will be able to extend our protection to young and inexperienced girls, who are threatened with special danger.

In order to secure this communication as promptly as possible, send the name and address of your worker immediately to your state and district superintendents of social purity, or when the state unions take up the Traveler's Aid Work, as they will soon, send to the state superintendent of Traveler's Aid Work, who will see that the names are published in all W. C. T. U. reports and minutes. Notify superintendents at once of any change of address, and let her know if you are obliged to give up the work, and send her the name of your successor. If you are obliged to leave town, even for a few days, make arrangements for some one else to take charge of the matter. This is a work of great importance, and you cannot tell when your help may be needed. Until we get started, and before we can circulate the names of the workers by means of reports, we are sure that THE UNION SIGNAL will give us the opportunity to publish the addresses of workers as soon as they are appointed. Then the agents in different places can keep always at hand a complete list, and can correct this list from time to time, as notice is given through THE UNION SIGNAL. Any further information or suggestions will be gladly given by the writer of this article, who may be addressed at Baraboo, Wis.

MAUD REMINGTON,
Associate Supt. in Department for the Promotion of Social Purity, Traveler's Aid Work.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Connecticut—Mrs. R. F. A. Williams, Stafford Springs, $2.

North Dakota—Bismarck, collected by Jane Weeden, $4; Baby Band Willard W. C. T. U., Durbin, $1.50.

Illinois—Mrs. Otis Hardy, Joliet, $100; W. C. T. U., Pittsfield, $4; W. C. T. U., Grand Crossing, $20; Englewood, Mrs. S. A. Welch, $3; Rockford, a Friend, $3.65; Murphysboro Baby Band, $1; Woodstock, Mr. and Mrs. Durfee, $2; Moline L. T. L., $3; Lanark, a Friend, $10.

Indiana—Goshen W. C. T. U., $2; Brazil, Winfield Sherfey, $1; Portland, Mrs. Elizabeth Poling, $1; Ft. Wayne, Miss Florence Clark, $3.75; Evansville, Grace Hartley, $1.50.

Iowa—W. C. T. U., Edgewood, in memoriam Mrs. Emma Hill, $1; Mary Hopkins, Clay, 25cts.

Kentucky—Greenville, Mrs. N. M. Trowbridge, $3.

Maryland—W. C. T. U., Oriole, $24.50.

Maine—Caribou, John Eddy, $3.65; South Berwick, Ella Ricker, $1.05.

Massachusetts—L. T. L., Co. A., Boston, $1; Stockbridge W. C. T. U. $5; Sunderland, L. T. L., Co. E. $1.

Michigan—North Muskegon, Lelia Johnson $4; Schoolcraft, Mrs. J. T. Cobb, Threescore Band, $5; Jacobsville Sabbath-school, Finlander children, $6; Gladstone W. C. T. U. 50cts.; Jacobsville W. C. T. U. $2.50; W. C. T. U., Marquette, $1.25; W. C. T. U., Stephenson, $1; Menominee friends $1.50; W. C. T. U., Manistique $6.30; Y. W. C. T. U., Manistique, $3; W. C. T. U., Republic, $11.50; Twelfth District, $7.45.

Montana—Helen J. Thompson, Helena, $3.20.

Nebraska—Helena Jansen, $7.

New Hampshire—Mrs. Morrill, Dover, $3.65.

New York—W. C. T. U., Portageville, $4.65; W. C. T. U., Sherwood & Scipioville, $5; Pittsford, Mrs. W. Van Buskirk $2; W. C. T. U., Gerry, 60cts.

Ohio—Wauseon $25; Seville, Mrs. H. Welday $1; Nannie Guttery, Clarksville, $1; W. C. T. Unions, Ironardsburg & Powell, $4.77.

Pennsylvania—Donegal, Carrie and Ira Steele, $3.65; Philadelphia, Mrs. Sam'l Clements, $50.

Tennessee—Nashville, Mrs. Nat. Baxter, Sr. $50.

Vermont—Bellows Falls, a Friend $1; East Peacham, Bessie Varnum, $4; Sales, $5.48; Miss H. B. Williamson, Indian Head, Canada, 50cts.

January 27, 1890. ESTHER PUGH.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Dep't.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Der Deutsch Amerikaner (semi-monthly) German temperance; single copy 50 cents, in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents.

$45,000 to Our Agents!

Agents for "Glimpses of Fifty Years," don't have la grippe, they haven't time; people will have the book and the agents must supply them. Work is easier when wages are good and certain. Our agents have taken over $45,000 as their share of the receipts on "Glimpses of Fifty Years" since last May. A nice sum that, isn't it? Yes, but our agents will do better the next eight months. We have increased the commissions and shall increase the sales. Don't you, reader, want part of this sum?

We have room for you and a few other good workers. We can furnish the names of over seventy agents who have sold from 100 to 300 Glimpses for us the past summer, and can give names and addresses of many agents who have earned from $90 to $140 per month on this book alone. We know canvassing for some books doesn't pay, but "Glimpses" isn't that kind of a work. Complete outfit for canvassing, on receipt of $1. For full particulars, address us as publishers, or H. J. Smith & Co., as general agent, 341 Dearborn St., Chicago.

2X10=20

And Picture Free.

We have 800 artotypes measuring 11x14 inches of Miss Willard's workshop in Rest Cottage, Evanston; we used several thousand of these pictures in 1887. We now make the special offer to send one (regular price 25 cents) for two 10-cent trial subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL. The picture will be sent to you postpaid or to any address that you name. This is a generous offer—take advantage of it at once. The limited number of pictures will soon be called for. All readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will be interested in this unique picture. No further commission than the picture will be given for the two names, nd that only while the supply lasts.

IRETON, IOWA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL;—I would like to tell you how much I love you. Have been feasting on the last number. How I rejoice when husband brings in my papers, but he is apt to cling to the dear UNION SIGNAL till he reads it himself. I can scarcely imagine how some of our dear W. C. T. U. sisters can be loyal C. T. and not take THE UNION SIGNAL—"groping in ignorance dark as the night" no UNION SIGNAL to give them the light. But if I cannot persuade them to subscribe for one of their own, they must read mine. Please pardon this little seeming gusto, for I am just praising God, "from whom all blessings flow" daily and hourly that I am permitted to do errands for Him in the temperance cause. May God bless you and all the noble white-ribbon sisters of this great world. MRS. G. D. T.

"Ye Hatchet Partie"

Know ye that Washington's Birthday is coming? Dost remember that the above named entertainment has been given with great success? Why not gather in some shekels for your local work by giving this or some other entertainment of which we have such a variety to suit all ages and requirements? Ye Hatchet Partie sells at 15 cts. each, $1.50 per dozen. The music required in it can also be had through us.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Can Hemorrhoids be Cured.

Hemorrhoidal tumors and piles may be cut off with a surgeon's knife or removed by cauterization, but this only deals with the effects of this distressing complaint, leaving the causes of them untouched. Those who have undergone such barbarous treatment realize in time that they are but temporarily relieved, while other tumors grow, and new complications appear.

It has been left for the Globe Medicine Company, of Cincinnati, O., to produce and place before the public notice a scientific and absolute cure for this terrible disease, without the use of surgery.

It is not for sale at drug stores, but is sent prepaid on receipt of the price, $2 a package, which is enough to cure any ordinary case. Trial or half size $1. Physicians prescribe it wherever known.

Either of the following parties will gladly answer any letters if a stamped envelope is enclosed for reply.

L. C. Davis, Dupont, Ind., says: He had Internal Bleeding Piles 35 years, but one box cured him two years ago. Since that time has had no trouble whatever.

Mrs. G. W. Basford, Bellevue, O., says: She had Bleeding Piles 30 years. One box cured her two years ago, and has been perfectly well ever since.

J. E. Thompson, Cincinnati, O., says: He had an aggravated case of External Piles. One box cured him.

A treatise on piles, explaining the origin, causes and dangers of the Hemorrhoidal Disease, will be mailed free on application.

Address all orders and money to the Globe Medicine Co., Box 715, Cincinnati, O.

An Insidious Enemy.

There is possibly no disease that attacks the human system that is more insidious in its approach than Catarrh. Very few appreciate that a slight cold and a heavy, dull feeling in the upper part of the head leads to anything serious, or are disposed to treat for prompt cure. Many a poor victim whose life has been made miserable for years can look back to a time when if he had considered catarrh at all a dangerous disease, or a matter of serious difficulty, could have easily cured it.

It is the first symptoms of these diseases so harmless in their apparent effects, and yet so serious in their results, that should make the word catarrh a household dread, and its earliest symptoms feared and provided for, as would be the most contagious diseases.

Accompanying the treatment of Rev. T. P. Childs, who has become famous the country over for having twenty years ago established the fact that "catarrh could be cured," and whose treatment is the only now known remedy, is a Cold Air Inhaling Balm, which when used for a cold in the head, bronchitis, clergyman's sore throat, or any disease of the larynx, is wonderful in its results. Rev. T. P. Childs of Troy, O., has become so widely known in connection with this catarrh cure, and has cured so many thousands of people, that to suggest catarrhal troubles suggests Rev. T. P Childs.

The discovery of his cure for Catarrh and diseases of the Throat and Lungs has attracted great attention. Leading men everywhere publicly state that Childs' treatment has cured them or their families of Catarrh or Throat or Lung difficulties—among them clergymen, physicians, lawyers, merchants, bankers and business men. All who have personally investigated the facts are satisfied that Mr. Childs has discovered a certain, positive and permanent cure for these diseases that when properly used never fails even in the most desperate cases. In a thoroughly honorable and characteristic manner he publishes the names and addresses of some he has cured that any who desire may inquire of the patients themselves what Childs' treatment has done for them.

Many who did not receive our paper would doubtless be very thankful should our readers call the attention of such to the advertisement of Mr. Childs. Catarrh and Consumption are the twin enemies of the race, and any means of relief is a heaven-sent blessing. Childs' treatment may be relied on as an effective and certain cure for Nasal Catarrh, Bronchitis and all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, and you may recommend it to your friends with every confidence.

None may feel any hesitancy in placing their case in Mr. Childs' hands for treatment. We would call especial attention to the advertisement, and request a cheerful perusal of the facts as set forth.

At the recent annual dinner of the famous New England Society at Delmonico's, in New York, a bon mot was made by the Rev. Dr. Wayland, which brought down the house with roars of laughter. He said amongst other bright things that it seemed rather hard on old New England for her sons to sit here enjoying themselves in such a luxurious fashion, when even Plymouth Rock pants for three dollars, and moved that a collection be taken up to relieve the distress!

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

SCOTT'S FLOWERS
41 Years' Experience in growing our strong and reliable ROSES. Grand specialties in PLANTS, BULBS, & FLOWER SEEDS of extra choice quality. Rare Novelties of great beauty. Handsomely illustrated Catalogue for 1890, fully discribing many Beautiful New Flowers, sent FREE to any address. Send for it now. ROBERT SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW STRAWBERRY "LADY RUSK"
The best berry for long distance shipments. Will not rot or melt down if packed dry. Headquarters for all leading varieties of Berry Plants and GRAPE VINES having 300 acres in cultivation. Catalogue free.
WM. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

PROHIBITION COLONY
AT NEWHALL, LOS ANGELES CO., CAL.
If you have lung trouble, Catarrh, Asthma, or Malaria, and want to be cured, or if you are only seeking for a faultless climate, and rich soil, where all kinds of semi-tropical fruit is grown in greatest abundance, and immense crops of small grain and vegetables are produced, or if you simply wish to make a paying investment, or desire to settle in one of the loveliest spots on earth, send us your address, and we will forward to you full information free, and gladly answer any special inquiries, not only about our prohibition colony, but about this noted land of sunshine and flowers.
St. John, Katzenstine & Yarnell,
CALIFORNIA BANK BUILDING,
LOS ANGELES, - - - CAL.

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A.A.Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N.Y.City.

A 6% INVESTMENT NET.
WE OFFER
$50,000 Watertown, S. D., Water Co.
20-YEAR BONDS AT PAR
Subject to sale or advance in price without notice. Interest payable semi-annually in New York.
They are a conservative and desirable security for the investment of trust and private funds.
Watertown is just west of the Minnesota line; is the county seat of Codington County, a wide-awake, thriving, substantial city of some 6,000 population, located at the junction of six railroads, among which are C. & N. W., Bur., Cedar Rapids & Northern, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba; ranks among the first shipping points in Southeast Dakota.
The income derived from the city for hydrant rentals is paid direct to the Trustee, the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., of New York, for the benefit of the bondholders, the city's agreement being indorsed on the bond itself.
We have on hand a choice list of other BONDS drawing from 4 to 7 per cent.
Further particulars and LISTS on application.
S. A. KEAN & CO., Bankers,
100 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.
115 Broadway, New York.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

ALL ABOUT NEW STATE OF Send stamp for Catechism, ESHELMAN, LLEWELLYN & CO., Seattle, WASHINGTON

THIS IS WORTH $3.00
During the next 30 days to any reader of THE UNION SIGNAL who purchases The Universal Health outfit with book of instructions "How to get Well and Keep Well without Resorting to Drugs." Regular price of outfit $10.00. Price to anyone sending this clipping or mentioning that you saw this in the UNION SIGNAL $7.00. Call or address Universal Health Co., 167 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. The above includes a certificate of membership in School of Longevity, for one month.

100 page book, with colored illustrations and many prominent testimonials, among others, Mrs. T. B. Carse, regarding Dr. Peiro's Oxygen treatment, free. Dr. Peiro, 78 State St., Chicago.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

WALL PAPER makes attractive homes. Our low prices, enormous assortment of styles and honorable treatment induce customers in all parts U.S. to recommend us. Lustres 6c. a roll. Handsome Golds 12c. Felts 20c. Iridescent Embossed Golds 35c. For 8c. postage will send to any address samples with borders to match. A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., PHILADELPHIA, PA

VAUGHAN'S GREENHOUSES
Our 1890 Catalogue is the most Complete, Handsome and Conservative Seed Book of the year. We Grow Plants, Bulbs, Seeds, Shrubs and Small Fruits. Our Chicago Parks Lawn Seed and Bedding Plants (the finest in the World), International Pansies, etc., have a National reputation. Largest stock of Gardening Tools in America, saving you one-third on these alone. To secure a trial order we offer prepaid from our New Greenhouses, nine real novelties as follows: Rose, Madam Hoste; Fuschia, Mrs. Hill; Gladiolus, Snow White; Geranium, La Favorite; Dahlia, Camellia flora; Carnation, Tidal Wave; Chrysanthenum, Snowball; one New French Canna; one Bulb Spider Lily; to any address for $1.00 with Catalogue.
VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,
P. O. Box 688, 146 W. Washington Street.
CHICAGO.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF STOCK COMPLETE QUALITY UNSURPASSED TESTED GARDEN FLOWER & FARM SEEDS PLANTS BULBS TOOLS ECT. READ OUR OFFERS BEFORE BUYING
W. W. BARNARD & CO. CHICAGO.
6-8. N. CLARK ST.
SUCCESORS TO HIRAM SIBLEY & CO'S SEED AND IMPLEMENT BUSINESS AT CHICAGO. MAILED FREE

The Famous Eckford Sweet Peas.
This celebrated variety of Sweet Pea, which was first introduced into England by Chas. Eckford and has been made, by him, a special study until it has now reached a state of perfection, is one that no lover of flowers should be without. Sample package sent Free on receipt of 6 cts. to pay postage
Send for our catalogue of Farm, Garden & Flower Seeds, beautifully gotten up and containing about 500 illustrations. Sent FREE on application.
L. L. MAY & CO. St. Paul, Minn.

SUN-RAY PANSY Elegant colors, streaked with rays of creamy white, rich yellow and deep orange. One full-sized pkt. of 14 superb varieties, mixed, and our new illustrated catalogue FULL OF BARGAINS for 5 cts. silver. Send now; ad. will not appear again.
Address LADIES' FLORAL Concern,
(Removed to) KINGSTON, N. Y.

10 NUT TREES By mail for $1.00
Spanish Chestnuts, American Chestnuts, or English Walnuts. FREE! a handsome mail Catalogue.
The WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c
To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 60c., 6 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St. N. Y. City
SUCTION HOOK HAT RACK PRICE 10c
PRICE 50 CTS

DR. WILFORD HALL'S HEALTH PAMPHLET
ENLARGED.
There has just been added sixteen pages of the most important matter to our HEALTH PAMPHLET. Some of this information is so novel that it will startle even our best-read physicians. The invariable price of the pamphlet will remain unchanged ($4), but those wishing to return the old pamphlet and receive the new one in its place will please inclose with it 25 cents to cover cost of clerk hire, postage, etc. Send full directions with the pamphlet.
Old pamphlets will be destroyed by us as fast as received and none but enlarged pamphlets will hereafter be sent out. Terms to agents will remain the same as heretofore. We only add that no person having the old pamphlet should for one day neglect to secure the enlarged one in its place, as the additional information it contains is invaluable.
For further information regarding this medicineless treatment call upon or send a 2-cent stamp to A. T. BATES, Room 46, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Full-Sitz, &c. in one. THE UNIVERSAL BATH. Vapor & Water, fresh & salt. Agents wanted.
Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

PAINLESS BEECHAM'S PILLS EFFECTUAL
THE GREAT ENGLISH MEDICINE WORTH A GUINEA A BOX
For Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fulness, and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES. This is no fiction. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one Box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be a Wonderful Medicine.—"Worth a guinea a box."—BEECHAM'S PILLS, taken as directed, will quickly restore females to complete health. For a WEAK STOMACH; IMPAIRED DIGESTION; DISORDERED LIVER;
they ACT LIKE MAGIC:—a few doses will work wonders upon the Vital Organs, Strengthening the muscular System; restoring long-lost Complexion; bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are "facts" admitted by thousands, in all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PATENT MEDICINE IN THE WORLD. Full directions with each Box.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN & CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York.
Sole Agents for the United States, who (inquire first), if your druggist does not keep them,
WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS ON RECEIPT OF PRICE, 25 CENTS A BOX.

Publisher's Notes.

★ STARS! ★

Star Offers!

If given 50,000 short-term subscribers the 100,000 mark will be reached before July 1st. These offers are made in the faith that they will result in getting that number of trial subscriptions, and are good to July 1st, 1890, only. We offer splendid premiums in return for work you do for the paper, and remember that all the work you do for it you are doing for your home and your native land. We propose to send you a "Star Certificate" every time you send us ten or over ten-cent names with $1.00 or over. These certificates are to be kept by you till such time as you have attained the number desired by you, and can then be sent in and exchanged for any premium you are entitled to. There are just two requirements.

First. You must enroll your name as a "Star Offer worker."

Second. You must send in the full amount of ten cents for each name, and not less than ten names at one time.

Star Premium Offers,

For 10 names.—Two first-class paper-bound books by Miss Willard, viz.: "Nineteen Beautiful Years" and "Woman in the Pulpit."

For 25 names.—One handsomely engraved gold thimble, or one elegant solid silver tea spoon, oxidized handle (see cut).

For 50 names.—A year's subscription to any $2.00 or $2.50 magazine, such as Demorest's, The Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, etc.

For 75 names.—A year's subscription to either Harper's Magazine, Harper's Bazar, Century or Scribner's, or a solid silver tablespoon, same beautiful design as that shown in the cut of the teaspoon.

For 100 names.—A new, ladies' size, Waterbury watch, or four solid silver teaspoons, with your initial engraved on them.

For 200 names.—A handsome silver chatelaine watch, good time piece, or eight solid silver teaspoons, or three solid silver tablespoons, with free engraved initial.

For 300 names.—A good set of dishes, English ware; beautiful pattern of flowers; 128 pieces (to be sent by express, carefully packed, at your expense) or 12 solid silver teaspoons, or 4 solid silver tablespoons, with engraved initial.

For 400 names.—A ladies' gold watch, guaranteed good time piece, American jewelled movement, warranted for twenty years, or 16 silver teaspoons, or 7 silver tablespoons, engraved initial.

For 500 names.—The watch, as above, with a handsome chain, or 20 silver teaspoons, 9 silver tablespoons, or a set of handsome china dishes, 100 pieces, beautifully decorated, value easily $40.00. Must be sent by express at your expense.

Please Notice!

You can hold the certificates as long as you like, and claim any premiums due from them whenever you wish. Remember each Star Certificate represents ten or more names sent in at ten cents each, and must be carefully kept by you and sent in when you order the premium you are entitled to. These offers do not mean that we expect only one club of 200 names, one of 500, etc. Anybody that is alive and energetic can get up a big club—the more the merrier. So

Get at Work.
Get your Friends at Work.
Get your Union Interested.

Send a postal card saying that you will be a "Star Offer" worker.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, CATARRH, ALL PAIN AND ALL INFLAMMATIONS.
POND'S EXTRACT
IS THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE CHEST, AND THE COMFORT OF MOTHERS. BE SURE TO GET THE GENUINE.

INFANTS' And children's wardrobes made to order. Imported Madras dresses a specialty. Send 2c. stamp for samples and prices. H. J. SPRAGUE & CO., 43 and 45 Franklin St., Chicago.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

EVERY LADY WANTS A SILK DRESS

This is your opportunity. A new departure. SILKS direct from the manufacturers to you. Our reduced prices bring the best goods within reach of all. We are the only manufacturers in the U. S. selling direct to consumers. You take no risk. We warrant every piece of goods as represented, or money refunded. See our references. We are the oldest Silk Manufacturers in the U.S. Established in 1838, with over 50 years' experience. We guarantee the CHAFFEE DRESS SILKS, for richness of color, superior finish and wearing qualities, to be unexcelled by any make of Black Silks in the world. We offer these Dress Silks in Gros Grains, Satins, Surahs, Faille Francaise and Aida Cloths, in Blacks only.

Send us a 2c.-stamp (to pay postage) and we will forward you samples of all our styles free with prices, and you can see for yourselves.

O. S. CHAFFEE & SON,
Mansfield Centre, Conn.

Refer, by permission, to First National Bank, Windham National Bank, Dime Savings Bank, Willimantic Savings Institute, of Willimantic, Conn.

RECOLLECT we send to all parts of the U.S. With each Dress Pattern we present the buyer with 1000 Yards Sewing Silk, and enough Silk Braid to bind bottom of dress.

THE GOODS are delivered to you all carrying charges PREPAID

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

THE 'FREEMAN"
SELF-WRINGING MOP!

"It leads all others" is the verdict of all who see it. A ratchet on this mop helps the hand by retaining the cloth at any stage of the work. Don't touch the water with your hands. Boiling water can be used, also potash, lye etc. if desired. If you desire to wash windows, corners up high, in fact anywhere, the mop by the means of the ratchet, can be held without the aid of the hand, thus removing the strain. Write for circulars. Sold exclusively through agents throughout the United States. Agents wanted. Write at once for territory—The Racine Malleable & Wrought Iron Co., Racine Wis.

Silk Satin & Plush Remnants for Crazy Patch a large pkg. pretty pieces, assorted col. & our ill. story paper 3 mos 10c. The Little Giant, St. Louis

—HAVE FOUND—
DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER
SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER CURES COUGHS AND COLDS PREVENTS CONSUMPTION
the Best Medicine for a cough I ever tried, and have also recommended it to others who were much pleased with the effect. Indeed, it cured my little boy's cough when the prescription of an excellent physician had no effect.—MRS. S. B. HOLMES, Moorehead, Minn., Jan. 14, 1886. Price 25c, 50c and $1.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2. 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

BABY CARRIAGES C. O. D. Velocipedes or Girl's Tricycles Sent One or more at Wholesale Prices. Express charges prepaid from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison St., CHICAGO. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer SEWING MACHINE 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Stanley's Own Story.
5000 Agents Wanted. New Book. Only authorized volume. Fully illustrated. Over 800 large pages. Complete canvassing outfit and book mailed for only 50 cts. Be quick. National Pub. Co., Chicago

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

CORNISH ORGANS Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address by CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S "CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

STANLEY'S WONDERFUL ADVENTURES,
200 illustrations, over 700 pages, beautifully bound. Big wages to agents. Fastest selling book in the field.
ELLIOTT & BEEZLEY,
Philadelphia, Pa. Chicago, Ill.

CURLING IRON mailed for 10cts. To make new customers. Wood handle; non-conducting thumb spring; polished steel. Worth 50c. Big catalogue free. A. T. Evans & Co., Chicago.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

AGENTS LOOK HERE
and Farmers with no experience make $2.50 an hour during spare time. A. D. BATES, 164 W. Robbins Ave., Covington, Ky., made $21 one day, $81 one week. So can you. Proofs and catalogue free. J. E. SHEPARD & Co., Cincinnati, O.

MARION WALKER.
I wish to employ a few ladies on salary to take charge of my business at their homes. Light, very fascinating and healthful. Wages $10 per week. Good pay for part time. References given. Address with stamp, MRS. MARION WALKER, Louisville, Ky.

BUYERS CATALOQUE WHOLESALE PRICES
SHOULD HAVE OUR 486 PAGE All kinds of Merchandise at Write for Particulars.
The Cash Buyers' Mercantile Union, 162 LA SALLE ST. Chicago, Ill.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

OUR BUSINESS SHOWED A LARGER INCREASE IN 1889 THAN FOR 18 PREVIOUS YEARS. WHY?

HERE'S A FEW REASONS!

(1) Very popular patterns of cloth. Styles shown only by us.
(2) Improved system of cutting, customer picking out his own shape from 10 examples, in addition to sending measures.
(3) 52 patterns, cut from cloth itself, to select from.
(4) Every garment guaranteed in all points—money promptly refunded for any cause.
(5) Entire outfit as shown above, sent FREE upon application, post-paid.
(6) Increase of our branch stores as far South as New Orleans, and West to Chicago, successfully competing for fine city trade.
(7) Thousands of people telling each other of our honorable treatment of customers, and excellent wear and fit of our clothing.

The promise for 1890 is very bright. We shall strive hard to deserve it.

PLYMOUTH ROCK PANTS CO.

Address all mail to Headquarters, 11 to 17 Eliot St. Annex, 695 Washington St., and 18 Summer St., Boston, Mass.
Branches: 285 Broadway, New York; 943 Penn. Ave., Washington, D. C.; 72 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.; 914 Main St., Richmond, Va.; 225 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md.; 110 Canal St., New Orleans, La.; 104 Montgomery St., Montgomery, Ala.; 39 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.; Burnside Bldg., Worcester, Mass.; Hotel Gilmore, Springfield, Mass.; 198 Westminster St., Providence, R. I.; Old Register Bldg., New Haven, Conn.; 106 No. Main St., Concord, N. H.; 170 River St., Troy, N. Y.

Be your own tailor.

Send for samples and rules for self-measuring.

Men's Suits, $12.00 to $30.00.
Men's Overcoats, $6.00 to $45.00.
Men's Pantaloons, $3.00 to $10.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Suits, $5.00 to $20.00.
Big Boys, Ages 12 to 18, Overcoats, $5.00 to $20.00.

Be sure and send for samples of our Combination Suits for boys, ages 4 to 14.

This means suit, extra pants and hat, all for the price of a suit alone, $5.00 & $6.00.

Goods sent C. O. D., with privilege of examining before paying.

PUTNAM CLOTHING HOUSE,
131 & 133 Clark St., 113 & 117 Madison St., N. E. Cor. Clark & Madison.

DELAVAU'S WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY

Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to ag'ts. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.

An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber Silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it.

When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W. G. Morris,
Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Publisher's Dep't.

A Vote Maker.

One of the most suggestive and most helpful works yet presented on the drink question is Senator Blair's book, "The Temperance Movement: or, The Conflict Between Man and Alcohol." Over fifty fine portraits, colored plates and diagrams.

This book will make temperance voters.

Agents wanted everywhere. Outfit only $1.00.

Bishop John P. Newman says of Senator Blair's "Conflict Between Man and Alcohol": "I hope the W. C. T. U. will adopt energetic measures for the national circulation of this important work."

From Senator Blair:

WASHINGTON, D. C.

I have read Miss Willard's book, "Glimpses of Fifty Years." There is enough in it to have constituted a detailed landscape of one hundred and fifty, but Miss Willard looks young and strong enough to have that length of time remaining. The book isn't a book. It talks out loud and seems to be telephoney. The thing really makes me feel as though there was a being in the room, and I expect to see it open and read itself to me.

But really this book, or being, or whatever it is, is worth a great deal more money than one will have to pay for it. It is a good book, for girls and boys will certainly read it. So will everybody else. It is not specially a temperance book, although it has in it a whole book full about temperance. It is not specially a book of travels, although it is full of travel and description, so the teacher might well buy the book as a guide in that most important and fundamental of all the professions. Whoever has, or expects to have, a family to bring up, or to live in one that is being brought up, ought to read this book and see how the Willards lived and loved, and loved and lived. If you want to know all about the American girl and woman just read this book, or rather, let the book have the floor and speak for itself. It seems to embody all that it talks about, and being right handy in the room speaks up and is instructive and agreeable any time and all the time, just like a chum who knows more than we do, and is a great deal better also. The book must have an immense sale. It will interest, instruct, and improve everybody. There never was a book with more in it to arouse women to their new life and more elevated plane of action, especially young women, and every brother in the human race who ever reads it will thank God for such a sister. Women must go free. A being who can do what this one has done and is doing cannot much longer be tied to the door-post. Strike the word male out of the laws!

From Miss Willard:

The question is very often asked by parents, Sunday-school teachers, and day-school teachers, Where can I get a helpful little leaflet concerning daily habitudes of life, to put into the hands of my son, daughter, or pupil? To answer this is difficult, because there must be a remarkable union of delicacy and clearness in the style of any such leaflet, in order to make it acceptable. Mrs. McCartney, a Pennsylvania white-ribboner, has furnished just what we need, and the following I can heartily recommend: "A Loving Word to Girls," and a "Loving Word to Boys." They are Nos. 9 and 10 of the new Loyal Leaflets.

1744 MORE FINE PARLOR SETS!!!

BELOW MANUFACTURER'S COST!

5-PIECE PARLOR SUITS $29.70 WORTH $55.00

$29.70

$29.70

The above is only a poor illustration of the handsome Solid Walnut Frame Parlor Set, with exquisite veneered Panels, Spring Seats, and trimmed in the richest embossed Plush or Black Hair Cloth. In fact a Parlor Set sold the world over for from $50 to $55, but our price is $29.70 for the entire set of five pieces as above (SOFA, PATENT ROCKER, ARM-CHAIR, and 2 REGULAR PARLOR CHAIRS, finished in any of the following colors of superb embossed Plush, i. e., Crimson, Gold, Olive or Blue, or if desired, each piece trimmed in a different color, (all new goods and of the latest patterns), and finely finished throughout. This is a chance in a life time. So if you want to take advantage of it, send in your orders quick, so as not to get left.

OVER 900 SUITS SOLD IN THE LAST 30 DAYS.

THE WAY IT IS DONE, AND WHY WE DO IT!!!

One of the largest Furniture Factories in this city was compelled to sell. They had to have the money; so we bought at our own price; their loss was our gain. We could sell the entire lot without turning our hand over to any dealer in the U. S., but we prefer to sell them at the remarkably low price of $29.70 a set direct to the consumer, and thereby at the same time it will be an advertisement for our CELEBRATED AND WORLD-RENOWNED which stand ahead of all others as Models of SUPREME DURABILITY, STYLE, FINE FINISH AND LOW PRICES, and have branded us in glowing letters that even our competitors can not fail to see as the LOWEST PRICED HOUSE IN THE COUNTRY.

$55.95 "MURRAY" BUCCIES and $5.95 "MURRAY" HARNESS,

NOTICE.—As there are some who probably would not want the entire set, we give the following prices on separate pieces:

SOFA, $9.75.—PATENT ROCKER, $7.50.—ARM CHAIR, $6.50.—REGULAR PARLOR CHAIRS, $3.50 EACH.

HOW TO ORDER.—We pack each piece nicely, ready for shipment, and deliver them free of charge on board cars in Cincinnati. Purchaser pays the freight, which on furniture is very light, or if preferred, we will for $2.75 extra, prepay the freight to any place in the U. S., east of the Mississippi River. Our terms are cash with order, or if purchasers prefer, they can send ¼ cash with order, and balance when goods arrive at destination. Money can be sent by Registered Letter, Post Office Money Order, Express, or by Draft on Chicago or New York.

As to our responsibility we respectfully refer to the publisher of this paper, and to the Fourth National Bank of this city. Address all orders to

WILBER H. MURRAY MANUFACTUR'G COMPANY,

MURRAY BUILDING, 139 WEST FRONT STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO, Manufacturers of the celebrated "MURRAY" BUGGIES and HARNESS.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

---

HOLMAN'S PADS.

Holman's Liver Pads cure Malaria,
Holman's Liver Pads cure Biliousness,
Holman's Liver Pads cure La Grippe.

All druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of $2.00.

HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.,
81 John St., N. Y.

TAR-OID

A new method of compounding Tar.

SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM

and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price, 50c.

SICK HEADACHE

can be CURED

in 30 minutes by Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders. They are perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and leave no bad after-effects. Contain no Antipyrin, Antifibrin, Cocaine nor any other poisonous drug.

FREE To any real sufferer who will write to us at once, we will send free a sample package of the powders. This is to convince you of their merits. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials. Recommended by Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost and hundreds of Physicians.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Sawyer Medicine Co., Bridgeport, Conn.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00

Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam.

For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 3 lbs. Sent by express

A $65.00 Sewing Machine	$18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale	15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy	65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale	40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack	75.00
A $50 Feed Mill	30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart	15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness	7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale	3.00

Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL
FOR
KINDERGARTNERS.

Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,

Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA,

H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting N. Y. Turkish Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,

ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

GAIN ONE POUND A Day.

A GAIN OF A POUND A DAY IN THE CASE OF A MAN WHO HAS BECOME "ALL RUN DOWN," AND HAS BEGUN TO TAKE THAT REMARKABLE FLESH PRODUCER,

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL WITH Hypophosphites of Lime & Soda

IS NOTHING UNUSUAL. THIS FEAT HAS BEEN PERFORMED OVER AND OVER AGAIN. PALATABLE AS MILK. ENDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. AVOID SUBSTITUTIONS AND IMITATIONS.

LADIES YOUR CHOICE. 100,000 DEMOREST CORSETS 100,000 SHOULDER BRACES 100,000 STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE

A MARVELOUS OFFER

By A Reliable House!

Every lady has heard of MME. DEMOREST. Her name is a by-word in every house in the land. Her celebrated Patterns have been in use over 40 years. We are the publishers of the well-known publication,

Mme. Demorest's Illustrated Monthly Fashion Journal

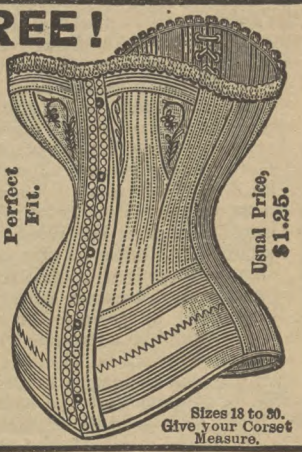
and we wish to increase its circulation 200,000 copies during the next 90 days, and to that end we will give away to new subscribers

100,000 Demorest Celeb'd Corsets " Shoulder Braces " Stocking Supporters FREE

The MME. DEMOREST ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY FASHION JOURNAL is a 36 page paper, beautifully illustrated, covering every possible field of Fashions Fancy Work, Home Decorations, Cooking, etc., each department being under the special supervision of the best known contributors. It is besides replete with matters of interest to mothers, and is furthermore filled with illustrations, stories, sketches, humor and matters of general interest.

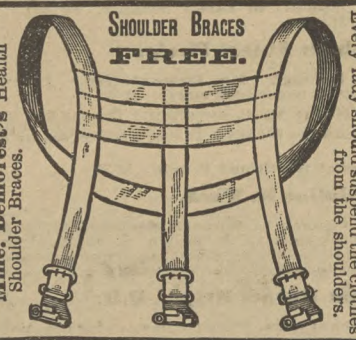
FREE!

FINE AMERICAN JEAN! Beautiful Ornamental Stitching. Perfect Fit.



Usual Price, $1.25.

Sizes 18 to 30. Give your Corset Measure.



Mme. Demorest's Health Shoulder Braces.

SHOULDER BRACES FREE.

Every lady should suspend the clothes from the shoulders.

Every line of reading is carefully guarded by an editor, who receives $5,000 per annum, and nothing is published in its columns but the best and purest reading matter. It may be admitted to any household and your children may read it as well as you. It numbers among its subscribers the wives of thousands of clergymen throughout the country. It is the best Fashion paper published in the world. It tells you "What to Wear" "When and How to Wear It." It gives you all the latest styles in Ladies' Hats, Bonnets, etc. It is always abreast of the times, and everything within its pages is new and original. It also contains the latest Fashion news from abroad by our Special London and Paris correspondents

HOW TO OBTAIN The Mme. Demorest Corset FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL and 25 cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 CENTS in all, and we will mail you one of these handsome CORSETS FREE.

STOCKING SUPPORTERS

How To Obtain Two Articles: A PAIR OF SHOULDER BRACES AND Stocking Supporters FREE

Send us 50 Cents for one year's subscription to our JOURNAL, and 25 Cents additional to pay postage and packing, 75 Cents in all, and we will mail you these two articles, One Pair of SHOULDER BRACES and One Pair of STOCKING SUPPORTERS FREE!

REMEMBER THERE IS NO HUMBUG ABOUT THESE OFFERS.

We do exactly as we guarantee. Our house has been established for over 40 years, and we can refer you to any Commercial Agency, Bank, Express Office or Business Firm in the land. Make all remittances either by Draft, Postal Note, Money Order, or Registered Letter. When postal note is not procurable, send stamps. Address all communications to

THE DEMOREST FASHION & SEWING MACHINE CO., 17 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK.

This offer should be taken advantage of at once as we will give away no more than 100,000 of each article. SHOW THIS TO YOUR FRIENDS. IT WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN.

We know the Demorest Fashion and Sewing Machine Co. to be a thoroughly reliable firm and advise our readers to accept their offer.—EDITOR.

PRONOUNCING PARALLEL FAMILY BIBLE

The only Pronouncing Parallel Bible. From new plates, and now for the first time offered to Bible Agents. No such aid as Pronouncing Text has ever been offered to Bible Canvassers before. Every proper name in the whole Bible is properly pronounced. Massive in size, magnificently illustrated, additional matter in great variety. Prices low, discounts liberal. Those first in the field will reap the harvest. Agents wanted everywhere. Send for particulars. CRANSTON & STOWE, CHICAGO, ILL.

FLAVOR YOUR
Meat, Game & Poultry Dressing with
BELL'S SPICED SEASONING

THIS SEASONING is made of the granulated leaves of fragrant sweet herbs and choice selected spices, having all the flavors that can be desired, thereby saving the trouble of having to use a dozen different kinds of herbs and spices in order to give the proper flavor. On account of the purity, one tablespoonful is enough to season the dressing to an eight-pound turkey. Full directions with each can. Used by all leading Hotels.

WM. G. Bell & Co., Sole Manuf'rs, Boston, Mass.

FREE Prospectus and Sample Perforated Stamping Pattern. Mention this paper. M. J. CUNNING & CO. Cincinnati, O.

PLAYS Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers, for School, Club & Parlor. Best out. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Do You Want a Salary?

This is the heading of a circular recently printed by us, and it tells how we are ready to put each of five thousand earnest workers under a salary. We do not ask for all your time, but if you give us a good portion of it you will be well repaid. If you can give but a little time, still your work will be remunerated handsomely. The terms for THE UNION SIGNAL for 1890 are arranged with the view of allowing something for every subscriber sent us. We believe it's the fairest way, and the surest in the long run for building up our list. We also have a good plan for sending out our literature to be sold by representatives of the W. T. P. A. Both these plans can be united in one person as both yield a profit to the worker. Then in addition we have the new

Salaried Assistant Plan

to supplement the above. Whenever possible one person only in a place should represent us. We will be glad to send you the whole information you will need to start out in 1890, providing you really "mean business." It would be well, in writing, to enclose a line from your local president, indorsing your application. We already have some workers engaged, but the field is a very wide one, and if you don't know of any club agent for THE UNION SIGNAL or of any W. T. P. A. representative, you would do well to attend to this matter at once. We expect to make 1890 the greatest year for sending out literature and for getting subscribers to our papers that we have ever known, and it would be wise for you to start in early during the action.

The Challenge Accepted.

The issues of Jan. 23 and 30 are notable ones. The committee appointed by the National W.C.T.U. to answer Mrs. Foster's "Truth in the Case" make their first statement. It will be followed by further statements until the answer is complete. You will only need to read the first two to know that the answer will be final and thorough. "It must needs be that offenses come"—and so many people are offended at the W. C. T. U. that one cannot help feeling that it must absolutely be in the right. God's truth has always been an offense, His cause has never been a popular one, and now from the bitterness and anger heaped on the W. C. T. U. because it has not hesitated to attack the evils of drinking, even when located very near the White House, it does seem that it must be very near the right. If money poured in on it from the rich—if flattering newspaper notices were given—if courted by society and society people, there would be no trouble whatever—no anger, no opposition. So then if God be for us, who can be against us? We do not think, or suppose that the committee thinks, these articles will vindicate the W. C. T. U. in the minds of all, or lessen the storm of opposition, but here and there will be found those who will see that so far as it knew the right, the W. C. T.U. has tried to walk in it. We have printed an extra edition of the papers, knowing they would be called for. See to it that your unbelieving friends get an opportunity to read these articles. The prices rule as before, viz.: 10 copies each $.02; 100 copies $1.70; 1,000 copies $14.00.

Miss Willard's Book.

EIGHT TIMES HIGHER THAN THE EIFFEL TOWER!

If the 50,000 copies of "Glimpses," which have been issued from the press of the W. T. P. A., were laid flat one upon another, the eminence thus reached would be over 8,000 feet (more than eight times the height of the Eiffel Tower, and fifteen times the height of the Washington monument). And if the leaves were placed end-to-end, they would extend across the continent from San Francisco to New York, and lap a hundred miles into either ocean. Good territory can be had for this remarkable book. Send for terms to agents. Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE FAMOUS RELIANCE CORSET WAIST.

One of the finest garments given to the American public. A health reform garment. Highly recommended by physicians. Will sell at sight. Made in Sateen, Jean, Flannel and Lace. Button and steel front. Send $1.25 for sample and price-list. Canvassers wanted in every town and city. RELIANCE CORSET CO., Jackson, Michigan.

DEAR SISTERS:—Send me 25 cts for one doz. bulbs of rich, pearly tube roses. The most fragrant and sweet of all blossoms. Mine are white, with flowers the year round. Mrs. D. Ragsdale, San Marcos, Tex.

$29 Saved. A $45.00 Sewing Machine fo $16.00. Call on or write to M A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., fo particulars. Mentioning this paper and get full in formation.

REST!! RELIEF!! CURE!!

Asthma sufferers send ten cents, stamps or coin, for package "Eureka Asthma Remedy." Latest. Best. Kate Hillard, Box 115, Verndale, Minn.

NOTABLE RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

Riverside Parallel Bible.

Containing the Authorized Version and the Revised Version in parallel columns. Large type, cloth, $5.00; Persian, $10.00· morocco, $15.00.

Bible Dictionary.

Dr. Smith's Great Bible Dictionary. Edited for America by Professor Hackett and Dr. Ezra Abbot. 4 vols., 8vo., 596 illustrations, 3,697 pages, cloth, $20.00; other bindings from $25.00 to $45.00 net.

American Religious Leaders.

I. Jonathan Edwards. By Prof. A. V. G. ALLEN. $1.25.

II. Wilbur Fisk. By Prof. GEORGE PRENTICE. $1.25.

III. William Augustus Mecklenberg. By Rev. WM. WILBERFORCE NEWTON. $1.25.

The initial volumes in an important series.

Joseph Cook.

Boston Monday Lectures, with Preludes; Biology, Transcendentalism, Orthodoxy, Conscience, Heredity, Marriage, Labor, Socialism, Occident, Orient. 10 vols., 12mo, $1.50 each.

Current Religious Perils. 8vo. $2.00.

John Fiske.

The Idea of God, as affected by Modern Knowledge. 16mo, $1.00.

The Destiny of Man, viewed in the Light of his Origin. 16mo, $1.00.

Washington Gladden, D.D.

Applied Christianity. Moral Aspects of Social Questions. $1.25.

The Lord's Prayer. $1.00.

William Elliot Griffis, D.D.

The Lily Among Thorns. An engaging book, showing the real character of The Song of Solomon. $1.25; white cloth, with gilt top. $1.50.

Rev. F. W. Gunsaulus.

The Transfiguration Christ. 16mo, $1.25.

S. E. Herrick.

Some Heretics of Yesterday. Tauler, Wiclif, Hus, Savonarola, Latimer, Cranmer, Melanchton, Knox, Calvin, Coligny, Brewster, Wesley. $1.50.

Thomas Hughes.

The Manliness of Christ. 16mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 25 cents.

Lucy Larcom.

Beckonings for Every Day. A Calendar of Thought. Good, very good, for every year. Fifth Edition. $1.00.

Breathings of the Better Life. Original and selected. Sixth Edition. $1.25.

T. T. Munger, D.D.

The Freedom of Faith. Sermons, with a prefatory essay on "The New Theology." Seventeenth Edition. $1.50.

On the Threshold. For Young People. Twenty-Second Edition. $1.00.

Lamps and Paths. Sermons for Children. Seventh Edition. $1.00.

The Appeal to Life. Sermons. Fifth Edition. $1.50.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

The Struggle for Immortality. A new volume of remarkable essays. $1.25.

The Gates Ajar. Seventy-fifth Thousand. $1.50.

Beyond the Gates. Twenty-seventh Thousand. $1.50.

Songs of the Silent World. $1.25.

Rev. Julius H. Ward.

The Church in Modern Society. $1.00. A new book showing the position the Church now occupies, and the work that lies before it to control the social factors of modern life.

William Burnet Wright, D.D.

Ancient Cities. From the Dawn to the Daylight Fourth Edition. $1.25.

The World to Come. Sermons, with a remarkably interesting and informing Lecture on Christmas, $1.25.

 For sale by all Booksellers. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price by the Publishers,

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

S. S. SINGING BOOKS.

"BEAUTIFUL SONGS:" Our latest, is being received with the most marked favor. Usually when tested with a dozen other books it is selected.

"LIVING FOUNTAIN:" New and very popular. Hundreds of the best schools have adopted it and praise it in unstinted measure.

"MORNING LIGHT:" — STANDARD. THOUSANDS of schools find just what they want in it.

People who prefer noble, warm, Christian sentiment to mere rattling rhymes, and want substantial, stirring and lasting tunes, find their choice in these books. 35 cents each—one sample copy for examination, only 20 cents.

Send for specimen pages of best Singing books for Choir, Singing School, Day School.

S. W. STRAUB & CO., Publishers,
243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

Temperance Valentine Chromo Cards

Prices from 2c. each to 25c. Send 3c. for hints for a Temp. Val. party. Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, N.Y

KISS ME MAMMA I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY'S MIDWINTER PUBLICATIONS.

THE CATHOLIC MAN. By MRS. LAWRENCE TURNBULL. 12mo. $1.25.
A physician, working out the science of life.
A poet, consecrated to the service of spiritual beauty.
A society girl, with more than a society girl's ambition, who wants to do something with her life. These are the characters.
It is a novel of much original power, intensely interesting, exquisitely beautiful in thought and language, as catholic as its title, and fairly contagious with aspiration.

STORIES OF NEW FRANCE. By A. M. MACHAR and THOMAS G. MARQUIS. Illustrated 12mo. $1.50.
How New France was found; the tragedy and comedy of town-building in the midst of Indian tribes; the struggle between the French lily and the English cross; the complete triumph of the latter at the fall of Quebec.
"Stories of New France" is a thrilling and romantic book giving an insight into Canadian history.
Admirers of Evangeline will be glad to learn from it the true story of the Acadian exiles.

THE SHOP. By ALBERT E. WINSHIP. A stirring, sensible, and helpful book for the people, by the editor of the Journal of Education. 12mo. Cloth binding, 60 cts.
"It is terse, epigrammatic, and pungent, pervaded by the quality which some one has described as 'sanctified common sense,' and full of suggestive and stimulating things which are certain to set readers to thinking."—Boston Journal.

WIDE AWAKE. Vol. BB. Quarto. Illustrated. $1.50.
It contains "Five Little Peppers Midway," by Margaret Sidney, and J. T. Trowbridge's "Adventures of David Vane and David Crane"; also poems, short stories, travel and biographical sketches, and art papers.

NEW EDITIONS.

OUR ASIATIC COUSINS. By MRS. LEON-OWENS. $1.50.
AROUND THE WORLD STORIES. By OLIVE RISLEY SEWARD. $1.25.
NAVAL CADET BENTLY. By H. H. CLARK U. S. N. $1.50.
STORY OF THE AMERICAN SOLDIER. By E. S. BROOKS. Uniform with "Story of the American Sailor," and "Story of the American Indian." Library binding. $2.50.
SECRETS AT ROSELADIES. By M. H. CATHERWOOD. $1.00.
WHAT'S MINE'S MINE. By GEORGE MACDONALD. $1.50.
At the bookstores, or sent, prepaid, by the Publishers,

D. LOTHROP COMPANY, Boston.

Send postal for Select List of Books and Illustrated Prospectus of the Lothrop magazines.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR! 0

NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$1
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$1
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$1
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$1
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$1
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$1
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$1
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$1
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$1
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$1
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$1
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$1
College Songs; 150,000 sold	50c
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$1
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music.	$1

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$1
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$1
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$1
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$1
Popular Dance Music Collection	$1
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$1

The above are all superior books.

Any book mailed for retail price

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

C. H. DITSON & CO.,
867 Broadway, New York.

CHOIR MUSIC.

Practical Anthems. A collection of original and selected anthems by the best writers. Every composition in this book was tested by practical choir use before being incorporated in the work. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

The Musical Visitor. A Monthly Magazine containing each month new Anthems for the Choir, Organ Voluntaries, and articles treating of the leading musical topics of the day. Price, $1.50 per year; 15cts. a single copy. Special terms to clubs of five or more.

Modern Anthems. By W. F. SUDDS. A splendid collection of original and arranged anthems by this popular and well-known composer. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

Ideal Anthems. By H. P. DANKS. A collection of anthems adapted to the wants of all denominations as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs. The Organ part is printed on a separate staff. Price, 35 cents by mail, postpaid.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, AND 19 EAST 16TH ST., NEW YORK.

READ "THE LAMARKS,

OR, MARRIAGEBLE WOMEN!" It is pure, fresh, and grows in interest to a beautiful finale. Mrs. Geo. W. Houk, Dayton, Ohio.

CRAFTS' "CIVIL SABBATH." Addresses on "Sunday Saloon," "Liberty," "Sunday Rest Law," "Amusements," Replies to Adventists, Present Sunday Laws of all States, etc. 128 pp. quarto 35 cts. Authors' Publishing Co., 150 Nassau St. N.Y

DEAR READER:—Have you the photo of some dear one you would like enlarged? I will make you a life-size crayon portrait, beautifully finished, for five dollars. Guaranteed to please, or no pay. Send to-day Mrs. D. Ragsdale, San Marcos, Tex.

Scintillations.

How it looks from an outpost.

MEDICINIE LODGE,
CAMAS P. O.,
BINGHAM CO., IDAHO.

I am indebted to some loving sister for a roll of old UNION SIGNALS, and a new paper every week. I think while I am reading one, that it is the very best paper of all, and so of the next, until I have made up my mind that each copy is the best. Long years ago, we sang in Sabbath-school, "I'm glad I'm in this army, and we'll battle for the school," and so we have. But to-day I'm glad that I'm in great White-ribbon army, and we'll battle for the home. Though but a lonely sentinel, way out on the frontier, twenty miles from a post-office, teaching a little country school in a place where drinking, swearing and Sabbath breaking is the rule, where no one has before entered, the field against the powers that be, I am sowing gospel temperance seed, teaching and praying day by day that some good may be accomplished, though my work is but an itinerant effort. In a primary class a boy had the word jug under the picture; What is that jug for? I asked. He replied at once, "For whisky." Do you drink whisky? I asked. "Yes." Then I touched my bit of white ribbon and told him what it meant, and asked if he would sign a pledge. He said, "No I can't do without it." We have great need of Christian and temperance workers all over Idaho. The work is hard and progress slow where there are so few to lift a voice against the rum power. Thank God for an army that has enlisted for the war, an army that may be outnumbered, but never defeated. An army in whose ranks are the hope of our country. The Lord bless you in every good word and work.

MRS. R. MITCHELL.

From Mrs. John B. Gough:

I beg to thank you for sending me Miss Willard's book, "Glimpses of Fifty Years," and ask as an additional favor that you will convey to Miss Willard my cordial thanks for this kind remembrance of me, who have personally no claim to get in—where the days and hours are so crowded with claims so much nearer and more pressing, as Miss Willard's life must be all the time. My family and myself expect to read the entire book with great interest. We have begun the reading of it, as it is in childhood, and it has been voted a most interesting case of confiding estimate of the great family of the public whom the author has taken into her confidence with such trust that it will be read from her point of view.

NEWARK, N. J.

I received the package of leaflets and thank you for them. The Young Crusader is a welcome visitor at our home, as well as to many others all over the land, as I find out in my travels up and down. I think it grows better and better. I have read with intense interest Meta Lander's "Steamers and Smokers" (Leaflet No. 13) and wish it could be sent out broadcast all over the nation, and put into the hand of every smoker. We all suffer who travel. All the other leaflets were helpful and highly suggestive, particularly Mrs. H. W. Smith's Bible Reading on "How to Study the Bible." The "Timely Talks" are always excellent and no worker should be without them. The dear Lord help and prosper the work. ANNA M HAMMER.

CHENEY, WASH.

I have received samples of late publications of the W T. P. A. I am pleased with all, but I think every W. C. T. U. woman should read "May Women Speak?" by Rev. George P. Hays. The leaflets on "Temperance and Labor" and "Liquor's War on Labor," by R. T. Ely and John Lloyd Thomas should be sown broadcast among the masses. LUCY A. SWITZER.

NORMAL, Ill.

DEAR BROTHER HALL:—I am greatly pleased with your offer concerning the three papers for prison distribution, and I wish our women would make a real grand effort, worthy of the offer. If they could only get a glimpse of the good which might thus be accomplished, they would surprise you with the numbers ordered during the month. I am hoping that you will thus be induced to keep it open a little longer. I have seen old UNION SIGNALS passed from hand to hand, and men lying upon the cell floor, reading them, and they have told me again and again, "Them women knows 'bout things!"

The only way to get rid of the bad reading is to displace it with good, and our women are coming to understand it.

MRS. J. K. BARNEY.

Owing to prevailing influenza, and the slack after holidays, the offer has not been generally accepted. At Mrs. Barney's request we hold it open one month, or till March 1. For particulars see THE UNION SIGNAL, of January 9.

Publisher's Notes.

"Not By Might."

Read here how the work is done in these extracts from a letter recently received: "In L. where our union is located, local option has prevailed for two years, we have spent $400 in prosecuting violators; much of this has been earned by the ladies' special work, sewing carpet rags, making cake, puddings, etc., for sale. One lady has worn one bonnet two solid years without a change, and put the money she ordinarily paid for new ones into this work. Such are the efforts we have made to keep the evil out of this town. Another vote is to be taken in April, Can you help us? I have see the good done by your excellent tracts, but we have no money to buy any, low as your charges are. Oh! we are so poor and needy! Will you give us a few hundred leaflets?" Do liquor men realize what and whom they are fighting? How absolutely sure it is that the Lord Himself will sometime take swift vengeance against these home destroyers? Do any of our readers want to help these brave, earnest women? We will send any money that is sent us, and put the donors in personal correspondence with the one who wrote us. The sisters in Iowa and Kansas surely know how to sympathize with the terrible and ever recurring local option fights and all the bribing, the drinking and the devilishness used therein. We should like very much to add to our own gift of literature your gifts—no matter how small the amounts.

PIQUA, Ohio.

The Bible Reading Calendars have been received and are being distributed among our members. They answer a long felt want, and this pastor's family rejoices over their advent into this world of Bible-neglecting church members. They were spoken of by the pastor in the pulpit, and at the close of the services distributed, and some not Christians were eager to begin the reading. Am glad for the weekly helps on the reading in the UNION SIGNAL.

Respectfully yours, M. E. W.

LONDON, ENG.

I thank you very much for the pretty little pin you sent me. It is very like a ribbon bow, far more like it than anything else I have seen, and will, I believe, suit all the white-ribboners, now thank God, reaching almost around the globe. May the proprietors be able to sell a million of them, and may we soon have a million members to wear them.

MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT.

FOR A DISO[illegible]RED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS.

TOKOLOGY, a book for every woman, by Dr. Alice B. Stockham, is a complete ladies' guide in health and disease. This cannot be bought of dealers. By sending $2.75 direct to the publishers, you will receive prepaid a copy in best binding, and in one day you can sell enough to friends to pay for your own book. Sample pages free. Address ALICE B. STOCKHAM, & Co.
161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.

1890.—"Sunshine and Moonlight"—1890.

Another Christmas and New Year's Annual, by "A Man," of the Rock Island Route, Now Ready for Distribution.

The "Boys and Girls of America," and adults as well, who have read the instructive pages of "Watt-Stephen" (1885), "Voltagal," (1886), "Petroleum," (1887), "Coal and Coke," (1888), and "Iron and Steel," (1889), will be pleased to know that the latest and brightest of the famous ROCK ISLAND series, "Sunshine and Moonlight," (1890) now confidently awaits that chorus of approval which welcomed each of its predecessors.

"A Man" invites the attention of his inquisitive boy and girl visitors this year, to wonders in the heavens above, revealed by the telescope. He tells them all about the sun, moon, planets, satellites, fixed stars, comets, and their movements, and explains the laws by which they are governed. The achievements of science in the field of astronomical research are presented in language so clear as to be easily understood by all readers. The book fascinates, while it elevates and improves.

"Sunshine and Moonlight" comprises 112 pages, profusely illustrated with choice engravings. Its covers are ornamented with appropriate designs, beautifully printed in colors. Practically, it is a Christmas gift to the patrons and friends of the ROCK ISLAND ROUTE, and will be sent post-paid to any part of the world (as also previous issues, if desired) at the nominal price of ten (10) cents per copy. Write your address plainly, and inclose ten (10) cents in stamps or coin, to JNO. SEBASTIAN, G. T. & P. A., Chicago.

BUY books direct from Publisher. Catalogue, free. CHARLES H. KERR & CO., Chicago.

THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO. Sell Mantels & Tile Work. Call or send your address. Agents wanted. (Liberal commissions.) | Room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago.

MUSIC SELF TAUGHT. PROF. RICE'S SELF-TEACHING SYSTEM. All can learn music without the aid of a teacher. Rapid, correct. Established 12 years. Notes, chords, accompaniments, thorough bass laws, etc. Ten Lessons 10c. Circulars free. G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 248 State Street, CHICAGO.

YOU may have cool, dense shade over second-story porticoes and all sunny places by sending 10 cents to Mrs. D. Ragsdale, San Marcos, Texas. for seeds of a beautiful climbing vine. Height, 75 ft.

CATARRH

As a Matter of Interest

We have written to a few of our friends and customers of several years ago, and the following are the responses to our inquiries. Catarrh can be cured, and we can cure it.

Mrs. L. M. Beckham, of Birmingham, Ala., under date of March 28, 1889, writes: "I have been under your treatment for several months, and have found great relief. I still use your medicine, when taking fresh cold, to ward it off."

J. C. Pierman, of Minerva, Ohio, under date of April 11, 1889, writes: "I took a thorough course of your remedies for Catarrh about six years ago, and have never been troubled since."

Mrs. J. W. Chandler, of Milton, N. C., under date of April 2, 1889, writes: "I used your remedies several years ago, and have received great benefit. I think your Balm a great medicine."

Mrs. Rev. R. E. Sherrill, of Graham, Texas, under date of April 30, 1889, writes: "My husband and I have induced various persons to try your remedies for Catarrh, and all have been pleased and benefited."

W. C. Ballinger, of West Mansfield, Ohio, under date of November 15, 1889, writes: "I commenced treating under your directions about four years ago, and at the end of 6 or 8 months considered myself cured, after about 20 years of incessant suffering."

J. B. L. Terrell, of Gleason, Tenn., writes; "I sent you my certificate some time since, stating I was cured, and had had no return of the disease. I can yet testify the same, and will answer all inquiries."

Mr. John Cavanaugh, of Monrovia, Cal., writes; "While living in Texas I used your Catarrh Remedy. I now wish to say that I am as sound as a dollar, and owe my good health to your medicines."

Mr. A. W. Dunham, Burlington, Vermont, writes: "Some years since I obtained your treatment for Catarrh, and was entirely cured. I now want some of the Cold Air Inhaling Balm to break up a heavy cold."

Rev. P. W. Free, Waterford, Pa., writes: "About ten years since I obtained your Catarrh Remedy, used it, was cured, and have had no return of the disease."

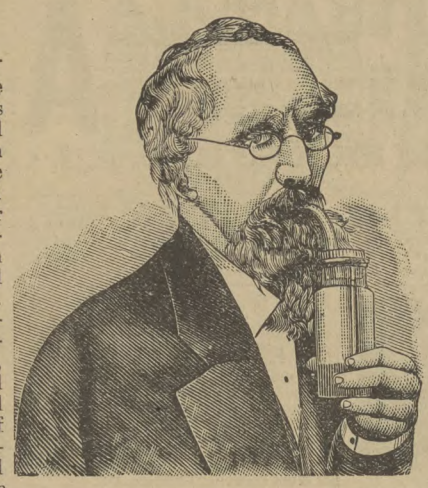
"Mr. Wm. Dewey, of El Dorado, Iowa, writes: "I am one of your old patients, having used the medicines some seven years since, and was permanently cured."

Mr. F. W. Vesey, Waco, Texas, writes; "Your Catarrh Specific cured me about six years ago."

Bronchitis.

This disease is so closely connected with CATARRH that it may be truly described as a branch of that disease, only modified and changed by the nature and organization of the parts affected; CATARRH being confined to the interior of the Nose while BRONCHITIS affects the small pipes entering the lungs, known as the Bronchial Tubes. Where the disease obtains its worst character, tumors grow up like mushrooms, creating inflammatory adhesions and discharge of offensive matter from the throat, extending through the Eustachian Tube to the ear, which becomes affected. The absorption of the tuberculous matter is very dangerous, and frequently results in PULMONARY CONSUMPTION and death.

My Experience.



Nineteen years of terrible headache, disgusting nasal discharges, dryness of the throat, acute bronchitis, coughing, soreness of the lungs, raising bloody mucus, and even night-sweats, incapacitating me from my professional duties, and bringing me to the verge of the grave—all were caused by, and the result of, nasal catarrh. After spending hundreds of dollars and obtaining no relief, I compounded my catarrh Specific and Cold Air Inhaling Balm, and wrought upon myself a wonderful cure. Now I can speak for hours without difficulty, and can breathe freely in any atmosphere. At the calls of numerous friends, I have given my cure to the public, and have now thousands of patients in all parts of the country, and thousands of fellow-beings whose sufferings I have relieved. My cure is certain, thorough, and perfect, and is indorsed by every physician who has examined it. If I can relieve my fellow-beings as I have been relieved of this loathsome disease, which makes the possessor at once disgusting to himself and others, I shall be satisfied and feel that I have done my little toward removing the ills of mankind.

Home Treatment Childs' Treatment for Catarrh, and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs, can be taken at home with perfect ease and safety, by the patient. We especially desire to treat those who have tried other remedies without success. A full statement of method of home treatment and cost will be sent on application.

Address REV. T. P. CHILDS, Troy, Ohio.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

REWELL RATCHET MOP THE OLD WAY

LATEST AND BEST SELF-WRINGING MOP.

Valuable improvements over all others. Perfect ratchet device for holding cloth when wrong. This feature alone worth the price. Heavy twine cloths knit by a patent process. Outwear all other cloths, yet easy to wring, and absorb water like a sponge. Malleable castings. Steel wire. Bright finish. Cannot rust. Hard wood handles. Only perfect self-wringing mop. Agents just started report tremendous sales and success beyond their expectations. The greatest labor-saving invention in years. No experience necessary. Our methods, and merits of the mop, assure success. Best terms. We allow for freights. Energetic men and women investigate this. NO FORTUNE TO OFFER TO YOU, BUT SPLENDID RETURNS FOR HONEST LABOR. Illustrated circulars free.

CEO. M. REWELL,
Public Square, Cleveland, O.

OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!

GOLDEN ROD —IN— COLORS!

WE will send you this BEAUTIFUL STUDY (Our National Flower) GOLDEN ROD in COLORS! and a list of LIDA CLARKSON'S COLORED STUDIES, also our 1890 PREMIUM LIST, and a three months' trial subscription to Ingalls' Home Magazine, (a finely-illustrated 64-page $1 Monthly Magazine, devoted to FANCY WORK, ART PAINTING, etc., etc.) all for ten 2c. stamps (20 cents). We make this liberal offer to introduce the Magazine into new homes.

Address J. F. INGALLS, Publisher, Lynn, M

OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!

BAILEY'S COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO. 113 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

DEAFNESS CURED And NOISES IN HEAD entirely overcome by Peck's Pat. Imprv'd TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers, Conversation and Music heard. Comfortable; Self-Adjusting and Unseen. Successful when all other Remedies FAIL. SOLD ONLY by F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, Cor. 14th, New York. CALL or WRITE for ILLUST'D BOOK of PROOFS, FREE. NO AGENTS

THE ECONOMY CLUB at 171 La Salle St., Chicago, is actually buying for its members Clothing, Watches, Jewelry, Silver Plated Ware, Furniture, Carriages, &c., at the exact price merchants pay for the same. Investigate this. Send stamp. It may save you $25.00 to $100.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.

CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU WANT MONEY?

Do you owe some one, or have you a mortgage coming due that you can't pay? Why not earn what you need by acting as our special agent for a while? We offer a splendid paying business that can be attended to evenings or off days. If you really want to make enough money to pay your debts we offer you the chance. A real wide awake man or woman will take advantage of the chance.

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO
Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 160 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

TUITION AND BOOKS FREE { at Mt. Carroll (Ill.) Seminary. to one student from each county. "Oreads" free.

400 10 cts. PROHIBITION Stickers 1200 25 cts
Sharp, Pointed, Prohibition Mottoes, printed on colored gummed paper, 12 kinds, 5 sizes. For sticking on your envelopes, letter heads, show windows, doors, gates, posts, boxes, church pews—anywhere. 400 for 10 cts, 1200, 25 cts. (Silver or Post-note), by mail. J. H. Padgett, Pub., Ennis, Texas.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHALS UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made. Circulars and prices on application to mf'rg's. A. M. HOWES & CO., 65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND.
Something new for comfort; suspends from the sides; adjustable strap; only one fastening. Highly indorsed. Agents wanted. Price 75 cents single one. Sent on receipt of price, postage prepaid. Circulars sent free. Waist measure, sizes 22 to 30. BLISS MFG. CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn.

$10 for 10 Cents.
Send ten cents for three months' subscription to our magazine and if yours be the 25th opened Feb. 15, you will receive prize of $10. Equal opportunity: all letters opened same day. Magazine of special interest to W. C. T. U. Do try it and may get prize. All for 10 cents. Address, Ladies' Home Magazine, 1013 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton, Pa.

Best Truss Ever Used.
Improved Elastic Truss. Worn night and day. Positively cures rupture. Sent by mail everywhere. Write for full descriptive circulars to DR. HOUSE, N. Y., ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 744 Broadway. N. Y.
(Mention this paper.)

FOR SALE, Orange Groves: rich Hummock lands. Write to J. G. Guthrie, Argo, Paco Co., Fla.

Don't be an old fogy any longer. You want warm feet this winter, don't you? Of course you do! Well, then, just employ the latest, best and most Scientific method to keep them warm and comfortable all winter.

Our MAGNETIC INSOLES (i. e.), Foot Batteries, will draw the blood from the head, cause perfect circulation and a sensation of life, warmth and comfort you never experienced before. These MAGNETIC FOOT BATTERIES are the greatest scientific invention of this century! You can ward off all disease and enjoy the luxury of warm feet and limbs all winter, without contact with fire. MAGNETISM is "bottled sunshine" and radiates the same genial warmth upon our bodies that the sun does upon our earth. To wear these MAGNETIC FOOT BATTERIES in your shoes is to have nature's vitalizing fires in contact with your blood, which is the life of our bodies. Every pair gives satisfaction. May be worn night or day with equal comfort and satisfaction. $1.00 a pair, any size; or three pairs for $2.00. Postage paid delivery to you insured by us.

CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

THE unrest of the weary world is its unvoiced cry after God.—T. T. Munger.

AFTER a religious revival in Honolulu, one thousand persons joined a temperance society.

ON Hospital Sunday, New York, Dr. Hall's church gave $9,046.88.

TWO checks for $3,168,432 recently passed through the New York clearing house for beer.

PRINCIPAL CAIRN'S New Year Temperance Tract reached a sale of 160,000.

STATISTICS tell us that during the last twenty-five years, the sale of beer in the United States has increased from two million barrels to twenty-four million.

THE memorial to Dean Rachel Bodley is to be a fund in aid of the Pundita Ramabai's school. Money can be sent to Mrs. Emma H. Palmer, 782 Sixth Avenue, New York City.

FIFTY thousand women are reported as having voted at the school election recently held in Kansas. Many women were elected on the school boards.

PROTESTANT missionaries began Christian work in Corea in 1885. The first native convert was baptized by the Rev. Horace Underwood, July 1886. In 1887, a Christian Church of the Presbyterian polity was organized. This had, in October, 1889, nearly one hundred members.

ANOTHER hard cider case was settled before an Iowa court recently, by which it was decided that a barrel of cider was lawfully seized as an intoxicating beverage.

CARDINAL MANNING at eighty-two years of age, at a recent meeting in London of the depositors of the Southeastern and Metropolitan Railway Savings Bank, made an impressive plea for temperance on the part of railway men.

IN Western Turkestan, where there are no schools, the Russian government has fitted up some railway carriages, to which teachers have been appointed. These carriages make brief sojourns at various stations. The children are gathered and given lessons in reading, writing and grammar, after which, school-house and teacher are conveyed to the next station.

A NEW YORK medical journal is responsible for the following, in regard to injury from the use of tobacco:

"It is only necessary to have some record of what the general health was, previous to the taking up of the habit, and to have observations cover a long enough time. The history of tobacco in the island of New Zealand furnishes quite a suggestive illustration for our purpose, and one on a large scale. When Europeans first visited New Zealand they found in the native Maoris the most finely developed and powerful men of any of the tribes inhabiting the island of the Pacific. Since the introduction of tobacco, for which the Maoris developed a passionate liking, they have from this cause alone, it is said, become decimated in numbers, and at the same time, reduced in stature and in physical well being so as to be an altogether inferior type of men."

MR. DONALD MATHESON, an English resident of India, who is engaged in trade with China, and is also chairman of the English "Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade," has called attention to the striking difference between China and Japan in their progress, commercially and from a Christian point of view. Commercially, China receives of British export trade, exclusive of opium, only about eight millions sterling per annum; whereas, in proportion to her population, she should be taking nearer eighty millions sterling. On the other hand, Japan receives, in proportion to her population, five times more of British exports than China, namely, two millions and a half sterling, although commercial relations between the British and the Japanese have been of much shorter duration. From a Christian point of view, China has, on the largest computation, fifty thousand converts to Christianity, whereas Japan, in a much shorter term of years, has already nearly half that number, or eight times more than China in proportion to her number. Mr. Matheson thus explains: "There is good ground for believing that it is mainly due to our opium trade with China, by which we have aroused her hatred and distrust of us, while spreading desolation and ruin throughout her empire; whereas Japan has, from the first, resolutely refused to admit the drug; and it is stated, on good authority, that a Japanese ambassador recognized this view of the case."

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly. Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat, Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold, Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
An INCOMPARABLE Food Ready for IMMEDIATE USE. Unsurpassed for Children, Invalids, and persons of SEDENTARY HABITS.
MOTHERS write for circulars
Trial box, prepaid 36cts. Address
OUR HOME GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Mention this publication

THE GLUTEN Flour Entire Wheat
the best and most economical flour made, the only cure for Dyspepsia. Recommended by Physicians. Kenosha Mills Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago

LADIES DO NOT OVERLOOK THIS.
Something needed in every home. The perfection Flour Bin and Sieve. Takes up but little room, made of tin, is ornamental and indispensable, does away with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops and sieves. A few turns of the handle, and you have enough for a baking. Satisfaction guaranteed, sent by express on receipt of wholesale price, holding 100 lbs. $3.25; 50 lbs, $2.50, 25 lbs, $2.00. Agents Wanted. Sherman, Tangenberg & Co., 160 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

PURE TEA
GET ORDERS
FOR TEAS, BAKING POWDER AND PURE SPICES.
We are the only Tea firm who give Premiums to Club Raisers and, at the same time, Presents to Consumers. We give Gold Watches, Silver Ware, Tea, Dinner and Toilet Sets, Hanging and Stand Lamps, and hundreds of other useful articles. 3½ lbs. any kind of Tea by mail, $2.00. Agent wanted in each town. Big Pay. For terms address YAMASHIRO TEA CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.
List of 500 Presents for Consumers.
Please address P. O. Lock Box No. 10,471.

LADIES! Use only Brown's French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, and Scrofulous Humors.
TO CONSUMPTIVES.—Wilbor's Cod-liver Oil and Phosphates has now been before the public twenty years, and has steadily grown in favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphates with pure Cod-liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. It can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the nausea which is such an objection to the Cod-liver Oil when taken without Phosphates. It is prescribed by the regular faculty. Sold by the proprietor, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and by all Druggists.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH, SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Ask your dealer for FARGO'S $2.50 Ladies' Boot, and if he does not keep them, send to us for the style and size you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Send for descriptive list of styles. A pocket mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

THE GRIFFIN RUG MACHINE
Leads All its Competitors.
It works either rags or yarn, is Simple, Durable, and EASY TO OPERATE.
Price, by mail,
Plain, $1.00.
Nickel Plated, $1.50
Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Send for Circulars.
Agents Wanted.
G. W. GRIFFIN & CO., Franklin Falls, N.H.

ACME CORSET & DRESS PROTECTOR
A complete garment worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields, one pair doing the work of six.
Misses' bust measure, 28-33, $ .80
Ladies' " " 34-39, 1.00
M. DEWEY, Mnfr., 1397 W. Monroe St., Chicago. Send Money by P. O. Order. AGENTS WANTED.

RIDGE'S FOOD
The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label). Palmer, Mass.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE" CORDED CORSET WAISTS
are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them

A VERY SATISFACTORY GARMENT.
WHY? Because it Supports Stockings and Underclothes from the SHOULDERS, and has no stiff cords. It fits with perfect ease and freedom. Will WASH. For sale by leading dealers. Send for illustrated Price List. FOY, HARMON & CHADWICK, Mfgrs., New Haven, Conn.

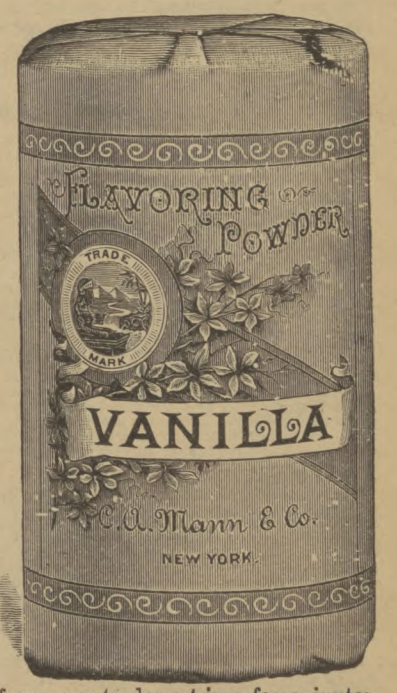
A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS,
including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jennes-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue.
Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

CATALOGUE FREE
For Agents, Illustrating Useful Household articles & good selling Novelties.
LAUBE COOKER CO., PARK RIDGE, ILL.

AGENTS WANTED! —TO SELL OUR NEW IMPROVED— "TAILOR SYSTEM" OF DRESS CUTTING!
Something New, Never Anything Like It, Dress Cutting Reduced to a Science!
Can be learned in two hours' time. Perfect fit guaranteed—without change of seam. It makes yo an expert at drafting ladies' and children's garments, in the latest and most artistic style. Change o fashion can never affect it.
$20 A DAY can be easily made. Many make more. Any one can make $100 A MONTH over and above expenses. The work is easy, instructive, fascinating, profitable, and adapted to young or old of either sex. We must have a worker in your town and are willing to SPEND $25.00 TO START YOU! and you can work all the time or part of the time. Employment at home; an opportunity to travel. No class of people in the world are making so much money, WITHOUT CAPITAL, as those at work for us. One person writes. "I was out 5 hours and cleared $28." If you will only write, we will lay all before you FREE! This is a ROYAL CHANCE, and is worth investigating. Write for special offer and confidential terms to agents. Address, RIAL BENJAMIN, Manager, LaFayette, Ind.

Flavoring Powders.



"You can wear what you please now." This was a fragmentary remark that reached us from a passer-by on the street the other day. It was a little thing, but it told much. The bent of individual taste is illustrated now at every turn. Once fashion ruled with a strong and not over-gentle hand. She put her followers into uniforms, sometimes into straight-jackets, but that's past. Nothing is at present more opposed to the general taste than the beaten track. Flowers don't grow there, nor does success lodge on such highways. Work must have originality and a little extra finish nowadays to bring quick returns. If one would climb high, he must put in a few more hours of study and effort, or success will not be assured. Tact and experience are more necessary now than ever. Next to originality, and perhaps a better quality, comes the power of adapting and changing so as to give to all things an invigorating charm and freshness. In no case is this more apparent than in the housekeeper's line. Once she had not only to prepare the dinner, but many other things claimed her attention as well. Art and fancy had little place there. Time for this was lacking. Think of the weary steps that had to be taken before the dinner was even ready to be cooked. To get a clear idea of what a housekeeper's duties used to be, one needs only to review the many improvements and inventions for saving time and labor. In these days of canning and preserving, it is made possible to prepare a good meal from soup to dessert in a few minutes, if the occasion requires. There is also time for all the graceful touches which add to the pleasure of living Housekeepers don't grate the Vanilla Beans any more for flavoring. This service of disintegration is now performed by steel cylinders running at a very high rate of speed. In short, Flavoring Powders are now used. They are found to give much better satisfaction, are more concentrated, produce a better flavor, and are no more expensive than the liquid Extracts. If you have used the Flavoring Powders and like them, you will do us a favor by calling for them at your grocery store. If your dealer does not keep them in stock, and will not order them, send us 50 cents and we will forward you a bottle each of the one-ounce Lemon and Vanilla to try. We also make Powdered Perfumes, and will send you a satin packet of any of the leading odors on receipt of 30 cents.

C. A. MANN & CO., 48 Murray St., NEW YORK

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 7.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February 13, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: The Final Voice—Our Platform—Review of Reviews 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Day Dawns, by Rev. S. Mc Adoo—A Dream, by Anna C. Wright—Business Capacity of Women, by D. P. Livermore—School Savings-Banks, by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer—The English Language, by Benj. F. Taylor—International Temperance Studies, by Felix L. Oswald, M. D.—Review of "Truth in the Case" 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Hayti, as One Woman Saw It—Jurisprudence in Smoke—Temperance Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, Baby's Valentine—How a Valentine Came Through Two Knot-Holes 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning February 16, 1890 ..... 6, 7
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, In the Mill—Paul and the Status of Women—Palmetto Cottage 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: Novel-Reading 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: New Hampshire, Ohio, Alabama, New Zealand, Canada, Michigan—News in a Nutshell .. 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Promotion of Social Purity—Evangelistic Department—Sabbath Observance—School of Methods—Omission 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Arrangements are being made to found a National University in Washington, D. C., by the Methodist Church.

The late conference of Presbyterians in New York voted by large majority in favor of revising the Westminster Confession of Faith.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis is endeavoring to secure copies of her late husband's letters on public topics, for use in a biogr phy which she has undertaken.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage preached in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on the 9th inst., for the first time since his three months' visit to the Holy Land.

Commemorative exercises for Abraham Lincoln's birthday were observed in Chicago, under the direction of Lincoln Council of the National Union, February 12.

A change in the course of the Los Angeles river, at Los Angeles, Cal., caused by the recent disastrous floods, h s resulted in a loss of $750,000 to the orange groves of that locality.

Intense popular indignation is being manifested against the proposed State Lottery Bill in North Dakota. Large numbers of ministers preached against it on Sunday, and the respectable press of the country is a unit in denouncing the inf mous scheme.

The last steamer from China brings the accoûnt of two swift-moving clouds meeting with a sound like that of heavy artillery, over the Yang-tse-Kiang river, near Nanking. The resulting waterspout upset many boats, and a hundred lives were lost, besides fifty who were rescued.

LET us remind our brothers, the workingmen, how often they have said that they must combine to control legislation, but they are themselves supporters of the saloon, and that controls legislation in no other interest but its own.

THE anti-slavery conference still holds its sessions with closed doors. Reports of the proceedings finding their way into the papers through the Foreign office, are meager and unreliable. The king of the Belgians keeps in touch with the members of the conference by a series of small dinners and social entertainments, given at the palace in their honor.

AFTER much filibustering on the part of the opposing minority, the Prohibition Bill with the emergency clause, making it operative April 1, has passed the legislature of South Dakota, receiving a two-thirds vote. Two of its provisions were stricken out: one requiring physicians to state the nature of the disease requiring liquor, in making out their prescriptions; the other refusing offic rs the right to search private dwellings for liquor kept for private use. It still stands, however, as the most vigorous prohibitory law yet enacted.

DR. AMELIA B. EDWARDS is much surprised to learn that the suffrage privileges of women are more limited in America than in England. She thinks it the more amazing considering the influential social position of American women. It seems to us, on the other hand, that a land whose ruling sovereign is a woman would naturally concede fuller rights to women subjects. Indeed we should expect them to have the fullest opportunities to vote upon all questions, ins'ead of only upon local issues. The American government has always been of men, by men, for men, and very logically it is a free country—for men!

THE result of Prang's National Flower Campaign, shows that seventy per cent of all the votes were for the golden-rod; sixteen for the may-flower, and fourteen scattering for the daisy, mountain laurel, dandelion, sunflower, and others. THE UNION SIGNAL thinks it would have been impossible to find a more thoroughly American flower, or one having a nobler symbolism of purity than the water lily, the emblem of the World's W. C. T. U.

W. H. MABIE, of the Christian at Work, expresses a general want when he says: "We need dirtier churches, shabbier churches, made so by the attendance of the masses"—the kind which are not too sacred to admit the unwashed multitude to a series of gospel temperance meetings, for instance. The itinerant ministry of the W. C. T. U. find many of the literally too-sacred-for-any-use sort of edifices, miscalled "The house of God."

THE women of Lathrop, Mo., have engaged in a temperance crusade with practical features and speedy results. The cause of their uprising was two saloons which for several months have been in operation, defying the local option law. Last Friday, after holding an indignation meeting, one hundred women took up the line of march upon Thomas Ward's saloon. Finding the doors barred, they broke them open, and proceeded to empty the barrels of beer and whisky, and the cases of wine and brandy into the street. Crowds of men cheered the women on. They did equally thorough housecleaning at the other "place," and then raided the warehouse which had served as a depot of supplies for the rum-sellers. The liquid goods stored there were immediately disposed of at wholesale. In order to make the destruction absolute, they set fire to the inflammable stream, and the consumption of liquor, valued in bulk at over $1,000, was speedily effected.

A RAY of light from the morning dawning in the East is refracted to us through Bishop Foster. He was making the rounds of a heathen temple in company with a priest. Passing from shrine to shrine he asked, "And this is your god?" The priest answered: "Yes, this is our god." At last the bishop cried, "O Christ, how long will this be so?" The priest made answer, "Not very long." "How do you know?" "Our sacred books say so." The messenger of Christ now thoroughly interested, asked, "What will come next when your religion passes away?" And the interpreter of blessed prophecy answered gently: "Then we shall have your Jesus everywhere." These words of the wise man of the East hold a gracious message of cheer. Men's creeds and confessions waxing old as a garment, may be laid by; religious systems may crumble and fall into decay. Litany and ritual may be put away with the picture books of childhood, but at last we shall have Jesus everywhere, and in the light of glorious fulfillment it may be shown that the Scriptures of all races have testified of Him.

NO BETTER work will be done by the fifty-first Congress than the formation and adoption of a code of House rules calculated to do away with the filibustering which has so often disgraced our legislative assemblies in the past. We should be sorry to see the minority deprived of any just privilege, but when the minority resolves itself into a block, and places itself under the wheel of legislation, there should be power vested somewhere, either to remove the obstruction, or to lift the wheel over it, and go on. Otherwise, the great, central principle of American government, that of majority rule, is subverted, and minorities rule instead, while the time and money of the people are wasted. It is neither a partisan nor sectional matter; in this country where political victory vacillates, majorities are never large, and minorities are always of respectable size. We would have welcomed such action just as heartily had it been taken by the forty-ninth Congress, when the pinching was on the other party's foot. We trust the rules enacted by the House for its own conduct may prove to be wise, and that they may be justly enforced.

THE general superintendent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad has issued a circular to the employes of that road, which contains some iron-clad rules against intemperance. It begins with the sweeping restriction, "Men known to be in the habit of becoming intoxicated shall not be taken into the employ of the company." Next, it warns men who frequent drinking places to stop at once, if they wish to remain in the service of the company. If known to have been drunk either on or off duty, they will be discharged. Superintendents and master mechanics are given some discretionary power in cases of first offense, but if the same man is drunk a second time he cannot be retained. If discharged for drunkenness, he can only be employed again by special interference of the general manager. We have talked with some of the train men, and find this circular has a very wholesome effect upon "the appetite." It is one of those bracing enactments which the state ought to put upon weak citizens. Let the liquor seller be outlawed, then declare drunkenness, what it is and always has been, a crime against God and man, with suitable penalty provided, and there would soon be vacant wards in the now overflowing insane asylums to accommodate all who, because of "dipsomania," inherited or acquired, should prove unable to comply with the law. When society, like the railroad corporation, becomes convinced that intemperance yields it nothing but evil, it will find speedy means of relief. We shall be glad to hear of similar regulations by other companies. Many of our women are travelers, and whenever choice is possible, will be sure to "make their points" via prohibition roads.

WITHIN a year two great milestones have been passed in the march of American civilization. The first was the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of our first President; the second, which occurred last week, rounds the hundred years since the organization of the Supreme Court of the United States. Ex-President Cleveland made the opening address in the Metropolitan Opera House, which was packed to the dome. Several brief addresses followed, and lengthier ones by Chief Justice Fuller and Judge Field closed the literary exercises preceding the banquet. It was a great day for the young Republic when she set up her own tribunal and organized the august body of which John Jay was the head. The air is full of reminiscences of those early judges, who were literally "clad in robes" scarlet lined. The best stories, perhaps, are told of Chief Justice Jay, whose wit out-sparkled the glittering buckles of his judicial shoes. He began his study of law in the office of Benjamin Kissam. Lindlay Murray was a fellow pupil. Years after he defended a case, having Benjamin Kissam as opposing counsel. The cleverness of his argument fairly dazed his old preceptor, who cried: "Have I brought up a bird to pick out my own eyes?" "Not to pick out your eyes, but to open them," was the swift answer. It was he who in reply to the proposition of Spain to aid us in the fight with Britain, if we would surrender to her the right of way on the Mississippi river cried, "A neighbor might as well ask me to sell my street door; we are poor, but we shall be rich; I would rather agree to pay a great price for the right they now have on the Mississippi than to sell a drop of its waters!" It was John Rutledge, whom Patrick Henry pronounced the greatest orator in America, who created the Supreme Court by drafting the clause in the Constitution which provided for its establishment. There were giants upon the earth in those days. There was Oliver Ellsworth, so trusted for his opinions that Aaron Burr said: "If Ellsworth should bring in a resolution in which God was spelt with two d's the Senate would take three weeks considering whether they could rightly expunge the letter." Then there was John Marshall, Chief Justice for thirty-four years, and for all time in school-boy history the man who while marketing one morning heard a dapper youth swearing roundly because he could find no one to carry home a turkey he had bought. The judge immediately offered to deliver it, refusing any pay, as it was on his way home. Salmon P. Chase, appointed by President Lincoln, is known as the handsomest of the Chief Justices. His height was six feet two inches, and the head crowning that noble structure was like a great dome. Judge Blatchford, now seventy years of age, is the oldest member of the present regimé, and has spent more than half his life on the Supreme bench. The court has grown from six to nine members, and the salary has increased from $3,500 to $10,000.

Contributed.

THE DAY DAWNS.

BY REV. S. N. MC ADOO.

Long had been the night and dreary,
Stars of hope but dimly shone,
Eyes with vigils sad were weary
Waiting for the coming dawn.
But the gloom has now been broken,
For the word of light is spoken,
And the morning star gives token
Of the sun.

In the night were husbands drunken,
Brawling, staggering in the street;
Wives with pallid cheeks and sunken,
Waiting, feared their coming feet;
But the morning cheers their sadness,
For the cup of death and madness
Yields to one of social gladness,
Clear and sweet.

In the night were mothers sighing
With an aching heart and head,
In the night were children crying,
Helpless, cold, and wanting bread;
But their cries have reached to Heaven,
And their fetters shall be riven;
Tears shall cease and songs be given
Them instead.

In the night were those who feasted
At the cost of woes untold,
Lived upon the lives they blasted—
Parasites of basest mould.
But a fairer day is breaking,
God the walls of sin is shaking,
Wrong is losing, Right is taking Firmer hold.

In the night were mortals calling,
Who had lost their pathway there,
Shrieks were heard from spirits falling
To the depths of dark despair;
But to them came aid availing
From the few that heard their wailing,
And who offered strong, prevailing,
Fervent prayer.

In the night was heard the death-bell,
With a tongue that seemed in pain,
Tolling out the doleful death-knell
Of the souls that Rum had slain.
But the joy-bells now are ringing,
And the hosts above are singing,
For the hand of God is bringing
In His reign

A DREAM.

BY ANNA C. WRIGHT.

Somewhere we three, my husband, my brother and myself, moved in a field that yet was narrow and close as some carefully constructed dwelling. I knew or felt that any evil within that field was as a foe within a camp, a thing that must slay or be slain. Present escape would not insure future safety.

Moving in that field that yet was a barred house, I came upon a large snake lying between two low and sheltering shocks of fragrant hay. After the first recoil, I put out my foot to crush its head, then again recoiled as I remembered how frail and light were my sandals, and thought of the snake's size, and probably venomous character. My husband now stepped forward and lifted his foot to kill the reptile in his usual manner, with his heavy boot heel. It thrust its head forward, close to the ground now, jaws dilating and forked tongue thrust forward with low hisses.

But on the other side of the shocks appeared my fair young brother, holding up a warning hand as he knelt and leaned forward with a confident smile. We realized his intention with horror, for he bent forward and grasped the reptile just back of the neck with his left hand. Ere his hand reached it, with a terrible shock there flashed across my mind the conviction, "It is a cobra." But now my brother stood erect holding his writhing trophy, as one proud of a victory gained.

Soon the snake ceased to struggle, yet continuously thrust forward its forked tongue.

"He will kill it," I thought. "But how?"

So long as the youth held the snake, it was harmless, but if he cast it from him, its freedom and venom would be fatal to himself and others. If he continued to hold it, he was as truly a prisoner as was the deadly serpent.

"He will dash its body against a tree," I thought. "But no, one touch of the fangs, so near his hand, would be fatal, and he dare not provoke it. It is a cobra."

But my brother, with his disengaged hand, began to stroke the sleek head of the serpent. Horror held me motionless.

I had not feared the free serpent much. We three were more than a match for it as it lay coiled in its shady nook; besides, its venomous character was not fully realized until my brother held it aloft in the light. Then who could think that one of us would dream of grasping the thing as my daring brother had done!

He had heard of snake-charmers. What others did, why could not he? I felt that my husband knew the character of the serpent, but he stood smiling, amused, perhaps, and not too watchful. He overestimated my brother's power. That high spirit aroused his admiration. I alone saw danger to my brother.

"It is a cobra," I said in a low tone, afraid of angering the serpent by loud words; afraid I might too suddenly attract my brother's attention. I wanted to scream, to cry out in an agony of grief and fear. Yet I dared not. That dear brother's safety depended on my silence. To throw him for one instant off his guard was to give the serpent its watched-for opportunity. Its bite would be fatal.

Now the muscles of the reptile relax; the head ceases to writhe. It is strangely quiet. My brother is pleased, proud, and confident. Its glittering eyes grow steady, dreamy, even, but the forked tongue yet moves swiftly.

"He will conquer it," I reasoned. But like lightning memory asserts, "It is a cobra."

The youth is making passes with his disengaged hand, before the serpent's open mouth.

"It is learning to love him, he is so gentle," I muse. But reason thunders to my quaking heart, "It is a cobra."

Oh, be careful, my brother, my dear young brother! Your fingers almost close upon those poisoned fangs. Are you mad? I think, but dare not speak. To speak is to arouse the serpent to more dangerous action. The hand which holds the serpent grows less firm. The right hand still moves before its eyes. He thinks they are friends. He thinks he has charmed, is conquering, the creature. How sweet and kind and pitying his glance! He would not now kill it if he could. It is a dainty pet, graceful as a kitten, and my brother is fond of all poor, helpless things.

But eternally to me the words are sounded, "It is a cobra." I must speak. The fingers of that right hand are so near the fearful fangs. "My brother, oh my brother!"

Too late. It is done. The fatal fangs have touched the hand that would caress, that meant but gentleness to the poison thing. It is a cobra.

In my dream I awake to say, "It was but a dream," then sweetly sleep till morning dawns. Now I really awake. I remember, I cry, "It is a cobra." Alas, my brother loves the serpent. I know, I feel, that still for him the horrible dream is a reality, that still he seeks to charm a cobra.

The deadly creature is slumbering in cups of amber cider, in foaming ale, in sparkling wine, in golden gleam of brandy. It is a cobra.

BUSINESS CAPACITY OF WOMEN.

BY D. P. LIVERMORE.

In the December number of the North American Review we find an article by Marion Harland, entitled, "The Incapacity of Business Women," and to sustain her position she cites several inconsequential cases of "sales-girls" and "type-writers," which, if true, prove nothing, as they are not representative cases of business women, and she says not a word about the thousands of women all over our country who are successfully engaged in various business pursuits.

Would it be quite fair, if Marion Harland were writing about the incapacity of business men, to draw her illustrations from male "table-waiters," "elevator-boys," "hack-drivers," "porters," "baggage-smashers," and the like? And yet she does this very thing in writing against the capacity of women for business, and draws her illustrations from "sales-ladies," "girl-stenographers," "type-writers" and "nurses,"—none of whom represent business women, hence prove nothing about woman's "incapacity for business"! Her article can do no possible good to any one, and can only carry discouragement to hard-working women who may feel that they have some capacity for business.

Believing this writer to be entirely mistaken in her estimation of women, I desire to say a word of encouragement to those who feel that they have ability to cope with men in the diversified industrial pursuits of life. Very likely women have not always been successful in business, but when ninety or ninety-five per cent of men fail in business, as all know, it certainly is not in good taste for a woman to write about the incapacity of her sex for business, and not say a word concerning the miserable failure of thousands of men in business!

Women, as far as they have engaged in business, can show quite as good a record as men. Women, to-day, are engaged in numerous business pursuits—in manufactures of various wares, are owners of stores and millinery establishments, are occasionally bank cashiers and directors in banking institutions; and one, at least, the owner and successful manager of a horse railroad. Surely such women have "capacity for business!" There are women who are physicians and surgeons, and managers of hospitals, who are lawyers, ministers, missionaries, artists, painters, sculptors, astronomers, designers, chemists, architects, presidents of colleges, professors in universities and medical colleges, school committees, teachers of classics, superintendents of county schools—fourteen in Iowa—prison commissioners, superintendents of state reformatories for women, principals of Normal schools, Egyptologists and lecturers, and in a few instances in Kansas, mayors of cities. This certainly shows woman's "capacity" for business.

There are women all over our country who are successful authors, proprietors and editors of magazines, and in many of our large cities women manage club-houses and industrial and educational unions, and there are many instances where they have managed their affairs with such success that they own the buildings in which they meet, and control a large amount of property.

In Chicago the women connected with the National W. C. T. U. manage most successfully a large publishing establishment, and these women have raised half a million of dollars to erect a building for their own use! "About ten years ago this enterprise began with one employe, an editor, and desk room for which no rent was paid. Now it has one hundred and twenty employes, including several editors, and requires such an amount of room that it is paying a rental of $9,000 per year." THE UNION SIGNAL, which is only one of its publications, has a circulation of 80,000. Does not this show some business capacity among women? Can it be that Marion Harland does not know what women are doing, or is she prejudiced against her sex, or does she still prefer to write fiction!

In the Boston Journal of January 18, we find a sketch of Mrs. John A. Logan, who has made her Home Magazine a success, and who presides over its editorial columns. This paper informs us that "She is a thorough business woman, with an appreciation of the practical side of literature, and this aids her wonderfully in her editorial duties." And yet Marion Harland writes about the incapacity of women for business!

Women who have had a chance have shown quite as much business ability as men, and in some instances they have been more successful than men, like Mrs. Frank Leslie, who at the death of her husband took in charge his illustrated paper, under great discouragements, and by her energy and superior business ability she was eminently successful in her enterprise, paid the debts of the establishment, and by her indomitable perseverance, energy, and fair dealing, became in a few years a wealthy woman. It is absurd to write about woman's incapacity for business, in view of the thousands of instances of her success in the world. She may fail, as men often fail in business; distinguished generals have sometimes failed on the battle-field, and have been relieved of their commands! The average woman is every way equal to the average man, is quite as intelligent, and more religious, as all churches show; is better educated and has higher moral instincts and aspirations. Chief Justice Marshall, nearly a hundred years ago, said that women were the intellectual equals of men. A writer in the Forum of September, 1887, p. 38, says: "As a rule, the average woman is superior to the average man—more estimable, more lovable; nay, often more capable and reliable."

With all the facts of history before us of woman's ability and success, it is surprising that Marion Harland should attempt to show that women lack capacity for business. What does she think of Deborah who was a "judge" in Israel for forty years, and as Dr. Adam Clarke says, "was supreme, both in civil and religious affairs." She was not only a capable judge, but she was a successful soldier. General Barak declined to go with his military forces and fight the enemy unless Deborah would go with him and direct his efforts, which she did, and won a great victory! Did not Deborah show as much capacity for business as Barak, the general commanding? See Judges, chapters 4 and 5.

Where women have a chance they often show great capacity for business. Thousands of women who have inherited property from their husbands and fathers, have developed remarkable business capacity when large responsibilities have been unexpectedly thrown upon them; so that, through sagacious management their property has increased in value, and their successful business qualities and reputation have been acknowledged by merchants and bankers on all hands. And yet Marion Harland would have us believe that women have no "capacity" for business.

SCHOOL SAVINGS-BANKS.

BY MRS. S. L. OBERHOLTZER.

It is incumbent on the factors of a nation to look to its future. The nation is made up of individuals. The individuals of the future are the children. The school savings-bank system, which has been in limited use in some sections for three or four years, offers many practical advantages to the rising generation, and has but to be known to meet the general favor of educators. It gives the children the key to the problem of daily existence, the nucleus of a fortune, in teaching them economy and business methods.

The first record we have of school savings-banks is their introduction into a communal school in France in 1834. After a lapse of thirty-two years, Monsieur Francis adopted them in the public school at Gard, France. Later, they went into use throughout France, Belgium, Germany and England. Philanthropists endeavored to interest the general public of the United States in the matter in 1877. Captain R. H. Pratt, in the foundation of the Indian Industrial Training School at Carlisle, Pa., in 1879, established a system of paying students a small sum of money for their work, and gave them bank books in order to teach them the practical use of dollars and cents. Mr. Merrill, who was one of the first American advocates of the system, introduced it into the public schools of Beloit, Wis., in 1882.

In 1885, a new impetus was given to the cause by a French educator, Professor J. H. Thiry. Being familiar with the advantages of the system in Europe, Professor Thiry, after settling in New York, made a careful study of the different school savings-banks systems used in the Old World. Combining their best features, he has so simplified the method that its administration occupies but fifteen minutes per week. The system, as perfected and adapted by him, has been adopted by several schools, mostly in New York and Long Island. He collects, systematizes, and gives to the public semi-annually most encouraging reports. The children of the United States in the sixty schools now using the savings banks system, have on deposit $58,000,and have withdrawn at intervals, for expenditure or re-investment, about $15,000.

My acquaintance with the system dates from December, 1889, when Dr. E. W. Bemis introduced the subject to our American Economic Association in Philadelphia session. We were good friends at once, this school savings-banks system and I, for I saw in it great promise of purification for the appetites and habits of our children, a reformatory as well as an economic measure.

We are using it now in all the departments of the public schools of Norristown and Pottstown, and some of the country districts, to the full satisfaction of all educational authorities, and are thus far the only county in the state accepting the advance system. There are others considering the matter. Prof. G. M. Philips, a popular educator, acquainted himself with the system last autumn, and has presented the subject ably at teachers' institutes, arousing much interest in Pennsylvania.

Each child who becomes a depositor is an independent property owner. He has an incentive to industry and economy. He learns the law of accumulation as regards money; how pennies and interest count; how, when provident, he has means wherewith to be generous. The lesson is helpful to the children of the rich, and invaluable to the children of the poor. It tends to the thrift and morality of all classes, increasing their personal responsibility and lessening their temptation to form and cultivate bad habits.

The practical working of the school savings-banks, according to Mr. Thiry's plan, gives little trouble to the teacher, very little compared with the probable result. Every Monday morning only and before the morning session, or at other time preferred, the teacher of each class in calling the roll receives the savings of each pupil, one cent and upwards. The child answers if he has anything to deposit, "Yes, one cent," or whatever the sum may be, immediately rising to deliver his money and weekly card. (The cards are printed in convenient form with date for each Monday in the school year.) The amount by a single figure is credited on the roll book and on the card. The card is held by the pupil as a memorandum of deposit. The money collected by each teacher is placed in a sealed envelope and given to the principal, who, crediting each teacher with the deposit of her class, sends the amount to the bank. The money is credited as a "General School Fund," at first in the name of the principal.

When a pupil has deposited one dollar he is entitled to a bank book (such as banks furnish adults), but deposits draw interest only when they reach three dollars and over. As long as the depositor attends school, his bank book is kept by the principal, but in vacation, or when he leaves school, the book is surrendered to him, and he can at any time, by the parents' consent and principal's signature, withdraw the deposit. The teacher or principal cannot personally at any time withdraw the funds.

The pupil is encouraged by his instructors to make a good showing in the bank, and not disturb interest accumulating capital without real need. The bank books are given the depositors once a month to take home a few days. They interest the family, and parents, who may have been improvident in little things, sometimes learn lessons of frugality from their children.

Train the nation in thrift and economy, and we get rid of half the lamentable evils the W. C. T. U. labors to suppress.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

BY BENJ. F. TAYLOR.

Have you thanked God to-day for your noble heritage, the English language—the common carrier for Art, Science, Liberty and Religion under the whole heaven?

Have you thanked God to-day for the tongue that you talk,
That can take you aloft where the Seraphim walk?
That can let you far down through the azure profound
As a lark out of heaven to her nest on the ground,
Till you hear with your own heart your mother's old song?
Thank God that to us sterling English is given,
With a freight of such jewels as "hope," "home" and "heaven,"
That are born to a man like the beat of his heart,
And become of his being a parcel and part,
And spring to his lips like a bird to its wing
And make of a word a most palpable thing!
The sinewy speech that can hold fast a truth
And sandal the thought with a wonderful youth;
The sturdy old Saxon that smites like a sledge
And warbles at will like a thrush in the hedge.

INTERNATIONAL TEMPERANCE STUDIES.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.
Author of "Physical Education," "The Poison Problem," etc.

II. France.

Social degeneration and the progress of intemperance always go hand in hand. The warriors of republican Rome, with all their rustic prejudices, were frugal and temperate; in the era of Augustus the total abstinence philosophy of the Pythagoreans found numerous adherents among the educated classes, and the orgies of alcoholism began only with the period of hopeless national decadence.

In France, too, the golden age of classic literature and military supremacy was by no means an age of personal vice, whatever we may think of the political sins of Fleury and Richelieu. The French aristocrats of the seventeenth century were in refinement and intelligence as superior to their Eastern neighbors as a Roman patrician of the Mæcenas type was superior to the drunken swashbuckler chief of Thracia and Pannonia. Rabelais, Montaigne, and Corneille make the alcohol-worship of Eastern Europe a constant topic of satire, and would have closed their doors in the face of an habitual drunkard, though the belief in the tonic virtues of wine was as universal as could have been expected in an age of gross medical superstitions. As a specimen of those superstitions, it may suffice to say that dormouse fat and pulverized mummies were sold as specifics of enormous remedial efficacy. As a moral stimulus, too, wine was a favorite prescription, and Marshal Turenne thought it a good expedient to fuddle his soldiers on the eve of a risky battle.

The almost continuous wars of the next generation affected the upper classes to some degree with such ethics of the army suttler. The Duke of Vendome hardly thought it worth while to sit down to supper if he could not protract his symposium into the small hours of the night, and often surfeited himself in a way making it less difficult to credit the biographers of Vitellius. More than once the sudden arrival of a scout with a report calling for immediate action, obliged the old toper to make a rush for a horse-pump and order his groom to ply the handle till the alcoholic fumes of his brain had been counteracted by a stream of cold water splashing about his head and neck for minutes together. If he could count on a few hours sleep, he boasted his confidence of being able to overcome the effects of his all-night orgies before the noon of the next day.

Champions of that sort were, however, exceptional phenomena, and the alcohol-marasmus of the masses dates only from the middle of the present century, when exorbitant taxes and an unprecedented fierceness of industrial competition tempted millions to resort to the aid of artificial stimulants. In the larger cities that alcohol worship has attained appalling proportions. The total quantum of intoxicating beverages consumed per thousand of population is perhaps larger in southern Germany than in any district of France; but for two reasons the results of the vice are more baneful in the latter country; the French have eschewed beer and wine for more concentrated poisons, and nowhere else has the alcohol habit infected a larger number of minors and women. Boys of ten carry pocket-flasks and tease their still younger playmates into sharing their drams. My impression of the park-like region of villas and forest-hills east of Havre, was spoiled by the sight of a gang of young rowdies—all in their early teens, leading a howling drunk youngster of nine, and objurgating—not his besotted habits, but his inability to "stand such a trifle."

Paris abounds with such gamins, and, sad to say, also with female topers. Dozens of dram-shops have their best customers among the sex of Eve, and those girl-worshipers of Bacchus are by no means confined to the abandoned classes. Poor sewing girls who have clubbed their means to rent a garret, and heroically resist all other temptations of the great capital, will deputy one of their number to buy a bottle of "cordials," "something to sustain their strength, impaired by overwork and insufficient food," as they will inform their novice companion, who begins by taking alcohol as a medicine, and soon comes to consider it an indispensable daily beverage.

There are beer-shops in France, but the hatred of German habits has limited their popularity, and the consumption of wine is almost equalled by the large and rapidly increasing demand for the deadlier alcoholics: beet-root brandy and absinthe (alcohol flavored with an extract of wormwood).

"The drinking of absinthe," says a correspondent of the London Telegraph, "threatens to take rank with the chief curses of France. Although she holds the first place among the wine-growing countries, it is not wine, but absinthe that, next to coffee, is becoming the favorite drink in her numberless cafés. To unaccustomed palates the taste of the liquid is absolutely revolting—at once bitter, acrid, and nauseous, like some foul decoction of the sick room. But with constant use, the bitterness and the sickly odor become ambrosial elements. . . . France, indeed, has more reason to dread absinthe than she has to fear Prince Bismarck, and if the German statesman had annexed the vile liquid, the dictates of patriotism would have justified Trochu and Gambetta in thanking him for the service. Since so happy a stroke of robbery lies beyond the power of the chancellor, we must hope that some French Father Mathew will rise up to preach a crusade against the insidious destroyer. A victory over 'the devil in liquid form,' would be as glorious to France as the defeat of Prince Frederick Charles."

If that demon could be exorcised by high license, the experiment, surely, would have succeeded in Paris. The metropolitan dram-shops pay enormous taxes, or rather a combination of taxes, under all possible names: one for selling refreshments consumed at the counter; one for the liquor itself; one for their reading-rooms and billiard tables; one for the privilege of attracting his guests by musical entertainments, etc. Still their number increases from year to year, and their poison recruits its votaries from an ever enlarging proportion of the population.

"Don't you think that the drink-curse could be mitigated by closing the rum-shops to minors?" I asked a medical friend who had lived eight years in the capital of the French Republic.

"Mitigated, but hardly abolished," said he. "The roots of the evil are too far spread. One chief cause is the general prevalence of discontent and the desire to drown misery in some sort of narcotic. Another is the increasing difficulty of the desperate struggle for existence. For thousands, hard work from morning till night barely suffices to secure the mere necessities of life, and there is not much time to spare for 'better recreation,' of which there is certainly a considerable abundance. For half a franc or less a poor devil can witness an entertaining dramatic performance, or enjoy Bellini's Puritani with a free libretto thrown into the bargain. But there is no leisure for such pastimes. Something more prompt and drastic is wanted, and the demand is fatally supplied by the witchery of alcoholic liquors. Much would be gained if we could reduce the number of working hours and get a laborer a chance to have a few minutes to himself between factory and bed-time.

"As it is now, he comes home totally fagged out, and while supper is being prepared (by a wife who likewise has passed the day at the factory), he has just time to glance over his copy of the Petit Journal, mutter his anathemas at new exposures of government frauds, and then wash down his rage with a bottle of absinthe which his boy, in the meantime, has fetched from the café. The baby brother of that boy is already dozing under the influence of a 'soothing' opiate, and before dark will be treated to a second dose of the same narcotic, to keep him quiet for the night. His mother is too much in need of rest to stand nursery vigils, and besides has sorrows of her own to assuage, by methods near at hand if the paterfamilias should not have drained the absinthe bottle to the dregs. As for the elder boy, his cravings have already been satisfied by the liberality of the dram-vender, who knows that his rivals are offering bribes, and dislikes the risk of losing a customer."

Alcohol epidemics of that sort are, however, offset by the abstemiousness of the country population, especially in the primitive highland districts of the south and southwest. In the Cevennes and Alpine border districts there are thousands of families who never use a stronger stimulant than an occasional (by no means daily) glass of sour cider, and cannot even afford to make coffee a regular beverage. It is true that the southern cities have become veritable hot beds of the stimulant vice, but the conservatism of the rustics is proverbial, and their primitive habits may yet furnish a rallying point for the propaganda of sanitary reform.

(To be Continued.)

REVIEW OF "TRUTH IN THE CASE."

Prepared by Order of the National Executive Committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP, - Michigan.
MRS. HENRIETTA L. MONROE, Ohio.
MRS. FANNIE RASTALL, - - Kansas.
MISS ELISABETH TOBEY, - - Massachusetts.
Sub. Com.

One word in regard to ex officio representation. On page 26, "Truth in the Case," Mrs. Aldrich says "there are nearly one hundred ex officio members." She is mistaken. There are, or were last year, two hundred and sixty-two persons entitled to seats in National Convention by virtue of office, viz.: The five National officers, fifty-one presidents of states and territories, one hundred and two secretaries, fifty-one treasurers, eighteen organizers, and thirty-six superintendents. Of these, two hundred and four were elected by their respective states and territories to the office which entitles them to a place in the National Convention, just as delegates are elected, though generally with greater care, as few states ballot on delegates. The remaining fifty-eight are chosen by the National Convention thirty-six being nominated by the representatives from states and territories which form the Executive Committee.

On page 29, Mrs. Aldrich further states:

Then when one remembers that the president of this same N. W. C. T. U., which has its own official organ, . . . its own Lecture Bureau, to whom no one is admitted who does not indorse the policy of the union concerning these controverted points, is also the leader of the International Council of Women, to which nine women's organizations are auxiliary, one begins to wonder whereunto it will all grow.

Is this true? Is no one admitted to the Lecture Bureau without examination as to their views on "Woman suffrage, party prohibition and the ecclesiastical emancipation of women"? (See page 26.) Most emphatically, no! Speakers are enrolled regardless of their views on these questions. The requirements of the Bureau are, that local and state unions to which they belong approve them as capable, and that the fees of the Bureau be paid. Oh, for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth! The National organ properly advocates the principles of the National organization. What else could it do, and be an organ?

On page 47, Mrs. Foster says:

It is significant, however, in this connection, that the W. C. T. Unions of Maine and of Kansas openly oppose the Republican party, which in those states is the open champion of prohibition.

The Kansas W. C. T. U. openly opposes the state Republican party, the champion of prohibition! When? Where? How? It has never done it! Recreant Republican officials when rebuked for personal official dereliction of duty have claimed the party was attacked, but Mrs. Foster is a lawyer, and should investigate both sides before publishing an opinion. Faithful Republican officials in Kansas have ever had the support of the W. C. T. U., as have faithful Democratic officials—that is non-partisan—while hypocritical self-seekers and wire-pullers have been rebuked for neglect of duty. The Kansas W. C. T. U. is willing to receive prohibition from any source, as is the National Union, and to aid those who try to enforce it.

If Miss Willard had said: "Mrs. Foster, president of the Iowa W. C. T. U., has sent out Republican documents," etc., Mrs. Foster would have denied it, and said it was not the president of the Iowa W. C. T. U., but the president of the National Woman's Republican Club that did this; but when Miss Willard so states, Mrs. Foster says:

In an official letter the president of the National Union should speak of a state president as a state president.

It is just as proper to speak of Mrs. Foster as the agent of the Republican party, when acting as such, as to speak of any official of any organization who employed methods to destroy or neutralize the work of the National organization.

Again, on page 44. Mrs. Foster says:

Its (N. W. C. T. U.) usefulness is impaired, its work impeded and its ministrations limited by the entanglements of party alliances. This is the opinion of multitudes of the best men and women of our country.

Strange that our reports do not show this if it be a fact. Strange that every y ar shows a larger membership, a larger income, a larger influence! Who is blinded? Do facts prove anything, or is an assertion "the truth." "Multitudes of the best men and women" have been and may again be mistaken. It is well for the N. W. C. T. U. that its members seek, not human, but divine wisdom and guidance. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help," given to us at the outset, has led the devoted women to look for guidance in the only place where unfailing wisdom is found, and has led them to say, "Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident." They could not say this if they leaned upon a "multitude of good men," or on any political party.

The reference to Mrs. Hoffman's radical position (page 48) is not pertinent, as she has the right to as much liberty of opinion as Mrs. Foster claims.

Of course men have a right to form and express their opinions of our work and methods (page 49), but no relationship to members can constitute them dictators of the organization, neither will they attempt it except for personal or partisan reasons.

But why proceed? The pamphlet is so full of inaccuracies, misrepresentation, and distorted statements that we feel like asking with Pilate, "What is truth?" Notice a few that speak for themselves:

It would be well for these ladies who thus impute dishonest motives to remember the words of the National President in her annual address. "We must remember that wherein we impute bad motives in another, we confess them in ourselves."

Mrs. Foster does not question the equity of this rule; no one will deny that we judge of other's motives by our own. Let us keep this in mind as we go on quoting.

Miss Willard arrives at certain conclusions in her own mind about what our society ought to do and the position it ought to take. She at once begins to plan to have conventions so composed and measures so put that her ideals shall take shape in words and be adopted by good majorities. (Page 24.)

Her (Miss Willard's) course is to so insinuate a doctrine—which she fears will not be accepted—with soft words and kindly sentiments and ambiguous phrases that women are unconscious of the real inwardness of the resolution or measure. (Page 24.)

The records will also show that such approval (of new lines of work) by past conventions of resolutions or expressions has afterward been made the basis for advanced expressions and continued approval. * * * One can hardly think it is accidental, or attribute it to a gradual growth of conviction in the minds of the leaders concerning the principles upon which these lines are based, but to a craftiness of expression, a diplomacy of effort, and a persistency of purpose which would be condemned as demagogic in politicians. (Italics as in original.) (Mrs. Aldrich, page 27.)

Intolerance often confesses its real injustice by attacking the person of its victim.—Mrs. Foster, page 43.

Who attacks Miss Willard?

It (the Louisville resolution) was the first step in the exodus from the unity, harmony and strength of a non-partisan organization, working through moral suasion, out into the wilderness of party differences, dissensions, and controversies which now agitate the same National Union.—Mrs. Aldrich, page 57.

Yes; into the wilderness, on to Sinai for law, and then to the promised land.

Neither did I realize that it was unsafe, unwise, and morally wrong, by indefiniteness in statement, by trick or device of convention action, or by the sweet coercion of personal affection to secure the nominal acceptance of principles and methods which do not command the intelligent, hearty, and forceful approval of real conviction in the minds and hearts of the women at home.—Mrs. Foster, page 150.

It is painful to lay open to the gaze of even my sisters in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union this weakness in myself, which was occasioned by my personal devotion to Miss Willard.—Mrs. Foster, page 151.

It must be. Self-confessed weakness as a defense leads to the question, What overpowering devotion supplanted this of which she speaks? and the further question, Are present controlling influences an improvement upon the past?

Fictitious positions thus taken were made the basis of continued assumptions until the superstructure thus built has been the castle of her beliefs, her fancies, her ambitions.—Mrs. Foster, page 151.

Her career in public service is proper subject for review; she has recently opened it to public gaze in an extensive autobiography; therefore, with all due deference to her many achievements, we say she has acted in this as is her custom in relation to organization work with which she is connected—she seems not so much to desire to represent those who put her in a commanding position of leadership, as to make them a background for her personal exploits, a theater for the exercise of her wonderful powers and achievements.—Mrs. Foster, page 151.

That man or woman who has all the charms of fine manners and elegant culture, who seems the embodiment of goodness, but whose works are evil, is the most dangerous foe of purity and truth.—Mrs. Foster, page 153.

Therefore, when Miss Willard offers her theories of reform as substitutes for methods sustained by philosophy and history; when she uses the personal devotion of temperance women to support her political opinions and further her political ends; when she tests their devotion to temperance and their fitness for service in the W. C. T. U. by their acceptance of, or silent acquiescence in her theories of temperance work; then in self-defense I refuse to follow, and in humble fealty to the cause I have espoused, I will endeavor to lead others to the higher, nobler grounds of intelligent, independent acceptance of principles and methods.—Mrs. Foster. . . . There are multitudes of partisan alliance women in the W. C. T. U. who are actuated by the noblest motives; whose service in the cause amounts to entire self-abnegation; they are not under the thralldom of a great ambition; they have made no record which it would be humiliating to re-consider and re-write; they are not, as I was, under the bondage of an almost idolatrous affection; with these women I will argue, and expostulate, and plead, if, perchance, I may help to more effective Christian service.—Mrs. Foster, page 152.

Absalom said, moreover, "Oh, that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice." And it was so that when any man came nigh to him, to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand and took and kissed him. . . . So Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel. II. Samuel 15: 4-6. History repeats itself.

Correspondence.

HAYTI, AS ONE WOMAN SAW IT.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—"Whoever went to Hayti on a pleasure trip? Surely not a lady," said my friends when informed that I had decided to go. And one of them hummed the refrain of the old Haytian colonization times:

"Sakes a mighty,
All the niggahs is goin' to Hayti."

Why did I go? The voyage could be made on a man-of-war, and when could I ever have another chance to join the United States navy? Then I would be exceptionally well-cared for during my short stay on the island, and moreover, it would be a novel experience.

And then was not Hayti the Queen of the Antilles? Was not the first colony of Columbus, the first settlement in the New World, upon her shore? Did not the great discoverer carry her upon his heart?—"the land which God hath given to me so marvelously, . . . I swear to your majesties there is not in the world a better land; . . . where the rigors of winter are unknown, where there is a perpetual succession and even intermixture of fruit and flowers, and where smiling verdure reigns throughout the year." Did he not call it his favorite child, destined as it even then had revealed itself to be, to involve him in perpetual troubles, and to offer him the bitterest cup of his life?

Well wrapped against the cold we went aboard the historic old ship, Kearsarge, and in a little more than three days we were in our summer frocks and sitting on deck late in the evening. Ah, there was San Salvador! We were off the island one Sunday morning, seven miles to the westward of its white lighthouse. And there was Cuba, a day later, ten miles to the westward, her purple mountains outlined against the blue tropical sky—smoke rising from the sugar plantations, white-winged sails hugging her shores. Columbus was one day in going from Cuba to Hayti, so we might well be straining our eyes for a first sight of the Pearl of the Antilles. We passed "the mole" in the night. From our state-room windows we had our first look at Hayti—the high, frowning heights to the eastward, that somehow seemed in an ill humor, sullen and silent; to the west was the forest-covered island of Gonares. We were steaming down the broad bay—a cul-de-sac in the mountains, at the bottom of which was Port au Prince. Gradually the white buildings and red roofs of the city could be plainly made out—the palm trees and forts, the shipping in the harbor. Our captain, who had sailed the world round, declared the view the loveliest on earth—not even the Bay of Naples could surpass it, and no one disputed him—where could there be a lovelier scene?

The Kearsarge dropped anchor in the outer harbor, and for three hours or more we lay in most intense heat. "It is cooler here than on shore," they told us, making us wonder if our survival upon landing could be counted upon. Pushing off at last in the captain's gig, we passed a Haytian war-ship, the Dessoline, that gave us our first idea of what we might expect to see on shore. That war-ship had been sadly battered in the last Revolution, and its soldiers stared at us from over its gunwales. One little pony before a big double carriage stood waiting to transport us to the hotel. We knew that for the last two years the city had been in a turmoil, that it had been besieged, had passed through two great conflagrations; that Legitime had been driven out, and that Hyppolite had marched in; that 15,000 troops were quartered in the streets and the surrounding forts; that many of its best families were in exile; and yet we were unprepared for what we saw in what we could truthfully call the dirtiest city on the face of the earth.

Ruins on every side, and squalid cabins built upon them or their debris. Every house had a gallery where shopkeepers spread their wares, as in the Orient. Everywhere the soldiers were seen. Almost every gallery in the main streets was serving as barracks for the army of the North, clad in blue jean uniform, a red band on a cap shaped like that our soldiers wore in the war of the Rebellion. Their hammocks were swung in the galleries, their straw mats spread upon the stone pavements, and over the little charcoal fires built barely out of the thoroughfare, they were cooking their bananas and plantains, and boiling their coffee.

The Haytian peasant woman carries herself with a queenly, defiant air, and her stride and bearing are anything but that of a negress who has been a slave. She wears a kerchief banded about her head, so arranged that two long ends fall scarf-like over the back of her neck. The Haytian peasantry, no matter how great their poverty, are almost invariably cleanly in their person and clothing. If the soldiers and the peasant women are characteristic features of Port au Prince, the donkey is no less so—the sturdy, much-bewhacked little beast, its burdens often so large that its solemn face and little feet alone are visible! The coarse green grass of the country is brought into the city in great bundles on the back of these donkeys, and often a moving hillock is seen going slowly along, topped off by a woman or a boy.

Along the roadside were booths where sticky-looking cakes were for sale, and bottles of drink—taiffa—a cheap rum—and various other temptations in the way of cheap drinks. And there was the palace! An unpretentious and rather ungainly building, built of brick and wood, two stories in height, several towers, suggesting a large summer hotel short of patronage. The extensive grounds surrounding it were somewhat overgrown with tropical vegetation. There were soldiers to be seen everywhere; the bugle was plaintively droning the monotonous refrain with which we became all too familiar before we had been a week in Port au Prince.

"That is the Pantheon," said our escort, pointing to a group of erect, rusty iron columns fifty feet in height—evidently the ruins of something unusually ambitious—some attempt at a temple that had been defeated by a revolution before its architectural idea was even partially actualized. That was to have been the glory of Hayti; the statues of her presidents were to have been collected under its dome.

This is the Champs de Mars, and we were rolling across a wide stretch of common crossed by roads and surrounded by a somewhat better class of houses than we had seen in the lower town. The Champs de Mars is the lungs of Port au Prince, and can be seen from the harbor, and crossing it you are sure to get a breeze from the ocean or the mountains. The army reviews are held here, and no doubt when Hayti has a settled government the exceptional resources of the place for a beautiful park will be utilized. Through a high, dilapidated gateway we drove up an approach shaded by palms, orange trees, and flowering and bright-leaved shrubbery, and here we were in the court yard of the hotel. We climbed the dirty staircase to our rooms, half questioning if the novelty of our experience would repay us for its discomforts.

JANE MARSH PARKER.

JURISPRUDENCE IN SMOKE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Within a few months have been celebrated with great éclat, the centennials of the completion of the Constitution of the United States and of the inauguration of its first President. Within a few days the people of New York City have witnessed the last great centennial, that of the highest court of our nation.

On February 4, 1790, the Supreme Court was first called to order by Chief Justice Jay, at the Royal Exchange, Broad street, New York City. One hundred years after, the present members of the Supreme Court came together, in company with the foremost jurists and lawyers of the entire country, in order to commemorate that occasion.

The Opera House, the same building which witnessed the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. in October, 1888, was now, as it was then, filled from stage to entrances, with a surging, eager, interested crowd. In both cases the exercises were picturesque, impressive, and noteworthy. Both will go down to history as important occasions. But with what a difference must these two meetings be regarded!

In the one case the proceedings were managed by women banded together for the noblest, highest, holiest purpose for which human beings can strive, i. e., for the purity, elevation, and perpetuity of the home, following the emancipation of the individual from appetite and passion.

In the other case, the venerable judges of the greatest court of the Union, with other eminent leaders of the bar, the legislators of the nation, and the foremost men in private life, gathered together to celebrate "the function of the Supreme Court as the conservator of the constitution." To quote from the address of the presiding officer, ex-President Cleveland: "We will devoutly thank heaven for the inspiration of disinterested patriotism and consecrated devotion which established the tribunal which we to-day commemorate."

As participants, there were present all the judges of the Supreme Court, with Chief-Justice Fuller, a Chicago jurist, at their head, other eminent judges from state courts, and delegates from the various Bar Associations of the country. The Rev. Morgan Dix, of Trinity, read from the Episcopal ritual prayers appropriate to the time, preliminary to the speeches of the occasion. The day closed with a banquet held in the Lenox Lyceum, the largest hall in the city. At that sumptuous feast with its menu of fourteen courses, were present one thousand of the most celebrated men of the country, among them every judge of the Supreme Court. The dinner was superb, and everything was furnished in the most elaborate and lavish manner. And this "everything" included four kinds of wine—champagne flowed more freely than water—brandy, whisky, and the most costly cigars that money could procure! And this time the proceedings were not prefaced by the prayers of the rector of Old Trinity Church.

The distinguished company, which were seated at long tables containing one hundred each, began supper at 7:30 p. m. Two hours later, with the after-dinner coffee, clouds of incense began to rise from multitudinous cigars, just as two or three hundred women, in evening dresses, entered the boxes in order to survey the scene and listen to the forthcoming speeches.

"The air was blue with smoke," said a gentleman who was present and who looked the next morning as if he had just risen from a long sickness, "and heavy with the aroma of tobacco. I don't see how those women could endure to breathe it! Old smoker as I am, it almost overcame me."

But they stayed, most of them, till the banquet was at an end, away along in the wee sma' hours of the morning. They probably wanted to hear a definition of the Supreme Court as given in his speech by E. J. Phelps, ex-Minister to England. Amidst thick fumes of tobacco smoke and the popping of champagne corks, he thus lauded the Supreme Court:

Judicial history has no other example of a court created by an authority superior to legislation and beyond the reach of executive power, clothed with a jurisdiction above the law it was bound to administer, and charged not merely with the general course of public justice, but with the limitations of the powers of political government, and the adjusting of the conflicting claims of rival states. The century that now terminates has tested the value of all American institutions. Fortunate as they have been for the most part, no other among them has so completely justified the faith of its authors, nor fulfilled with such signal success the purpose of its creation. It was designed to be, as it has been, the defense of the Constitution which created it.

* * *

Just as I had finished copying these words of Minister Phelps, Uncle Eli came into the room. Now Uncle Eli had always violently opposed woman's taking an interest in politics.

"Let women stay at home," said he. "As good wives and mothers, they can set such examples as will help the world. No good comes from their wanting the ballot. Let men make laws and execute them. That's what they're for. Woman's work is different. Each sex ought to stick to its own sphere, and not meddle with the other!"

Now, however, Uncle Eli looked grave enough. Saying not a word, I waited for the working of the old gentleman's mind. Finally he looked up with a long-drawn sigh. "If the women who occupied the boxes at that banquet," said he, "and others in the same walk of life, would only do their duty, the Supreme Court, legislators, and lawyers would draw a vail of obscurity over these proceedings, and hang their heads in shame."

In conclusion, I read to Uncle Eli extracts from this morning's World (February 6) as follows:

"Those legal potentates have been magnificently dined and wined. . . It was apparent that the fame of the alluring but potent Bar Association punch had reached the ears of the uppermost court. . . Now the United States Supreme Court is launched for its second century upon a sea of wine, music and liquid eloquence."

Yet woman has no interest in public affairs!

New York City. HESTER M. POOLE.

MISS AMY C. FOWLER, of England, is now on her way to the Hawaiian Islands to take up her life work as a nurse among the lepers on the island of Molokai, where Father Damien labored so many years. Miss Fowler is the daughter of an English clergyman, although herself a Catholic. She has studied medicine in Paris, and holds certificates from the Pasteur Institute. She intends to make a practical investigation of Pasteur's theory, that the same microbe organism is found in leprosy as in tubercular consumption. Miss Fowler has made a special study of leprosy in the Paris hospitals, and is eminently qualified for her heroic mission.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

Again we are called to mourn "our strong staff and our beautiful rod broken." Mr. Francis Wright, of East Pierre, Dakota, "heard the bells of the golden city, the chimes of eternal peace, and fell asleep." Mr. Wright was a true friend to woman and all her great undertakings. He made a liberal donation to the Temperance Temple, and had signified his intention of contributing still more.

* * *

There is no place so remote or barren but a child of God can find work to do. This is demonstrated by the noble work being done by one of our white-ribboners in the wilds of Michigan, Mrs. Flora Baumgartner, of Jacobville, Mich. She writes: "I live in the Michigan woods, on the banks of beautiful Lake Superior. Most of the inhabitants are foreigners—Swedes and Finlanders. They can speak but little English. No church, no Sabbath-school. I gather the little ones in my large dining-room every Sabbath, and have taught them the Commandments and various songs. I have also formed them into a Band of Hope. I am a W. C. T. U. woman and take THE UNION SIGNAL. I read about the mite-boxes, and sent for one last March, which I showed to the children and explained to them its purpose. The dear children volunteered their pennies a certain number of Sundays to the mite-box. I told them when they grew to be men and women they would go to Chicago and see this great Temple. I found with my penny a day the box was soon filled, and was surprised at emptying it to find it contained $6, which I send you for the Temple in the name of the Jacobville S. S., of Findlander children."

* * *

Mrs. S. N. Clements, of Philadelphia, Pa., has also joined the "Hundred Dollar Band." She has just sent the first installment of $50, and will send the balance in April. She puts forth quite a cute idea, and evidently believes that husband and wife are one. She says: "I prefer that my name should be inscribed Mrs. Samuel Clements, as it will then commemorate my husband as well."

* * *

Mrs. C. M. Morrison, of North Clarendon, Pa., sends $2.50 for a Baby Band, raised by his two little girls, eight and five years old. We are sorry she did not give the names of these brave little girls.

The W. C. T. U. of Decatur, Ill., sends $10 for a full Baby Band, numbering one hundred, raised by Mrs. Ella Stirkel. Mrs. Mattie A. Patterson, superintendent of Temple work for the Danville, Ill., W. C. T. U., sends $11 for a Veteran Band. Mrs. J. T. Cable, Schoolcraft, Mich., sends $5, and desires to be made a member of the Veteran Band, as she is past three-score.

* * *

Yesterday we received a beautiful tidy of linen, one and one-fourth yards long; it is fringed, and has a deep border of drawn work embellished with embroidery. It is exquisitely done. We will sell it for $2.50. The following note without date or signature accompanied it: "I have wanted to have a nail in the Temple, so in my eighty-fourth year I send you some of my work, if you can dispose of it. If not, just throw it over one of your chairs." From the postmark on the package we see that it comes from Columbus, Ohio. We would like to know who the aged saint is. A large pieced woolen quilt has been sent us by another aged saint, Mrs. C. W. Carpenter, Tilden, Neb. She is anxious to do something for the Temple, and this is all she can do. The W. C. T. U. of Mound City, Mo., sends a turkey-red and white pieced quilt. I wish our friends would try and sell these quilts in the country; it is impossible to sell them here as persons in cities do not use quilts of this kind.

* * *

Our friend Mr. S. A. Haines, so well and favorably known on the lecture platform, and as the originator of the Commercial Temperance League, has most generously offered to help the Temple building fund. He left New York on January 31 for an extended lecture trip, and wherever the W. C. T. U. in any city named below will arrange for a lecture, he is at their service, and all the proceeds are to be devoted to the Temple:

Toronto, Canada, February 10, Queen's Hotel; Cleveland, Ohio, 11, Weddell House; Indianapolis, Ind., 13, Grand Hotel; Cincinnati, Ohio, 17, Gibson House; Louisville, Ky., 19, Louisville Hotel; Chicago, Ill., 24, Tremont House; St. Louis, Mo., 28, Southern Hotel; St. Joseph, Mo., March 1, Pacific Hotel; Kansas City, Mo., 4, Midland Hotel; Omaha, Neb., 6, Murray Hotel; St. Paul, Minn, 10, Ryan Hotel; Dubuque, Iowa, 11, Julian House; Burlington, Iowa, 12, Gorham Hotel; Peoria, Ill., 14, National Hotel; Milwaukee, Wis., 15, —— ——; Chicago, Ill., 18, Tremont House; Grand Rapids, Mich., 19 Morton House; E. Saginaw, Mich., 20, Bancroft House; Detroit, Mich., 22, Russell House; Toledo, Ohio, 24, Boody House; Cleveland, Ohio, 25, Weddell House; Buffalo, N. Y., 26, Iroquois Hotel; Syracuse, N. Y., 27, Empire Hotel.

Here is a most excellent opportunity for the friends of our cause to secure a good temperance lecture and help the Temple, whose prospects were never brighter than to-day. For further particulars address Mr. Haines.

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

BABY'S VALENTINE.

BY MRS. A. GIDDINGS PARK.

" I'se dot a balentine for oo,"—
In baby accents sweet,—
And there come toddling to my side
Two eager little feet;
One chubby hand a crumpled slip
Of paper holds to view,
While love lights up his cherub face
And eyes of wondrous blue.

"See! Zat's a tiss; an' zat, an' zat Says lots an' lots of love!"
And thus my sweet interpreter
His message seeks to prove,
Till clasped within my arms, his voice
With smothering kisses blends,
And thoughts of "mamma's balentine,"
In baby laughter ends!

But as I press his laughing lips,
And look into his eyes,
There come into my inmost soul
Strange questionings and replies;
Ah, what will Time soon bring to fill,
In years of change and strife,
The rift between my clasping arms,
And manhood's rounded life?

An almost jealous pang springs up,
At thought of love o'ergrown
To shadow mine within that heart
That now is all my own;
Those lips of bearded bloom will press
Another's lips than mine,
Pleading with loving vow to claim
His own true Valentine!

Ah, mothers—ye who sometimes sigh
With all your toil and care—
Press to your heart, while yet 'tis yours,
The form that nestles there;
For the dear heads that Death shall pass,
Will not there long recline;
Be happy, while ye may, to be
Baby's own Valentine!

IW A VALENTINE CAME THROUGH TWO KNOT-HOLES.

BY ALICE PERRY.

'Oh! I say Tibby! Ain't they jolly though?"

'Prime, Tad. Le's edge up a little closer, so we can 'em better," and with a deftness born of long prac-e, the two queer little figures watched their chance, d slipped in nearer to the stationer's window, lit brilliant electric lights, beneath the glare of which re displayed valentines of all shapes, sizes and degrees magnificence, from the humble, ten-penny lace paper air, to the satin art prints, beautifully colored, and en-sed in costly boxes. Cupids, roses, hearts, darts, doves l butterflies, in gold and silver, crimson and blue, ng on line above line of glittering cord, proclaiming h festive show the coming of good St. Valentine, for morrow was the fourteenth of February.

The on-coming crowd paused, gazed, admired, and at gth melted away altogether, leaving only the two little ires above mentioned, who still lingered with delight-faces, although the big clock on the church steeple r by was striking seven.

he eldest, a lad of perhaps eleven years, wore an old, e brass-buttoned coat, that had evidently once possessed llow tails, now cut carefully off, and hemmed neatly around the bottom. About his neck was wound a rlet comforter, made of a piece of thick flannel. His ap was much too large for him, and sported a broad, her visor, that obliged him to tilt the whole structure k, when he wished to take a good look at anything. was quite on the back of his head now, as he stood ing at the valentines.

n one thin, mittened hand, he carried a tiny oil stove, on the other arm a bushel basket of red apples, cov-l with a big pile of Heralds left over from the even-'s selling. In addition to these burdens, he held a e blue, rather tattered, umbrella over his companion's d, for the snow was falling fast, and the faded plaid wl and red worsted hood were rather thin, and very and shabby. This umbrella belonged to Tib's apple d, as did the basket of peanuts and molasses candy ch she held carefully protected with a corner of her wl.

[any curious glances were cast at the quaint, uncon-us pair under the big umbrella, from hurrying passers-as they stood there, heedless of the gathering storm, pretty soon there strolled along a fat old gentleman, wrapped from his toes to his chin in a big gray ulster, a wide, flapping black hat upon his head, and a long amber meerschaum pipe in his mouth, from which a volume of smoke issued into the frosty air. He came in sight just in time to hear Tib say longingly, as she cast a parting glance at a particularly chubby and charming Cupid,

"Don't you wish we were valentine folkses, too, Taddy? Oh, don't you?"

"Yes, but we ain't," responded Tad briskly, smothering a short, regretful sigh, and picking up the basket. "Come along, Tibby. It's snowin' too hard for us to stay here any longer," and the two trotted away together under the big umbrella.

"H'm! h'm! Let me see!" said the fat gentleman to himself as he walked leisurely along, puffing away at his pipe. "Seems to me those are the children who lodge in the room next to mine. Nice, quiet children; never make any noise."

"There goes Mr. Meerschaum, Tad," whispered Tibby, as the gray overcoat disappeared from sight around a neighboring corner.

"Yes, an' Miss Calash, too," added Tad, as a tall, wiry form in a straight alpaca gown, a queer, old-fashioned hood of black quilted silk, concealing her features from view, stalked by them on the opposite side, looking neither to the right nor the left, but seeing and hearing everything, just the same.

Tad was a newsboy. He had a bit of a stand on one of the busiest corners of the city, and sold Heralds and Suns without number. "It was a pretty good bus'ness," he was accustomed to say in prideful tones to Tibby, "an' has been in the fam'ly a good while, jus' as your apple stan' has been, Tibby."

The two lived together in a mite of a room, in an old-fashioned, almost tumble-down house, in a quiet quarter of the city. Great rafters ran overhead in almost all the rooms, and draughty fire-places abounded. It was a very old house, and doubtless would be torn down in a few years more, to make room for a new one. Mrs. Gulliver was the landlady's name, a fat, wheezy woman, and there were two other lodgers beside themselves, who occupied rooms, one on each side of their own humble one, whose names they did not know.

The gentleman lodger, whom they had never seen without a long, amber, big-bowled pipe in his mouth, they dubbed "Mr. Meerschaum," and the lady lodger, on account of her queer, antiquated, black head-dress, they called "Miss Calash," and that was the only acquaintance they had with either of them.

Mr. Meerschaum was an old bachelor, and clerk in a big, dusty counting-room, where he had worked for fifty years or more. He had once lived in the country, in an old-fashioned house where all was very quiet. He was, also, what people are accustomed to call "thrifty," and these were the reasons why he boarded at Mrs. Gulliver's.

Miss Calash lodged there from very different causes. In spite of her shabby dress and eccentric headgear, she was very rich, and had been used to a fine house and beautiful things. She had once had an only brother whom she dearly loved, more than any other thing on earth. This brother upon whom she had so set her love, grew wild and wicked as he grew up, and almost broke her heart; yet she loved him just the same, and when he met his death in a very sudden, dreadful way, it was such a grievous thing to her, that she left all the friends she had ever known and shut herself up in the little room she hired of Mrs. Gulliver, looking at and speaking to no one when she could possibly avoid it. That was how Miss Calash came to lodge there.

Tib and Taddy lived there because it was cheap.

A smell of frying beefsteak greeted their hungry nostrils as they went up the rickety stairs to their room. It was for Mr. Meerschaum, they supposed, and Tibby bustled around, bringing out a loaf of bread, some treacle in an earthern cup, and a pot to heat the tea, as soon as they had got a fire kindled in the gusty fire-place. The oil stove went on shares between them at their different places of business, when an extra cold snap of winter weather set in.

Supper over, Tib cleared away the dishes, and made the room neat, for she was a careful little housewife, and then sat down to mend a rent in Tad's coat, while he read aloud, in halting syllables, the Bible lesson for the next Sabbath, by the light of the flickering candle, and they both studied it out together. They always went to the Mission Sunday-school, rain or shine; and, after the lesson was learned, Tib fetched an old hymn book, and they began to sing hymns,—very softly at first,—gradually chiming out strong and clear, in childish treble, "Come, Ye Disconsolate," a favorite hymn of theirs.

Mr. Meerschaum, on the other side of the wall, dropped his Times, and looked up suddenly at the sound; and at the same moment, a gust of wind came in through a crack in the window pane, and put his lamp out, leaving him in darkness. For the first time he noticed a little round, faint spot of light in the worn wainscoting, and tiptoeing softly towards it, he got down on his hands and knees and peeped through.

"Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal," sang Tib sweetly.

Miss Calash had not lighted her lamp at all. She had often observed a tiny crevice in the wall in her room, too, but never thought or cared to look through it. Now as the words of the old hymn reached her ear, she rose suddenly, and bending down, looked through the knot-hole on her side.

(Concluded next week.)

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING FEBRUARY 16, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 3; Joshua 20–24; Ephesians 1.)

Sunday, 1; Luke 3. Verse 3, There is no pardon of sins without true repentance. Repentance is essentially a moral reformation, growing out of the purpose of the heart to stop sinning, and to practice righteousness. Verse 4, By prayer, self-denial, kind words, good deeds, overcoming sin, witnessing for the truth, having no fellowship with the works of darkness, we may do something to make ready the way of the Lord. Verse 8, God is pleased with us, if our lives bring forth the right kind of fruit; earthly advantages, distinctions and honors amount to nothing with Him. Verse 17, Christ's work, like John's words, cut to the heart of the matter. Are we among the wheat to be garnered, or the chaff to be burned?

Monday, 17; Joshua 20. Verse 2, It is a great mistake to give sympathy and protection to criminals at the expense of the good of society; it is certainly as great a mistake to proceed against every one on whom suspicion falls, without using every means to secure the ends of justice and mercy. Verse 9, These cities were designed, typically, to point out the sinner's way to Christ. (Heb. 6:18.) He is the one to whom we all may flee for refuge.

Tuesday, 18; Joshua 21. Verse 1, In the church there is work that the young people can do best, and they should see that their work is well done; there is other work which should always be intrusted to the "fathers." A live church requires the employment of the best gifts and wisdom of both the young and the old. Verse 45, All the promises which God had made, had been, or were in the course of being fulfilled. The history of the Israelites is a ground of hope and confidence to the people of God in every age, that God's promises made to the Church will in due time be accomplished.

Wednesday, 19; Joshua 22. Verse 3, It is evident that Joshua believed with all his soul that the steadfast observance of the divine law is essential in order to personal happiness and national prosperity. The young should learn from these high commendations of the tribes, that we should always be reliable. Verse 11, What a false construction may be put upon good deeds; and when an evil story is once started, how quickly it spreads abroad. Verse 33, There are so many misunderstandings that might be removed if frank explanations were made and received.

Thursday, 20; Joshua 23. Verse 3, Fourteen years after the conquest of Canaan this good man sinks all thoughts of his personal services, and ascribes everything to the favoring presence and aid of God. Verse 11, The experience of good people shows us that there is never a time in our lives when we should not take heed lest we be led astray by the delusions and sins in the world. I. Cor. 10:12; Matt. 26:41. Verse 14, The old saints who are rich by long religious experience, know best how faithful God is by keeping all His promises to His people.

Friday, 21; Joshua 24. Verse 3, The remembrance of God's mercies to our fathers should lead us to trust Him, and to consecrate ourselves to His work. Verse 15, It is for every one to choose whether he will serve God or not. Our Lord made it a matter of perfect freedom with His disciples, whether they would follow Him or not. It is a blessed family where the father can say for himself and for all in the home, "We will serve the Lord."

Saturday, 22; Ephesians 1. Verse 3, The lessons historically set forth in the book of Joshua are fully given in this epistle. We are brought, by our relation to Christ, into "heavenly places." Verse 4, It is a blessed thing that our salvation is not a matter left entirely to ourselves. We are so weak and so uncertain. While we choose God, God has also graciously chosen us in Christ. Verse 7, It is a present salvation that is ours. We have redemption and forgiveness of sins now. Verse 13, It is a most blessed assurance that we are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Conflict. I. Tim. 6: 12.)

1. The Bible clearly teaches that our lives are a war fare. But it in no way teaches us that we should spend our time in conflicts with doubt and depression and anxiety. These are things that ought to be laid aside; and we ought to be engaged in the noble warfare of truth and duty, which is always waged by a blessed, abiding trust in God.

2. We have many enemies to contend with in life's warfare. But however hard may be the battle, and however dark the prospect, we have nothing to fear if we do not forsake God in the fighting and begin to carry on the battle in our own strength and on our own responsibility.

3. In order that we may succeed in life's warfare, we must provide ourselves with every necessary element for the Christian's conflict. Read thoughtfully Mrs. Smith's notes on this subject, in Bible Reading Leaflet for October 1888, and study carefully Ephesians 6: 12-18.

The Household.

IN THE MILL.

BY ADALINE HOHF BEERY.

"Lord, make me pure!" the strong plea throneward flies;
Thereat God sets in motion all the wheels,
And we are crushed and broken, as He deals
The stroke bereaving, and our rain-wet eyes
Strain upward through the mist; the Hand replies
With grief's full baptism to our low appeals
For cleansing, till our sifted spirit kneels
Among the sinless hosts of Paradise.

"Lord, make me pure!" Ah, know we what we ask?
Like wheat which fain would be a loaf of snow,
We must bide threshing, tribulations sore,
Parting of dross, and heat; the crucial task
Leaves but a mite of us; yet God, we know,
Aye lends His strength as tries His fining more.

Huntington, Pa.

PAUL AND THE STATUS OF WOMEN.

BY ALFRED A. WRIGHT.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MISS WILLARD.

In replying to your request for an opinion concerning your Exegesis of Paul as given in your recent work "Woman in the Pulpit," I have to say, I approve it in its main positions.

It appears to me, however, that you might make more of Galatians 3: 28: "There can be neither Jew nor Greek, there can be neither bond nor free, there can be no male and female: for ye are all one man in Christ Jesus."

I notice that you have placed this last clause as a motto on the title page of your book. Your critics may here charge you with giving undue prominence to what is purely incidental in the Apostle's argument. He is not directly considering the civil, ecclesiastical, or religious status of woman or of man. He is rather considering the relations of the Gentiles to the promise which was originally made to Jews. To enforce his conclusion that the Gentiles are heirs under God's promise, having shown that that promise is fulfilled in Christ, he calls special attention to the fact that there is in Christ a unity, a uniqueness, that includes within itself (and thus abolishes) all distinctions of race, of society, and even of sex. But please to specially note that in this text, as everywhere in his argument, he makes a special and technical use of the words "in Christ." It is as if he had said,

"Within Christ, within the sphere of His purpose, plan and work, the distinctions which men have made in race, in society, and even in sex, are not to be recognized. The gospel takes no account of these man-invented distinctions which you Gentiles, and you Jews, and you slave-owners appear to believe to be essentially in the nature of things."

If it be said the apostle was too astute a logician to ignore the fact that these distinctions exist, and that they wield a potent influence in human affairs, it may be sufficient to reply that he does not ignore their existence, but that he repudiates their claim to the right of such existence.

There is absolutely no force or value in his argument unless he is held to be setting forth the things which ought to be in diametrical opposition to the things which are. Upon these distinctions men have wrongfully founded empires, institutions, laws, and even customs that have the traditional force of an undisputed and undiscussed sovereignty. But "in Christ" these things never had place, never in the Plan of the Universe, never in the Garden of Eden, never in Human History where Christ's will has been fully wrought.

I need scarcely remind you that of all men who ever wrote, Paul had the instinct for words—that acute, discriminating sense of the fitness and fittingness of words that make him a master dialectician, rhetorician, and expressor. And in this passage, Galatians 3: 28, he carefully selects two words which emphasize, and at the same time illustrate, the meaning of the text. The revisers rightly interpret him as saying, "there can be neither Jew nor Greek." He does not say, "there is neither Jew nor Greek," but "there can be neither Jew nor Greek." In the very nature of the Gospel Kingdom it is impossible that there should be either Jew or Greek, bond or free, male and female.

Again, he does not say, "there can be neither male nor female," but quoting from the account in Genesis, he says, "no male and female." The doctrine of this passage is the unity of everybody "in Christ." And this unity is not a oneness of race, of nationality, of society, or even of sex. It is a unity which abolishes (by absorbing into higher relations,) all purely man-made distinctions, and even such divinely instituted distinctions as appear in the physical relations of the sexes. It is a unity whose rights, prerogatives, privileges, and obligations are identical for every one in it.

"For ye all," says the Apostle, "Gentiles as well as Jews, are sons of God in Christ Jesus: ye are all one man in Christ Jesus." It is as though he had said, "'In Christ' neither of you has the precedence, neither is subordinate. 'In Christ' ye are free. 'In Christ' there is no seeking of one's own, but only of his brother's good. 'In Christ' each serves the other and takes precedence in humility by seeking to be second to him. So did the Master. Did he not say, 'I am in the midst of you as he that serveth'? See then how ye all are sons of God 'in Christ Jesus.'"

If it be said that this argument of the Apostle contemplates a status that is purely ideal, it may be sufficient to reply that this ideal is the only real, and that Christ has come to prove it to the eyes of all. Even the Christian world may not be ready for it, yet they who see the truth of this ideal must not be held responsible either for their own vision or for the blindness of the blind. And least of all must they be held responsible for the disturbances which a re-adjustment of human relations to this divine ideal must inevitably produce,

Moreover, as Christ and the Old Testament must be in essential accord, you are wise in considering that whatever is out of harmony with the true exegesis of Galatians 3: 28, must be attuned thereto. For example: the claim that in Genesis woman is subjected to man in matters of authority and government—the claim that by nature woman is weaker than man, and is thus properly to be in subjection to him,—the claim that the Bible gives man authority and government in home, church, and state, and places woman in subjection to man,—the claim that Paul enjoins upon men the necessity of using their power with tenderness and consideration, and that this clearly indicates woman's subjection,—the claim that there is no passage in the New Testament that establishes any right of woman to authority or government,—the claim that Jesus called no woman to be an apostle,—the claim that Paul ordained no women to be elders,—the claim that he would not allow a woman to usurp authority over her husband,—the claim that he required women to keep silence in the churches,—all these discordant notes must somehow be attuned to the one full melodic note of Paul in Galatians 3: 28: "There can be no male and female, for ye are all one man in Christ Jesus."

That you do not despair of your lay-woman's ability to do this sweet work, is to me a testimony not of presumption but of ability. You are on the heights. To those far below, in the tangle of the brush or in the bogs of the swamp, the very course of the stream they seek may be unknown. But to you it is marked out by the mountain peaks.

To those far below the sounds are sounds of war, the sounds of rush and push, the sounds of money on the counter, the sounds of falling idols and the sounds of building idols. What can these people know of the music of the spheres, of that one full note of melody that sings itself "in Christ"?

It is safe to assert that not one of these claims made even by some who are climbing up the mount of vision is otherwise than "outside of Christ." No fact is more true in philosophy or religion or history than that God has made Himself known to the human mind in a progressive revelation. The terms of that revelation are printed in the Bible, but the contents of that revelation are printed in human history alone. There is an evolution of doctrine observable in the Old Testament scriptures that is matched by an evolution of intellectual ideas and of historic events. The doctrine, the intellectual idea, and the historic event match. Each is the interpreter of the other, and the true doctrine of the inspiration of the scriptures take due cognizance of this triple fact. In the infancy of the world God did for the race in its doctrine, its intellection, and its history, all He could. Can He do no more with us to-day?

Against the equality of man and woman "in Christ" to quote the scriptures of Genesis is to violate the canons of true interpretation and the true philosophy of history. The evolution of Christian doctrine is not backward and lower, but forward and higher. Either the Genesis terms are elastic and capable of extension, commensurate with the evolution named, or they were temporary terms whose meanings were exhausted in their own day. In either case the imposition of their then meaning upon the conscience of to-day is an imposition.

Likewise to impose a local and temporary injunction of Paul, in his first letter to the church in dissolute Corinth, upon the Christian women of 1888, and with all the authority of a new decalogue, is no less an imposition.

Hence I was pleased to notice in your book, the phrase, "Christ, not Paul, is the source of all church authority and power." I knew it would be criticised. I knew it was a bold sentence, almost rash in the presence of current ecclesiastical prejudice. And I could have wished (for the sake of timid ones) you had written it "Christ, not the pseudo-Paul," etc. But I recognized your intention, and I saw that you were standing on the heights.

After all there are some things in Paul, whether correctly or incorrectly interpreted, whose principal value is local and temporary. It is the peculiar virtue of each word that fell from the Master's lips, that it carries with it to every conscience a conviction that it was uttered in the imperative mode.

And hereby I test the true Paul and the pseudo-Paul,—the true Paul of the Epistles and the false Paul of the exegetes;—has Christ uttered these words? Literally? Substantially? Implicitly? In spirit?

And because I find Paul here in Galatians 3: 28, on the Mount of Transfiguration with Christ, in absolute accord with his Master, partaking of His very spirit and uttering forth in words the very manner of His life, I use Paul's words (and I must commend you for using his words) as a faithful touchstone of all other words about woman that bear Paul's image and superscription: "Ye are all one man in Jesus Christ."

PALMETTO COTTAGE.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

I feel sure that THE UNION SIGNAL readers from ocean to ocean will be glad to see the cut representing this summer home for workers, projected originally as a token of affection and esteem for Mrs. S. F. Chapin, but when declined by her set apart for the use of workers in general, especially those of the South, and named in honor of Mrs. Chapin's native state, Palmetto Cottage. It is very pleasantly located within a stone's throw of the shore at Lake Bluff, thirty miles north of Chicago, on the grounds of that famous summer resort and headquarters of religion, philantrophy and reform. Miss Mary Allen West, superintendent of the School of Methods for the National W. C. T. U., holds a session of her school here annually. The National officers generally, with many of the superintendents are present, and assist in conducting the National Temperance Convocation.

The W. C. T. U. of Chicago has also headquarters on these grounds called Faith Cottage. The Hotel Irving is not excelled by any summer hotel in the United States, and the auditorium is pronounced by those who have seen all that the country furnishes, a model of comfort and capacity. And no more beautiful or restful place than Lake Bluff, which has been the Mecca of the National W. C. T. U. for thirteen years, can be found in this or any other country. Hon. James B. Hobbs, President of the Lake Bluff Association, has invested tens of thousands of dollars to make this a delightful Christian summer resort, and it is growingly appreciated by good people from all quarters of the United States, and especially from the South. He gave the lot on which Palmetto Cottage stands. It is valued at a thousand dollars, the cottage at five hundred. The southern style of building has been followed, that is, open hallway through the middle, with large chimney, fire-place, etc.

I will be glad to confer with any who desire to avail themselves of this pleasant home during any part of the summer months of 1890, as I am especially desirous that this weary woman's rest should afford an attractive retreat to my comrades of the white ribbon.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.

For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord.—Psalms, 107: 43.

THE FINAL VOICE.

In the absence of the recognition of the great fact that in the affairs of individuals and nations, the voice of God must be the final voice, it seems necessary to have one which will be recognized as the voice of law and authority. There is such a voice in this country, and from its decisions there is no appeal, while often upon its verdict swings the ponderous machinery of government.

It is not the voice of the President, neither is it the voice of Congress, but it is the voice of the Supreme Court of the United States!

The doors of all halls of legislation must swing wide open to let the echo of that voice through, and common judicial robes are brushed aside as the royal ermine sweeps by.

When that voice speaks, as it ever should, for the highest and best interests of man, for laws that shall run parallel and not contrary to the laws of God, then we find a nation coming up to the highest type of self-government, and the moral atmosphere cleared of the malarial mists of legalized sin.

Every right minded man and woman will rejoice in the very recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to the constitutionality of the Edmunds-Tucker, Idaho test oath, designed to prevent Mormons from voting. The court denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus, and declared polygamy to be a crime.

The decision is all the more satisfactory because of the position taken by the court in regard to the plea set up in the name of religion, and which was made as a pivot on which to swing the Mormon Church into unchallenged citizenship. It declares emphatically that the freedom of the exercise of religious opinions and privileges guaranteed by constitutional provision is not intended to shield those who, in the name of religion, commit a crime in the eyes of the law. The Court in its opinion says:

Bigamy and polygamy are crimes by the laws of the United States, and of Idaho. They tend to destroy the marriage relations, to disturb the peace of families, to degrade woman and to debase man. Few crimes are more pernicious to the best interests of society and receive more general or more deserved punishment. To call their advocacy a tenet of religion is to offend the common sense of mankind. To extend exemption from punishment for such crimes would be to shock the moral judgment of the community. It is assumed by counsel of the petitioner that because no mode of worship can be established by law or religious tenets enforced in this country, therefore any form of worship may be followed, and any tenets, however destructive of society, may be held and advocated, if asserted to be a part of the religious doctrines of those advocating and practicing them. But nothing is farther from the truth. While legislation for the establishment of a religion is forbidden, and its free exercise committed, it does not follow that everything which may be so called can be tolerated. Crime is not the less excuse because sanctioned by what any particular sect may designate as religion.

These ringing, forceful words should not be given an obscure corner in our daily press, dressed in belittling type—neither should they be hidden away in the ponderous volumes of the lawyer's library, but they should be placed where the rays of public thought may concentrate upon them and make law-breakers everywhere feel the force of this final voice.

It is scarcely possible to overestimate the educating power of law. Too many of our laws are a disgrace to our civilization, and educate downward. Such, for instance, is our high license liquor law. The spirit of the evil business is not one whit changed because of the substitution of the word high for low before license; and the educating process is to deaden the conscience, instead of helping to quicken it, which should be the purpose of all law. In view of this fact it is the more important that the righteous position taken by the Constitution of the United States and sustained by the Supreme Court of the same, should be sounded in the ears of the people until it shall become a "terror to evil doers."

When Moses, by divine instruction had given the children of Israel the law, he said: "Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law, because it is your life." We shall have made a grand advancement in Christian civilization when we recognize the fact that righteous laws are our life!

Returning to the real subject before us, we are glad the Supreme Court could say with emphasis, "Thus saith God, and thus saith the Constitution of the United States, 'The king-bolt of society is the bridal altar'," and it becomes the visible pledge of all well organized, well regulated humanity. It is then a very serious question to the state whether this "king-bolt" shall be withdrawn whenever the whims and caprices of base passions and wicked purposes set up a plea for divorce, or whether this visible pledge shall be carefully guarded and protected by laws which recognize the fact that all true citizenship must first be found in protected home life.

We are a nation of over sixty millions of people, but we are only a family grown up; therefore whatever comes into the family or home life, which is the unit of governmental life, with healthful, helpful influences, must of necessity produce the same beneficent results, first upon society, and secondly upon the nation. And by the same parity of reasoning, by the same irresistible logic, because based upon "proof as strong as Holy Writ," whatever comes into the home with corrupting, and therefore disintegrating power, must of necessity work the same disintegrating and disastrous consequences upon society and upon governmental life.

The Mormon question with its chief factor, polygamy, by no means becomes the boundary line of our cause for anxiety as to marriage morals.

The institution of marriage is of divine origin, and under divine laws. God has hedged it about with a sanctity peculiarly its own, and over every bridal shrine there is a "flaming sword which turns every way to keep this way of life."

It has been truly said that "the bridal altar is not a private institution." The state claims an interest in its results, and a share in its responsibilities. On each of the two paths, civil and ecclesiastical, leading to the altar, the state places a sentinel whose duty it is to challenge every one who approaches, with "Halt! who goes there?" To advance and give the countersign of an honest purpose, would seem to be a pleasure as it is a duty, but, alas! the challenge is unheeded, the sentinel powerless to enforce his command, and the often giddy, silly, and far too often diseased and depraved candidates for matrimony pass on to the legalized form of an attack upon the purity of society and the peace of government. The complex problem of marriage with its vexing factors is constantly growing more and more serious, nor need we go far to find the reason for this state of things.

In the false and wicked customs set up by society, we find a key which unlocks a very charnel house filled with rottenness and dead men's bones. The habitual breaker of God's law, "written in our members," is sure to produce an habitual breaker of the laws of society and of the state. On the principle "that the greater includes the less," obedience to God insures obedience to every wholesome law of government. In the absence of this obedience to God, thousands, in despair, are asking for a remedy for this desperate state of affairs. If the "final voice" of the land goes unheeded—if the sentinel is powerless to do aught except challenge, if the flaming sword deters not because it brings no immediate punishment—what then?

This much still remains to those who are willing to undertake the thankless task of reforming not habits but opinions. They can enter a ringing protest, and back it up by waging relentless war upon those false and wicked customs of society—customs which stalk with impudent freedom in and out of the homes of the nation.

More potent than all civil enactments, more feared than all legal penalties, might become the influence of women—especially of young women, if they would hold to the doctrine that the law of purity is equally binding upon men and women, and say to all men who seek social recognition, or the hand of a maiden in marriage, "Come with purity, come with honor, come with a clean name and a pure record, or come not at all!" Let every maiden's voice be a voice of gentleness but of firmness as well; let it be for her on this question, the final voice agreeing with the voice of God within her heart, and then shall we behold such a transformation in social and governmental conditions that grave and dignified members of the court of law will come with swift feet to the court of Cupid to learn the secret of the power of the command, "Thou shalt not."

OUR PLATFORM.

No great movement can be held responsible for the utterances of every individual who joins it. Nor can we fairly quote the sayings of its leaders as conclusive of its spirit, much less authoritative concerning its plans and methods. And this is the more true the more those leaders are individual, brave and progressive. In the court of public opinion we take as a finality only what the movement formulates in its constitution, by-laws, and resolutions, or declaration of principles.

The National W. C. T. U. has a President who does not shun to declare all the counsel of the Lord as given to her. She is a student of the many and varied problems that engage all sympathetic and thoughtful minds. The Labor Question, Nationalism, Land Reform, the Woman Question, Divorce Laws, the Australian Ballot, the Immigration problem have all enlisted her most earnest attention; she is a student of reforms, and in her books, articles for the press, and public addresses, sets forth opinions growing out of these studies and her interviews and correspondence along these lines with specialists on both sides of the water. Most of all does she give to our great constituency in her Annual Address the results of her year's study wherein she has, perhaps unconsciously, acted as our "outlook committee of one," to borrow a happy phrase from Joseph Cook. But the very form in which Miss Willard presents these studies establishes our point. She does not desire to speak, indeed, often expressly guards herself from speaking "with authority."

The same is true of all our leaders in state and nation. There never was a society having greater hospitality for new ideas, nor was there ever one giving to each and all more ample elbow room for divergence. From the first it has been explicitly understood (as stated in the by-law drawn up by our National President) that "no state union shall be bound by any principle espoused, or plan devised by the National W. C. T. U., except that all states auxiliary must subscribe to the total abstinence pledge and to the constitution of the National Union."

It is to be remembered that our Publishing House is an affiliated interest, on a separate foundation, having no organic connection with the National W. C. T. U. THE UNION SIGNAL has had from time to time an editorial, and now and then an editorial paragraph, in favor of the Prohibition party; but it is demonstrable that five cents would buy specimens of all the political material ever brought out by the W. T. P. A.

This being true, and our organic law being perfectly colorless concerning politics and parties—as are all of our departments—where are we to look for the authoritative declarations of the National white-ribbon movement? In the only place where they can be found, viz., in the Resolutions of the years 1882 to 1889 inclusive. We have thought the time opportune in which to place these resolutions before the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL. They are as follows:

We rejoice in the advance made along the line of constitutional prohibition during the past year. We hail the successes in Kansas and Iowa, and the activity in other states for securing prohibition by this method, as harbingers of the swiftly-coming time when, with a majority of the states fixed upon the foundation of constitutional law prohibiting the liquor traffic, they shall be able to engraft this principle upon the national constitution. We rejoice in the day that gives recognition to our prohibition principles by political partisans, and we will endeavor to influence the best men in all communities to commit themselves to that party, by whatever name called, that shall give to them the best embodiment of prohibition principles, and will most surely protect our homes. We re-affirm the position taken last year at Washington, which gives states the privilege of choosing such methods as are warranted by the public sentiment and demanded by the exigencies of the situation, believing that God's means for the overthrow of the liquor traffic and the uplifting of the standard "For God and Home and Native Land" will be developed in the use of these various methods.—Page 28, Annual Minutes, National Convention, Louisville, Ky., 1882.

We will lend our influence to that party, by whatever name called, which shall furnish the best embodiment of prohibition principles, and will most surely protect our homes.—Page 31, Annual Minutes, Detroit, Mich., 1883.

In 1883, the Plan of Work Committee recommended the following, which was adopted:

We recommend a memorial to the National Political Conventions of 1884, asking a plank in their platform which shall declare in favor of an amendment to the National Constitution by which the prohibition of the liquor traffic shall become an integral part of National organic law.

This was in October; in June of the following year came the nominating conventions of the political parties, to whom, according to the instruction given by the convention at Detroit, our National W. C. T. U. President carried the memorial asking a plank in their platforms which should declare in favor of national prohibition. Very many of us hoped and believed that the Republican party would grant our request; but instead—t ey rejected it. The great majority of our women—Democrats and Republicans alike—became convinced at this time that a Prohibition party was a necessity, for the memorial was presented to all parties, and rejected or ignored by all except the Prohibition party; that party placed the desired plank in its platform, and declared emphatically for the protection of the home against the saloon. This brief history will explain the wording of the succeeding resolution:

We refer to the history of ten years of persistent moral suasion work as fully establishing our claim to be called a non-political society, but one which steadily follows the white banner of prohibition wherever it may be displayed. We have, however, as individuals, always allied ourselves in local and state political contests with those voters whose efforts and ballots have been given to the removal of the dram-shop and its attendant evils, and at this time, while recognizing that our action as a National Society is not binding upon states or individuals, we reaffirm the positions taken by the society both at Louisville in 1882, and in Detroit in 1883, pledging our influence to "that party by whatever name called, which shall furnish us the best embodiment of prohibition principles, and will most surely protect our homes." And as we now know which National party gives us the desired embodiment of the principles for which our ten years' labors have been expended, we will continue to lend our influence to the political organization which declares in its platform for national prohibition and home protection. In this, as in all our progressive efforts, we will endeavor to meet argument with argument, misjudgment with patience, denunciation with kindness, and all our difficulties and dangers with prayer.—Annual Convention, St. Louis, Mo., 1884.

In the convention of 1885 at Philadelphia, the same resolution was adopted with slight change.

That each year finds our convictions strengthened that to secure the enforcement of laws prohibiting the liquor traffic, we need a party pledged to that end, that the enforcer must stand back of the law, and as there is a party which is committed to such principles, we again pledge our prayers and influence to the support of the Prohibition party. While in convention assembled, we thus declare our position, we recognize that our action as a National Society is not binding upon states or individual. —Page 140, Annual Minutes, Minneapolis, 1886.

We rejoice in the great successes which have been gained by the Prohibition party during the past year, and we again pledge it our hearty coöperation, assuring it of our prayers and sympathy.—Page 45, Annual Minutes, Nashville, Tenn., 1887.

We re-affirm our allegiance to that party which makes its dominant issue the suppression of the liquor traffic, declares its belief in Almighty God as the source of all power in government, defends the sanctity of the Sabbath, recognizes equal suffrage and equal wages for women, demands the abolition of polygamy and uniform laws governing marriage and divorce, and aims to remove sectional differences, promote national unity, and insure the best welfare of our land.—Page 58, Annual Minutes, New York, 1888,

We believe it is vital to the temperance reform that the principle of prohibition be made the dominant issue in American politics. We therefore give our approval to that party only which declares in its platform for prohibition in state and nation, and stands in action for its application to law.—Page 62, Annual Minutes, Chicago, 1889.

The following resolution was also adopted by the Chicago Convention:

Resolved, That while we decline to go back on our record, and place tests of membership in our constitution that might cause some of our members to feel as unwelcome as Prohibition party women now know themselves to be under the "non-partisan" clause introduced into the constitution of Iowa W. C. T. U., we still declare that we are not now and never have been either a sectarian or a partisan body, inasmuch as our organic law touches neither of these questions, but that this does not prevent us from expressing through our resolutions in the annual convention our approval of any and all national parties that shall incorporate prohibition into their platforms, embody the principles of prohibition in their candidates, and enforce it with all of their executive power.—Page 81

And now we earnestly call upon all good men and women to find a line in the foregoing that is not true, and loyal to humanity, as well as grandly patriotic and gloriously Christian. Here we stood—we could do no other—and God will stand by us to the end in this His holy war.

Detachments may deploy along by-roads, but the great prohibition highway now being built for our ransomed Republic to pass over will erelong claim the whole great temperance army. The colors will never fall back. Christian women of America, rally to help us bring all the regiments up to the colors!

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

The field of journalism seemed preëmpted and overworked in every corner, but that man of many discoveries, William T. Stead, has found unbroken ground at its very center upon which to plant his Review of Reviews. The first issue, bearing the date of the new year, is a rich product. In it the monthly harvest of the magazines is threshed and winnowed for the busy reader. Among its many good features is a table giving the contents of the leading reviews of both continents, followed by brief digests of the best articles in the best magazines. The object of the new publication is not altogether to furnish an olla podidra, of current literature, but rather to create a common center for intercommunication and diffusion of the truest thoughts of the truest thinkers.

Its outlined political policy will be to promote fraternal relations with the American Republic, and to strengthen the British Empire. Plainly, it knows how empire is strengthened in these latter days. "To save the English Empire, we must largely Americanize its constitution. The first step in the direction of this necessary development is to compel the Irish to undertake the responsibility of managing their own affairs under the supreme authority of the imperial Parliament. Home rule will open the door by which all the colonies may yet enter the pale of our imperial constitution. It ought to open the door for the admission of colonial representatives to the House of Commons, pending the inevitable evolution of a true imperial Senate."

This, with Mr. Gladstone's recent assertion, "In the United States the real problem of government is being worked out," shows the dawning of this millennial truth upon the seers of monarchy—the crown must rest upon the heads of the people, or fall under their feet; their hands will wield the sceptre, or break it. From the throne city of the most arrogant of the world's monarchies comes this democratic utterance: "The child of the slums is the seed of Empire. None is too insignificant to be overlooked." That thought deserves to go around the world. The wise farmer is careful for the seed; let the husbandmen of the state earn of him to take care of the "seed-corn of the race." Mr. Stead says: "We have no business to breed rowdies and filibusters, and let them loose with fire-arms and fire-water upon the half-civilized, or wholly savage races on our border." Nay, verily. Neither have we! With prophetic foresight, he apprehends in the future "a great federation of English-speaking commonwealths which will favor the development of a similar Federal system in Europe, and the final result will be the United States of Europe."

This brother of all humanity grasps the earth and tosses it on his palm. What hinders the inception of this reign of peace and good will? This: "The religious side of politics has not yet entered the minds of men." The champion of womanhood in bonds, has a potential reason for this also. "If at present we have to deplore so widespread a lack of civic virtue among our men, the cause may be found in the fact that the mothers, from whom men acquired whatever virtue they possess, have hitherto been studiously excluded from the only school where civic virtue can be learned—that of the actual exercise of civic functions, the practical discharge of civic responsibilities."

By what means shall Christianity show forth among the nations? "Men and women must work for the salvation of the state with as much zeal and self-sacrifice as they now work for the salvation of the individual."

The New Review, in its editorial office, aims to be "A great voice sounding out over all lands the summons to all men to think seriously and soberly of the public life in which they are called to fill a part."

EVERY mail brings responses to the plan proposed in the editorial, "A Timely Suggestion," which suggestion is of a course of reading and study. As many ask the price of the necessary books, we give them here. The entire list of books in the Required Readings in Scientific Temperance, cost $2.85. In the Economic Course, $1.60; those for the Recommended Readings in the Scientific Course, $5.45; in the Economic Course, $8.25. The books are ready and can be procured of the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle Street, Chicago. An excellent plan is to form circles in unions, each member purchasing the books for the required readings, for herself, and the union purchasing those in the Recommended Course for its circulating library. Either course can be taken first, yet we think that most persons will find it better to take the Scientific Course first. The benefit of these readings should not, by any means, be restricted to unions; ladies and gentlemen outside of the organizations will find them of very great value in gaining a knowledge of the fundamental principles and facts of the Great Reform.

IF any one in New England desires to purchase W. T. P. A. stock, it can be procured of Miss Elisabeth Tobey, president of Massachusetts W. C. T. U., 36 Bromfield street, Boston, as well as at the central office, as she represents New England on the Board of Directors, and has the agency for W. T. P. A. stock in that section of the country. She will send to all applicants circulars containing full directions, and will gladly act as the channel of communication between the Eastern states and this Association. She has sold more stock than any other state president, and enters upon the work of placing the new issue with enthusiasm increased by her thorough investigations into the conduct of the business during her late visit to headquarters.

The Watch-Tower.

George Bancroft told some young ladies the other day the secret of a long life. It was in never losing your temper. If you will never get angry, he said, you will live to be ninety. The venerable historian himself has already reached his ninetieth year.

***

The best things any mortal hath
Are those which every mortal shares.
—Lucy Larcom.

***

Well and wisely says the Chicago News: "Call high license an easy way to raise a revenue from vice, but do not call it a restriction upon intemperance, for it is no such thing."

***

Miss Esther Pugh's "Genesis of the World's W. C. T. U." has been translated into Dutch and published in Amsterdam, C. S. Adama Van Scheltena being the translator, a blessed old gentleman devoted to temperance, and everything that is true and right. It makes a very neat pamphlet, and will do any amount of good among those people of steady habits.

***

Mrs. J. C. Bateham, National superintendent of Sabbath observance, was in Washington, D. C., during the month of December, interviewing the members of Congress on the Sunday Rest Bill, which Senator Blair is supporting in the Senate. Mrs. Bateham is indefatigable in prosecuting the interests of her work; besides her extensive series of leaflets on the subject, she has lectured in fourteen states, and is now in California to aid in securing a state Sabbath law, it being the only state in the Union without such a law.

***

Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, our second round-the-world missionary, has reached China safely, and after ten days' work in Hong-Kong, started for the interior of that great country. Under date of November 25, she writes: "The Chinese do not need temperance workers as much as missionaries. China needs the gospel; until it gets it, all reforms are utterly hopeless. I shall visit several points in China, then go to Japan, where more can be done. So much sin, so much sorrow, and I have but one voice! Pray for success. My health continues, and I have been greatly blessed."

***

When in Boston recently, Misses Willard, Gordon, and Scovel visited the Home for Incurables in connection with the work of Dr. Cullis. They found there two women wearing the white ribbon. One was Miss Lizzie Smith, bed-ridden for fifty years, but just the brightest and cheeriest Christian imaginable. The other was Miss ———, a woman of beautiful spirit, who was so much injured by a fall when a child as to lose entirely for life the use of her lower limbs, also the power of speech. She lies helpless year after year, about thirty having now been spent in this way. She, too, is exceedingly bright and pleasant in her manners. Her face seems to wear an aureole about it. She writes her answers to everything that is said to her. Miss Gordon asked if she knew who was standing beside her smoothing her forehead, and she did not seem to understand at first that it was the President of the National W. C. T. U., to which she is devotedly attached. When she learned this, her whole face irradiated. She laid her hand on her white ribbon, and looked up with an eloquence to which words could have added no emphasis. It was a beautiful scene. To think of that woman in the midst of her years lying always in her shadowy room, yet linked by the little white ribbon with the hundreds of thousands all over the earth whose hearts and lives are dedicated to "God and Home and Every Land." She pointed to a motto on the wall, "Lo, I am with you alway," and the place became holy with thoughts of prayer and loving sympathy.

***

From one of the foremost Quakers of this country comes this prophetic declaration: "There has lately come to me quite an 'opening,' as we Friends sometimes say, on the sort of agency the Lord intended our W. C. T. U. to be, and the reason He chose the women for this work. I cannot just say that the Lord anointed the women to be His prophets to this government, but I believe it as truly as that Elijah was sent to reprove Ahab, or Jeremiah to rebuke and warn the king of Judah. God did not take office holders in that day, or persons in any way dependent upon government favor to use as a 'voice.' He took those who had, practically, nothing to lose, and I really believe that the Christian women of this land were the only element of our population that God could trust to deliver His reproofs and warnings faithfully. Whatever may come, our white-ribbon army will be clear if they keep their standard where God would have it be."

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

NOVEL-READING.

BY A FRIEND OF GIRLS.

While looking about in one of our large dry-goods stores the other day, my attention was attracted by the chattering of a bright-eyed bevy of school-girls. Now, if there is one thing more than another that interests me it is a girl—a nice, bright, lively, healthy girl. I watch girls, and think about them, and wonder what their future life will be,—bright or dark, happy or sad, good or bad. Well, as I said, I was attracted by this particular group of girls, and I paused to see what was claiming their attention.

The counter before which they were standing contained a large quantity of books, and they were busily engaged in looking them over.

"So cheap," said one; "look here, do! The very thing we were talking about the other night. I must have this. Listen here, girls," and she began reading a passage aloud to her companions.

I peeped over the little damsel's shoulder, and saw that it was one of Ouida's novels. And I felt as though I could not let her take that book away. So I, too, began searching to see if there was not something in all that pile of reading matter which would be fitting for these girls.

I came across several, and "The Wedding Ring," and "Woman, Her Power and Privileges," by Talmage, looking strangely out of place with their silly companions, were soon in my hand. I placed the former where one of the girls soon spied it. She picked it up and began to turn the leaves eagerly.

"This title looks splendid, girls, but it don't seem very nice inside." A puzzled expression came over the youthful face.

"It is very nice, nevertheless," I ventured to remark. "It is a series of sermons by the Rev. Dr. Talmage, and on a subject which should be interesting to you young ladies."

They all tittered, and then one said: "I don't think we should care about it. We get sermons enough without reading them, don't we, Lucy?"

"There are some very nice books here which are not sermons, and I should be so glad to help you select them. May I?" and I waited for their reply.

They looked at one another for a moment, and then one of them, who seemed a little older than the others, said: "I think it very kind of you; if you will take the trouble, we shall be glad of your assistance." Then turning to the girls, she said: "You know that our mammas do not allow us to read such books, and Miss Grace was talking about it last Sunday. She says there are plenty of interesting books for us to read without novels, and perhaps this lady can find some."

I found several—two of Pansy's, shining like jewels in a dirt pile, some of Mrs. Whitney's, several books of poetry and travel, and sent the girls home with their arms full of literature such as I would place in my own daughter's hands had I one.

But although this may seem a trifling incident, it set me to thinking deeply. Oh, how I wish I could talk to all young girls and warn them against the pernicious effects of novel reading. When I was a child I had no one to warn me against this bad habit. I was a great reader, and everything that came in my way was greedily devoured, and I am sorry to say that more chaff than wheat came my way.

"Now," says some good-natured, easy-going soul, "what great harm is there in a really good, moral novel?"

I answer: In the first place, the young girl who is allowed to read novels and light literature, indiscriminately, cannot possibly concentrate her mind and pay attention—that is, read understandingly—the higher and better class of works which are of so much more benefit to her. Give any one a diet of rich pastry and sweetmeats, and then change this to solid food, coarse rye bread and wholesome meat and vegetables, and see how hard it is for the person to become accustomed to and enjoy the latter fare.

I will pass over the false views of life which novel-reading engenders in the young, the romantic and sentimental views which they take of this practical, work-a-day world of ours, and call special attention to the precious time which they are wasting.

I can remember how I used to steal off to my room and read for hours and hours, sometimes away into the night; and how I would cry over my poor heroes and heroines. One day a dear old lady who was visiting at our home, took the book from my hands, and, after looking over it for a few minutes, said to me:

"My dear child, it is too bad for you to be wasting your time over such trash as this. I have some nice books at home, and I will send you some of them."

And then she talked to me so wisely in regard to all the folly and harm of such reading, and, better still, sent me books (which were not so plentiful and cheap in those days as these), and helped and guided me in my later selections, until the books which I had formerly read actually became distasteful to me. "A timely word spoken in season," truly!

Think you that Frances Willard would stand where she does to-day had she frittered away her precious years of youth and study in poring over such books as "East Lynne," "Jane Eyre," etc.? Ah, no! Study, earnest study, thought, and good, ennobling literature is what has developed her and thousands of other grand women who stand foremost in the world to-day. This is an age of progress and advancement for our sex. Every day woman is coming more and more to the front—in art, in literature, in the pulpit, on the lecture platform. We have it in our power to make our lives good, useful, noble ones, or the very reverse.

One of the principal arguments adduced against extending the suffrage to woman, is her ignorance of the laws and constitution of her country, and the very rights she is asking for. I read somewhere, the other day, that it is becoming fashionable for society women down East, to have a competent person come to their homes every day and read and explain to them the leading political and social questions of the day. We cannot do that, but, better still, you girls can begin reading now the class of literature which will teach you all about such things, and by and by, when you are grown to woman's estate, you will be able to cast your vote rightly, intelligently, and understandingly.

Perhaps you will not want to vote? Well, if not, it will be better to know how to influence others for the right, and to know also, just what it is for. Any way, dear girls, do listen to this word of good advice, and don't waste your precious time on novel reading.

Do I mean to say that all novels are bad? No, indeed; far from it. Some are so good, Scott's, Dickens', Thackeray's, and many others, as to have been placed in the realm of classics. But these you can never enjoy properly unless shunning the trashy stuff such as principally filled the counter on the day of which I speak.

News from the Field.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

GRANITE STATE GLEANINGS.

New Hampshire, though she may have slumbered for years, arousing only at intervals to spasmodic action, as during the amendment campaign, is to-day awake. Probably nothing since the summons of men to arms in '61, has created so profound a sensation in our commonwealth as the recent proclamation of Governor Goodell, calling upon all town and city officials to close the rum-shops.

The people at large were taken entirely unawares by this proclamation. Never before in this generation has a governor been known to attempt the performance of the executive duties of his office in regard to our prohibitory law. No one has dared to do so. Every official has been muzzled by politics. And the people have become so accustomed to looking upon a governor as the minion of his party, dragged at its chariot wheels, fearing to speak or lift a finger in regard to the abominable violations of the prohibitory law, that now when one does dare assert his independence, be true to his convictions, and attempt to perform his duty, regardless of political "bosses," the people stand silent, in open-mouthed wonder. The silence is noticeable. During the two weeks after the proclamation, so great was the hush of surprise, of expectation, and the tense anxiety as to what would come next, that the proverbial pin might have been heard to drop anywhere in the state.

There has been a deal of thinking, though, and of quiet action. The liquor dealers, while yet defiantly selling, are known to be removing their goods, and preparing for the expected raids; the shop-keepers and business men generally, whose eyes are ever upon the ground in search of the almighty dollar, are straightening up a little under the fearless honesty and manliness of the proclamation, and beginning to comprehend that life has other uses than to amass wealth; while to those who have long been in the work, and who know that Governor Goodell is not the man to take one step unless he is ready to take the second or any number of steps to carry out his purpose, this proclamation is the breaking of a glorious, long-wished-for day.

The document was given wide publicity at once, being published in all the papers and sent by the Governor to all the pastors and city and town officials in the state. Its appearance was the cause of great rejoicing in temperance circles, and resolutions indorsing the Governor's action were passed by many temperance organizations. The following resolution was passed by the executive committee of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U.:

"Resolved, That we, the executive committee of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U., desire to express our hearty appreciation of the noble stand taken by Governor Goodell in his proclamation for the speedy legal enforcement of the prohibitory liquor laws of our state, and that we cordially pledge our coöperation in all possible ways to help bring about this much desired end."

The state union is also contemplating sending out circulars to the local unions urging them to aid in the work to the extent of their power.

On the Sabbath following the appearance of the proclamation, it was read in many of the churches, and mass-meetings were held in all the large towns, indorsing this new phase of the temperance work, and promising support in a crusade against the saloons.

In Dover, when the mayor entered upon the duties of his office at the beginning of the new year, after the oath of office had been administered to the city marshal and policemen, he read the prohibitory laws of the state, and, referring to the proclamation of the Governor, instructed the above-named officials to enforce these laws, and ordered that any failure should be reported to him. Raids have accordingly been made, since then, with success. The mayor's action has been supported by two enthusiastic mass-meetings led by the pastors of Dover, and participated in by the citizens, who heartily approve of the enforcement of the law.

In Manchester, our largest city, the people are preparing for an upheaval. Members of the old Citizens' League have held secret meetings, and are supposed to be arranging for a grand crusade against the liquor dealers. The saloon-keepers are becoming alarmed. One of the largest dealers, over whose head hangs a term in jail if liquor is again found on his premises, has moved nineteen barrels of the stuff away by night.

In Nashua, a mass-meeting was held, in which it was enthusiastically resolved to uphold all the attempts to enforce the law. The local W. C. T. U. is doing all it can to bring about this result. Resolutions approving the proclamation have been passed, and a committee of ladies waited upon the mayor, requesting him to speedily close the rum-shops. The saloon-keepers in this city are sharing the anxiety felt by the violators of the law in other cities, and are fast disposing of their stock.

As yet, except in Dover, no actual raids have been made. The Governor has personally visited and talked with the officials of those cities that seem reluctant to obey the proclamation, but the interviews have been private. Just when and where the battle will begin, no one knows, but it is the general verdict that there is to be some sharp work before long.

While this phase of the temperance question engages the supreme attention of the public, just now, there are other lines along which work has been done steadily and quietly for many months until success has been attained. This is true of the project conceived two years ago to found an institution which should serve as a refuge for women and girls who are discharged from our jails and prisons. Five thousand dollars were granted by the State Legislature for this purpose, on condition that as much more should be raised by the New Hampshire W. C. T. U. This has been done by the unremitting labor of several members, chiefly Mrs. Albee, of Claremont, to whose hands much of the work of collecting funds was entrusted; and on the first day of January, 1890, the house, which stands in the suburbs of Manchester, was dedicated to the service of the unfortunate women of the state.

The interests of the work in other departments are being cared for. Quarterly conventions are held regularly in different counties, in which much interest is manifested. One of unusual enthusiasm was recently held at Derry, at which many of the county workers were present, and also the state president, Mrs. Knox, who gave an able address in the evening.

Crusade day was observed in different parts of the state, many of the unions holding camp-fires which were seasons of rich spiritual refreshing.

The writer has recently spoken in Greenfield, Marlow, East Alstead, Newport, and Sunapee; in the latter place holding a second meeting for the children, and organizing a Loyal Temperance Legion of forty members. In all these towns there is a strong temperance sentiment, and in some of them there are no saloons.

Miss Wendell, our superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, is tireless in discharging the duties of her office. She has sent out circulars to all the unions, and to one hundred towns where there are no unions, calling attention to our law, which requires temperance to be taught in the public schools.

The Demorest medal contests are coming into favor. Three contests have recently been held in Bethlehem.

Work is prospering in other directions, of which I will speak in another letter. As I am about to close, intelligence comes from Manchester that "two-thirds of the saloon-keepers have removed their stock in haste, and many have closed their doors. The new hotel, the Manchester House, has closed its bar, and on Sunday it was almost impossible to find any sort of alcoholic drink in the city." This from our largest and wickedest city, with its thousands of foreigners devoted to drink! Surely the millennium is dawning in New Hampshire! Alleluia!

ANNA E. BUSSELL,
Union Signal Reporter.

DEDICATION OF THE MERCY HOME.

January 1, 1890, was a notable day for the white-ribboners of the Granite state. It was not only the beginning of a new year, but the inauguration of a new work, by the dedication of the W. C. T. U. Mercy Home at Manchester.

Over two years ago there was plainly seen by the local union at Manchester, the urgent need of a home where women and girls could find help in reforming from the drink habit and its kindred vices. It soon became evident that the undertaking was too large for one union, and should become a state affair. After much deliberation, the state union voted to take up the work, and collectors were appointed to solicit funds for this purpose. Through the efforts of a committee, the Legislature made an appropriation of $5,000 for this object. Mrs. C. E. Albee, Claremont, collected the larger part of $6,000 more, mostly in small sums, making a total fund of $11,000. Generous offers of buildings, land and money were made for its location in various places, but Manchester is a central, manufacturing city, the birthplace of the project, and this was decided to be the best location.

To buy or build, was the next question. Several houses were examined, but none seemed suitable, and steps were taken towards plans for building. But the way was hedged up, because the Lord had better things in store for us.

One evening, Rev. Dr. Knox, the "other half" of our president, saw in the paper the description of a house to e sold at auction the next day, which seemed to be desirable. It was at once examined and the trustees and embers of the executive committee in the city were stily summoned to advise concerning the matter. The w had no authority to purchase, and there was no time o call a meeting, the decision must be made at once. The president and resident advisors took the responsibility, and the house was bought. The purchase as unanimously ratified at the meeting of the trustees immediately following. Those who were present the informal praise and consecration meeting then held in "an upper room," will not soon forget the blessed presence of the Master.

The place is admirably suited to the work, being a short distance from the city, yet within easy access by steam and horse cars. There is a comparatively new, well furnished two and a half-story house of fourteen rooms, several of which can be divided, with good basement for laundry purposes; all are ready for use, with but few changes. Two acres of land and twenty fruit trees are valuable additions.

Preparations were immediately made for its occupancy. The reception room was furnished as a memorial of Mrs. Lizzie White Newhall, the first treasurer of the state union. The sitting-room was furnished in memory of Mrs. D. H. Wendell, of Dover, formerly a member of the advisory committee, by the Dover union and her daughter, the present corresponding secretary. The infirmary was fitted up by Mrs. Charles Williams, of Manchester; guest chamber by the Unitarian Society, Manchester; room of the assistant matron by Miss A. E. McIntire, eter, our present treasurer. The Nashua Y's will nish a room in memory of one of their former members, hile several unions will supply rooms, either wholly or tially.

The dedicatory services were held January 1, and were ll attended. Mrs. A. S. White, Concord, the first president of the state union, appropriately presided. The rcises were opened by singing, "Stand up and bless e Lord." Psalm 126 was read by Miss S. M. Piercy, anklin, who contributed the first dollar towards the enrprise. Prayer was offered by Miss Annie M. Ray, anchester, followed by the hymn, "Rock of Ages." rs. J. F. Chase, president of Manchester union, told of e "Inception of the Home." Our president, Mrs. Knox, described the "Grant of the Legislature for the Home," including the reception of the committee by that body. Mrs. C. E. Albee, Claremont, told of personal experience in "Collecting Money for the Home," while the treasurer, Miss A. E. McIntire, Exeter, reported the "Money Collected and how Invested." The appropriate hymn, "Rescue the Perishing," was followed by the description the "Purchase of the Home," by Miss C. E. Rowell, Franklin; "Naming the Home," was reported by Miss C. R. Wendell, Dover; and "Furnishing the Rooms," by Miss A. B. Brown, police matron, Manchester. Singing was followed by an original poem by Mr. E. D. Boylston, Amherst, who has shown his interest in the work in a practical, as well as a poetical way. Rev. M. V. B. Knox, nchester, spoke of the "Sinning Woman in Christian ivilization." The dedicatory prayer was offered by rs. M. W. Richardson, Amherst, after which the president declared the Home "formally dedicated to God and humanity."

The name, "W. C. T. U. Mercy Home" was selected, not ly as a memorial of her in whose memory the largest donation was given, but also as a reminder of God's mercy towards all His weak, erring ones.

A few inmates were already in the Home at the time of the formal dedication, and it was a happy token of the Master's acceptance of the work, that His Spirit had already met those souls and spoken to them in peace and iveness. C. E. R.

OHIO.

NEWS AND NOTES.

uyahoga county W. C. T. U. conventions are always good; the one held in Bedford, January 16, was no exception. Bedford, ten miles east of Cleveland, is a beautiful suburban town, noted for the intelligence and sterling worth of its citizens. Delegates arriving by early train found the Disciple Church with the "latch-string out." rm rooms and warm-hearted welcomes were most comfing to those whose "influenza" experience was still sh in mind.

The convention was called to order by the president, J. T. Foote. Devotional exercises, in charge of Mrs. . Chase, were opened with prayer by Mrs. T. K. , followed with a Scripture lesson from the fifteenth ter of St. John. The central thought, "abiding in st," was briefly considered. The one condition for -bearing is the union of the branch with the vine: ithout Me ye can do nothing." Only as we abide in hrist, and His words abide in us, will our prayers be swered. "I do not know who told her," said the leader, "I did not; but our president has somehow found out a Methodist, and she says, 'Carry on these services the Methodistic plan.' I suppose she means an old-oned 'experience meeting,' interspersed with prayer praise, as the Spirit prompts." The few moments ich followed were rich in blessing to all.

eports of secretary and treasurer were gratifying. se of superintendents and unions told the same old of tireless, faith-inspired effort, and breathed the sweet prophecy of coming triumph. If we all stand with Miss Scovel upon the high mount of n, we might say with her, whenever God begins a against the enemy, the victory is gained.

and prison work, literature, franchise, and scienmperance instruction, were among the departments ully discussed, the two last mentioned were, by act vention, made the leading lines of work in all the of the county for the remainder of the year. It ght that more uniformity of effort in the unions oduce better results. The admirable address of ome was given by Mrs. Mary T. Cannon. The character of the Bedford union, whose members, though of fferent political faiths, are one in the grand work of form, was well drawn. "Our union, though unique, is mposed of large-hearted women,—broad natures who ve charity for all and malice toward none, to whom the work is greater than self." Mrs. G. P. Oviatt, of Cleveland Central union, gave a fitting response. Both papers were enthusiastically received. Press work was presented by the state superintendent, Miss H. A. Foster, who called attention to the need of a purified press, and urged her hearers to give their influence in favor of newspapers which the boys and girls can read without moral pollution.

The question drawer in charge of Mrs. Doty, was an interesting feature of the afternoon. The advisability of appointing a county organizer was earnestly discussed. Our president knows how to conduct a convention, carry out a program, and close on time; consequently at 4:30 we adjourned.

Excellent lunch was served in the church dining-room, and as the "supplies" of our hospitable entertainers were apparently inexhaustible, many remained to tea.

Just catching the evening train, we were whirled rapidly away from the pretty village, through the shadows, homeward, with hearts full of "God bless our beloved organization, and the dear sisterhood of Bedford!"

W. C. T. U. NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

From Hartford, Trumbull county, comes good word. Crusade Day was observed in all the unions of the county, with one exception, with grand results. Press work is vigorously pushed. The outlook is more than good, better. Miss C. S. Burnett, county president, is a noble worker.

Mrs. Alice E. H. Peters, of Columbus, through whose generosity the elegant case for the Crusade Bible was obtained, has been appointed superintendent of press work in that city. With rare ability and heart in the work, the field and opportunity at hand, she will accomplish much in that department.

Cincinnati W. C. T. U. has suffered loss in the removal from earth to heaven of Mrs. Mary L. Wright, a dear friend, a gifted and faithful co-worker. And yet the work goes on. Under the auspices of this union, gospel temperance meetings, Sunday-school revival meetings, and other agencies for carrying God's blessed truth to the perishing, are carried forward with glorious results. Japan wall-pockets containing Scriptural cards, tracts, and the best temperance literature obtainable, are hung up in hotels, depots, barber-shops and drug-stores; in all, forty-eight receptacles of good, pure, and holy thought. Cincinnati W. C. T. U. is a vital force.

I sometimes wonder—long to know
If what we sow in tears will grow?
If we shall reap the good long sought?
Ah well! who to His service calls,
Knows just where every seedling falls—
God holds our harvest in His thought!

HANNAH A. FOSTER,
Union Signal Reporter.

ALABAMA.

GOOD WORDS REGARDING MISS GRIFFIN'S WORK.

Miss Fannie Griffin is doing thorough execution in the state of Alabama. She is already spoken of with pride as a daughter of that commonwealth, and makes addresses an hour long without manuscript. Every one knows that she cannot speak except to the purpose, has a deep, womanly voice easily heard, and no end of humor, logic and pathos. She has not spent her decades in vain as a teacher, but brings an exact and disciplined mind to her new field.

Word comes to us from Alabama concerning Miss Griffin's recent trip to Wetumpka, twelve miles from Montgomery, where her father settled when there was nothing there but Indian huts, where she was born and brought up on a grand old plantation. They are making an effort to prevent license, and a good Kentucky Yankee, Mayor Lull, of the town, invited Miss Griffin. He was not rightly named, for there was anything but a lull in the storm of public opinion at that time. The Baptist Church was crowded. Miss Griffin is a well-known Baptist, which stands her in good stead at the South. She was introduced by the ex-Congressman of the fifth district, and the Methodist and Baptist pastors sat beside her. At the close, the best men in the county gathered around to say that "Fannie had come up to their expectations." Miss Griffin is organizing unions throughout the state.

Mrs. Stratford, president Alabama W. C. T. U., says of her: "We are waking up on the temperance question in Alabama. Miss Griffin is starting out in her work heartily. I think it will be impossible for the women not to catch some of her spirit. She spoke recently in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, in Montgomery, to a good audience. She was quite at ease, and made a good impression. We have two new unions in Alabama since last National Convention.

NEW ZEALAND.

ANNUAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was recently held in St. Paul's schoolroom, Napier. There were present the Dean of Waiapu, the Rev. P. H. Cornford, J. G. Paterson, C. E. Beecroft, and a large number of members. After devotional exercises, the reports of the retiring officers and superintendents were read, showing that the hospital, the Western Spit, and other visitation work was regularly and faithfully carried on. Consistent and vigorous efforts had been made by correspondence with the committees of all district schools in Hawke's Bay to have Dr. Richardson's book in use, in the belief that the future prosperity of the colony depends greatly on an intelligent conception of the good arising from total abstinence.

A deep feeling of regret pervaded the meeting, caused by the fact that the Women's Home had to be closed. The public had subscribed £135, from first to last, and seeing that the Gisborne Benevolent Society, the Queen's Fund in Napier, and the Alexandria Home in Wellington obtained the government subsidy, the committee of the Home confidently asked for it, knowing that they could thus acquire a freehold property, and the Home become a permanent blessing to the district. The mayor and Mr. Dick pleaded earnestly in the Charitable Aid Board in favor of a subsidy being granted, but Messrs. Cohen and Rechab Harding opposed, and the subsidy was refused. The rent difficulty could not be met unless some philanthropist came forward and placed a house at the disposal of the committee. The balance-sheet was read and passed.

A solo, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," was sweetly sung by Miss C. Townshend, the refrain being given as a duet by the soloist and Miss M. Townshend. The election of officers then took place, with the following results: Mrs. Richmond Riddell, president; Mrs. Banks, secretary; Mrs. Grainger, treasurer. A most hearty vote of thanks was accorded the retiring officers, and a special one to Mrs. Troy, who is just leaving the district for Wellington; also to the pastor and managers of St. Paul's Church for the use of the school-room. The Dean of Waiapu and the Rev. J. G. Paterson congratulated the union on their year of work, and the manner in which they had conducted their business.

The meeting closed with prayer. W. C. T. U.

CANADA.

GLEANINGS ALL ALONG THE LINE.

The municipal contest in Toronto resulted in a decided victory for temperance. The Young Men's Prohibition Club, which always works in conjunction with the W. C. T. U., sent agents to each nomination booth, who propounded these questions to each aldermanic candidate:

"Will you oppose any attempt to increase the number of licenses this year?"

"Are you opposed to licensing houses of ill-fame?"

In almost every instance the reply was favorable, showing that temperance sentiment has become too strong for any other answer. But in one or two cases the candidate took square issue, and in each case he was hopelessly beaten at the polls.

It being feared that the present police matron was in danger of dismissal, the Toronto union took time by the forelock and sent a deputation, led by Mrs. D. V. Lucas and Mrs. R. McDonell, president and honorary president of the district union, to ask the appointment of a second matron, feeling that to demand more was a good way to keep what they had. The suggestion was not favorably considered, but the present matron was retained, and given better hours.

Just before the New Year, the Toronto union passed a resolution asking that the ladies of their city should not provide wine for New Year visitors.

Toronto is mourning the loss of one of her most active workers, Mrs. Colin Skinner, who has been called to her reward. Mrs. Skinner was most deeply interested in headquarters, and was secretary and treasurer of the building fund. She not only gave of her time, but of her means liberally.

At the East Ontario Provincial Convention, Mrs. Day Smith, of Hamilton, was made superintendent of parlor meetings, and the first of a series of these meetings in Toronto was given by Mrs. D. V. Lucas, in aid of headquarters. There have always been social meetings in connection with W. C. T. U. work, but not just of this nature. Some of the departments of work were discussed by Mrs. Lucas, Mrs. Jacob Spence, and Mrs. W. McDonell, one of the objects of these meetings being to instruct and interest ladies in temperance work who are not already members of the W. C. T. U. Rev. D. V. Lucas and Rev. Dr. Sutherland, the leader of Canada's New Party, were also called upon. The latter, in speaking of the extension of the franchise to women, said he believed in equal rights for all, but the ladies must understand that meant exclusive privileges for none. However, he thinks the ballot will be a greater power for good than the peculiar privileges already enjoyed by women.

The Canada Temperance League, Toronto, a newly organized body, has opened coffee rooms in a poor part of the city, the object being, of course, to give working men a cup of coffee at lowest possible rates, and to leave them without excuse for going to the saloon.

The temperance people of Hamilton, Ontario, are petitioning the city council for a reduction of the liquor licenses. The number is at present within the limit of the statute, but the council has power to reduce the number. Belleville W. C. T. U. is also working along this line.

The Ottawa W. C. T. U. observed the week of prayer, holding meetings each day in the Congregational Church.

Twenty young ladies have found a home in the Young Women's Christian Institute, Ottawa, which Miss Bertha Wright founded and has charge of, and a number of normal students and others could not be accepted owing to lack of accommodation. GERTRUDE CARMAN.

MICHIGAN.

NOTES OF WORK.

A letter from the president of the first district contains the sad news of the death of Mrs. Cushing, one of Detroit's most valued workers, literally at her post, reading the Scripture at Colonel Bain's afternoon meeting; before sunset "at rest."

Major Scott and wife are holding profitable meetings. Reports from Crusade meetings all interesting. Medal contests have been held during the winter both in Detroit and Wayne.

The president of the second district writes that the reading-room at Hillsdale obtained a fine collection of reading-matter, by means of a "book social." Miss Mary Lockwood, of the state kindergarten in the State Normal at Ypsilanti, is district superintendent.

Washtenaw county convention was a success, presided over by Mrs. Ann Bassett in a most "Friendly" manner. Mrs. Angie F. Newman was the speaker, "Our Sisters in Utah" the theme.

The president of the fourth district is in the field, organizing, and strengthening old unions; she reports an encouraging outlook. On January 18, organized a new union at New Buffalo; three teachers in the public schools among the officers and superintendents; another new union five miles from Niles.

The Y's of Three Oaks are putting on new life, and aiming direct at the closing of their one saloon. The Y's of Dowagiac and the W. C. T. U. of Berrien Springs, are preparing for medal contests. Thirty-one women from various parts of the district attended the National Convention.

The president of the fifth district reports no reading-rooms, but almost universal free distribution of THE UNION SIGNAL in railroad depots, post-offices, hotels, and a fine list of new subscribers.

The sixth district has been blessed with the tour of Miss Newcomb; two new unions organized, two re-organized. Oakland county held first week in February.

Lansing Y. W. C. T. U. have issued a bulletin; among other things notice of a free kindergarten.

The other districts reported in my last.

LIZZIE M. JOHNSON, Union Signal Reporter.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MISS ELIZABETH J. SCOVEL, the evangelist, has been holding meetings in the First Baptist Church, Chicago (Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson's), also in Evanston. She goes to Peoria, Ill., by invitation of Mrs. E. G. Hibben, president of the W. C. T. U., and later on to Milwaukee, Wis., by invitation of Mrs. Herr, president of the W. C. T. U. of that city, after which she returns to Hillsboro, Ohio, by invitation of several of the churches there.

THESE beautiful words come from a member of the bereaved household: "I send a few words concerning our mother, Mary Avery Blanchard, who fell asleep at Las Vegas, N. M., January 11, and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Wheaton, Ill., January 17. She was from childhood a temperance reformer, being president of a children's temperance society at Middlebury, Vt., when but twelve years of age, and the almost completed sixty years which followed found her always devoted to the same cause. She, with others, led successfully the Crusade in Wheaton, when that pillar of fire and cloud going before the hosts of Christian women in this country, tarried in our sky. She organized our W. C. T. U. and Band of Hope. Her courage for and faith in a paper which should promulgate Christian temperance, led her early to invest, according to her ability, in W. T. P. A. stock. She believed that alcohol was not a necessity in medicine, and refused it even when meeting death. Her character as a reformer lacked no side. Long years she spent with her husband in the anti-slavery struggle, hopefully bearing its reproach; later years have seen her as fully roused to the evils of secretism, especially grieved that it should find any place in the work against the rum power, and woman's complete endowment with power as a political factor received her full consent. With a life well rounded to its close, this Christian mother and reformer went to her rest."

THE temperance cause is being agitated considerably on the West Side of Chicago this winter. A new union has been formed, and a semi-monthly gospel temperance meeting is being held at the West Side Christian Church. The last speaker on Friday, January 3, was the Rev. W. H. Boles, of Eureka, Ill. He very forcibly proved that the liquor traffic was twin brother of slavery; they were legalized together, and hand in hand they traveled on, until through the persistent efforts of a few at first, slavery has been abolished, and so will it be with the liquor traffic.

THE Crisis is a little monthly paper published in Edinboro, Erie county, Pa., by Mrs. I. N. Taylor, at five cents a year. Each number contains five or six pointed articles on the different phases of prohibition, written by the best of authors. It is intended to meet the great need of scattering cheap literature through the mails to all classes of people, reaching thousands to whom a costlier paper could not be sent. Sample copies will be sent free on application to all who will try to raise a club for the Crisis, provided they think the paper will be useful in their community.

MAJOR AND MRS. E. T. SCOTT began a week's meetings February 4, at Fremont, Neb., going there from Detroit, Mich., where they have been doing very successful work under the auspices of the Martha Cushing branch of the W. C. T. U.

THE address of Mrs. E. S. Moffat, associate superintendent of the department of work for soldiers and sailors, is changed from Port Huron, Mich., to Tacoma, Washington. Let all matter, especially that relative to the "Flag for every school-house," be addressed directly to her there; it will expedite the work, although all mail addressed to former residence will be forwarded.

Official Communications.

PROMOTION OF SOCIAL PURITY.

MOTHERS' MEETINGS.

One of the most important and helpful measures that can be undertaken to promote the cause of social purity, is that of mothers' meetings. This is a line of work which every union can and ought to engage in. The evils which influence our children for vice are everywhere prevalent. There is no home so safe and sheltered but that, if left unwatched and unguarded, the enemy may enter its portals. Eternal vigilance is the only price of safety, and mothers need to be wide awake to the dangers that beset the pathway of their children, and learn to understand the hundreds of different avenues by which the influences of impurity may reach them. They need to realize that prevention is the only sure means of combating the evil, and that this must be brought about by correct education begun very early in life. Many mothers who would guard their boys and girls of school and society age with most zealous care, look upon the subject of impurity as one which in no way concerns their little ones of tender years, and so neglect to guard them in this particular until the weeds of impurity are firmly rooted in their young hearts. It is easier to see the weeds when they are grown and are putting forth leaves and branches, but it is then too late; the roots are firmly grounded, and labor with what zeal we will to tear them out, there is always danger that some rootlet will remain to spring up again where least expected. The better way is to prevent the mischief-making from germinating.

The susceptible years of childhood furnish a fertile soil for the reception of evil. Impressions received by a child before its seventh year have more to do with the formation of its character than those received at any other period of its existence. If we would save the children, we must not only endeavor to keep them from contamination by contact with evil, but must also preoccupy the fertile field of their young minds with pure, elevating and ennobling thoughts, that there will be left no room for evil to take root, for "if we fill the bushel with good wheat there will be no room for chaff and rubbish." To do this will require much outlay of time and thought, and much sacrifice of ease and pleasure on the part of mothers; more, indeed, than mothers will be willing to give until they realize fully the great necessity for it. The mission of the mothers' meeting should be to arouse mothers to see this necessity, to stimulate them to an appreciation of their high calling and its responsibility; interest them to begin an earnest study of the ways and means by which they can intercept temptation and stop the feet of those that run to destruction, and to build up such bulwarks against vice by right training and home influences, that the young lives entrusted to their care may be able to stem with safety the tide of evil in the world.

In response to the questions so often asked, "How shall we start and conduct mothers' meetings?" I would reply: Begin by selecting a wise and earnest Christian woman for a local superintendent; set apart a day for the meeting, and arrange the subject for discussion at the same; appoint a committee to visit all the mothers of the town whether members of the union or not, and, stating the place, date, and character of the meeting, give each a personal invitation to attend, and if possible, secure their promise to do so. Nothing else that can be done will prove so effectual in securing the attendance of mothers as personal efforts of this sort. It is also a most excellent plan to leave with the invitation a copy of the leaflet, "An Appeal to the Women of America," asking as a favor that it shall be given a careful perusal. This will help to foster the interest which has already been aroused. Advertise the meeting in the local papers for several days previous to its occurrence. It is also well for the local superintendent to visit the pastors of the various churches, explain the object of the mothers' meeting, and endeavor to interest them and secure their indorsement of the work. If practicable, ask them to announce the meeting to their congregations on the Sabbath.

Open the mothers' meeting with devotional exercises. The topic for consideration may be presented either in a well prepared, practical paper, or a plain, well meditated talk, or by the reading of leaflets, or selections, followed by an informal discussion of the subject. The presentation of the subject may be given by the local superintendent or by others chosen for the purpose, and it is well to interest and secure different members for this duty as often as practicable. The time occupied should not exceed thirty minutes. Allow no gossip at these meetings, no discussion of local affairs, and no personalities; nothing, in short, to lower the standard from the high plane of morality and religion. At the close of the meeting, which should always be prompt, it is well to distribute leaflets pertaining to the subject of the day's discussion, and to announce the time, place, and subject to be presented at the next meeting, with an invitation to those present to be again in attendance.

A list of topics for study and discussion at mothers' meetings will be furnished by the superintendent on application, accompanied by a two-cent stamp. For leaflets and literature send to the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

MRS. J. H. KELLOGG,
Asso. Supt. of Dept. for Promotion of Social Purity, Mothers' Meetings.
Battle Creek, Mich.

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT.

HALF FREE STUDENTSHIPS.

For members of the W. C. T. U. who cannot take the regular evangelistic course of study, but who wish to be thoroughly furnished in knowledge of the English Bible, I have arranged the W. C. T. U. English Bible Course. The annual fee is $5. No text books but a revised Bible are needed. A patron of the Boston Correspondence School has authorized me to here announce that he will pay for one year, one-half the tuition fee in this course of the first six women who shall apply to me therefor. Address Rev. Alfred A. Wright, D. D., the instructor, at 9 Clinton street, Cambridge, Mass.

UNFERMENTED WINE.

DEAR SUPERINTENDENTS:—A delay in the work of this department, in the cause of which the National superintendent has had no part, makes it necessary that with added diligence more vigorous effort be made to put into the time left the amount of work that the success of last year demands of this.

At nearly every conference, synod, assembly, and association that convened last year, resolutions were passed recommending the use of unfermented wine at the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and yet, in nearly all of these denominations are many churches using the alcoholic wine. More determined opposition was manifested than in any previous year.

The knowledge that was gained of the stratagem, policy, and statements made, calculated to deceive and mislead, should be utilized for the advancement of our cause this year. Ask your druggists if they keep the unfermented wine for Sacramental purposes. If so, ask for the circular that is sent out with these wines. In these will be found testimonials from bishops and divines. Have specimens of these wines analyzed, and with the knowledge of the amount of alcohol contained in them enlighten the ministers and churches where this wine is used, and maybe save some poor soul struggling against the force of an inherited appetite to which the very fumes of alcohol give an uncontrollable power.

Gather in every way information that will give you a thorough knowledge of your work. Read "Wines, Scriptural and Ecclesiastical," by Norman Kerr. This will give you a logical view, based upon Biblical and historical facts. Mary Allen West's National Leaflet No. 22, in in a few words covers many points necessary for you to know. In "History of Bible Wines of the Old and New Testaments," published by R. H. McDonald, San Francisco, Cal., price twenty cents, are a host of facts you will find very helpful.

Julia Colman is having put into German the Union Leaflet, No. 105, "The Tempted Sexton." If other German literature is needed, write to Mrs. S. F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kansas, the National superintendent of work among foreigners.

If the recommendations and suggestions contained in my annual report and circular do not cover every contingency that may arise, write me at once and let us pray much that unitedly we may be made instrumental in removing from the table of our Lord the intoxicating cup, that many souls may be saved thereby.

R. A. ESMOND,
Asso. Supt. of Evangelistic Dept., Unfermented Wine.
Syracuse, N. Y.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

UNITED PRAYER AND EFFORT.

Each local union in the land is requested to observe the first week of April as Sabbath Observance Week. This is in accordance with our repeated action at National Convention, and our usage for five years. Let the Sabbath and Sabbath work be the theme of private and family prayer, and of the regular meeting of the union. Arrange at once for a sermon from every pulpit in the land on April 6, if possible; if not, on the 13th. Send at once, with stamp, for samples of literature, unless you have them, and after each sermon let two ladies stand at the church door and give out leaflets on the Sabbath question.

Numbers 3, 10 and 14 are for use in the opening exercises of the Sabbath-schools. Secure their use if possible in every Sabbath-school of every name, and by every Loyal Temperance Legion. We have especial occasion this year for thanksgiving and for united prayer and effort for this work. God grant we may be of one mind!

The American Sabbath Union and other Sabbath organizations and the World's Sabbath Union Prayer Society join in this request for prayer and sermons, and the World's call to prayer so fits our needs in its assigned subjects, that we have re-issued it at ten cents a hundred (No. 27) for wide distribution among Christian people. Address Mrs. J. C. Bateham, National Superintendent, Painesville, Ohio.

SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The response to Miss Willard's communication in regard to a spring session of the School of Methods, thus far, are too few to warrant going on with arrangements for the school. This may be due, in large measure, to the all-pervading sickness. If others wish to join the class, let them notify Mary Allen West, Oneida, Ill., immediately, of this desire, stating time before May 1st which best suits them. Unless at least thirty signify their intention of joining the class, it must be given up. Board can be obtained in Chicago at from five to seven dollars a week; if several are willing to occupy one room, the price can be greatly reduced, but we can make no arrangements for boarding until we know definitely how many wish board. "I wish a boarding-place near the school," writes one. This is hardly possible in Chicago, as the school must be down town to accommodate the different sections of the city, and there are no residences there.

"Will parliamentary usage and physical culture form part of the course?" Parliamentary usage, certainly, and physical culture if there is sufficient call for it.

"Will the school give me such knowledge of W. C. T. U. work as to enable me to earn my bread and butter by it?" One month cannot do the work of years, but, well improved, it will give a better knowledge of methods of work, and thus fit for remunerative service, than many of us gained in years of experimenting.

Will persons in Chicago willing to board ladies who may attend the school, please notify me, stating location and price? The school, if held, will occupy a month, probably March.

MARY ALLEN WEST, Nat. Supt.
Oneida, Ill.

OMISSION.

Permit me to note in your columns the omission of an important item from the Minutes of the National W. C. T. U. Convention of 1889, which we think must be consequent upon the loss of a leaf from the manuscript, and, without doubt, is wholly the fault of the secretary. Readers of the Minutes (who I am glad are exceeded in number by readers of THE UNION SIGNAL) will find no record of the election of treasurer or recording secretary. The original manuscript reads: "Miss Julia Colman presented her report on temperance literature. Miss Dow read the vote for recording secretary as follows: Whole number of votes cast, 392; Mrs. M. A. Woodbridge, 376; Mrs. Lydia H. Tilton, 7; scattering, 9. On motion of Mrs. Barker, the informal was made the formal ballot of the convention, and Mrs. Woodbridge declared elected.

"The vote for treasurer was reported: Whole number cast, 382; Miss Estler Pugh, 370; Mrs. Ecob, 7; scattering, 5. The informal was made the formal ballot of the convention, and Miss Pugh declared elected, and amid the honors of the body offered her, returned her thanks."

The secretary asks the pardon of Miss Pugh and of the union for the omission made.

Telegrams were not recorded. Mrs. Stevens, assistant secretary, having carefully grouped them, placed them for easy reference in a blank book upon the side of the secretaries' table, from which all were removed, and no trace of them could be found.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,
Rec. Sec. Nat. W. C. T. U.

Publisher's Dep't.

Please Take Notice.

Our office work has suffered as all other offices, through sickness of employes. We have done and are doing our best to keep all the wheels turning smoothly, but some delay in attending to subscription and order business is inevitable. Kindly have patience and remember how "La Grippe" treated you! Also to all friends who subscriptions expired in and who have not yet renewed, we urge you to attend to it at once. The sickness referred to has caused a great number to neglect this, and the result is this plea that you will not further forget THE UNION SIGNAL and its claims.

December or January

R. T! R. T!
T. I? T. I?
T. C. N. Y. H.

Our last "Initial Note" met with remarkable success. The key to the proper answer for above initials will be found in the subjoined letter just received from a lawyer in this state. We will give a cloth-bound copy of Miss Willard's book, "Glimpses of Fifty Years," for the best answer to the above initials received before April 1, providing a club of ten short-termers (with $1) is sent at the same time. "Only one will get the book?" True, but you may be the one, and you will be spreading the truth as we (you and we) see it. Now for the letter:

From a Man!

"I send the names of twenty persons. Send them THE UNION SIGNAL for five weeks. Be sure to begin with the issue of the 23d. I want these people to read 'The Truth in the Case.' Nearly all are the names of ladies whose subscriptions were paid for by their husbands.

"It did not require over an hour to see these gentlemen on the street or in their business places, and in not a single instance did the person asked refuse. I judge that it would be an easy matter to thus secure a hundred trial subscribers in this little city. It is rare to find a man of any respectability who will refuse to promptly pay ten cents to have the paper sent on trial to his wife, daughter, sister, or mother. Let the friends of THE UNION SIGNAL try the experiment of calling on the men as well as the women. Stir them upon this point! * * * Since beginning this letter my wife has handed me $3 and the names of three yearly subscribers. She says she will send in additional names soon."

Good Idea, Isn't It?

Will the timid sisters note it, and drop their timidity? Will some husbands give an hour to such work as this for the sake of the truth? Already we are getting numerous letters asking if the articles referred to by our good friend, "The Truth in the Case," will be re-printed in pamphlet form. To this we say, We hope not! Why? Because we want to send out thousands of copies as they are for the sake of THE UNION SIGNAL. The whole set will cost, perhaps, 15 cents, as cheap as we could possibly get out a pamphlet. Why not hammer away with the papers just as they are? We can send the back numbers at any time. The fight is a square out one for a principle; there will be no backing down. Let both sides be patiently heard, and may God give the victory! Don't forget the moral:

G. A. T. M. Y. C. A. W!

Which, translated, means:

"Get all the men you can at work!"

Note the chance to get Miss Willard's book free by the best answer to the initials at the head of this item.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Five beautiful baby faces are artistically grouped in a charming Albertype that will delight every woman who loves babies or loves a good picture. Send a 2ct. stamp to Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., and get this beautiful picture to adorn your home.

Since Dr. Alice B. Stockham, the author of TOKOLOGY, has returned from Europe, there has been great increase in the sale of her book. It is the "old reliable" for agents, who sell it over and over again in the same place. One agent writes: "It is with a grateful heart that I thank you for this avenue for self-support which you have opened for women in canvassing for TOKOLOGY." For circulars and terms address Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

A sample copy of PRINTERS' INK, the advertisers' trade journal, will be mailed free upon application to GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce Street, New York.

Good Women Wanted.

We call your attention to Brown Brothers advertisement appearing in another column. They are the largest Nurseryhouse in America and offer pleasant and profitable employment.

"SPLENDID"! All say, using Willcox Cuff Holder. Every reader of this paper can have a pair by sending 10 cents to S. P. and S. H. Willcox, Fairhaven, Mass. Lady Agents Wanted.

OREGON THE LAND OF BIG RED APPLES. The famous Williamette Valley. The best climate in the United States. Write for circulars to the Western Oregon Land Co., Monmouth, Polk Co., Oregon. J. G. CROUCH, Sec'y.

PROHIBITION COLONY

AT NEWHALL, LOS ANGELES CO., CAL.

If you have lung trouble, Catarrh, Asthma, or Malaria, and want to be cured, or if you are only seeking for a faultless climate, and rich soil, where all kinds of semi-tropical fruit is grown in greatest abundance, and immense crops of small grain and vegetables are produced, or if you simply wish to make a paying investment, or desire to settle in one of the loveliest spots on earth, send us your address, and we will forward to you full information free, and gladly answer any special inquiries, not only about our prohibition colony, but about this noted land of sunshine and flowers.

St. John, Katzenstine & Yarnell,
CALIFORNIA BANK BUILDING,
LOS ANGELES, - - - CAL.

6% BONDS

We offer the following:
$100,000 CITY OF SAN BERNARDINO, CAL.
20,000 GRANT COUNTY, NEW MEXICO.
50,000 WATERTOWNS. DAK., WATER CO.
100,000 CITY OF OMAHA, NEBRASKA.
20,000 ANACONDA. MONTANA.
50,000 GRAND ISLAND. NEB.
Also other Choice 4 to 7 Per Cent Securities.
Write for Lists and Prices.
Land Warrants and Scrip Applicable to Gov't Land. Banking in all Branches. Your Business Solicited.

S. A. KEAN & CO., Bankers,
100 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.
115 Broadway, New York.

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A. A. Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N. Y. City.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA

furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance B'dg., CHICAGO. Ill.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

Women Wanted—NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY Permanent positions guaranteed, SALARY and EXPENSES PAID. Peculiar advantages to beginners. Stock complete, with fast-selling specialties. OUTFIT FREE. We guarantee what we advertise. Write at once to BROWN BROS., Nurserymen, Chicago, Ill. (This house is reliable.)

For 25 Cents we will send one regular size packet each of the rare and lovely deep blue Torenia Fournieri illustrated above,—the ever-changing gorgeous new Shirley Poppies,—the dwarf fragrant Little Gem Sweet Alyssum,—many varieties mixed of Choice German Asters,—elegant mixed colors of Burpee's Superb Camellia-Flowered Balsams,—finest mxd. varieties of Chinese and Japanese Pinks,—extra fine mixed New and Beautiful Ipomoeas,—choice Mixed Pansies,—Fordhook strain of Superfine Petunia hybrida,—and the twelve best varieties of New Sweet Peas Mixed,—making in all TEN PACKETS FOR 25 cents and known as BURPEE'S GEM COLLECTION FOR 1890

Purchased separately these ten varieties would cost 85 cts., but we will mail the entire collection for 25 cts. cash or postage stamps, or Five Gem Collections mailed for $1. Illus'n and directions for culture printed on each pkt.

We are extensive growers of the BEST FLOWER SEEDS and this Special Offer is made to induce all lovers of beautiful flowers to give our seeds a thorough trial. Order Now! and if you have not yet received it, write also for

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1890

A handsome book of 128 pages, with hundreds of illustrations and beautiful colored plates painted from nature. It tells about the BEST SEEDS, Bulbs, Plants, &c., including Rare NOVELTIES that cannot be obtained elsewhere. Entirely free from sensational and exaggerated descriptions, it is a trustworthy Guide, of great value to every one who cultivates a garden in town or country.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO.
—Seedsmen— PHILADELPHIA, PA.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

ROSES
Minnesota Grown.

The HARDIEST and MOST PROLIFIC BLOOMERS IN THE WORLD.
We offer two grand collections of everblooming roses of late introduction, embracing six distinct sorts in each collection of the finest varieties and colors, at $1 for the entire collection of six, or $1.75 for the two collections of twelve distinct sorts. These roses will commence to bloom immediately after planting and continue the entire season. Before offering these collections, with the certainty and recommendation we do, they were thoroughly tested, and our patrons can rely on getting something extraordinary.

WONDERFUL NOVELTIES IN FLOWER SEEDS

The famous Eckford Sweet Pea, Pansies, Verbenas, Asters, Phloxes, Poppies, Petunias, etc.

CHEAP COLLECTIONS OF PLANTS FOR VASES AND WINDOW BOXES.

Vegetable seeds, fresh and pure, unsurpassed. Finely illustrated catalogue of plants and seeds containing over 500 illustrations; the most complete published, giving a full and complete description of everything for the garden, lawn and field. Mailed free to any address.
L. L. MAY & CO., Seedsmen and Florists, St. Paul, Minn.

THE MANETTIA VINE is the most magnificent flowering vine in cultivation, either for the house or garden, for it is loaded with bloom every day in the year. In the house it can be trained all around a window, and will be a solid wreath of bloom both summer and winter. In the garden, its charming beauty surpasses everything. Flowers, intense scarlet, tipped with yellow, the most brilliant and striking combination, and borne by the thousand. Each flower keeping perfect over a month before fading. It is of the easiest culture, and sure to thrive for any one with ordinary care. It can be trained on a trellis, strings, or used for drooping from hanging baskets; in any way a perfect mass of the most lovely flowers and foliage from the root to the tips of the branches. Plants continue in bloom most profusely for many years, and its great beauty and novelty attract every eye. We never saw a more beautiful or satisfactory plant. PRICE of strong plants ALREADY BUDDED AND BLOOMING, by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good order, 40c each, two for 60c, four for $1, twelve for $2. To every order we will add another elegant novelty free.

SEEDS, BULBS, PLANTS, Extra Choice, by Mail Postpaid.

12 Extra choice mixed Gladiolus, flowering bulbs	25c
6 New Double Pearl Tuberoses, " "	25c
5 Rare Chrysanthemums, named	50c
Our "Introduction Collection," 25 flowering bulbs, and 10 packets choice seed for only	50c
5 Grand Lilies, including Auratum	50c
5 " Cacti, different sorts named	50c
Or will mail all for $2.00, Manettia, Gladiolus, Tuberoses Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Cacti, Int. Col., and will add gratis the wonderful Weather Plant.

OUR CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare Fruits is the most magnificent ever issued. 116 pages profusely illustrated, and four large colored plates and colored covers. We offer the finest novelties in Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits, notably; our great Japanese Wineberry, Jewel Dahlia, Mary Washington Rose, Fruit Tomatoes, Cycas, Hardy Orange, Tree Currant, Rosebud Poppies, etc. Also the greatest collection of flowering Shrubs and rare Cacti. It is elegant and expensive Catalogue will be sent for only TEN CENTS, which is only a part of its cost to us, or if you order anything here offered and ask for a Catalogue it will be sent FREE. Write at once, as this offer may not appear again. Address JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, Queens Co., N. Y

We claim to be one of the largest growers and importers of Flower Seeds in America. In order to introduce them as widely as possible we make this UNPRECEDENTED OFFER. For 25c. in postage stamps or money we will send by mail one pkt. each of the following Valuable Seeds: New Diamond Aster, very handsome colors; Mixed Balsams, immense size, double as a rose; Calliopsis, Golden Wave, new, very showy; New Hybrid Gaillardria, unrivaled for beauty; Phlox drumundii Grandiflora Splendens, 15 distinct shades; GIANT SHOW PANSIES, immense size, rich and velvety; New Mammoth Verbena, 12 choice colors; New Giant Zinnia, largest in the world; 10 Seeds of ANNUAL NUTMEG PLANT, great value, never before offered; Amaranthus Gibbosus, highly ornamental; one Beautiful Everlasting Flower, 11 full-size pkts., with directions for culture, for 25c., 5 Collections, $1.00. Catalogue with each order. SAMUEL WILSON, Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa.

SEEDS Plants, Roses, Shrubs, Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Crape Vines, Small Fruits etc.
EVERYTHING IN THE NURSERY LINE.
RAREST NEW. CHOICEST OLD.
Send ten cents for our illustrated catalogue of about 150 pages, containing a certificate good for ten cents in seeds, etc, Or send for our 32 page abridged catalogue and price-list free.
36 years. 24 greenhouses. 700 acres.
THE STORRS & HARRISON CO., Painesville, Ohio.

FREE
Prettiest BOOK ever Printed.
SEEDS ONE cent a PACKET, and upwards according to rarity, scarcity, or cost. Cheapest of any by oz. & lb. 1000 000 extras. Catalogue free. R. H. Shumway Rockford Ill.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable; celebrated for Purity and Strong Germinating Qualities. Only 2 and 3c per large package, and novelty extras with all orders. Mammoth Seed Farms! One Acre of Solid Glass! Write for my Beautiful Illustrated Catalogue. Free.
H. W. BUCKBEE,
Rockford Seed Farm, ROCKFORD, Ill.

SEEDS 6 pkts of my choicest Flower Seeds, 10c. Beautiful catalogue free.
F. B. MILLS, Thorn Hill, N. Y.

MAILED FREE A Catalogue of the Choicest mailing size TREES, FLOWERING SHRUBS, GRAPE VINES and Small Fruits.
The WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

ASTHMA CURED. FREE
A trial package by mail to sufferers. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

WIVES Should know how child bearing can be effected without PAIN or DANGER and cure their ills. Send for sealed information. A wonderful discovery.
DR. J. H. DYE, Buffalo, N. Y.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c

To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 50c., 8 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St, N. Y. City

BABY CARRRIAGES Direct from Factory, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Express charges prepaid to any place within 300 miles of Chicago. $3 to $8 saved on each carriage or you need not pay for them. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue. Thousands of carriages shipped yearly to families direct. The largest factory and finest goods in the world. SENT C. O. D. G. L. Spencer

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Publisher's Notes.

W. C. T. U. Order Book.

We have this admirable help now ready, and will fill orders for it promptly. It reads as follows:

..... 189
....., Treasurer.
Pay to ..... $....
..... Dollars.
....., President.
....., Rec. Sec.
Woman's Christian Temp. Union of——

Each order has a stub which is to be filled out in duplicate, and there will thus be a complete record of each draft upon the treasury of your local union. The books are so inexpensive that each union can well afford to use them in making all payments of bills. The form is one that has been given us by Mrs. Buell, the corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U., hence its correctness may be relied on. Price, each 25 cents.

At the Telephone.

The March number of the Sunday-School Crusader is well worth your reading a notice about. Indeed, we don't see why it would not be well worth your while to take more interest in the attempt to get wholesome temperance reading into the Sunday-schools of the land. See, now! Three years ago the National W. C. T. U. Convention was held in Nashville, Tenn. Our printing was done—and well done—by the Cumberland Presbyterian Publishing House. As a result of this acquaintance they commenced ordering the Sunday-school number of The Young Crusader, 1,000 copies per month, we believe; now they order 6,000 copies—one-third of all the issue! Ought not to tell such things out of the home circle? Well, how would you know anything about it if we didn't tell it here? What can you do to better such a state of affairs?

Much—Much—Much.

See three folks, viz.:
Your Pastor,
Your Sunday-school Superintendent.
Your fellow Sunday-school teachers.

Tell them about the paper; urge its monthly visits; insist that gospel temperance should have a hearing in your church; assure them all that the little paper is strictly non-partisan; plead for it; tell them how each quarter it has a most admirable and carefully prepared Sunday-school lesson on temperance as a supplement, and this without extra charge.

Will You Do It?

And so change the report given above till the W. C. T. U. is known as the organization that believes in its own publications and pushes them to the front in an aggressive way? Maybe you think we are a good ways off from that telephone? No, here it is. In the March Sunday School Crusader, now ready, there is the supplement above referred to, and there is also a temperance concert exercise with the above title. Queer one, is'nt it? But it is an exercise that is right up to the times and should be given in every Sunday-school Saloons, tobacco sellers, city police stations, and a Christian home are called up one after another and made to bring out the truths that make or ruin in these days of our Lord. The exercise closes with an extract from that splendid speech of John Woolley's, "Not With my Bottle," and some ringing "Marching Orders" from the Book of books. We offer to send you twenty-five copies or over at the rate of one cent per copy. Is there anything to prevent your getting up sufficient enthusiasm for this paper to put one copy in the hands of each scholar in your own school for this one time, to see how it will be liked? And if you attend to this at once and have the exercise named prepared and given with a snap and vim, wouldn't the work be more than half done? S-u-r e-l-y! See how influences widen out. Say you are one of two hundred ordering an average of one hundred papers each. That would mean 20,000 papers, wouldn't it? Suppose out of the 20,000 papers thus distributed, one hundred should "hit home," and cause that many young men or boys to see the evils of drink and to resolve they would never touch it, wouldn't that of itself be "worth while?" Then, what is to prevent y-o-u-r being one of the two hundred?

Halloa, there, W. T. P. A.!

Well?

Send us a package of Young Crusaders, the Sunday School number for March,—say 100 copies. Send at once.

All right, we will.

Good-bye.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, CATARRH, ALL PAIN AND ALL INFLAMMATIONS.
POND'S EXTRACT
IS THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE CHEST, AND THE COMFORT OF MOTHERS. BE SURE TO GET THE GENUINE.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of immitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

INFANTS' And children's wardrobes made to order. Imported Madras dresses a specialty. Send 2c. stamp for samples and prices. H. J. SPRAGUE & CO., 43 and 45 Franklin St., Chicago.

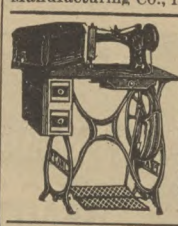
DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

THE "FREEMAN"
SELF-WRINGING MOP!

"It leads all others" is the verdict of all who see it. A ratchet on this mop helps the hand by retaining the cloth at any stage of the work. Don't touch the water with your hands. Boiling water can be used, also potash, lye etc. if desired. If you desire to wash windows, corners up high, in fact anywhere, the mop by the means of the ratchet, can be held without the aid of the hand, thus removing the strain. Write for circulars. Sold exclusively through agents throughout the United States. Agents wanted. Write at once for territory—The Racine Malleable & Wrought Iron Co., Racine Wis.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O



THE "PEARL"
A marvel of beauty & usefulness. FULLY WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS. Plush-lined case of Attachments free. Buy direct and save $20 to $50 Agents' commissions.
Send for Circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., CHICAGO, ILL.

GRIND YOUR OWN Bone, Meal, Oyster Shells, Graham Flour & Corn in the $5 HAND MILL (F. Wilson's Patent.) 100 per cent. more made in keeping Poultry. Also POWER MILLS and FARM FEED MILLS. Circulars and testimonials sent on appl'c't'n. WILSON BROS. Easton. Pa.

HOLMAN'S PADS.
Holman's Liver Pads cure Malaria,
Holman's Liver Pads cure Biliousness,
Holman's Liver Pads cure La Grippe.
All druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of $2.00.
HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.,
81 John St., N. Y

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY DELAVAU'S

Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER!
Cures Whooping Cough.
"My son had an attack of Whooping Cough, and was cured by using three bottles of Dr. Seth Arnold's Cough Killer."—DR. EDWARD C. HUGHES, Rockford, Ill.
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Silk Satin & Plush Remnants for Crazy Patch a large pkg. pretty pieces, assorted col. & our ill. story paper 3 mos. 10c. The Little Giant, St. Louis

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2 15 'FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

FREE Prospectus and Sample Perforated Stamping Pattern. Mention this paper. M. J. CUNNING & CO. Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y

8TH WONDER and other new positively fastest sellers on earth. Sold only by EMPIRE MFG. CO., 62 Varick Street, N. Y. Agents, either sex, write at once for outfit.

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. SEWING MACHINE OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

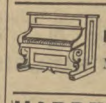
Stanley's Own Story.
5000 Agents Wanted. New Book. Only authorized volume. Fully illustrated. Over 800 large pages. Complete canvassing outfit and book mailed for only 50 cts. Be quick. National Pub. Co., Chicago

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.



WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
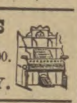
Marshal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.



HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873, 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO. Piqua, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S "CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

CURLING IRON mailed for 10cts. To make new customers. Wood handle; non-conducting thumb spring; polished steel. Worth 50c. Big catalogue free. A. T. Evans & Co., Chicago.

MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

DEAFNESS CURED by Peck's Pat. INVISIBLE TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable. Successful where all Remedies FAIL. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHALS UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made. Circulars and prices on application to mf'rg's.
A. M. HOWES & CO., 65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND.
Something new for comfort; suspends from the sides; adjustable strap; only one fastening. Highly indorsed. Agents wanted. Price 75 cents single one. Sent on receipt of price, postage prepaid. Circulars sent free. Waist measure, sizes 22 to 30. BLISS MFG. CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn.

BUYERS SHOULD HAVE OUR 486 PAGE CATALOGUE All kinds of Merchandise at WHOLESALE PRICES Write for Particulars.
The Cash Buyers' Mercantile Union, 162 LA SALLE ST. Chicago, Ill.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

LADIES' LOOK!—A Novelty Rug Machine sent by mail for $1. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Wholesale price reduced to Agents. New Price List of machines, yarn, patterns, etc., and a book of beautiful colored pattern designs, sent free. Agents wanted.
E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

1 THE NEW 8 YEAR! 9 NEW YEAR!

NEW AND TRUE MUSIC BOOKS.

Choice Sacred Solos, 34 fine songs	$
Choice Sacred Solos, for low voice, 40 songs	$
Song Classics, soprano and tenor, 50 songs	$
Song Classics, low voice, 47 songs	$
Classic Baritone and Bass Songs	$
Classic Tenor Songs, 36 songs	$
Classic Vocal Duets, the very best	$
Everest's Album of Songs, good selections	$
Maud V. White's Album, tasteful songs	$
Sullivan's Vocal Album, a master's work	$
Popular Song Collection, 37 good songs	$
Good Old Songs we used to sing, 115 songs	$
College Songs; 150,000 sold	$
College Songs for Banjo; for Guitar; each	$
Rhymes and Tunes; Osgood. Sweet home music.	$

INSTRUMENTAL.

Piano Classics, Vol. 1, 44 pieces	$
Piano Classics, Vol. 2, 31 pieces	$
Classical Pianist, 42 pieces	$
Popular Piano Collections, 27 pieces	$
Popular Dance Music Collection	$
Young People's Classics, 52 easy pieces	$

The above are all superior books.

Any book mailed for retail price.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

C. H. DITSON & CO.,
867 Broadway, New York.

CHOIR MUSIC.

Practical Anthems. A collection of original and selected anthems by the best writers. Every composition in this book was tested by practical choir use before being incorporated in the work. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

The Musical Visitor. A Monthly Magazine containing each month new Anthems for the Choir, Organ Voluntaries, and articles treating of the leading musical topics of the day. Price, $1.50 per year; 15cts. a single copy. Special terms to clubs of five or more.

Modern Anthems. By W. F. SUDDS. A splendid collection of original and arranged anthems by this popular and well-known composer. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

Ideal Anthems. By H. P. DANKS. A collection of anthems adapted to the wants of all denominations as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs. The Organ part is printed on a separate staff. Price, 35 cents by mail, postpaid.

PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, AND 19 EAST 16TH ST., NEW YORK.

READ "THE LAMARKS
OR, MARRIAGEBLE WOMEN!" It is pure, fresh, and grows in interest to a beautiful finale. Mrs. Geo. W. Houk, Dayton, Ohio.

CRAFTS' "CIVIL SABBATH." Addresses on "Sunday Saloon," "Liberty," "Sunday Rest Law," "Amusements," Replies to Adventists, Present Sunday Laws of all States, etc. 128 pp. quarto 35 cts. Authors' Publishing Co., 150 Nassau St. N.Y

KISS ME MAMMA I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

THE PATHFINDER PHYSIOLOGY.
ENDORSED BY W. C. T. U.
A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

400 10 cts PROHIBITION Stickers 1200 25 cts
Sharp, Pointed, Prohibition Mottoes, printed on colored gummed paper. 12 kinds, 5 sizes. For sticking on your envelopes, letter heads, show windows, doors, gates, posts, boxes, church pews—anywhere. 400 for 10 cts, 1200, 25 cts. (Silver or Post-note), by mail. J. H. Padgett, Pub., Ennis, Texas.

C. W. Jones, late Supt. W. U. Tel. Co., says: "A membership in The Economy Club is the best investment any one can make." Prof. J. B. Farnsworth of this city says: "It pays me." Family Gazette one year with E. C. membership, only $1.00
1 set Wm. Rogers Triple-plated knives and forks 3.25
1 dozen Wm. Rogers Triple-plated tea spoons figured 3.25
5lb p'k'g of 60c. to 70c. Tea (name kind wanted) 2.60
Clothing, Watches, Books, strictly at wholesale prices.
Economy Club, 171 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HONEST sample Watch $4.50 net (no disc't) Good profits to agents. Send 6c postage for Illustrated Catalogue, full particulars. It will keep its color and wear a life-time.

An American Watch Gents' ¾ plate, stem wind and set, with improved back ratchet, quick train (18,000 beats per hour), straight line lever escapement, jeweled balance holes and end stones, iridium pallet stones, carefully regulated; in a Dueber silverine case, not silver, but stronger; good timer & warranted! Send 50c for expr's charges and it will be sent for examination, C.O.D. If as represented you can pay for it, otherwise return it.

When you send 6th order I will send One Watch Free
W. G. Morris,
Wholesale, 90 5th Ave., CHICAGO.
References: Any bank, commercial agency or this paper.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Publisher's Dep't.

Rightly Named!

I received some time ago a small book called "The Handy Mannal," and see by a leaf on the inside of the book that agent are wanted in every town. I thought I would try and sell a few, and I find that I can sell about a dozen in our little town, and I think I could sell some in the adjoining towns. If you see fit to give me the agency, please send me terms at once, and at least a dozen books, as soon as possible, and I will send the pay for them as soon as I find out the price. It is rightly named, and so does every one that has seen it. MISS E. L. C.

We will give agents for "The Handy Manual" extra good terms. Many cannot, or do not care to sell an expensive book. This little volume, packed full of useful information, is sold at twenty-five cents. Not a farmer, store-keeper, or professional man but would be glad to have a copy at that price. You can easily earn fifty cents an hour selling them, if you want to. Write for special terms.

A State President.

Mrs. Woodward, of Nebraska, writes: "Urge more than ever, faithful use of Monthly Readings by our unions. It will contribute to efficiency in department work, the lack of which more than any other one cause, greatly limits the usefulness of our women. They are especially valuable to new unions. I hope none of those issued last year will be thrown out as 'waste' paper. Let the women order them for general distribution, especially the one prepared by Miss Willard with reference to our political position."

We wish we could succeed better in getting unions to subscribe for the Readings. As a source of W. C. T. U. power and strength they are second only to THE UNION SIGNAL. We are constantly republishing back numbers—none ever "go to waste." We particularly desire to be kept informed of the formation of new unions—the name of corresponding secretary and president. We send a package of free literature and samples together with circulars, suggestions, as to work, etc. We especially urge a subscription for the Monthly Responsive Readings; $1 pays for thirteen copies twelve times a year! A five cent collection would easily meet that expense. We expect in March to send out a sample number as a supplement to THE UNION SIGNAL. When it comes kindly give it your thought—then a trial, then you will be ready to agree with all Mrs. Woodward says, and our words added.

Nebraska Friends, Please Note?

Mrs. L. F. Bailey gave her first lecture in this county (Gage) December 12, at Beatrice, at our county convention. She captivated her hearers, and from that day to the close of the month she spoke continuously in our county, giving eighteen public addresses, besides afternoon talks to the ladies and the Y's. She formed four new unions, and added seventy-eight members to the W. C. T. U. in this county. She spoke at Prairie Chapel, where there is a temperance organization of men and women which has been in existence six years, and numbers 269 members. The result of her lecture was the addition of six members to this organization. She has also added to the membership of the Loyal Temperance Legion, and the Y's. Mrs. Bailey will please, and be very helpful, to any union. Be sure to have her some time during the year, sisters of Nebraska. She works for expenses and collections. Make her meetings a success as to numbers, and she will do your union good, and make votes for the amendment.

DORA V. WHEELOCK,
Pres. Gage Co.

The "Y" Song Book.

A friend writes from South Carolina: "Many thanks for the book, 'The Y Songs.' I do not know when I have seen a collection so well adapted to its purpose; bright, joyous and breezy, as young people like to have things. We are putting some to use at once for our next monthly meeting, and very inspiriting we find them."

By the-way, who does know of a better collection of songs for temperance purposes in general?

Do you—or you—or you?

No? Unanimous verdict; all ignorant of the merits of this question are requested to send twenty-five cents for the "Y Song Book," and next time you will vote exactly the same way!

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure bilious and nervous ills.

S. W. STRAUB. Dear Friend:—I liked your song, "Your Homes and Country Save," as you gave it to us at Battery D, and hope it may be heard reverberating through the hearts of our people, which I deem it abundantly worthy to do. I do not know what more can be said in favor of this or any other song. I am glad Maria Straub wrote the words, and if I had my way, the New Marseillaise, as I think you should call it, would sing itself around the world. With great regard, ever sincerely your friend Frances E. Willard. The price is only 30c. See large advertisement of S. W. Straub & Co., Publishers, 243 State St., Chicago, Ill., in another column.

A Visit to Washington.

So much has been said of Washington organs, that this paper has sent one of its representatives to visit the world-renowned Organ factory of Cornish & Co., and to examine in person the splendid $50 organ which they offer in a large advertisement in our paper this week.

Our representative found the organ to be precisely as represented in their advertisement; strictly first-class in every particular, and the guarantee which Messrs. Cornish & Co. give for ten years is as good as gold; because they are an entirely responsible firm, and do precisely as they agree to do. Messrs. Cornish & Co., Washington, N.J.—[Editorial from THE CHRISTIAN AT WORK.]

Stop that
CHRONIC COUGH NOW!
For if you do not it may become consumptive. For Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility and Wasting Diseases, there is nothing like
SCOTT'S EMULSION
Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES
Of Lime and Soda.
It is almost as palatable as milk. Far better than other so-called Emulsions. A wonderful flesh producer.
Scott's Emulsion
There are poor imitations. Get the genuine.

Unity. A weekly journal of reverent free thought, yearly $1; sample 2 cents. Chicago.

THE FAMOUS
RELIANCE CORSET WAIST,
One of the finest garments given to the American public. A health reform garment. Highly recommended by physicians. Will sell at sight. Made in Sateen, Jean, Flannel and Lace. Button and steel front. Send $1.25 for sample and price-list. Canvassers wanted in every town and city. RELIANCE CORSET CO., Jackson, Michigan.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs, Sent by express

A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale.... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

CHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL
FOR
KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,
Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy,
2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL
N. Y. Turkish
New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

FREE EDUCATIONS FOR GIRLS
A Special Offer to the Young Women of America to secure a
FREE COLLEGE EDUCATION
A COMPLETE EDUCATION AT VASSAR COLLEGE, Without Price
To any young girl of 16 years or over, who will—from this date until January 1st, 1891—send us the largest number of yearly subscribers to
THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL
Our First Offer. at $1.00 per year, we will give as a reward a complete education at Vassar College, including all expenses of tuition, board, &c., for an entire course; or if she prefers, she may choose Wellesley, Smith, or any other American College. This offer means a complete education in every branch of study, THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL paying all expenses.
A CHANCE FOR AN EDUCATION FOR ALL GIRLS.
Our Second Offer. We will also, as a second offer, give to any girl of 16 years or over, who will—between now and Jan. 1st, 1891, send us 1,000 subscribers to THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, at $1.00 per year, a full single term of one year at Vassar College, or any other American College she may select. A term means a full year's study, we guaranteeing to meet the entire expenses thereof during the year.
Send at once for circular of information, Sample copies, &c.
FEBRUARY number NOW READY. On the news stands—10 cents a copy.
We offer THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL from now to July 1st, on trial for Only 25 Cts. as an experiment, and to introduce into thousands of families not already familiar with the handsomest illustrated periodical in the world for Ladies and the family.
CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

GREAT OFFER!

PIANOS! ⊹ $35. ⊹ ORGANS!
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.
From Rv.e Jas. H. Potts, D.D., editor of Michigan "Christian Advocate," Detroit, Mich: "To say that we are delighted with the Piano does not express the fact. We are jubilant. If all your instruments are as fine in appearance and as pleasing in tone as this one, your patrons will rise by the hundred."

OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!
GOLDEN ROD —IN— COLORS!
WE will send you this BEAUTIFUL STUDY (Our National Flower) GOLDEN ROD in COLORS! and a list of LIDA CLARKSON'S COLORED STUDIES, also our 1890 PREMIUM LIST, and a three months' trial subscription to Ingalls' Home Magazine, (a finely-illustrated 64-page $1 Monthly Magazine, devoted to FANCY WORK, ART PAINTING, etc., etc.) all for ten 2c. stamps (20 cents). We make this liberal offer to introduce the Magazine into new homes.
Address J. F. INGALLS, Publisher, Lynn, Mass.
OUR NATIONAL FLOWER!

"Aches and Pains I'll fear no More!"
is what a lady said after using an
EMPIRE WRINGER!
"It works so easy I do my work in half the time it took with my old wringer, SAVES MY CLOTHES, and doesn't tire me out." IT WRINGS DRYER, WEARS LONGER AND IS THE ONLY WRINGER WHICH DOES NOT HAVE THE CRANK ATTACHED TO EITHER ROLL. It is constructed in this way to save labor. It is warranted against defects, requires no oil and never rusts. Agents Wanted Everywhere.
EMPIRE WRINGER CO., Auburn, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED! —TO SELL OUR NEW IMPROVED— "TAILOR SYSTEM" OF DRESS CUTTING!
Something New, Never Anything Like It. Dress Cutting Reduced to a Science!
Can be learned in two hours' time. Perfect fit guaranteed—without change of seam. It makes you an expert at drafting ladies' and children's garments, in the latest and most artistic style. Change of fashion can never affect it.
$20 A DAY can be easily made. Many make more. Any one can make $100 A MONTH over and above expenses. The work is easy, instructive, fascinating, profitable, and adapted to young or old of either sex. We must have a worker in your town and are willing to SPEND $25.00 TO START YOU! and you can work all the time or part of the time. Employment at home; an opportunity to travel. No class of people in the world are making so much money, WITHOUT CAPITAL, as those at work for us. One person writes: "I was out 5 hours and cleared $28." If you will only write, we will lay all before you FREE! This is a ROYAL CHANCE, and is worth investigating. Write for special offer and confidential terms to agents. Address, RIAL BENJAMIN, Manager, LaFayette, Ind.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Signal Notes.

"We little dream of the conflict
Fought in each human soul;
And earth knows not her heroes
Upon God's honor roll."

A STATUE of Louisa M. Alcott is being made by Mr. French, the sculptor, to be placed in the museum of Fine Arts in New Orleans.

THE Transvaal Commission has issued a proclamation forbidding the sale of liquor to natives.

THE King's Daughters, of Atlanta, Ga., support a free hospital in that city.

IN one year the police of St. Petersburgh arrested forty-seven thousand persons for drunkenness, and one hundred died from inebriety.

THE United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution of London, has two divisions entirely separate, each meeting its own expenses and paying its own losses. One of these insures only total abstainers, while the other insures only moderate drinkers. No insurance company will insure habitual drunkards.

RAMABAI now has eighteen pupils, most of them Brahmans. She says: "People are much prejudiced against me, but I hope this prejudice will gradually die away."

THE new Government of Brazil has issued a decree proclaiming separation of church and state.

THE Rev. Newman Hall delivered an eloquent address on total abstinence to the students in Glasgow University, Scotland, on a recent Sunday.

MR. LEM. J. SMITH, who won the title of "Cyclone" Smith, while having charge of the McLean county prohibition tent, is now in Nebraska, working for the prohibitory amendment. Mr. Smith was formerly a student at the Wesleyan University, of Bloomington, Ill. He has studied the facts about prohibition and license, is a good speaker, and an honorary member of the W. C. T. U. He gathered enough official figures about the failure of high license while in Bloomington to make a convincing argument, aside from all others.

IN three days no less than fifteen hundred people were taken up for drunkenness, in the streets of Paris, of whom twelve hundred said they were simply following the treatment prescribed by the physicians in that city for influenza, viz., warm alcoholic drinks. The Lancet comments upon this as "a very questionable prescription," and urges instead that "the great point to observe, both for preventing the disease and passing through it favorably, are to live naturally, soberly and sensibly, to inhale fresh air, taking wholesome and simple food, and a sufficiency of sleep."

ON the bill-of-fare of Messrs. Smith Brothers, the popular restaurateurs of Poughkeepsie, New York, appear two very unusual announcements in such connection. On the title page is the following: "Personal service, waiters and cooks will be furnished for wedding spreads, dinners, suppers, collations, excursions, etc., except in cases where intoxicating liquors, punch, ale, beer, wine, cider, etc., are to be served. In that event, such service will not be furnished." On the inside of the bill of fare appears the following: "The use of intoxicating liquors—ale, beer, wine or cider—is prohibited in this house." It is needless to say that this firm commands the respect and success it so richly deserves.

THE report of the committee on temperance of the First Baptist Church, Topeka, Kansas, contained the following true and heroic utterance: "We believe that all reforms are direct from the Word of God. We believe in placing temperance on the calendar of Christian topics. As a denomination that believe in 'much water,' we are called upon to exercise Christian citizenship, as well as a social prayer-meeting conference, and join in efforts to exterminate the liquor traffic, pronounced to be the constant enemy of good morals, the resort of the most dangerous classes of society, the most menacing factor in politics, the prolific source of poverty and crime, and the unscrupulous enemy of the Christian Church. Such being the admitted fact, loyalty to Christ demands that we declare the church member who advocates having it licensed as unworthy of Christian confidence, and if he be a clergyman, declared disqualified for the Christian ministry. The silly pretence and pretext that license will aid the temperance cause, meets the stern protest of every lover of Him who declared, 'No drunkard can enter the kingdom of God'."

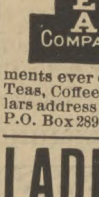
FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

SCHUMACHER'S
Rolled Avena and Parched Farinose
For Breakfast. Cook quickly Exquisite Flavor.
Rolled Wheat, Cracked Wheat,
Crushed Barley, Grains of Gold,
Whole Winter Wheat.
F. S. New Process and W. W. Graham Flour.
Insist upon getting original packages.
The F. SCHUMACHER Milling Co.
Pioneer Manuf. of Cereal Goods, Akron, O.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y

THE GLUTEN Entire Wheat Flour the best and most economical flour made, the only cure for Dyspepsia. Recommended by Physicians. Kenosha Mills Co., 135 Lake St. Chicago.



LADIES DO NOT OVERLOOK THIS.
Something needed in every home. The perfection Flour Bin and Sieve. Takes up but little room, made of tin, is ornamental and indispensable, does away with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops and sieves. A few turns of the handle, and you have enough for a baking. Satisfaction guaranteed, sent by express on receipt of wholesale price, holding 100 lbs. $3.25; 50 lbs, $2.50; 25 lbs, $2.00. Agents Wanted. Sherman, Tangenberg & Co., 160 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

LADIES! Use only Brown' French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

Every mother of young children should send to Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, for circulars of THE MOTHERS' PORTFOLIO a book for every mother.

New Hygienic Treatment. Hitherto there has been nothing like it. Strange that the discovery has not been made sooner. Send 2c. stamp for pamphlet. A. Miller, M. D., 172 Ashland Ave., Chicago.

BUY books direct from Publisher. Catalogue free. CHARLES H. KERR & CO., Chicago.

CATALOGUE FREE For Agents, Illustrating Useful Household articles & good selling Novelties. LAUBE COOKER CO., PARK RIDGE, ILL.

THIS IS WORTH $3.00
During the next 30 days to any reader of THE UNION SIGNAL who purchases The Universal Health outfit with book of instructions "How to get Well and Keep Well without Resorting to Drugs." Regular price of outfit $10.00. Price to anyone sending this clipping or mentioning that you saw this in the UNION SIGNAL $7.00. Call or address Universal Health Co., 167 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. The above includes a certificate of membership in School of Longevity, for one month.

REST!! RELIEF!! CURE!!
Asthma sufferers send ten cents, stamps or coin, for package "Eureka Asthma Remedy." Latest. Best. Kate Hillard, Box 115, Verndale, Minn

For a DISORDERED LIVER
Try BEECHAM'S PILLS.
25cts. a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH.
SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED.
NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Ask your dealer for FARGO'S $2.50 Ladies' Boot, and if he does not keep them, send to us for the style and size you want, and we will furnish them on receipt of price. Send for descriptive list of styles. A pocket mirror will be sent to each inquirer.
C. H. FARGO & CO., Chicago.

WHY
PAY RETAIL PRICES
WHEN YOU CAN
BUY AT WHOLESALE
WHATEVER YOU
EAT, WEAR OR USE.
WE HAVE NO AGENTS.
Write for full Catalogue Sent FREE.
H. R. EAGLE & CO.,
Farmers' Wholesale Supply House,
68 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
Hygienic Treatment is being used and indorsed by thousands of the leading physicians, lawyers, clergymen, and thinking people throughout the country.
It takes directly hold of the worst cases of constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaints, headaches, heart disease incipient consumption, diabetes, and Bright's disease of the kidneys, rheumatism, fevers, and inflammation of the lungs and of other internal organs, not by attacking these so-called diseases directly, but by radically neutralizing and removing their causes, thus allowing nature herself to do her work unimpeded.
For further information regarding this medicineless treatment call upon or send a 2-cent stamp to A. T. BATES, Room 46, 161 La Salle St. Chicago.

BEST NEW SINGING BOOKS for Sunday school, choir, day school, singing school, etc., are published by S. W. STRAUB & CO., 243 State St., Chicago. Send for specimen pages.

THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO. Sell Mantels & Tile Work. Call or send your address. Agents wanted. (Liberal commissions.) Room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago.

Candy Free 1 Box Candy, 100 colored pictures 1 pack NEW cards and agents' circulars, all for 6 cents by mail. Holley Card Co. Meriden, Con

STANLEY'S Send your own, and address of all book agents you know and we will send you a free copy of his RESCUE OF EMIN
J. S. ZEIGLER & CO., 115 Adams St., Chicago, Illinois. AGENTS WANTED.

FREE READING!
If you are undecided what papers to subscribe for send us your address, with 10 cents, silver, and we will forward your name to publishers who will send you magazines and papers of every description in abundance. It is the best investment you can make. It will yield BIG returns. Try it. Subscribe to no paper without our price.
HUB SUBSCRIPTION AGENCY,
[Mention Union Signal.] Boston, Mass.

TAR-OID
A new method of compounding Tar.
SURE CURE for PILES, SALT RHEUM and all Skin Diseases. Send 3 2c-stamps for Free Sample with Book. Sold by all Druggists and by TAR-OID CO., 78 Randolph St., Chicago. Price. 50c.

LADY AGENTS Wanted for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

"GOOD SENSE" CORDED CORSET WAISTS are sold at all Leading Retail Stores. Ask for them

WOMEN WHO LIKE TO DRESS
well, can do so with the expenditure of very little money, if they are willing to do a little pleasant work evenings. The money can be earned, or a silk dress will be given in exchange for work—if desired.
We offer special inducements to agents for some special work just now. An unusual opportunity to make money.
CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va

$1 MAY BE WORTH $50
To You if Rightly Invested!
$1 will absolutely save you a fit of sickness. You can't afford a fit of sickness. At the start sickness means nothing but weak vitality; you can get a little out of condition, and before you know it, you are sick. In nineteen cases out of twenty you entirely escape it if you try our Magnetic Shields.
Begin with our little Foot Batteries (insoles); they work wonders for you. Try one pair—only $1. In five minutes your feet and limbs will be warm. The current passes constantly through your body and in a week's time your whole system will be strengthened, those tired sick headaches will disappear, your aches and pains vanish, and you will bless the day you tried Magnetism. We are not asking you to buy our large Shields yet. Try just one pair of our Magnetic Insoles. That's all. Send size of shoe and $1 by mail; or 3 pair for $2. Our new book, "A PLAIN ROAD TO HEALTH," free.
CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago

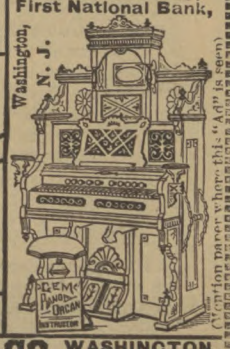
CORNISH ORGANS! PIANOS!
FREE on Test Trial anywhere. Any ORGAN or PIANO on your own TERMS.

No pay before you see and try
Send at once for our new 20 pp. Illust'd Catalogue FREE to any address.
CORNISH & CO. Drawer 2, WASHINGTON, New Jersey.

PIANOS $150 to $1500 UNIVERSITY ESTAB. 1859. INCOR. 1877

They Lead the World!
Sent for trial in your own home.
Guaranteed Six Years.
ABSOLUTELY PERFECT
DON'T BUY A POOR PIANO!
$35
Sold Direct to families. No Middlemen.
Cat. Free.
MARCHAL & SMITH PIANO CO. 235 E. 21st St., N.Y.
ORGANS $35 to $500

ORGANS BELOW COST!
WE REFER TO First National Bank, Washington, N. J.
AN ELEGANT GOLD WATCH AND Massive Gold Chain or their equivalent, $125.00, In GOLD COIN, will BE GIVEN the purchaser of the 1st, 40th, 80th, and every 40th organ who sends CASH WITH ORDER.
GOOD FOR NINETY DAYS ONLY.
THESE famous Gem Organs are BRAND NEW. We have 200 in stock. We make this SLASHING CUT in prices to clean them out and make room for our 1890 new styles.
$90.00 ORGANS REDUCED TO ONLY $32.00
CASH WITH ORDER, or $35 cash after Ten days trial, or $37.50 on Installments of $15 down, balance $5 per month.
LARGE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE FREE.
CONTAINS: 3 Sets Reeds, 2 Octave Couplers, 10 Stops, 5 Octaves.
MONEY REFUNDED and freight charges paid both ways if unsatisfactory AFTER FIVE YEARS' USE.



GEM ORGAN CO. WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.
(Mention paper where this 'Ad' is seen)

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 8.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February 20, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Rum Rule in Cities—The Grand Divisions 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, Kansas, by Mrs. McVean-Adams—Sarah Chandler, by T. D. Crothers, M. D.—Educational Qualification, by Susan S. Fessenden—Rum and Crime, by Hon. A. B. Richmond—Methods of Temperance Reform, by Rev. B. W. Williams 2, 3
CORRESPONDENCE: Poem, A Wise Collection Speech—Some Eminent Finnish and Russian Women—Life or Death?—Our Cause in Norway—A Sailor's New Year Reception—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, Little Bird Blue—How a Valentine Came Through Two Knot-Holes 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning February 23, 1890 ..... 6, 7
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, Robert and Elizabeth Browning—The Head of the Croaker Family—The Fulfillment of Prophecy—"Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver" 7
DIRECTORY 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: South Dakota Colorado, New Hampshire, Washington, District of Columbia, Virginia, New Jersey, New York, Tennessee, Minnesota, Montana, Michigan, Missouri—News in a Nutshell 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Woman's Lecture Bureau—Receipts for Temperance Temple 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The Legislature of Mississippi has changed the name of Bolivar county to Jeff Davis county.

Secretary Blaine resumed his official duties at the State Department this week for the first time since the death of his son and daughter.

The sentence of the Duc d' Orleans is two years' imprisonment and the cost of the trial. There is much popular sympathy in Paris for the young prince.

The Senate last week confirmed the nomination of Gen. T. J. Morgan as Indian Commissioner. Dr. Dorchester receives the appointment as superintendent of Indian schools.

The opening of the Sioux Reservation, unlike that of Oklahoma, was not under prohibition. Liquors were abundant. Drunkenness, rioting, and bloodshed were correspondingly abundant.

The University of Toronto was destroyed by fire originating from the fall of a lighted lamp on the night of February 14. These buildings were the finest in Canada, and the library was the pride of the University.

Mrs. Chas. Haines has been elected president of the Medina Valley Railway Company. The road is a branch of the Southern Pacific in Texas. Her money pays largely for its construction, and her husband is the contractor. Mrs. Haines is the first woman to hold the office of "railroad president."

The students of the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., upon hearing the appeal from Agent Cramsir, Devil's Lake Agency, N. D., asking relief for his starving Indians, voted unanimously to send him $550 from their savings bank, and Captain Pratt telegraphed that amount to Agent Cramsir. The money was earned by them during their summer vacation. Congress has voted $25,000 to the same agency.

On the night of February 13, a Methodist mass meeting was held in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, celebrating jointly the centennial of the Methodist Book Concern, the seventieth anniversary of the Missionary Society, and the completion of the new publishing and mission house at Fifth Avenue and Twentieth street, costing $2,000,000. Among the speakers were Gen. Clinton B. Fisk and Rev. A. B. Leonard.

THE reception given last week to the delegates of the International American Congress, by ex-Senator and Mrs. John B. Henderson, was one of the most notable social events of the season in Washington. The occasion was the first opening to the world of their princely home, just completed. "Boundary Castle," built in Normandy style, and furnished in Moorish, commands a fine view of the entire city. Here Senators, Judges of the Supreme Court, and members of the diplomatic corps, gathered to honor the Pan-American guests. The supper represented the caterer's most sumptuous art; coffee, bouillon, and lemonade flowed freely, but no wines nor liquors were offered. This and the reception at Mr. Studebaker's, foreshadow the social entertainments of the future, in the great free America that is to be, when the liquor traffic shall have gone the way of the slave traffic. Then the ban of outlawry will be upon the habit, and what after-dinner wit there will be, with no flavor or fever of intoxicants upon it!

A LEADING worker of Nebraska writes thus of the Prohibition Amendment campaign of that state: "No fairer field nor fiercer fight has, or ever will, in my opinion, offer itself to a philanthropic people. The war has already begun. Bacchus is now marshalling his forces for the fray to the tune of beer and boodle. The cowardly cry of the non-combatants for temporary temperance vs. permanent prohibition, is their siren song, but on these we must rely largely for recruits."

LINCOLN'S birthday is more generally celebrated every year, for no memory is so dear to American hearts as that of the great chief who carried this people, as a father carries his children, across the turbulent waters that divided the country during his administration. In remembering his gentleness, we may not forget his strength. Stephen A. Douglas, Jr., son of his old rival, was orator of the occasion at the Union League Club, Brooklyn. He said, "Although gentle of touch, Abraham Lincoln's hand was on the ship of state, and he was always master of the situation, controlling his cabinet officers in all questions of public policy." He knew no higher Court of Appeal than his own conscience—God in him declaring for the right and against the wrong. The North star of his political journey was, "Slavery is wrong per se."

HON. CARROLL D. WRIGHT, of the National Bureau of Labor, recently gave expression to the following Christian sentiment, which bears much encouragement in these days of ultra-socialism and infidelity. Mr. Wright says: "I believe that in the adoption of the philosophy of the religion of Jesus Christ as a practical creed for the conduct of business, lies the surest and speediest solution of those industrial difficulties which are exciting the minds of men to-day, and leading many to think that the crisis of government is at hand."

NORTH DAKOTA has again been on the scales and proved herself good weight. Incurring the expenses of statehood with empty treasury, and meager resources of revenue, it is not strange that for a little time she dallied with the lottery scheme. Farmers struggling with debt and anticipating increased taxes, reasoned, "This is something that doesn't make a man beat his wife and strangle his children. Fools will buy lottery tickets wherever its headquarters are located. We may as well collect taxes on it as anybody." The lobby had managed the intrigue with much secrecy, and an amount of corruption and bribery impossible as yet to estimate. The bill was railroaded through the Senate, and the vote announced to the horrified public was twenty-two to eight. Pulpit and press of the state, and throughout the country boomed with indignation. The leaders of the prohibition movement were not to be blinded by gamblers' chaff. In mass meetings everywhere the infamy was exposed. It was shown that in the state of Louisiana, the lottery company has been an incubus upon legislation and all the politics of the state has been tainted with its corruption. Eyes that have cast out the beam of liquor license are apt to see clearly all moral issues, and it did not require much argument to correct the views of the burdened farmers, to whom "honesty is the best policy" has become a living principle. A steady fire of protests poured into Bismarck from all parts of the state. Governor Miller's antagonism to the bill was well known, and when it came to reading in the House, its friends, seeing its fate, moved indefinite postponement, preferring that death to open defeat. A committee of three Republicans and two Democrats were immediately appointed to investigate the charges of bribery. The investigation is now in progress, and many sensational rumors are afloat, but no official report has yet been made.

VICTORIA'S speech, with which the British Parliament was opened last week, was a model of brevity, not exceeding five hundred words. Contrasted with our President's message, which rarely falls short of five thousand words, it would reverse all popular notions of the comparative verbosity of men and women, but for the general doubt about the authorship of the Queen's speech. The embroglio with Portugal is disposed of in a brief paragraph which, with grim humor, expresses gratification at the disposition manifested by the Portuguese government to resume friendly relations. It reminds us of the canary bird that tried to keep on the good side of the cat.

The International Anti-Slavery Conference in Brussels receives approval; the Samoan treaty and the extradition treaty with the United States are commended to the attention of Parliament. The Queen expresses lively interest in the federation of the Australian colonies, and favors bringing them into closer union. She recommends the extension to Ireland of the same principles of local self-government which have been adopted in Scotland and England. Attention is called to the bill for ascertaining the liabilities of employers for accidents to employés; to bills treating of public health; the improvement of tenement houses; of barracks, and of better provision for the distribution and health of the army. A bill is also submitted for securing savings banks. These measures are broad and philanthropic, yet one thing the Queen's charge to her law-makers lacks. She does not challenge their support of those moral measures which seek to deprive immorality of legal protection. Intemperance and prostitution are the deadliest enemies of her Majesty's troops. Parliament consents to their existence, protecting them by favorable legislation, and the voice from the throne makes no protest. Mr. Gladstone regrets the silence of the Queen upon several points, charity education being one, and gives warning that the Irish local government bill must be conceived in a liberal spirit.

THE scarlet figure of Mormonism has gone into political perdition, to remain forever, it is devoutly hoped. For the first time since its foundation, forty-three years ago, Salt Lake City is freed from Mormon rule. At the election last week the entire Gentile ticket prevailed. The civilized world has outgrown polygamy. God hasten the day when it shall have outgrown prostitution also! The result at the polls the other day could not have been achieved but for the aid of the sons of polygamous union. The Edmunds-Tucker test oath may have been the backbone of the movement, but these young men are the muscles holding it in position, and it depends upon them to maintain it. This reform within, answering to righteous law without, makes the situation very hopeful. Brigham Young was Mormonism. With his death the decay of the whole system set in. His nephew, John M. Young, is city marshal under the new administration. The prophet's greatness consisted in that impalpable magnetism which he possessed in sufficient measure to make his influence felt afar, and to draw about him a hierarchy of error. His elders preyed upon ignorant people in near and distant lands, carrying off their proselytes without interference; but latterly the way of the Mormon missionaries has waxed difficult. A few weeks ago, as two of them were preparing to leave Marion county, Alabama, with the converts made during a stay of six months, they were waited upon by a party of citizens who fitted them out with travelling suits of tar and dried leaves. The campaign just closed is one of the most interesting in the history of municipal contests, and the methods used are worthy of note. In the first place the line was drawn right upon the issue. All parties, nationalities and sects, divided there, without reference to their views of other issues. The preliminary work was begun last spring by a committee who employed fifteen young men to canvass the city for the ostensible purpose of getting out a city directory. The Mormons approved and assisted, never suspecting the real object of this house-to-house visiting until it was within a week of completion. In this way the leaders made themselves conversant with the situation. Mr. Powers, chairman of the Liberal Committee, declared that he could reach every voter in the city within six hours without using the newspapers. One out of every four voters became a worker. To inspire the class that are influenced by show, 2,750 men, under command of General Connor, were uniformed for street parade. This force was divided into regiments of two hundred, consisting each of four companies, which were again sub-divided into squads of ten, under charge of a corporal. The Mormon Church, that was still in charge of the county and city offices, had set them the example of organization and good discipline. The Utah Commission appointed by Congress had the naming of the registrars, who also constitute the returning board, so that this part of the election machinery was not in the hands of either party. The Mormon plea for fair play was made in a different tone from that which used to come from Brigham Young in making his favorite threat to "send the Gentiles 'cross lots if they stand in my way."

Contributed.

KANSAS.

BY MRS. MCVEAN-ADAMS.

A battle field, a holy land, a spot of hallowed ground—
Her sacred soil is written o'er with language eloquent.
Row after row of unknown graves—a hero 'neath each mound,
While here and there a marble sentry stands as monument.
Here Freedom's conflict first began, in this young state that gave
More soldiers than her voters, the sacred cause to save.

A free state, a clean state, a sober state she stands.
Upon her soil no human being could be bought and sold;
No licensed drunkard-maker, with white and idle hands,
Can buy the right to tempt her sons by paying ill-got gold.
She paves her streets, she builds her schools without the price of blood;
She takes no bribes for broken hearts and ruined womanhood.

And yet the wrecks are left her—the bent and dusky forms
(Scarred by the driver's lash) that stood, chained on the auction stone;
And broken homes and lonely hearts, that no fond memory warms,
Hearts that the liquor curse has robbed and pierced and left alone.
The grand state shields them tenderly among her golden sheaves;
For them her skies rain sunshine, for them her soft wind grieves.

The broad and bounteous prairies of this beloved state
Hide all the scars that man has made with fields of smiling grain.
And, like the land, her people—a people free and great—
Cover with wise and generous toil, the marks of old-time pain.
Where freedom's fight was fiercest, the richest harvests come,
And the men who crushed out Slavery will never bring back Rum.

SARAH CHANDLER.

BY T. D. CROTHERS, M. D.

In a police court in an Eastern city, I saw a thinly clad, haggard woman arraigned for intoxication and shouting in the street. The severity of the judge attracted my attention. He reprimanded this woman as if she was the most depraved and abandoned sinner, who could do different if she should choose to, and with threats sentenced her to twelve months in the workhouse. The woman appeared dazed and silent, and was rudely pushed one side by the officers.

A short time after, I saw her with other prisoners in an open wagon going to the workhouse, miles away, on a cold December day. A thin, red shawl was drawn around her head, and a look of agony and despair in her face interested me. I resolved to ascertain her history. With the aid of a physician I found the following facts, which, while they may not be unusual or strange to many persons, cast a dark shadow over our boasted humanity and methods of dealing with the drink maniacs.

This woman was Sarah Chandler. Her father was a popular sea captain of the famous packet ships of forty years ago. He was a wine drinker on shore, but temperate at sea. He died from accident on a voyage, leaving a consumptive wife, and this one child, Sarah. He left a small fortune, and Sarah was educated in the best schools of New England.

After the death of her mother she became a teacher from choice, and was finally made principal of a well known school. Later, she married a captain of an ocean steamer, a genial, warm-hearted man. He loved his wife very dearly, and at the end of every voyage or round trip would take her and go away on an excursion, drinking wine freely for a week or more.

Finally the captain died. Frequently Sarah suffered from great depression and craving for spirits, which was easily satisfied after a few drinks. She resumed her teaching, and some years later married a clergyman.

The craving for spirits had continued at intervals, and the effects were sought for to produce sleep. Periods of intense wakefulness could only be broken up by a few glasses of spirits at night, then a long interval of natural rest would follow. She never dreamed of anything more than the medicinal effect of liquor, and took it as the only means that would break up the painful insomnia.

Her first husband was a frank, lovable man; the second husband was just the opposite, one whose highest ideal of life was to mortify the flesh and keep down the sinful impulses. Soon he became a bitter persecutor of his wife, on the supposition that she could stop the use of spirits, but would not.

A long period of trouble ended in a divorce, and Sarah started out alone a victim of opium and alcohol. Her husband seemed to consider it a duty to destroy his wife's character in every way possible, and even the church to which she belonged shunned her as a most wicked woman. The only charge against her was intoxication and cruelty to her husband. From this, her history was a progressive march downward. At times she made great efforts to recover, with partial success, then came the shadow of the husband's slanders, and despair and relapse. The husband had become a college president, but he never lost an opportunity to revile his former wife.

Finally her brain gave way when under the influence of alcohol, and she became delirious. Then the police would arrest her, and a station-house scene and a sentence to jail would follow. She would come out, and make every effort to live by sewing or honorable work, but a few weeks later the same scene would be repeated. She would frequently beg to be shut up before the recurrence of these paroxysms, but would be laughed at for her appeals.

Finally came the scene I witnessed. A few weeks after I went to the workhouse to see her. She was dying from quick consumption, but in her face and conversation there were abundant traces of a woman of superior culture and natural ability. She was resigned to death, and exhibited a Christian faith that was unusually clear. She spoke of her past as a horrid nightmare that she could not understand, and when I told her I would write her history, she said, "Speak kindly of my former husband. He did not know me. He was mistaken. I forgive him."

Here was a woman of great natural ability and high culture, inheriting from her father a taste for wine, and a defective vigor of brain from a consumptive mother. Her first marriage with a most lovable man, whose use of wine at intervals developed and fixed the diseased impulse from which she was wrecked; her subsequent marriage and final divorce, and long period of desperate struggles and final failure—all this passed in review as I stood by the cot and its scanty clothing in the county workhouse. Some time later Sarah Chandler died, and a noble physician had her buried in his family lot. I wrote a note to her husband, the college president, asking that he erect a stone to the memory of this poor woman. His reply and reflections on her memory, and bitter refusal to do anything, sounded more like an insane man than a leader of humanity. I replied that he had murdered his wife, and in both this world and the next he would be accountable for it. His answer was the worst exhibition of the spirit of the dark ages I have ever read.

If Sarah Chandler had been recognized as sick and diseased, she could have been saved and would have done grand work in the world. It seems terrible to allow spirits to be sold everywhere, and men and women to drink it of their own free will. But how much more terrible it is to destroy these poor victims under the pretense of helping them. Public sentiment that assumes they can recover if forced by fear and suffering to it, and the machinery of the law to carry out this idea by placing the victim in the worst possible conditions to get well, is an evil that cries aloud to heaven for redress.

Sarah Chandler is only another name for poor women in every town who, driven on by heredity, starvation and neglect, become delirious from spirits and are arrested as vile felons and punished. Such women need our help and sympathy, and we punish them. They cry for bread and we give them stones. We persecute, we destroy them, and think we are doing our duty. This night of wrong will sooner or later be followed by a better day.

EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATION.

BY SUSAN S. FESSENDEN.

We hear much in these days of educational qualification for the proper use of the franchise. In Massachusetts we have an educational qualification, a limitation which I do not consider any credit to the intelligence of the state. If any limitation should exist, it ought to be a moral one. Honesty and purity are vastly more essential to good citizenship than property or education. If any of the citizens of a Republic are unable to read and write, it is the business of the government to see that they become able. If an individual possesses the elective franchise, it forms a strong incentive to the government of which he is a part, to attend to it that he is provided with the means of learning, and also to see to it that he avails himself of the means. Why was it so long before the intelligent people of the Athens of America, the very center of learning in this new country, could be persuaded to provide schools for girls supported at public expense? Simply because these unfortunate girls lacked the chief requisite of citizenship. It was not apparent that the government was responsible for the education of any but citizens.

The influence of such a restriction upon the vote of the colored people in the South was well presented in Mrs. Gougar's article. The greater part of illiterate voters at the North are of foreign birth. Let our emigration laws take care of this dangerous class of citizens. There are several improvements which could be made in these that would diminish many of the dangers to which our country is now exposed. There are many virtuous, well-meaning citizens who, from lack of sufficiently early provision on the part of government for their education, are now, in adult years, unable to read and write. It would be a hardship, indeed, to cut such off from the prerogative of citizenship.

To be sure, it would seem a great risk to have persons exercising the right to vote, and expressing their desire on great public questions, who cannot read the learned dissertations in our daily press upon the fitness of certain candidates for office, and the results that will certainly attend the election of one or the defeat of the other candidate. In order, however, to dispense with this danger, an applicant for the ballot ought not only to be put to the test of his ability to read two lines of the Constitution (the farce to which he is subjected in Massachusetts,) but he should be examined, for instance, on the relative weight of the argument for free trade and protection so ably presented by the defenders of their respective theories, Gladstone and Blaine. Such applicant ought to be able to give reasonable grounds for holding certain views regarding the sugar trust. Certainly it is not sufficient guarantee for casting an intelligent vote that a man can read a few words, with perhaps no comprehension of their meaning. It would become a serious and debatable question how far this question of educational qualification on the part of the voter should be carried. We would be in some danger of being governed by an aristocracy of letters.

Neither education, property nor sex form the proper basis of citizenship. The only just and worthy safeguards necessary to the preservation and wholesome administration of our government are protection from the dangers probable from idiocy, lunacy, criminality and youth. Any further restriction upon legitimate citizens is an infringement upon the rights and privileges of the individual.

This need not embarrass the proper adjustment of all laws concerning foreigners. How long one shall reside in this country before he shall become a citizen; to what regulations he shall conform before he ceases to be a foreigner; what our naturalization laws shall require, will form matters for independent legislation.

Of the moral question involved in binding unnecessary burdens upon those already too much oppressed, it is unnecessary to speak. Presumably those who advocate educational qualifications do so in the supposed interest of a purer ballot. If this innovation tended toward so desirable an end, it would be worthy of serious consideration. The fact is, however, that the impurity of our ballot, and the dangers to our Republican institutions are due vastly more to immoral intelligence and organized impurity than to the uneducated ballot.

RUM AND CRIME.

BY HON. A. B. RICHMOND.

"From palace to prison! How short is the road
Through the fair, charmed valley of sin;
How easy the way to the door of the cell—
How hard to escape when once in.
Though many and bitter the fast-falling tears
That drop on the hard granite floor,
The wretch may well cry, Oh, ye tears!
Why did ye not melt me before?"

—Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

It was "sentence day" in court. His Honor had just heard and determined the last application for a license to sell liquor to the "traveling public," that was presented at the December sessions of 1889, held in and for the county of ———, Pa., when, shoving that record of sin—the license docket—aside, he opened its companion and relative ledger, the criminal docket, into which are posted the accounts that a Christian commonwealth keeps with its offending citizens.

Relative they are in the broadest acceptation of the term, for they are not only connected together by mutual and inseparable business transactions, but veritably are they related by the ties of blood and consanguinity. So many licenses to sell liquor entered on the pages of the one, inevitably means so many crimes posted on the pages of the other. So many hundred dollars passed to the credit of the commonwealth in the license docket, means so many hundred charged up against the county in the session's ledger, to pay the costs of the trial and punishment of criminals. The experienced lawyer can always estimate with certainty the probable amount of business that will be done in the criminal courts the ensuing year, by counting the number of liquor licenses granted. The mortuary tables of life insurance companies are not more accurate in determining the probable number of deaths per year of their beneficiaries, than are the license dockets of our courts in registering the probable number of crimes that will be committed within their jurisdiction. The laws of cause and effect in the physical and moral world, are never more certain in their demonstrations than when applied to the sale of licensed rum and the crimes committed through its influence.

Of course these records only show the problem from an arithmetical or commercial standpoint. "So many licenses sold and so much received therefor," is the entry in one docket—so many crimes committed and so much paid in the costs of the trial and punishment of the criminals in the other—the latter far exceeding in amount the former. This is the balance sheet presented by the auditors of the public accounts every year, and yet the infernal traffic goes on, a financial loss to the people, and a source of infinite shame, want and woe to the homes of the citizens.

"Sheriff, bring in the prisoners for sentence!" was the order of the judge, in a calm, judicial tone, as he handed the bundle of applications for license to the recording clerk. Then reaching for the criminal docket he opened it, and in a cool, perfunctory manner scanned its pages of recorded sin and crime. His Honor was evidently fatigued, and anxious to finish the business of the hour. The arduous duties he had just performed in determining the claims of over one hundred men of "good moral character," for license to engage in the law-favored business of making drunkards and promoting crime had wearied the judicial mind, and with a consciousness of a duty well done on his part, he somewhat impatiently waited for the curtain to drop on the last scene of the harlequinade entitled "justice" on our judicial "show bills," as it is performed by bench and bar in our courts of license and criminal jurisdiction.

The tramp of the prisoners is heard in the hall. The audience in the court-room await their coming with anxious expectancy. The door opens, and eleven convicts enter and are seated before the awful judge of the living, on whose decision depends their liberty for months or years to come, and on whose decision a few terms before were established the licensed centers of temptation whose influence made them what they are. On nearly every face are the marks of dissipation and rum, although somewhat obliterated by the pallor of the prison in which they had been confined while awaiting their trial.

My interest was centered more particularly in one of the unfortunates, a young man who had murdered his employer, and whom I had been engaged to prosecute by telegram, as related in my last article to THE UNION SIGNAL. As I looked upon his youthful form and features, I sincerely regretted the part my professional duty had compelled me to perform in procuring his conviction. On the very threshold of manhood he was a criminal, his hand stained with the blood of a friend and benefactor. Senselessly the demon that lurks in every cup of strong drink had aroused his passions, and prompted his debauched organism to commit a crime; and now the justice of the law that licensed his tempter demanded his punishment. A base-born statute legalized the primordial cause, yet the effect was a violation of the law, and its penal code demanded retribution. And let us not forget that this is a Christian country, a land whose citizens boast of its enlightenment, and who profess to be followers of the great Master who taught men to pray, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

The mother and aged grandmother of the prisoner were in the court-room when he was sentenced. His father had died from a disease contracted in the army during the war of the rebellion. He sacrificed his life to sustain the laws of the country, leaving his son as the only support of his wife and aged mother. His guiding parental hand was dust, the voice of his admonitions was silent in death, and his well-meaning but wayward boy was left in childhood to the influence of vile surroundings he could not control, and to the temptations established by laws enacted by a Christian legislature.

"William ———," said the Court in cold, authoritative tones, "stand up! You have been convicted of murder in the second degree; have you anything to say why the sentence of the law should not be pronounced upon you?"

With quivering lips, and a voice broken by sobs, the prisoner replied: "Nothing, your Honor, only that I was intoxicated when I committed the crime, and did not know what I was doing. I took two drinks with some friends in the saloon of ———, and I don't remember what happened after that. I never committed a crime before, and I hope your Honor will show me all the mercy you can."

As I heard these words of contrition and the piteous plea for judicial clemency, my thoughts went back to the far distant past. In imagination I saw the cross on Calvary, and heard the words uttered by the dying Saviour: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!"

The kind-hearted judge was very much affected by the pathetic plea of the prisoner for mercy, "But thus saith the law!" and its mandates must be obeyed. "William," said he, "you have been convicted of the awful crime of murder in the second degree. By your criminal act you sent a human soul into eternity without a moment for prayer or preparation. Your plea of intoxication can be of no avail. Drunkenness is no excuse for crime. The law must take its course as a warning to others, and you must suffer the full penalty it prescribes. The sentence of the court is that you, William ———, pay to the commonwealth a fine of $5,000, the costs of prosecution, and that you be imprisoned at hard labor in the Western penitentiary for the term of ten years to be computed from this date.

"And the court gives you this advice: that after your term of imprisonment—which will be considerably shortened by your good conduct while in prison—has expired; that you totally abstain from the use of intoxicating drink in the future, and avoid those places where it is sold. Try to redeem yourself before the world; when you are liberated you will be in the prime of life, and may become a good and useful citizen. Your crime and punishment are an awful warning to you and those like you, who drink until they become intoxicated, and then under the delirium of drunkenness commit crimes that deserve and require the severest penalty of the law, that society may be protected from such outrages. It has been truly said 'that the way of the transgressor is hard.' You will have abundant time for repentance and reformation before you regain your liberty, and it is to be hoped that you will profit by it. Sheriff, take the prisoner in charge."

As the sheriff placed the manacles on his wrists and led him from the court room, a cry of heart-rending agony from the audience told the old, old story of a mother's inconsolable grief, caused by the ruin of a wayward son through the influence of licensed rum. My reader, do you think that all the money ever paid into the treasury of a Christian commonwealth by the holders of an infamous franchise could compensate that poor mother for the awful agony of that one moment when she fully realized the shame and punishment of her only child? Could it compensate the widow and two little children of the murdered dead for the loss of a husband's companionship and a father's protecting care? Oh! shame, shame! on the Christian enlightenment of a country where such scenes are so frequently enacted, and on the sovereign people who could if they would vote the curse of licensed rum out of existence but will not do it.

Six of the remaining prisoners made the same useless plea to the court for clemency. They were drunk when they committed the crimes of which which they had been convicted, yet they sued for mercy in vain. Observe how stands the law.

Drunkenness is no excuse for crime, but it is many times an aggravation of the offense. The law licenses the bar-room and beer saloon where men are permitted to sell intoxicating liquors, and of course this gives other men the right to drink. The effect of rum is as certain in its results as any phenomena based upon the laws of our physical organism. The law knows this full well, for our judges are prolix in their advice to the criminals when sentenced. "That after their term of imprisonment has expired, in the future to abstain from use of intoxicating drink, and avoid those places where it is sold."

Why this advice? The courts sell good citizens the right to vend for profit a certain article, and then advises men not to purchase it, or even go where it is sold. If the sale of rum is right under a license, and the court sells these licenses, and then tries to injure the trade of those to whom they are sold, it is fraud on the rum-seller. It is to be hoped that this moral view of the question will attract the attention of our judges, and that they will act as honestly as the law and their official position will permit.

METHODS OF TEMPERANCE REFORM.

BY REV. B. W. WILLIAMS.

III. LOCAL OPTION.

I next consider the merits and demerits of "local option" as a remedy for intemperance. By this is meant local choice as to whether the sale of liquor shall be allowed in a particular community. It allows the people of the various localities to vote directly for or against the granting of license by the local authorities, within a given time. Many states have laws which, while authorizing saloon license, provide that towns, counties, or districts may, by a popular vote, refuse to allow the sale of liquor within their own limits. In case of an election under such laws, a majority vote against the saloon excludes it from the locality in question, for the time being; but this decision may be reversed by an adverse majority at a subsequent election; hence it affords no security for the permanent suppression of drunkenness.

It is sometimes said that the withholding of license under the local option feature of a license law is the same as prohibition, except that it is confined to a particular town or county, instead of applying to the whole state. Let us see. In the former case, the state legalizes the liquor traffic, and accepts a fee for saloon license; and then she tells the people of the various communities to protect themselves as best they can from its ravages. In the latter case, the state absolutely outlaws that iniquitous business, and thus performs her duty as the guardian of her citizens.

Local option is a mixture of good and evil, and sometimes it would seem doubtful as to which preponderates. Some conscientious friends of the temperance cause favor local option, while others refuse to accept it as a temperance measure. I will here endeavor to set forth its advantages and disadvantages, and then leave the reader to judge wherein safety appears.

It is often said that as a half loaf is better than none, so local option should be accepted by temperance people where absolute prohibition cannot be secured. Yes; but the half loaf given should be of the same quality as the one withheld; it should not delay or prevent our getting the whole loaf at last, and it should be in a case where the whole loaf is not indispensably necessary. This cannot be truly said of local option.

It is argued that a legislature will sometimes pass a local option act when it could not be induced to enact a prohibitory law. The reason for this is obvious. Local option implies no pronounced opinion of the legislators as to the rectitude or turpitude of the liquor traffic, and does not require them to assume the responsibilities of prohibition. It merely permits the people to express their verdict by a majority vote.

We are told that the exclusion of the saloon from a given locality can be better enforced by the local option plan than under a prohibitory law, since it is enacted by the demand of prevailing public sentiment. This, however, is very limited and fluctuating. Its decision is liable to be reversed at any subsequent election; hence it affords no security for permanent immunity from the rule of rum.

There are many objectionable features connected with local option, some of which I will here enumerate.

1. It is vitally related to license. It presupposes a license law, and is engrafted upon such a law as a compromise measure, and may be regarded as the last concession of the liquor interest.

2. It is too limited in its boundary. It is confined to its own immediate precinct, and cannot advance into the enemy's country and assist other struggling communities.

3. It involves a contradictory attitude toward evil. It pronounces the liquor traffic legally right in one county, and illegal and criminal in another, thus making crime a matter of localities and majorities.

4. It puts a question of moral right to the test of the ballot. No government on earth would allow its subjects in the various localities to decide by a popular vote whether they shall permit other crimes, such as theft, murder, seduction, etc., and why the crime of drunkard-making?

5. It disintegrates and divides the temperance army into little detachments, to separately fight their own battles, without help or encouragement from other localities; and this, too, in the face of consolidated and well disciplined foes. What general would thus attempt to repel a foreign invasion?

6. It acts as an opiate to the public conscience, proclaiming itself a finality, and tending to prevent further agitation in favor of prohibition. Its advocates strive only for mere local success, and lose interest in the great national contest against the rum power.

Let us strenuously oppose all license laws, even if they be sugar-coated with local option provisions. Where they do prevail, and elections are held under them, we should, of course, vote against license. Then, if successful, we should try to cut off the option feature of the local law, and secure it against the machinations of the liquor demagogues.

BISHOP F. D. HUNTINGTON describes fashionable society "as a something too formal for an institution, too irregular for an organization, too vital for a machine, too heartless for a fraternity, too lawless for a school, too decent for a masquerade, with too much lying for a bureau, and too many passions for a pageant. There are the competitions, matches, risks, calculations of a perilous game, the interchanges of an imponderable, immaterial commerce, musical voices from inharmonious breasts, spiteful courtesies, magnificent meannesses. There are songs of peace, flying arrows of malice and revenge, bonds and fragments of friendships, charming veils over hidden horrors, laughter rippling over dark depths of silent agony. One has only to reflect a moment how considerable a section of the lives of many men and more women these activities occupy, what capacities they include, what forces they engage, the interplay between life and life, the issues and destiny of character, the august responsibility, to comprehend that 'society,' even in this limited sense, is a study for the wisest minds."

Correspondence.

A WISE COLLECTION SPEECH.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.

DEAR EDITOR:—For our meeting last night under the auspices of the First Y. W. C. T. U. of Philadelphia, Miss Anna M. Green, president, wrote the following collection speech, which was effectively rendered by Miss Lillie Jones, first vice-president, and greatly appreciated by the audience. Please give it to our great constituency, for there are "shekels" in it. Ever yours,

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

The evening hours are fleeting fast,
As down the long church aisles there pass
Bright maidens with their ribbons white,
Who say, "Pray join us in our fight—
Oh, do be Y's."

"What makes us Y's?" you'd like to ask—
To tell you that will be no task:
If you this better part will choose,
To sign the pledge—and pay your dues,
You will be Y's.

What do we do? We work for right,
For "God and Home" we wage our fight.
Our unrelenting hate we'd prove
For wrongs that blight the land we love.
Will you be Y's?

Our young men also have their part,
In wisdom's ways they've made a start—
'Tis not the Y's way to be funny—
We'll just say what they ask is money;
Now do be wise.

King Solomon, in days of old,
A choice did make, we have been told,
'Twixt gold and wisdom, and his name
Is to us synonym of fame
For being wise.

His choice was good, we all confess,
For "wisdom's ways are pleasantness,"
But in the story we are told
That Solomon received much gold
Through his good choice.

That we are Y's there is no question,
To you, dear friends, we make suggestion:
We're not yet rich. Before you go
We hope your great good-will you'll show—
In our collection.

SOME EMINENT FINNISH AND RUSSIAN WOMEN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—About four o'clock on September 14, 1889, our beautiful steamer Uleborg landed us at Helsingfors, Finland, after two days' journey from Stockholm, during the last few hours of which we had snow, sleet and rain, and very rough weather. Although we passed thousands of islands, and witnessed most beautiful scenery, yet it was so cold and disagreeable that nearly every one was glad to repair to the cosy cabin, or to a comfortable state-room. However, when we landed at Helsingfors and I saw the bright and cheery face of Baroness Gripenburg, I soon forgot all the cold and storm of the sea voyage.

Those who met the Baroness in this country when she represented the Finnish women at the International Council of Women in Washington, will remember her as remarkable for intelligence, vivacity, and goodness of heart. While I learned to love and admire her during her brief visit in my home, I never justly appreciated her worth till I saw her in her own home and surrounded by her own people.

Baroness Gripenburg is not only a remarkable woman for Finland, but remarkable for any or all countries. In appearance she is quiet, self-poised, and unassuming, yet the work she accomplishes is simply wonderful. She is now president of the Finnish Women's Union, which numbers something over one hundred members in Helsingfors. She traveled during the fall months and lectured in various towns, organizing auxiliary unions. She is a member of the Helsingfors School Board, and does very active service for the advancement of the interests of education. She edits a woman's paper in Finnish, and a child's paper in Swedish, and attends to a very great deal of the publishing business for both. During the past year she has written a book entitled "A Half Year in the New World," which is published in Swedish. A copy of this lies before me, and from the little I know of the language, I am sure it is very, very interesting, and worthy of a translation into English.

As an evidence of Baroness Gripenburg's perseverance under difficulties, I must tell you of an incident connected with this work. She went to spend the summer with a sister in the country, to write her book; but she found she was unable to free herself from family and social obligations sufficiently to give time to the work. So she found a vacant peasant's cottage some distance from the city; this she fitted up and lived there entirely alone for six weeks, until she finished the book. I understand she did not return home in this time, and saw no one. She thus proved herself capable of self-sacrifice to attain her object.

The Baroness and her sister, who is a book-binder, live quietly in an apartment on the fourth floor, keeping but one servant. She assumes nothing on account of her position and wealth, and is notably interested in all women struggling for a livelihood. Indeed, class distinction is almost unknown in Helsingfors.

Most of the members of the Finnish Women's Union are engaged in some occupation or philanthropic work. There are teachers, editors, doctors, elocutionists, gymnasts, etc., among them is Alli Trygg, who also attended the International Council. She is a bright and cheery young lady who edits and publishes a woman's paper in Swedish; she also teaches a primary school, and is actively interested in a restaurant and reading room for the poor.

Among these women none interested me more than Vera Hjelt, who is a teacher of training classes in Sloyd, a system of manual training that is educational and easily adapted to any school system. She is really an adept in her occupation, making marvelously beautiful articles in wood, and eminently successful as a teacher. This woman gave me a grander idea of the power and scope of woman's possibilities than any person I have ever met.

It is ordinarily supposed that men only must handle tools, but here in this far away country it is proven that women not only make as good workers in wood, but quite as efficient teachers, and I hope that in America we will learn the lesson here given and whenever we adopt in our public school system, as we certainly must, some form of manual training, we will realize that it can be taught by our women teachers as well as by our men, and that the instruction is quite as important for the girls as for the boys.

It will be a surprise to many, that in Helsingfors women have the same privileges and opportunities, and have taken as high a stand in almost any respect as our women have in any part of America. They have a ballot in municipal elections; are members of the school board; are employed in banks, post-offices, etc. Quite a number of them have been successful in business ways. One lady was just selling out who had made a good fortune in dealing in a specialty of lamps and glassware.

After two weeks' stay with the Baroness and these delightful people, I was obliged to leave for Russia, as I had an engagement to meet the translator whom Count Tolstoi had employed to put "Tokology" into Russian. One can imagine that under ordinary circumstances it would have been difficult to leave those kind people, but when on every hand great consternation was expressed, that I, a woman, should travel alone in the Czar's domain, it made it seem more difficult. Every one said, "Going to Russia, going to Russia alone!" This came even from parties who had spent some time in that country, and who had relatives living there. I would ask, "What is the trouble with Russia?" Universally they would shake their heads ominously, sometimes talk indirectly about bad roads, bad manners, nihilists, etc. I always said, "You cannot frighten me. I cannot be swerved from my purpose. My object in going to Russia is important." It seemed very strange to me that even these people, who in reality belong to Russia, should have been so very anxious about my journey. I can account for it in no way except that there is a secret enmity between the Fins and the Russians. The slight chain of tyranny under which they are ruled by the Czar is very obnoxious to them, and although they do not speak it aloud, this probably accounts for their fears. However, the way was open to me to accomplish the purpose of my trip, as if the hand of Providence was in it all.

I must not linger over the many scenes of interest through which I passed, but allow me to say that a woman can travel alone in Russia without being molested, and indeed receive as much kind attention as if traveling in America, even when she cannot speak a word of the language.

At Petersburg I had a letter of introduction to one lady physician, a Dr. D'Aneroth, who is an oculist having charge of this department in a very large hospital where she treats at least 10,000 patients a year. This lady soon introduced me to many other lady physicians, with whom I had several very interesting interviews. It seems that a few years ago, through the interest of a Madam Chenevesky, a wealthy lady of Moscow, the government had the medical department of the University opened to women. At first it was expected that they would receive instruction in obstetrics and diseases of women only. The professors, however, found them so bright and capable, as well as so earnest and enthusiastic in their work, that full and complete courses were given them, although it was kept very quiet that this was the case. However, about two hundred ladies were graduated, and received their diplomas and their medals for practice. Many of them have good appointments throughout the state, and others have an excellent private practice.

It transpired, however, that a few of them became interested in politics, and were not altogether discreet in expressing their opinion in regard to the government. The consequence was that the doors of the college were closed to all, and also that a permit cannot be obtained by a woman to practice when she has received a diploma in any other country.

This seems to be almost the only innovation that Russian women have made in vocations usually appropriated by men. In some instances they have small stores, but ordinarily they can find employment only as teachers, governesses and seamstresses. The lady physicians seemed to think the position for women was very hopeless, and it proved also that they had an idea that there was no other outlook for them. I was quite slow to comprehend their thought. One evening I asked if they did not wish to know something of women of America who had become remarkable in certain lines. "Oh, yes, oh, yes," they said. So I gave them some account of Mary Livermore, Frances Willard, Rev. Florence Kollock and others. They listened with wondering interest, and when I was through, said, "How is it that women can go into public work of this kind, and still attend to their domestic occupations and social duties?" I explained to them that Miss Willard and Miss Kollock had no families, and that Mrs. Livermore did not devote her life to public work until her family was grown, and that her house was quite as well ordered as if she devoted her time exclusively to it. Still the question came back in various forms, "Can these women be good, moral and true women and go upon the platform and speak to great audiences?" Remember, these were lady physicians who were asking these questions, women who had taken an important stand in opposition to public opinion. Until some time afterwards I could not understand why they were so astounded at the thought of women being public speakers. It proved to be from the fact that practically there is no public speaking in Russia. The priests preach no sermons, the church exercises consisting simply of music and services that are read. Politics are a forbidden subject. There is no Parliament, and the consequence is we may say there is no public speaking, either by men or women. One can easily imagine what effect this state of things has upon the prejudices of the ordinary mind. It is only another proof of the manner in which all people draw lines. Any one that is engaged in public work anywhere, even in this free country, has seen over and over again this development in human nature, sometimes in one way and sometimes in another.

For instance, when, in girlhood, I turned my thoughts to the medical profession, my aunt, an eminent Quaker preacher, was distressed at the thought, and wrote to my mother an earnest protest. She said, "Such a thing was never known when we were girls. She will bring reproach and obloquy upon herself in assuming such a public position." She closed with: "Thee knows, sister, she can at any time earn thirty-seven and one-half cents a day with her needle." The dear old lady lived to see many successful women physicians prove the fallacy of her arguments, which were only the reflection of the prejudice of her time. Here, on the other hand, in Russia, are women physicians whose training and surroundings lead them to draw the line in the other direction, approving the medical profession, but giving to public speaking only reprobation.

Do Russian women smoke?

I regret to say that they do, and even among these very amiable women doctors, who are skilled and honored in their profession, are some inveterate smokers. Madam Chebanawa, who entertained me several times in her own home, smoked cigarettes incessantly. For fifteen years she has been physician-in-chief in Prince Ogdensburg's Hospital for Children, and has a large private practice. She is an accomplished and beautiful woman, but considers smoking a necessity to her life. I am confident that during a single evening she smoked at least twenty cigarettes, and during a brief visit to the hospital she smoked five or six. I also took breakfast with her one morning at twelve o'clock, the usual hour for breakfast in Russia. The meal was not unlike an early American breakfast, with the exception that wine was upon the table, which she offered me when we first sat down. I thanked her kindly, and said, "I never take it; you see I wear the white ribbon." She immediately inquired what that meant. After the explanation, the doctor said, "But you would have to drink wine in Russia; the climate demands it." "Well," I said, "thousands of people think the same in America, and other thousands have proved that health, strength and longevity are more surely obtained without the use of alcoholic stimulants than with it, and I believe you can prove the same thing in Russia." The doctor smiled, and shook her head: "No, not in Russia. We not only have a terrible climate here, but we cannot drink the water." Indeed, it is the common opinion in nearly all parts of Russia that the available water is a deadly poison, and must not on any account be drank, unless it is adulterated with tea or some other form of stimulant.

When I told the ladies of the temperance movement in this country, many of them said they wished that such a thing could be in Russia, but the great barrier against it was the fact that the water could not be drank. It is my opinion that this is simply a tradition, a myth of prejudice. Personally, I drank plain water freely all the time, and suffered no inconvenience therefrom.

In my next letter, I hope to give some personal testimony of the life and teachings of Count Tolstoi, with whom I spent two very delightful days at his country residence at Yasnia Poliania.

Chicago. ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

LIFE OR DEATH?

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—There is a certain college town in Indiana fitted out with the redundant stock of enthusiasm invariably found in educational centers, which, on reading the Indianapolis Journal's declarations that the National W. C. T. U. had gone to pieces, illustrated the power of the human mind to resist knowledge by believing this statement. At a meeting of the local W. C. T. U., as a consequence, there was a movement to disband, but it was finally decided to continue that society. However, the defection was such as to put additional vim into the mind and heart of a true white-ribboner, who said that night before she slept, "I will see if the statement that there are only five or six women in this town who want to be connected with the National Union is correct." Before the next week's meeting she had canvassed among her acquaintances, pledge book in hand, and had secured the names of twenty-eight women all desirous of being auxiliary to the state and National W. C. T. U.; and of those asked only three refused, six declaring that they expected to join in the near future. The secretary writes to that wide-awake paper, The Organizer: "We have had a meeting each week since, instead of two a month, as previously. Superintendents have been appointed for scientific temperance instruction, jail work, white shield, temperance temple, and juvenile work. I am superintendent of the last, and have one hundred and fifteen children in my Loyal Temperance Legion. So you see that 'whereas we were dead, we are now alive.'"

A similar event has recently taken place in Philadelphia, where a leading Y walked out with eighteen girls out of twenty, the entire society numbering about fifty, and the minority thus taking it upon themselves to decide whether they would remain with the National or not. Immediately upon this action, Miss Annie Green, one of the brightest young women in the City of Brotherly Love, and a few others who had not seceded, rallied to their side a fine representation of young women and young men, until their numbers are rapidly approaching fifty. Thus the good work goes on. May it continue to grow and flourish. W. E. T.

OUR CAUSE IN NORWAY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I have had many proofs lately that our cause is gaining ground in this country. Interest in woman's work for temperance in general, and in the World's W. C. T. U. in particular, is growing and spreading. A letter just received from Bergen tells me that they have forty members in the union formed there last summer. I have lately visited several provincial towns within a few miles of Christiania, and in several have found women anxious to join us, but owing to lack of some one to lead them, they could not form themselves into a union. Many, however, have taken the pledge, signed the petition and donned the white ribbon. In one place a lady, who has within the year been left a widow with nine sons and daughters, said to me, "Oh! I must belong to the women's union. I want to wear the white ribbon and do what I can to help my children." So she and one daughter signed the pledge, put on the white ribbon, promising to try and get others, so that there might soon be a union in that place. Three of her younger children also joined a juvenile society that I had the pleasure of instituting there.

At another place there existed a woman's branch of the general temperance society, but the women were so interested in what I told them of the W. C. T. U. and its workers, that some of them determined to work for that, and said that after the new year they hoped to gather enough to form a union. I visited one place at such short notice that the people themselves did not know I was coming, though they expected some one to give an address. The Norwegians are not very demonstrative until you get to know them, and it is sometimes difficult to find out what impressions are produced upon them. In this instance I could see that they thought my coming was something unusual, but I could not make out if they were pleased or otherwise. At last I discovered what was peculiar, for a young woman came to me as I was taking my coffee in the snug upper parlor of the Temperance Café, and asked if I was the one who was to address the meeting, and when I answered in the affirmative, her astonishment found vent in the following words, "We have never had a woman to speak, except in the Salvation Army."

There was a good audience, containing a large number of young women, to whom I especially addressed a large part of my discourse. I spoke for about an hour in Norsk, without paper or interpreter, illustrating what I said by Yaggy's Chart. Every one was much interested, and hoped I would come again, the young women all promising to meet me if I would have a woman's meeting.

From one town where I gave three lectures and had a woman's meeting, a gentleman writes to me: "Since your visit, all the young men in my house and several other gentlemen have given up smoking." I thank God continually that He has heard my prayer, and given me ability to acquire this language, so that now I am able to speak with the mouth and eyes at the same time, and, coming as it does from my heart, it goes to other hearts, and I feel that God is blessing my work here. I have been led lately to speak very much against smoking and chewing (which are terrible in Norway), and several have said to me, "I never thought about it before, that it was a harmful or a bad thing to use tobacco." And others have said, "I never thought so much about the importance of children belonging to a temperance society until you put it in the way you did."

I am glad to be able to say that the date for the International Alcohol Congress has been definitely fixed to take place September 3, 4 and 5, this year in this city. The official circular containing the leading subjects for discussion is now drawn up and approved, and in a few days will be sent to all the leading temperance societies in the various countries. Probably some of the W. C. T. U. women in America will be thinking of coming to Europe this summer and of visiting Norway. May I venture to hope that any such will try and arrange the time so as to be with us at the Congress? The official language will be German, but all others will be allowed in discussion. Come and help us, dear sisters, if you possibly can, and in the meantime I thank you for helping me to stay here and carry on the preparatory work.

CHARLOTTE A. GRAY.

Christiania, Norway, Jan. 13, 1890.

A SAILORS' NEW YEAR RECEPTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The following is the notice of a reception which outdid at all points all the "silk hat" receptions in this city: "The San Francisco W. C. T. U. will give a reception to all sailors in port on New Year's day, from four bells in the forenoon watch, until four bells in the evening, (10 a. m., to 10 p. m.) Lay along to the Coast Seamen's Hall, southwest corner Mission and East streets, and enjoy yourselves. Seamen only!"

The Coast Seamen's Hall is not particularly aristocratic or fashionable; its locality and associations are not suggestive of luxury and ease; there is in the atmosphere of the place something that tells of toilsome, struggling life, of a phase of life to be seen nowhere else but on the water front of great cities; of life filled with care, trial and temptation of which those whose lives do not cross theirs can know but little.

Evergreens and the national colors brightened the spacious room, which is located in the top story of a business block, and from the four bells of the morning until the same time in the evening the room was crowded. Seats were provided for three hundred and fifty, and most of the time crowds were standing besides. Our superintendent of sailors' work had the whole in charge, but she was most ably supported by the other ladies of the county union. Mrs. Carver, the county president, was very happy in her adaptability to the peculiar audience, a sailor remarking, "She acts like our mother," a graceful and merited compliment. The office of the Coast Seamen's Journal on the same floor, was appropriated for a dining-room, and the bountiful table served by the ladies, gave good cheer to every one. The entertainment in both rooms was continuous.

Many excellent brief talks were given by both men and women, much good music was rendered, the sailors contributing freely to this part of the program. There was a heartiness in their singing as their deep choruses welled up from full hearts in the sailors' own songs from "Nancy Lee" to "Pull for the Shore." It cannot be doubted that real good was accomplished by this reception. The bar-keepers along shore probably did not appreciate it, but the attendance during the day of fully 700 men attested their interest in the occasion. Sixty-eight men took the pledge and the white ribbon. One called next day on the pastor of the Mariners' Church to tell him that the events of that day had led him to his Saviour's feet, and to a fixed determination to begin a new life.

Altogether it was an occasion such as rarely comes to us—where the evangelistic and social features of our work commingle so successfully.

DORCAS J. SPENCER, Cal. Cor. Sec.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

Harriet Hosmer, writing to a woman's paper in this country, says in regard to a woman's temple: "I have long entertained the hope of seeing, before I die, a monument erected which shall record the great deeds of great women wherever found, and it is high time that such a memorial should assume form. It might be, could be, and should be the finest monument our country, or any other country of our time, can boast, and I think would do great service to woman's cause; a grand act, perpetuated and illustrated in such a manner that all must read, cannot but be inspiring to every woman, and would furnish the most eloquent chapter in their higher education."

***

If Harriet Hosmer lives two or three years longer she will see her hope realized, in the erection of a Woman's Temple in the center of the most progressive city of the world—Chicago. Its Memorial Hall—named after one of the world's greatest women, will be just the place to record the deeds of great women. One of these, Miss Kate Sanborn, of New York, the witty and brilliant writer, has just sent $25 on a pledge of $100, as a gift to the building fund. And another, one of the world's noble philanthropists—the venerable Mrs. Eliza L. Comstock, of Union Springs, N. Y., sends a check for $11.50. A few months ago she sent for a number of mite-boxes and distributed them among her friends. She writes: "Do not suppose that we have lost all interest in the Temple. Far from it. We are as eager for the success of the building as ever, but we have all been ill. La grippe has visited our dwelling, and all our family have been suffering more or less. Enclosed thou wilt find $11.50 from some of our mite-boxes. I hope to hear from others soon."

***

Mrs. Otis Hardy, Joliet, Ill., sends $100 to the building fund. Mrs. S. S. Sickles, of Minneapolis, Minn., sends a check for $50, part payment on a subscription of $100, in memory of her late husband, George E. Sickles, who was a lifelong temperance worker and a sincere lover of the cause. We have received $100 from Hon. Isaac C. Lewis, of Meriden, Ct., through Mrs. S. E. Shaw. She writes: "Mr. Lewis is one of Connecticut's best known and best beloved friends of temperance, prohibition and woman suffrage, and the records of the Temple would not be complete without his name." Mrs. Shaw adds: "I have little to give to the Temple fund, but hope to do my share in asking others to give, for I have great faith in the achievement and possibilities of your great undertaking in erecting this monument to woman and temperance. I have circulated the cards sent me, and hope to realize a good sum during the year." Are there not more such women as Mrs. Shaw among our white-ribboners who, if they cannot give themselves, will ask others to do so? We will be glad to send to all such cards explaining the plan of the great edifice if they will send us their address.

***

Miss Nellie G. Woodbury, superintendent of Temple work for the Leominster W. C. T. U., has redeemed her pledge of $100 much sooner than was promised. The money was raised by an entertainment, "The Business Men's Jubilee," the total receipts being about $130, and expenses only a little over $12. Miss Woodbury writes: "I heartily recommend the 'Jubilee' to all unions which wish to raise $100 for building fund; it is something new, and takes well." The St. Paul, Minn., W. C. T. U. sends $25, on a pledge of $100 to the building fund. This amount has been raised entirely by the mite-box system. The Surprise W. C. T. U. of Nebraska, sends for fifty mite-boxes to enable them to raise $100. The Virginia union, of Illinois, sends for a like number for the same noble purpose. Mrs. M. E. Mace, of Oriole, Md., started to fill a mite-box; she thought it was slow work, so she asked the Oriole society to help, and they gave half the proceeds of a little bazar which they held, enabling her to send $24.50 for their union.

***

Our faithful friend, Jane E. Weeden, is still at work, in spite of "La Grippe." She has gathered in $61.15 in the towns of Waukegan, Ill., and Racine, Wis. She says she could not have done half as well if Mrs. Partridge, president of the Waukegan union, and Mrs. Sprague, of Racine, had not kindly cared for her and entertained her most hospitably.

Mrs. Carrie E. Blackwell sends $8.50 for the Wellsville W. C. T. U., of Missouri; $3 of this is from a Baby Band, and $5.50 from mite-boxes. This makes $11 this union has sent in; we trust they will keep on in the good work until they have secured the amount necessary to insure the name of their union having a place in Memorial Hall. The Moosic W. C. T. U., of Pennsylvania, sends $11 through Mrs. T. E. Sutton, who seems to be at work most faithfully, as well as the boys and girls of the Loyal Temperance Legion, who have raised most of the money through mite-boxes and a little entertainment they gave. We have no doubt these brave children will raise the entire $100 themselves.

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

LITTLE BIRD BLUE.

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

Little Birdie, I have a Kate Greenaway bonnet
With ribbons and bows and a feather upon it,
And a dear little cloak lying in on the shelf
That makes me look just like my grandma's self.
It looks rather nice, but it doesn't compare,
I think, with the dainty, wee coat which you wear,
All made up of feathers so bonny and blue—
Oh dear!—if they only would dress me like you!

I sit at a great big piano and play
As fast as my fingers can go, every day,
And count away, "One, two, three—one, two, three, four,"
At scales and arpeggios an hour or more.
But always I think when I hear how you sing
Among the green trees and the flowers in the spring,
When the sun is so bright and the sky is so blue—
Oh dear! if I only could twitter like you!

I have a soft, white little bed where I sleep,
And the sun every morning comes early to peep,
And thinks it is nicer, perhaps, than to swing
Way up in the branches where all the birds sing.
But oh!—I am sure it is sweetest and best
To rock all the night in a dear little nest.
You'd help the wind sing me to sleep, wouldn't you—
If I only could come to you, little Bird Blue?

—Youth's Companion.

HOW A VALENTINE CAME THROUGH TWO KNOT-HOLES.

BY ALICE PERRY.

(Concluded.)

"I'm goin' t' roast two apples, Tad," said Tib, jumping up when they had finished singing. "It's Valentine's Eve, you know, an' th' ashes is jus' right. While they're roastin' le's play we're rich. You're th' gen'leman, an' I'm th' lady, an' we live on Fif' Avnoo in a brown stun house. You're jus' a comin' home t' supper, an' I'm dressed up in my silk an' sating trail, a gittin' it for you," and Tib tied her old shawl round her waist, and let it drag gracefully in the back.

"Now come right in, Mist' Sinclair, and hang your new fur cap, an' nice silk umberelly, 'thout no holes in 't, on this bootiful stand with shiny knobs, an' put on this lovelly velvit dressin' gown, like that in Lord 'n Taylor's winder, an' these el'gunt quilted slippers, like them in Reed 'n Marsden's. Then you set right down on this big fur mat, like the one hangin' up outside Boden's big fur store, while I pour you out some choc'lit outer this magnif'cunt solid silver teapot, like that we seed in Smith 'n Jewett's Chris'mus winder;" here Tib seized the old tin pail in which they made the tea, and flourished it grandly as she went on:

"Now I'll cut th' co'c'nut cake, and dip out twelve heapin' spoonfuls of strawb'r'y jam, and sev-un-ty-five roasted oysters, an' slice up another big cake, all frosted over with pink an' white candy, like the one at th' Mission Chris'mus tree,—an'—an'—"

"Why, Tib! You're cryin'," interposed Tad, suddenly looking up as he noted a quiver in his sister's voice.

"No, I ain't," resorted Tib, briskly, making a furtive dab at her tell-tale eyes with a corner of her "trail." "These apples are done, Tad, and we'd best eat 'em while they're warm. Th' fire's goin' out."

Pretty soon Tad said softly, "Tibby, we want some more wood; I ain't sold so many papers lately an' the baskit seems purty full of apples to-night. Bus'ness is kinder dull after Chris'mus. I'm 'fraid we're goin' to have hard times."

"Never mind, Tad," said Tib, cheerfully, "we'll go t' bed earlier, an' eat bread an' 'lasses 'thout no tea. It'll be summer purty soon, you know; 'fore we know it. I guess we'd better go now, I'm cold," and the two said good-night, Tib going to her little alcove, shut off from the rest of the room by an old calico curtain, after fixing Tad's "shakedown" for him, as near to the smouldering embers on the hearthstone as she dared. Then the candle went out, and the room was left in darkness.

Mr. Meerschaum arose, rather stiff from bending over so long at the knot-hole, re-lit his lamp and his pipe, which had actually gone out without his knowing it, and sat musing over his Times, the sheet turned upside down, the rest of the evening.

Miss Calash sat toasting her feet on the fender a long time, too. Presently she arose, and going to a large closet in the corner of her room, took out a heavy box and opened it, drawing forth first, an old black silk circular, faded, worn, and lined with moth-eaten squirrel fur, which she tossed carelessly to one side, and then a child's cashmere dressing gown, embroidered in an intricate pattern, and tied with a black silk cord. Miss Calash's hands trembled, and her sharp eyes dimmed, as she gazed upon it. It had been a birthday gift to that little brother whom she had loved so well, when he was only twelve years old, and fair and innocent as an opening flower. Somehow Tad's curly hair clustering round his open forehead and clear blue eyes, had brought him before her vision, just as he had looked in the little gown.

"They might as well do somebody some good," she said to herself in a hard voice, as she refolded the garments, and put them back in the box. "It'll be worth while to see somebody's dream come true in this bitter, disappointing world. Mine didn't." Then in a trice the light disappeared, and Miss Calash's room was in darkness too.

***

The next afternoon about three o'clock, the hour Mr. Meerschaum's counting room generally closed, a door leading into Tad and Tib's apartment that was usually shut fast and bolted, opened, with a great creaking of hinges and cloud of dust, to admit, by cautious degrees, first the bowl of a big, amber meerschaum pipe, and then the crown of a big, flapping black hat.

Scarcely had this taken place, than the door on the opposite side creaked in a like alarming manner, and an antique quilted black silk calash inserted itself, with even more caution and mystery than the amber pipe had done.

The two head-dresses perceived the advent of each other at the same moment, and "Land alive!" exclaimed Miss Calash.

"Bless my soul!" ejaculated Mr. Meerschaum, nearly letting fall the two heavy baskets he was carrying. "I—I—beg your pardon, mum! I—really do."

"I don't know you, sir," snapped Miss Calash energetically, stalking into the room. "But since it seems we are both bound to make precious geese of ourselves, I for one mean to get through with it, the sooner the better," and slamming the door, she deposited her burden in the middle of the floor and went vigorously to work, while Mr. Meerschaum, after a few moments of natural hesitation, meekly followed her example.

Tib and Tad were pretty tired that night, as they ascended the rickety staircase, an hour or so after dark. Tad carried a big bundle of unsold papers, and the basket of apples was nearly as full as it had been the night before. Neither of them said anything, however; Tib opened the door, and they both stood stock-still upon the threshold.

A blazing fire was leaping up the chimney place, a brand-new tea-kettle was swinging on the crane, and a bright tin teapot, emitting a tempting chocolate odor, stood upon the hearth, which was covered with a big gray and white fur rug, with a faded black silk lining.

The wood-box was heaped high with logs of pine wood, enough to last through the evenings for the rest of the winter, and close by stood a plump package of tea, and another of sugar. A beautiful red dressing gown and a pair of velvet slippers reposed in one of the wooden chairs, and a warm woollen wrapper, and knit shoes, a little worn, kept them company in the other. There was a shawl, too, and a brown knit hood, and two pairs of red mittens, besides a new beaver cap, with warm ear lappets, and a miniature edition of Mr. Meerschaum's ulster all discovered hanging on a row of wooden pegs, in a very much at home fashion. In a corner of the room standing all by itself, was a big blue umbrella, twice as big as Tib's old one, and brand-new as well.

But the table in the middle of the floor was the most wonderful sight of all. It was covered with a white cloth, and various cups, plates and saucers, stood upon it, foreign to Tib's scanty larder. Bread and butter were on one plate; a glass dish with twelve heaping spoonsful of strawberry jam stood near by; oysters in a covered tureen smoking hot; cocoanut cake—six slices of it; and oh, most crowning glory! a frosted beauty in the shape of a big heart, with "Valentine's Day" in pink and white confectionery upon its snowy surface.

Nor was a white lace paper sheet, with a most fat and beautiful Cupid on it, wanting for Tib, or one wrought with gilt and silver arrows for Tad, each with an appropriate sentiment within.

Tib was the first to speak. "Who did it?" she cried, clasping her mites of frost-bitten hands together, as she looked all around, and then at her brother, with wide-open, questioning eyes.

"The Lord—Jesus—Christ," said little Tad slowly, with awed face, as he still stood holding the heavy basket of apples, which he had forgotten to set down.

"But—Chris'mus is Christ's Day—don't you remember?" hesitated the child, speaking timidly. "An this,—this is Valentine's, you know."

"He's in 'em all," answered Tad, in glad, solemn tones. "In Chris'mus, an New Year's, an' Thanksgivin', an' Easter Day—He's in 'em all, Tibby."

And the two listeners at the knot holes felt their cheeks flush suddenly, and a tear or two steal unbidden to their world-worn eyes. It might have been the first time they had either of them thought of Him for many years. Yet they knew Tad was right.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING FEBRUARY 23, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 4:1-15; Ephesians 2:6; Judges 1.)

Sunday, 23; Luke 4. Verse 1. Christ was led from the Jordan of glorification to the wilderness of temptation. We should not think it strange if we find in our lives a like experience. Verse 2, There is an evil spirit who is the enemy of God and His kingdom. The history of Christ's temptation is a striking revelation of the existence, the might, the laws, and the working of the kingdom of darkness. Verse 9, The threefold temptation of Jesus is the symbol and type of those temptations by the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, against which we have to strive. I. Jno. 2:16. The devil will quote Scripture and pervert it, in order to destroy us by either of these ways. Verse 13, We can resist the devil and overcome every temptation. There is always a way of escape. I. Cor. 10:13.

Monday, 24; Eph. 2. Verse 1, Once we were dead in trespasses and sins, but through Christ we have been raised into life. Verse 2, It is a glorious deliverance, when the spirit of the world and the devil no longer works in us. Where there is disobedience to God, there is no deliverance, and a bad spirit is working. Verse 10, We are not saved by good works, but we are created unto them; and not to have good works proves that we have not been created anew in Christ. Verse 22, God by His Spirit in believers, has them for His habitation.

Tuesday, 25; Eph. 3. Verse 8, The riches of Christ, by which it is made possible for every one to be saved, are like an inexhaustible mine, whose treasures can never be fully explored. There is always an immeasurable remainder standing over against the need of every poor soul. The true wealth of men and of nations is the riches of Christ. Verse 13, It ought to be better understood that it is a grace to be able to suffer for the sake of the kingdom of God and the advantage of our brethren. Verse 19, Through the experience and knowledge of the love of Christ we are prepared, expanded, strengthened, and fitted to receive all the fullness of God.

Wednesday, 26; Eph. 4. Verse 1, The practical teaching of this chapter should ever be kept fresh in the minds of all Christians. It is the need of our times that we walk worthy of our calling. Verse 4, All sins against the unity of Christians are sins against the Holy Spirit. It amounts to little that we glory so confidently in being the children of God, and yet at the same time forget brotherly love. Verse 13, No one should be satisfied with his spiritual life unless it leads to a development which makes him more and more Christlike. There is a maturity of Christian piety which is marked by strength, perseverance, vigor, wisdom and love, and which all should continue to seek. Verse 14, We should be on our guard against every kind of error, for it never is harmless.

Thursday, 27; Eph. 5. Verse 2, The principle and impulse of the Christian walk is love. Christ's example is the proper mirror in which to see the true and natural form of love. Verse 11, One of the weightiest points in the formation of the Christian life is the conversation and intercourse with others, the social life. It is a dreadful thing to be a companion of sinners in follies and vices, and to become a means of corruption and distress to others, and then to have the shame and pain of sinners, and at last to meet the despair of the judgment day.

Friday, 28; Eph. 6. Verse 1, If children are obedient to their parents, it gives good promise that they will have a good and happy after life. Verse 10, About nothing does man have such indistinct views as about his own strength. If we know ourselves, we shall be led to consider that in the Lord alone is there strength and might. Verse 11, A good warrior needs inward courage, and then an outward armor. The devil has a great advantage when his power is denied or deemed trifling, for there is then the less arming against him.

Saturday, 1; Judg. 1. Verse 1, The loss of a noble leader may lead to a bad state of things among the people. After the death of Joshua, Israel passed gradually into a state of religious apostacy and political anarchy, of which we have the history in the book of Judges. Verse 32, It is a bad thing for God's people to mix themselves up with the world of idolators. The doing of this involved these Israelites in many troubles in the after years of their history.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Joining the Church. Acts 2:46, 47.)

1. The Church is a heaven-ordained institution, it is a band of Christ's blood-bought followers united for His worship; and it is not a matter of whim or personal preference, whether we will join it or not, if we are Christ's. Our place is in the Church, and it is our duty to find our place at once.

2. To join the church before you have joined the Lord Jesus, is a solemn mockery. You must settle in your mind that you hate sin and love Christ. Turn from sin and follow Christ, and your face will turn toward the Church as naturally as the weary child turns to the sympathy and care of its mother.

3. The public acknowledgment of your relation to Christ, by joining the church, enables you to be more perfectly joined to the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ demands both the heart union and the open confession.

4. Do not join the church to have others tow you along by their prayers and fellowship, but to grow, and to be strong and useful, and to be a perfect man in Christ Jesus. Ephesians 4: 13.

The Household.

ROBERT AND ELIZABETH BROWNING.

One in Life and One in Death.

BY MARY EASTMAN WARD.

England claims him; well she may,
He has brought her honor rare;
Added to her crown of bay,
Which before was passing fair.

Wisdom, purity and truth,
Tender love, all things of worth,
Gave her heart immortal youth,
Made her more of Heaven than earth.

Italy, the land she blessed
By her love, her hope, her song,
Pleads, "Here let her dear dust rest,
Where she lived and loved so long."

But who reads her sonnets rare,
And his fervid, "One Word More,"
Knows that never love so fair
Bound two gifted souls before.

Knows that both, if one, should sleep
'Neath proud England's minster pile
Till earth's last red light shall creep
Down that minster's storied aisle—

Sleep, as symbol of that time
Longed for, hoped for, sure to come,
When all wedded hearts shall chime
Like two harps in accord strung.

There with equal love should rest
On each brow its laurel wreath,
Saying only, "Each was best,
One in life and one in death."

THE HEAD OF THE CROAKER FAMILY.

BY ELIZABETH PEASE.

"There was an old man who lived all alone,
And he was a man of sorrow,
For if the weather was fair to-day,
He was sure it would rain to-morrow."

Doubtless numberless individuals accredited with average intelligence, and possessing a decent regard for creditable literature, have passed by this tiny gem with a light smile, and scarcely the shadow of reflection. Only the experienced few can understand the profound and solemn meaning which it contains.

There is but one ray of light through the entire cloud of gloom which it presents. We read with throbbing heart and glad countenance that this old man "lived all alone." Oh, timely piece of information! Dreary pictures, mournful dreams of lives that were wearied, homes that were saddened, bright spots in the world that were darkened, need not haunt us; and the entire suggested train of thought might be quietly laid aside, were we not reminded of one such person as this little old man who, alas, as we can never forget, did not "live all alone."

Our little old gentleman is a manufacturer—a steady, reliable producer of unadulterated, indestructible gloom; and he has brothers and sisters and cousins, and great, great aunts, all over the world, each making a specialty of this same line of business. The market is never so overstocked but that their wares come constantly pouring in; their victims are never so weary hearted but that they can be made a little more uncomfortable. In short, their prosperity is so remarkable that no one has ever been known to assert in their presence that there was anything better adapted to make the world utterly unfit for the habitation of man, and existence an unutterable burden, and life "but a desert drear," than one of these solemnly dignified, righteously foreboding, and intensely conscientious croakers.

They have a way of shriveling up one's courage, and under their inspection cheerfulness is about as substantial as a snowflake under a July sun. They can crowd the sickness and sighing and sorrow of years into as many little minutes, and press young lives between the iron hands of ceaseless condemnation, and awful humility.

Of all that beautiful sunlight in a life—the careless joyousness which delights, the brave cheerfulness which strengthens—they have no understanding, no appreciation. They seldom see the silver lining to a cloud; they never fail to see the cloud. There are no dreams in their lives—they are full of hard, dry facts.

Drinking in the soft, quiet beauty of a perfect autumn day, exclaiming about its loveliness, a voice of solemn accent breaks upon the ear. "It means snow to-morrow." Then you know one of the Croaker family is at hand. He is not living in the sunshine of to-day, he is speculating on the snow-storm of to-morrow.

Hundreds of tired, discouraged men and women have found there were too many tears in the world. Is there any quotation in poetry or out of it, to the effect that there are too many smiles? I like that hopefulness which lives in the sunlight upon the very verge of the shadow. Do you think the darkness is heavier because the day was so long and bright? gloomier than if the day had been gloomy, too? Perhaps; but which leaves the brighter memory?

Now and then we find cheerful people, full of kindly sympathy for all who feel the loss of this happy faculty, carrying sunshine into dark little corners that nothing else could brighten; and we can but love them and wish that the world held many more.

There are grander, deeper qualities than cheerfulness, qualities better adapted for building up a name, for winning hearts, for the development of character. Cheerfulness can never form the foundation, nor is it simply one of the adornments of a life; but it is something that beautifies and strengthens, entering into all occupations, from the most delicately refined to the homely little cares of every day. It is to a splendid character what a sunny smile is to a pair of really beautiful eyes.

Though we may not, even with our most earnest efforts, possess it in its most attractive form, we can so appreciate it as a faculty, so encourage it in others, and cultivate it in ourselves, that no stranger, meeting us, may have a painful suspicion that one of our grandfathers must have been that same prophetic old man.

"APPLES OF GOLD IN PICTURES OF SILVER."

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

There are two ways to teach English literature. For instance, I know a professor who takes up Alexander Pope, begins with, born such a time, gives you a brief outline of his childhood, youth, manhood, works, following him up to the horizon on a straight line, and over its rim, until he joins the innumerable caravan that moves to the dreamy realm of shades. Always he moves forward on a straight line.

This gentleman nad a daughter, equally gifted with himself, and equally accomplished. She, too, taught English literature, but she did not pursue the perpendicular, but the circular method, if one may say so. She placed Pope in the center of a group of his contemporaries, called attention first to the salient features of his character and works, his great friendships, his great critics, and what they had said of him; placed around him the scholars, politicians, warriors, kings perched on their thrones who lived when he did, and to whom the world was a richer and larger place because he lived in it. When she had riveted attention on the little man standing at the center and thrown upon him side-lights from the utterances of those who loved or hated him, and brought out the strong features of his genius in the best extracts from his books, she then sought the reasons of this evolution, by a study of that involution of childhood, youth, manhood, education, etc., that contributed to make him what he was. It was a much more dramatic method. It fixed attention, aroused enthusiasm, and made her classes rejoice in what they had to do.

Perhaps this practical analogy will show the special gift of the W. C. T. U. Not to speak of the manner in which men carried on the work in other years, for we have no criticism to make, we find it interesting to note how the white-ribboners have grouped in a circle the cognate reforms that bear upon the central figure Temperance, and how they have by this method gradually brought out into perspective that benign figure. They have found that scientific temperance instruction in the public schools is strictly germane to the total abstinence cause; that woman's ballot is perhaps the shortest route to prohibition; that the White Cross and White Shield work are part and parcel of the great onsweeping tide of purity which includes the temperance reform, and is one of its mightiest forces and coadjutors. Thus the analogy might be carried out through the whole forty departments, showing the philosophic method, the pictorial method, the concrete as opposed to the abstract method of studying and working the temperance reform.

THE FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY.

With all the vast machinery that is now in operation under the direction of the N. W. C. T. U., there is no department that is more important than the department of work for foreigners. If we take the prophecy in the second chapter of Isaiah, and also in Micah, fourth chapter, as being fulfilled now, we realize something of the importance of the work being done by our organization in this mountain of the Lord.

Isaiah says, "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths. And He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Now this mountain of the Lord that Isaiah and Micah speak of is our own beloved country, that is established in the last days, and is exalted above the hills; that is, other nations, and all nations are flowing unto it, just as Isaiah prophesied they should, and we see by this prophecy it is God sending them. And many people are coming to learn of our ways, that they may walk in our republican paths. Kings and princes and delegations have been here to learn of our ways, and to-day we are judging many nations, and shall rebuke many people. We are to-day a rebuke to every nation upon the globe, and every throne trembles because the inward voice of the people knows that our form of government is God's way for the people. And if God sends these people here, as Isaiah and Micah said He would, it is our duty, our first duty, to welcome them to our shores, and teach them the law and the word of the Lord, and we are to teach them that nation shall not lift up sword against nation.

To do this, we must close all our schools of vice, and in their place open reading rooms and night schools. At Castle Garden, New York, eighty-four large steamships land their passengers each month. In the first ward where Castle Garden stands are fine churches and chapels, and four hundred liquor saloons, and this is their welcome home.

This mountain of the Lord has two doors: the first door was opened to receive God's persecuted followers, and they were bidden to establish a government, and out from their study of God's Word and their earnest prayers the Holy Spirit taught them that all men were born free and equal, and the Father of Lights gave them strength not only to make this declaration but to establish a country with this as the corner stone. After years of success, God opened another door to His beautiful mountain. This time it was the invitation to all nations, the heathen nations. The first call was a call to Christian nations, and especially to His own loved ones, that this mountain of the Lord might be established upon the law and upon the word of the Lord. The next call was for all nations. As this last door swung open, He made the entrance so beautiful that the heathen from his fastness might be tempted to come. He planted gold and precious stones in the hills and gave a climate the most healthful and delightful upon the face of the earth. Oh, what wonderful inducements he held out to them to come that they might learn "the law and the word of the Lord," that they might learn that nation shall not lift up sword against nation.

It is very necessary that there be immediate action, that not only our law-makers but our people be aroused to the sin they are committing by their inaction and their silence, while their country is framing oppressive laws in the interests of the mob. Our country is fastening a system of iniquity upon us that makes it dangerous for the nations to flow to us, as God said they should. They are trying to thwart God's plans by failing to teach the law and the word of the Lord. They are trying to thwart God's plans by establishing schools of iniquity to teach these men not right ways, but wicked ways. The great struggle that is going on is between God and Satan. God says: "All nations shall come to this mountain to learn of Me." Satan says: "I cannot prevent them from coming, but I will open thousands of saloons, and I will pay my agents well to teach them vice."

The Lord says: "In the last days this mountain shall be established." "In the last days all nations shall flow unto it." "In the last days my Spirit will be poured out upon my handmaids."

Many people think these are the last days. The mountain has been established. All nations are flowing unto it. God's Spirit has been poured out upon His handmaids. Do we not see the connection and the fulfillment of prophecy? Will we grieve the Spirit, or will we do the Spirit's bidding, and teach these people God's ways?

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publication Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded; but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.—Gal. 5: 10.

RUM RULE IN CITIES.

In his "American Commonwealth," Professor Bryce says: "There is no denying that the government of cities is the one conspicuous failure in the United States." In support of this statement, he gives at great length a history of the political corruption in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco, and other American cities. The cause of the misgovernment and corruption in our cities is their domination by the saloon. Here is to be found the citadel of the saloon power. It is the controlling factor in municipal politics. The concentration of population and wealth in cities makes them the centers of political power; and by controlling local politics, the saloon is enabled to control state and national politics.

What the saloon is to a great majority of our cities of over 20,000 population may be seen from a consideration of its position in New York City. There are 10,000 saloons in New York—one for every 140 of the population, including men, women, and children. The proportion of saloons to population in several other cities is as great, and in many mining towns in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois, it is much greater. This writer visited mining and lumber towns in Northern Michigan and Wisconsin in which there was as high as one saloon to every thirty inhabitants. In New York City there are twenty-three times as many saloons as there are churches, and eighty-four saloons to every public school, or eighteen times as many schools of crime as there are churches and public schools combined.

Note now, some of the ways by which the liquor traffic dominates the cities: It furnishes places for holding political meetings. In New York, out of 1,002 political meetings held by the Republican and Democratic parties in 1884, 633 were held in saloons and 86 next door to saloons. Of these, there were 19 congressional conventions in, and 1 next door to saloons; 64 aldermanic conventions in, and 7 next door to saloons; 63 assembly conventions in, and 7 next door to saloons; 487 primaries in, and 71 next door to saloons.

The showing for 1888, as published by the Voice, is still more shameful. Not only during elections, but every year, all the year through, 365 days and nights of the year, these 10,000 saloons are active recruiting offices for votes in the interest of the rum power, and of political corruption, municipal, state and national. They are the distributing offices for corruption funds, and agencies for bribery in elections. Nearly every purchase and sale of votes is carried on in the saloons, or through their agency. Voters are run into them, singly or in squads, treated, and if necessary to secure their votes, have money put into their hands with the tickets, and are then watched to see that they vote those tickets. This mode of controlling elections prevails to a very large extent in most of our leading cities. In them, both the political parties have fallen into the hands of professional politicians, so corrupt that the term politician has become only another name for venality and fraud. It is this state of things that has led to a general demand by the better class of people for the adoption of the Australian method of voting. At the last municipal election in Boston that method was used for the first time, and was found to be an excellent preventive of "repeating" and bribery.

As a result of saloon control of politics in New York, in 1885, ten of its twenty-four aldermen were liquor-dealers; two others, including the president of the Board, were ex-rum-sellers and four were professional politicians. Two of this Board are now in Sing Sing; two fled to Canada, and two to Europe; "three are common approvers, and the balance, with three exceptions, are awaiting trial for receiving bribes." Important city offices which pay a salary of $12,000 or $15,000, have within a few years been occupied by men who kept "bucket-shops," and all-night dens; some had been prize-fighters, and others had been tried for the crime of murder. The rule of Boss Tweed who, with his partners in crime, robbed the city of over $4,000,000, and controlled legislation in Albany for that purpose, was one of the fruits of saloon control of the city. A liquor lobbyist of that period tells what methods were used to influence legislation at Albany. One Senator was "fixed" by paying off a mortgage of $1,500 "that was being foreclosed. He never forgot the favor, nor did his vote do us any harm afterward. Sometimes a member found an elegant suit of clothes hanging over his chair by his bedside in the morning; and sometimes a relative would be presented with a neat little house. Another popular method was for a member to receive a package of money by express from Troy, or some other town near by." The liquor lobby at Albany admitted before a legislative committee at the session of 1878-9, that they had expended $100,000 to influence legislation; and by confession of one of its own agents, "has, during the last forty years, used millions of dollars in corrupt bargaining and bribery."

One source of the saloon's power in politics, is that the traffic is a gigantic monopoly controlled by a few great brewers and distillers who, in any election in which its interests are involved, can give the support of the entire trade to the party that favors its demands. This they are enabled to do by the perfection of their organization—there is no trust so solid as the liquor trust—and by the fact that a few of the leading manufacturers who constitute the trust own many of the saloons, and hold chattel mortgages on a majority of the rest. One brewing company in New York, Bernheimer & Schmid, hold mortgages on the fixtures of 600 saloons in that city,—value, $310,134. Another, Ehret, George & Co., has chattel mortgages on 208 saloons,—value, $442,063. Eighteen of the next largest brewers hold mortgages for $950,000 on 1,100 saloons. "Including the list above enumerated," says Robert Graham, secretary of the Church Temperance Society, "there have been granted on saloon fixtures in the City of New York, in one year, the total number of 4,710 chattel mortgages, total value, $4,959,578, an overwhelming proportion of which are held by brewers." A majority of saloon-keepers are either the employés of these brewers, or their agents and tools, to be manipulated at will, as occasion arises. Thus the city of New York is practically in the grip of its brewers, who, in turn, are controlled by about twenty of the more wealthy men in the trust. What is true of New York is, to a great extent, true of other large cities, and since the liquor interest is one throughout the whole country, and thoroughly organized, it holds the balance of power, and can control the national and most of the municipal and state elections. Rum rule in cities is not only the cause of "conspicuous failure" in their government, but will, unless its power is broken, be the cause of a conspicuous failure of our national government.

THE GRAND DIVISIONS.

Like the great globe itself, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has six grand divisions—continents of work, each with its own subdivisions. Their names are: Organization, Preventive, Educational, Evangelistic, Social, and Legal work. We will now take a general view of these grand divisions, tracing the genesis of each back to the Divine impulse of the Crusade, and in subsequent editorials consider them individually. Among the objects to be accomplished by the W. C. T. U., as stated when it was organized, were the protection of the home, the education of public sentiment along the lines of total abstinence, and the suppression of the dram-shop by law. This mapped out the wide boundaries; the following years we have been working with steady purpose to possess this land.

The foe confronting us was thoroughly organized, we must organize to combat him; hence our first grand division—Organization. At first this was very simple; now it it embraces the world. It is the Australia of our grand divisions; in our childhood the great Antarctic continent was not recognized as a continent; now it has wheeled into its rightful place on the world's atlas. So Organization, at first scarcely considered a distinct division, is now recognized as fundamental, furnishing ground on which all other departments can be established. To-day it comprises not only organization for work in our own land—among foreign-speaking people, among colored people, young woman's work and juvenile work—it also encompasses the world. The germ of this great outreaching tree was planted during the first year of the National Union's existence, by Miss Willard. In the Woman's Temperance Union, the progenitor of THE UNION SIGNAL, for January, 1876, we find an article by her entitled, "Why not an International Union?" In that Centennial year an International Conference was held in Philadelphia. The first step towards the world's organization was then taken, and Margaret Parker, of Scotland, was elected president.

But the set time had not yet come, and it took years for the seed then planted to germinate. We now see that God was holding us back for "the larger thought." At this time our thought had taken in only Saxon womanhood; in 1883 came the clearer vision discerning the truth that God made of one blood all the nations of the earth. Standing on the shores of the Pacific, "looking into the face of the Orient," Miss Willard heard the quick footsteps of the oncoming "New Japan," eagerly taking in both the good and the bad of Western civilization, and said: "We must preëmpt the Sunrise Land for God and temperance." Meanwhile, as Miss Pugh tells us, influences were working eastward as well as westward; Hannah Whitall Smith had stirred the hearts of English women; the World's W. C. T. U. had taken form, with Margaret Bright Lucas, of England, at its head; Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm, of Sweden; Miss Gray, in Switzerland and Belgium, and Mrs. Mary B. Willard, in Germany, were all bearing aloft its white banner.

Mary Clement Leavitt had sailed out from the Golden Gate on a mission whose combined grandeur, pathos, and heroism have no parallel; she went alone so far as human companionship is concerned, but the everlasting God was her guide, the almighty arms were around her, and the prayers of thousands were continually ascending for her. For five years now the wings of faith and prayer have borne her onward; to-day she is in the Dark Continent, and will return, God willing, by way of South America. As the result of her labors, W. C. T. Unions of every race and color have been organized on every continent except South America, and on the islands of the sea; twenty National W. C. T. Unions have sprung into existence, tens of thousands of signatures have been secured to the World's Petition, which is translated into hundreds of languages and dialects; there is scarcely a language on earth in which the temperance gospel has not been proclaimed, and in every land are altars from which ascends the incense of the noon-tide prayer. Said a missionary who had closely watched the results of her work, "What the coming of Commodore Perry was to Japan, the coming of Mrs. Leavitt is to Japan's women." Upon her banner is inscribed, "For God and Home and Every Land," and every land is blessed by her coming. Now Miss Jessie A. Ackerman is following in her footsteps. So much for our first grand division of work.

Next comes Preventive. Until the organization of the W. C. T. U., temperance work had been almost exclusively reformatory. When mother-love came to the fore, it quickly recognized the fact that the awful river of drunkenness was fed continually by streams whose springs were in the home; every man swept to destruction by its terrible flood was some "mother's boy." Other organizations had stood on the bank and dragged here one and there another victim from the flood, too often only to see them stagger back and be engulfed in the black waters; these mothers said: "The stream must be stopped at the fountain head," and this is prevention. They had learned the lesson taught by an insane asylum: the patient whose sanity is to be tested is taken to a tank into which a stream of water is flowing from a pipe, and told to empty it. If, unheeding the flowing stream, he attempts to dip the water out, his insanity is clear; but if, comprehending the situation, he first turns the faucet shutting off the stream, and then proceeds to empty the tank, his sanity is equally clear. The W. C. T. U. has proved its sanity by turning the faucet, and thus originated its preventive work. This is carried on not only in the departments grouped under this head, but in almost every other.

The third grand division, Educational, is really preventive in character, and is laying solid foundations on which alone a lasting superstructure can be reared. Its work is the "education of public sentiment," as set forth in our original charter, and is carried on through the schools, the Sunday-school, and the press.

Our Asia is the Evangelistic department, greatest of all and the original home of all, for all were born of prayer and study of the Word. Its genesis in the Crusade and its exodus therefrom are so clearly marked we need not trace them here. The work in this grand division will be set forth at another time.

Social work is also an educating force through its parlor meetings, teaching those who would never enter a temperance hall; through its flower mission, bringing "something bright, something white, and something sweet" into sick room and prison cell to speak of the love of Him who said, "Consider the lilies;" and through world, state and county fairs, carrying the knowledge of our work to those who else would always remain ignorant of it.

The sixth grand division is the Legal, including legislative and petition work and franchise. This, too, as a logical outgrowth of the Crusade, the inevitable sequence of its avowal to seek "the suppression of the dram-shop by law." Legislatures make law; hence Legislatures must be petitioned to make righteous laws. The old Crusaders tell us that the call to stop praying in saloons and commence petitioning Legislatures was as distinctively from God and as imperative as His call which brought them to their knees on the sawdust strewn floors of saloons or in the slush of the sidewalk outside. This led to the traversing of thousands of miles by patient, weary feet and circulating petitions for the protection of the home from the ravages of the saloon. Those of us who carried these petitions to the legislative bodies, and saw them ignored with cool courtesy or scorned in contemptuous rage because we were "only women and had no vote," understand full well how the franchise department grew naturally out of that for legislative work. Mrs. Pellucid is not the only one who learned by that strange experience that the ballot in the hands of women is a necessity if we would "suppress the dram-shop by law." Thus was evolved our latest grand division.

That same legislative experience has taught many of us a further lesson—that to secure temperance and social purity laws, there must be back of the legislators a party believing that temperance and purity are vital issues, but because all of our sisters have not yet learned this lesson, the knowledge we have gained is not crystallized into a department.

By spending $100 for the aggregate manufactures of the United States, by the census of 1880, $14.20 goes to labor.

$100 spent for	boots and shoes,	$21.71	is for labor.
100 " "	clothing,	17.42	" "
100 " "	furniture, upholstery, etc.,	23.71	" "
100 " "	hardware,	24.17	" "
100 " "	cotton goods,	16.91	" "
100 " "	woollen goods,	12.86	" "
100 " "	worsted goods,	13.55	" "
100 " "	men's furnishing goods,	18.34	" "
100 " "	liquors, only	1.23	" "

To average a day's work at $2.00,

		DAYS.
$100 spent for	boots and shoes will give one person work for	10 71-200
100 " "	clothing, " " " " " "	8 71-100
100 " "	furniture, etc., " " " " " "	11 177-200
100 " "	hardware, " " " " " "	12 17-200
100 " "	cotton goods, " " " " " "	8 91-200
100 " "	woollen goods, " " " " " "	6 43-100
100 " "	worsted goods, " " " " " "	6 155-200
100 " "	men's fur'g gds, " " " " " "	9 34-200

One hundred dollars spent for liquor, will give one person work only a little over six-tenths of a day.

The above, showing that the turning of the liquor money into other channels would make employment instead of diminishing it, is an extract from Senator Blair's great book, "The Temperance Movement," and is one of the many well-supported and convincing tabulated statements with which the book abounds. Agents are wanted. More than three thousand persons have been making a livelihood by selling Miss Willard's "Glimpses of Fifty Years." Senator Blair's book makes an admirable companion to it, often selling in homes where Miss Willard's would not be admitted. We consider that we are doing work for the cause we represent by bringing these two volumes to your attention. If you do not yourself need employment, doubtless you know of some one that does. Will you remember the opportunity offered by these two books, and refer your friends to us?

The white-ribbon women of Canada have certainly done a most magnanimous action. By unanimous vote in their Executive Committee, and on motion of Mrs. Judge Foster, of the Province of Quebec, who by right of rotation would be the next president of the World's W. C. T. U., they adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The presidency of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union will pass to the president of this Dominion Union May, 1890, and as by the general plan of the World's Union, it can either be so held by us, or we can indicate which National President shall fill our term of office,

Resolved, That while we realize the honor which this crown of leadership would bring to us, we believe that the best interests of the work demand that the one whose busy brain has planned this grand federation of women, and brought them into line to work for "God and Home and Every Land," should retain the presidency for a still longer period. We do at once request Miss Frances E. Willard, the present honored president of the World's Union, to continue to lead this ever increasing host during the next two years, and we take this means of conveying to her our loving greetings and expressing our appreciation of her wise forethought and untiring zeal, which has served to bind together the women of all lands, and to hasten the day when "the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God."

Mrs. Foster had intimated such a purpose when in Chicago at the National Convention of the W. C. T. U., and Miss Willard had most strongly discountenanced any proceeding of this character. The resolution having been sent by Miss Tilley, corresponding secretary of the Dominion W. C. T. U., Canada, we cannot, as the organ of the World's Union, do less than print it, with an expression of the warm appreciation we feel toward our generous sisters across the border. Perhaps the truest thing that can be said is, that such an action is altogether like them. What the outcome of this proposition will be we do not as yet know.

Margaret Bright Lucas, president of the British Women's Temperance Association, and first president of the World's W. C. T. U., has passed beyond our sight, above our ken; for her this is a blessed transformation, but to us it brings a sense of loss and sorrow, for in America we had learned to love this gracious Quaker lady, as well as did her sisters across the water. At nearly seventy years of age she crossed the ocean to give the most direct proof of which her generous heart was capable, of her devotion to the idea of a grand confederation of women that should reach the world around, and have for its motto, "God, Home, Humanity." To us this seems to have been the crowning act of her life, and any one who was present at the Minneapolis National Convention of the W. C. T. U. in 1886, cannot fail to remember with a stirring of the heart how, at the call of our National President, the women of New England rose in solid phalanx to pay their homage to the chief officer of the World's society, after which the Middle States in grand array stood up, and then the gracious women of the South, the new Northwest, and the bright-faced women of the Territories and District of Columbia. Perhaps no woman ever received a greeting so representative in its character, and at the same time so full of blended dignity and love. When all were standing, and the English and American flags were brought out and intertwined, that great audience of thousands, each having a printed copy of "God Save the Queen," rolled out its martial strains in a volume of welcome never to be forgotten. For more than half a century Margaret Bright Lucas has given heart and hand to every reform and all philanthropies by which humanity was helped. Possessed of beautiful gifts in brain and heart, having wealth and social station, she laid them all upon the altars of our common faith, and blessed all the lives she knew. Around the world let us clasp hands of sympathy, and stand the closer now that she has gone.

In answer to inquiries relating to the adoption of the name W. C. T. U., by the seceders, Mrs. Ada C. Bittenbender, attorney of "ours," writes: "I am of the opinion that each state and territorial W. C. T. U. not incorporated, ought to proceed to incorporate at once. I would advise incorporating under the general incorporation laws, and afterwards secure special legislative enactments if desired. To wait the slow process of a Legislature now may be suicidal. I indorse Miss Willard's idea of the incorporation of local unions in large cities, and think it highly important. As to the incorporation of the Loyal Temperance Legions and the Y's, there being no state or National societies of that name, the incorporation must be confined to local societies. In case of infringement, test cases should be brought covering National, state and local unions. A similar case is now pending in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, that of "The International Trust Company vs. The International Loan and Trust Company."

The Lever of this city is raising a fund of $4,000 to send seven thousand copies of The Lever for thirty-six weeks to seven thousand workingmen in Nebraska who are not Prohibitionists. One-half of the amount of the pledges are to be paid March 1; one-fourth April 1, and the remaining fourth May 1. The success of this fund means many votes secured in an honest and legitimate manner. All friends of the cause who are anxious to see prohibition carried in Nebraska are urged to subscribe to this fund. Miss Willard in subscribing $100 says:

Your plan of sending The Lever to seven thousand workingmen in Nebraska for thirty-six weeks is practical, and cannot fail to result in Prohibition votes next fall. I believe we win hundreds of votes to our side of the question through emperance literature where we win ten by the spoken word, for the reason that the literature can go everywhere, and a speaker is very apt to address an audience largely composed of those who agree with him from the start. Believing this, I will subscribe $100 to the fund in the interest of working men and the Prohibition campaign of Nebraska, which is the storm center for the temperance work in 1890.

All representatives or members of the W. C. T. U., or kindred societies, who can do so are urged to attend the annual meeting of the National Law and Order League, at Toronto, Canada, on February 22, 1890. It is highly important at this time, that all temperance organizations show that they are zealously devoted to "the enforcement of the existing laws." The call for the convention extends to all organizations that desire to promote the objects of the League. The attention of the clergy is called to the designated Sunday, February 23, as Law and Order Sunday of 1890.

The leaflets mentioned on the first page of a recent issue are, Timely Talks No. 7, "White Ribboners vs. Seceders," and Signal Lights, No. 23, "Partisan and Non-partisan."

The Watch-Tower.

No choicer valentines came to us on that day of "soft impeachment" than those sent by Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City.

***

Miss Willard is in the field in several of the states, notably New Jersey and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana; Miss Gordon is with her, holding Loyal Temperance Legion and young women's meetings in her usual effective way.

***

I find this plump kernel in the Texas Siftings:

Where is there a greater satire upon man than in a game of chess, where the queen has to do all the work, and the king is the one to be protected?

***

At Kahun, Egypt, has been unearthed a will made 2548 B. C., yet so curiously modern that it might be probated to-day. The testator settles upon his wife, Theta, his property, given to him by his brother in the accompanying document, but forbids her "to pull down the houses my brother built for me," though she may give these houses to any of her children she pleases. This will is of interest, not only as being the oldest one known, but because it recognizes the property rights of women, thus showing that Egypt was many centuries ahead of all other nations in regard to the rights of women.

***

Our White Ribbon Banner to-day is unfurled;
To the temperance chain that is circling the world
It adds but a link, yet strong may it be,
O cause most ennobling, in efforts for thee!

So sings Mrs. Marietta T. Case in the first number of Connecticut's new state organ, which is one that speaks well for the skill of the editor, Mrs. R. N. Stanley, as well as for the enterprise of the noble women of the Nutmeg State. Long may it wave!

***

Mrs. Meredith, the English Dorothea Dix of this generation, who lately visited this country, has for thirty years carried on her beneficent work. She takes especial interest in friendless prisoners. When they are discharged, her custom is to stand at the prison gate, take the outgoing prisoners by the hand, before the saloon-men can reach them, clothe and feed them, if necessary, and find work for them to do. She is now sixty-five years old, of commanding, "personable" presence, very plain in dress, but with a face and bearing that attract attention in any crowd.

***

A breezy little note from a stanch Iowa friend comes laden with this bit of cheery anecdote: "A few days since, one of our railroad agents received a lot of casks or kegs of beer marked 'Beans,' which he immediately placed in the storehouse. It being a cold night the 'beans' froze, burst the kegs, and all ran out. Hurrah for the agent who had the courage to store beans where beans ought to be, and hurrah for the company which doesn't compel an agent to use his waiting-room or office to store beer in! My husband's people are temperance Republicans, my people temperance Democrats, while we as the 'New Graft' sing 'Hurrah for Frances Willard and prohibition forever.'"

***

Great men have wrestled of late with the stupendous question: "What would you do if you were a woman?" Ministers and statesmen, soldiers and poets, have toyed with the subtle idea of re-incarnation, but Mark Twain has answered more wisely than they all. "What would I do if I were a woman?" muses the hero of Huckleberry Finn, "Disguise myself, I should feel so strange."

***

Here are the outlines of a true story, more wonderful and more entrancing than the Arabian Nights: When the penalty for leaving Japan was death, a young Japanese who had heard a very little of the true God, stowed himself away in an American ship that he might reach America to learn more of America's God. The ship belonged to a Christian man, and its captain was a Christian; he brought the boy safely to Boston, and took him to the ship's owner, who helped him to secure a thorough education. That Japanese was Neesema. At a meeting of the American Board, he made an impassioned plea for money to start a Christian school in Japan; the response was such that he was enabled to return to his own land and start the work in a small way. In less than a decade that little seed has grown into a great tree—the Doshisha—a university in which, last year, an hundred and seventy-two students were converted to Christ and publicly professed their faith in Him. Now, a gentleman who has carefully studied the work the Doshisha is doing in the Sunrise Kingdom, gives it an hundred thousand dollars to carry on that beneficent work. He is as modest as he is generous, for he will not let his name be known; but it is written in God's book of remembrance, and generations of Japanese shall rise up to call him blessed.

On Duty.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Founded 1883.

Motto.—For God and Home and Every Land. Object: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over, and to circulate a petition for the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic drinks and opium, and other social reforms.

All members wear a little knot of white ribbon, and remember the noon hour of prayer for all temperance work and workers, and for the coming of Christ's kingdom.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care Miss Amy Leavitt, 1212 L. St., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Vice Presidents—England, Mrs. Margaret B. Lucas, 7 Charlotte St., Bedford Square, London.

Canada—Mrs. Letitia Youmans, Toronto.

France—Miss De Broen, 3 Rue Clavel, Paris.

China—Mrs. Dr. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.

Japan—Mrs. Kachi Yashima, 28 Nakarokuban cho, Tokio.

Hawaiian Islands—Mrs. Dr. Whitney, Honolulu.

New Zealand—Mrs. Packe, Upper Riccarton, Christ Church.

Queensland, Australia—Mrs. Brentnall, Brisbane.

South Australia—Mrs. Rev. Rice, Adelaide.

Victoria—Mrs. Mary M. Love, Armadale, Melbourne.

Ceylon—Miss M. W. Leitch, Oodooville, Jaffna.

India—Mrs. McDonald, F. C. M. Calcutta. Nat. Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Poona.

Burma—Miss Ruth W. Ranney, Rangoon.

Turkey—Mrs. W. E. Locke, Philippopolis, Bulgaria.

Africa—Mrs. James Denholm, Roodebloem, Capetown.

Mauritius—Mrs. Bishop Royston, Bishop Thorpe, Rose Hill.

Siam—Miss Mary L. Cort, Petchaburee.

Sweden—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm.

Denmark..Mrs. Dr. Selmer, St. Kongensgade, Copenhagen.

Straits Settlement—Mrs. Marie Oldham, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.

World's Organizers—Europe, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, Christiania, Norway.

Northern Europe—Madame Andersson Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm, Sweden.

American Committee—The five General Officers N. W. C. T. U.

Secretaries—England—Mrs. Mary Whitall Costelloe, 40 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, S. W. London, England. America—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Treasurers—England—Mrs. James Gregson, Heart's Hill, Debden Green, Loughton, England. America—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Supt. Department of Temperance Literature and the Press—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Nettelbeck Str., 21, Berlin, Germany.

Supt. Department of Bible Readings—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W., England.

Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Massachusetts.

Supt. Department of Prisons, Police Stations and Almshouses—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.

American Supt. Legal Dept.—Mrs. John P. Newman, 333 C St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Supt. Exposition Dept—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Indianapolis, Ind.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

PLEDGE.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ———; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary; Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Miss Bertha G. Brown, Office Secretary.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.

Treasurer—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle, St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama—Mrs. M. L. Stratford, Montgomery.
Alaska—Mrs. John G. Brady, Sitka.
Arizona—Mrs. S. A. Pearson, Phœnix.
Arkansas—Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, 315½ W. Markham St., Little Rock
California—Mrs. R. R. Johnston, Box 288, Oakland.
California, Southern—Mrs. N. P. J. Button, Riverside.
Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, New Garden.
Carolina, South—Mrs, Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.
Colorado—Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, Longmont.
Connecticut—Mrs. S. B. Forbes. 152 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford
Dakota North—Miss Addie M. Kinnear, Fargo.
Dakota, South—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Huron.
Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.
District of Columbia—Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, Temple Hotel, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, Jacksonville.
Georgia—Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Augusta.
Idaho—Mrs. Susan Holbrook. Blackfoot.
Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago.
Indiana—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Staples, Tahlequah.
Iowa—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Clinton.
Kansas—Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, Topeka.
Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 Chestnut St., Louisville.
Louisiana—Mrs. E. T. Merrick, New Orleans.
Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. Stroudwater.
Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, Baltimore.
Massachusetts—Miss Elizabeth S. Tobey, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap. Jackson.
Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart. Red Wing.
Mississippi—Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.
Missouri—Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Kansas City.
Montana—Mrs. R. H. Howey, Helena.
Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.
Nevada—Mrs. D. W. Van Deventer, Virginia City
New Hampshire—Mrs. N. H. Knox, 263 Hanover St., Manchester.
New Jersey—Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, Ocean Grove.
New Mexico—Mrs. M. C. Raynolds, Las Vegas.
New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 103 East 123d St., New York.
Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.
Oregon—Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.
Pennsylvania—Mrs. Mary H. Jones, 2051 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Rhode Island—Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, Pawtuxet.
Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.
Texas—Mrs. S C. Acheson, 1419 W. Woodard St., Denison.
Utah—
Vermont—Mrs. Esther T. Housh, Brattleboro.
Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.
West Virginia—Mrs. Jane A Johnson, Parkersburg.
Washington, Eastern—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, Durand.
Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, Evanston.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell.

Organizers—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.; Miss Henrietta G. Moore, Springfield, O.; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. M. L. Wells, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Frances E. Griffin, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

American Organizers for World's W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, 830 12th St., N. W. Washington, D. C., Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, Sacramento, Cal.; Miss Charlotte Gray, Christiania Norway; Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kan.; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kan.; Scandinavians, Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Hollanders, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Chinese. Mrs. M S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, Cal.; Sclavic, Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton, Ill.; Department Evangelist, Mrs. C. H. St. John, Beloit, Ka

Work among the Colored People—Mrs. Frances E. Harper, 1009 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Associate, Mrs. S. J. H. Early, 260 S Cherry St., Nashville, Tenn.

Young Women's Work—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 155 W. 48th St., New York City. Department Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Evans, 155 West 48th St., New York City; Organizers, Miss Ida Clothier, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Miss Jessica Morgan, Oberlin, Ohio; Miss Mary McDowell, Evanston, Ill.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice, 1597 Washington St., Boston; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Kindergarten, Mrs. E. L. Hailmann, La Porte, Ind.

II. PREVENTIVE.

Health and Heredity—Dr. Orpha A. Baldwin, Cleveland, O. Lecturers—Health—Dr. Mary Allen, Ithaca, N. Y.; Heredity—Mrs. R. A. Armstrong, Woodland, Cal.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass.; Literary Assistant, Miss Mary L. Benedict; Associate, Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, 165 State St., Portland Me.

Sunday School Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill., or Woodfords, Me.; Secretary, Miss Julia A. Bidwell, Hartford, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City; Advisory Committee, Mrs. Helen E. Brown, Mrs. E. W. Ruliffson, Mrs. E. M. Wymond, Mrs. Dr A. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Vigelius, Mrs. J. C. Craw, Mrs. M. E. Morgan, Mrs. Dr. H. McLean, Treasurer, 205 Mason St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Temperance Publication Association—Miss Alice M. Guernsey Editor Department Books and Leaflets, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T B. Carse, Publisher; Advisory Committee, the National President and Corresponding Secretary.

Editors of The Union Signal—Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Julia A. Ames, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of the Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of The Young Crusader—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers.

The Press—Miss Mary Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, Baltimore, Md.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Kirkwood, Mo.

W. C. T. U. School of Methods—Miss Mary Allen West, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.; For Practical Training to Public Speakers, Mrs. Anna B. Curry, Boston School of Expression.

Department of Narcotics—Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl. St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer, Mrs. James Havens, 673 Broadway, Denver, Col.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N Y.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Work among Miners, Mrs. D. W. English, Rushville, Ill.; Unfermented Sacramental Wine, Mrs. R. A. Esmond, Syracuse, N. Y. Bible Study, Rev. A. A. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.

Flower Mission—Miss Jennie Casseday, 216 E. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.; Department Secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

Work in Prisons, Jails, Police Stations, Almshouses and Asylums—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Department Secretary, Mrs. H. D. Walker, Providence, R. I.

Work among Railroad Employes—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, McClees' Building, Gansevoort Square, New York City; Secretary, Miss Anna L. Davidson; Associate, Veterans' Branch, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Port Huron, Mich.; Petition Work, Mrs. Lavinia H. Chace, 1310 I St. N. W. Washington, D C. Evangelist, Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, 40 Prospect St., Orange, N J.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis. Associate, Mrs. Emma Obenauer, East Saginaw, Mich.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

Promotion of Social Purity—Miss Frances E. Willard; Associates, Mothers' Meetings, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Mrs. C.T. Cole, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa; Department Evangelist, Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, Evanston, Ill.; Legal Adviser, Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.; Industrial Homes, Mrs. Lydia R. Clark, Northfield, Minn. Work among Mormon Women, Mrs. Angie F. Newman, Lincoln, Neb.; Lecturer, Mrs. Frances McCready Harris, 218 DeGraw St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Purity in Literature, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, Effingham, Ill.; Travelers' Aid, Miss Maud Remington, Baraboo, Wis.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, 23 Rowland St., Newark, N. J.; Associate, Madame Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York City.

State and County Fairs—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate, Mrs. Marion McBride, 179 Fremont St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Mary I. Stille, Westchester, Pa.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.

Franchise—Dr. Anna Shaw, Evanston, Ill.; Associate, Alice Stone Blackwell, No. 3 Park St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Lucy E. Anthony, 478 N. 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Lecturer, Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace, Cataract, Ind.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine; Lecturer, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

On Appropriations—Chairman, Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 10 E. 14th St., New York City. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie H. Rastall, Topeka, Kan.

Advisory Committee—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson, Mich.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—Chairman of Committee, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 La Salle Ave. Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Streator, Ill.

News from the Field.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

STATE GLEANINGS.

The department of legislation is a most important one in South Dakota the present year, as the new state is in a transition period from territory to state. There is great diversity of opinion as to some of our laws, notably the prohibitory law in the Constitution, as to whether it can be enforced or not, until the legislature provides for its enforcement. The outcome is that saloons are running wide open in most of the counties in the state, notwithstanding the attorney-general has decided that there is law enough to close them all over the state. If women were in all our city councils, and helped to elect the judges on the bench, the law to close saloons could be easily fouud without waiting for legislative action. No one claims that territorial law is not sufficient, even now, for the punishment of murder, theft, or other crime. It is only when dealing with the saloon that the Constitution may be ignored, and lawlessness allowed to prevail.

A very important law, in force when the state came into the Union, was that providing for scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, but as it was a congressional law, it is not now in force. The department of legislation is therefore trying to get a bill through the present legislature to provide for this important branch of instruction in the public schools, and with good prospects of success.

The prohibition bill, which was framed by the State Enforcement League, and has already been introduced in both houses of the legislature, is an iron-clad bill, and worthy to be classed as a twin sister to that passed by the North Dakota legislature. The bill does not provide for the sale of wine for sacramental purposes, and it is probable that an amendment to that effect will be made at the solicitation of Bishops Marty and Hare of the Catholic and Episcopal Churches of South Dakota, they having already petioned for such an amendment. It is hoped the bill will go through without other amendments.

A bill to prevent the sale of tobacco to minors under sixteen has been introduced in the Senate by Rev. J. S. Huntley of Jerauld county. He will also champion a bill to make the keeping of a house of prostitution by man or woman, or visiting one for purposes of prostitution by man or woman, punishable by imprisonment; and a bill to make the keeping of a gambling house, or visiting one for purposes of gambling, punishable by imprisonment.

A bill to raise the age of protection to girls from fourteen to sixteen years, has passed the House, and will probably pass the Senate. The greatest confidence is placed in Governor Mellette, and there are no fears of a veto if these bills pass both branches of the legislature.

Mrs. H. M. Barker, president of the state W. C. T. U., and Mrs. P. E. Johnson, superintendent of legislation and petitions, were authorized by the state executive committee to go to Pierre during the session of the legislature to look after the interests of these and other bills. Both went to the capital early in the session for this purpose, but Mrs. Barker was immediately called by telegram to the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. M. B. Horning, who has been very ill, and where she still is at this writing. Mrs. Johnson was prostrated with a severe attack of La Grippe the third day after her arrival, and after a week's illness went home to fully recover. Mrs. Barker hopes soon to return to the capital to look after the W. C. T. U. interests there.

Mrs. Emma Smith De Voe's suffrage work in Hyde county was continued through December, under the auspices of the district W. C. T. U., until a suffrage club was organized in every neighborhood where there were inhabitants enough to sustain one. The county work closed with a county convention at Highmore, which was very largely attended by the leading men and women of the county. A county organization was effected auxiliary to the State Equal Suffrage Association, the county W. C. T. U. having charge of the meeting until the suffrage organization was completed. The greatest harmony and enthusiasm prevailed, and the friends of equal suffrage felt for the second time how true to any great reform are the honest yeomanry of the grand young state of South Dakota. By their votes they gave us prohibition, and will give us equal suffrage next November.

Mrs. De Voe went from Hyde county to Hand county, where she met the same kind of grand, true-hearted people that she did in Hyde, and her success was equally as good. But after a week's work the severe winter weather set in on the 28th of December with a heavy snow storm which compelled her to stop until spring. It is hoped the weather will permit the work to begin again early in March.

The Aberdeen W. C. T. U. has started an Industrial School for working girls, in charge of the president, Mrs. Emma Cranmer, and Miss Alice Hart, assistant, which is already doing great good, and numbers twenty pupils. They meet from 7:30 to 9:30 once a week, and have lessons in reading, hygiene, etc., and some take lessons in book-keeping; and an employment bureau is proving a great convenience to both employers and employés. Mr. S. H. Cranmer, a good brother-in-law of the W. C. T. U., has helped the school in many ways.

The Huron Industrial School continues to be a great blessing to working girls, and is still under the management of Mrs. De Voe.

PHILENA EVERETT JOHNSON,
Union Signal Reporter.

COLORADO.

ARAPAHOE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The fourth quarterly W. C. T. U. convention met in the Twenty-third Avenue Presbyterian Church, Denver, Thursday, January 29, at ten a. m. The convention opened with a large attendance of earnest, hopeful women. Delegates were present from every union in the county. Prominent workers from different states favored us with their presence—Mrs. Ranger, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Dr. Walter, of Ohio; Mrs. Dr. Woods, of Iowa, and others, giving inspiration by their words and presence. Mrs. M. A. Cassell, county president, ably presided. After devotional exercises a business meeting was held, when superintendents of the following lines of work were elected: Sunday-school, jail and prison, English and foreign literature. After a season of prayer at the noon hour, dinner was served in the church parlors. The women of the unions are grand workers, but they also appreciate and enjoy a feast of good things such as were set before them on that occasion.

At 2 p. m., the convention was called to order, and a half hour spent in prayer and praise. Superintendents and officers gave encouraging reports in their lines of work. Touching personal experiences were told, and helpful counsel given. This part of the exercises were particularly interesting. Miss Crozier read an excellent paper on "Sunday-School Work." A pleasant, as well as instructive feature of the program was the parliamentary drill, conducted by Mrs. Tompkins. Beautiful music gave variety and interest to the exercises.

A large audience gathered in the evening and listened attentively while Mrs. Hicks, of Highland union, read a very able paper on "Young Woman's Work." A Y. W. C. T. Union will be organized in the near future. Miss Ella Leonard, the youngest member of the Central union, gave a recitation most acceptably. Mrs. E F. Leonard, city missionary, addressed the audience in her usual happy, effective manner. Remarks by several gentlemen closed this very enjoyable and successful convention. It may perhaps be interesting to speak a word of our Denver Crusade meeting, as I think it has not been mentioned. It was held in the Capitol Avenue Presbyterian Church, December 23. The house was filled with an appreciative audience. The exercises consisted of music, a poem by Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, the reading of Mother Thompson's experience from THE UNION SIGNAL, a paper by Mrs. Dr. Walter, of Ohio, on "How the Crusade Began," and personal experiences by several ladies who took part in that great movement. This meeting deserves a more extended notice, as it was a grand, enthusiastic occasion. The Denver Central union is preparing for a Demorest medal contest, to take place soon. The cause is progressing in this city. Temperance sentiment is growing, and great encouragement is felt in all lines of work.

MRS. M. E. BRAZEE,
Pres. Central Union.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

A CLARION NOTE.

The situation is of thrilling interest in New Hampshire. The battle has begun in earnest, and I will write a word or two without waiting to get up a formal letter.

Day before yesterday (February 6) Rochester was wild with excitement over the unexpected move of the town officials to close the saloons. Notices were served on all the saloon-keepers giving them until Saturday night to clear their premises of intoxicants. The selectmen and policemen are the prime movers in the matter, and they intimate that they shall enforce the law to the letter.

Yesterday the lightning struck Manchester. Sheriff Healy and his deputies took to the war-path and an extensive raid was made on the saloons. The official force led by the sheriff was divided into nine squads who marched forth to different parts of the city. Forty-three saloon-keepers were arrested and put under bonds to appear before the police court next Monday.

Everybody is on the qui vive for the next move. The croakers who have been out in full force the last two weeks are hushing up, and the chorus of thanksgiving is growing to a mighty anthem of praise.

A. E. BUSSELL,
Union Signal Reporter.

WASHINGTON.

CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY AT MONTESANO.

Although perhaps a little late to report our Crusade anniversary meeting, it is never too late to report our interest in the W. C. T. U., her first-born, or the numerous grandchildren, prominent among whom is the Loyal Temperance Legion, as well as several other more neglected ones we are trying to mother. Our union is flatteringly large in numbers, and has several members of just the right metal, notably our president, yet the magnitude of the work makes us feel very insignificant.

At our regular weekly meeting, we held special commemorative exercises of the sixteenth anniversary; then, December 22, the ministers of the several churches, by request, preached temperance sermons, and in the evening a union meeting was held in the Presbyterian Church, where standing room was at a premium. Neither were we without attractions, for one of the daughters of the original Crusade is among our members, and gave us an account of its workings in her vicinity. The Crusade Psalm was read and hymns sung by the united choirs, an introductory talk by the president; an outline sketch of the W. C. T. U. with its workings; several appropriate recitations, interspersed with solos, songs, etc., followed by the ever welcome children's part, which in this case was a very interesting addition. Their young faces beamed with the spirit of their words, and they showed painstaking drill by their excellent superintendent. Did space permit I should delight to mention each part personally, but the pretty little collection speech and white-ribboned basket opened the hearts as well as purses of the hearers, and Montesano kept her record good of generous contributions to W. C. T. U. efforts.

The ushers, and those of us in the back part of the house, said they heard a general expression of enjoyment and interest by the large number in attendance, and surely we must come off more than conquerors, for God is with and for us.

S. MARIA GOSS.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Foundry Church, February 2, was addressed by Representative Cutcheon, of Michigan, and Representative Kerr, of Iowa. Mr. Cutcheon advocated total abstinence. He said the best work was done with the children; that the law passed by Congress a few years ago making scientific temperance a compulsory study at West Point, he regarded as very important. He related how the chaplain of West Point, who had taught the cadets that there was no harm in moderate drinking, was reproved by Secretary Proctor, who was opposed to such erroneous teachings. Mr. Cutcheon thought that prohibition should be submitted to a vote of the people of the District, as the agitation of the question would be an education in itself, and that if the people voted to have prohibition it would be more readily enforced than if such a law were simply passed by Congress.

Mr. Kerr followed in a strong address, in which he stated that he had been a life-long temperance worker. He showed the good results of the prohibition law of Iowa, and said that in Iowa refined ladies do not serve wine to their guests on New Year's Day.

At the close of the meeting a resolution was unanimously passed, requesting General Cutcheon to introduce into Congress a bill providing for a vote on prohibition in the District of Columbia. Mrs. Sarah La Fetra, the presiding officer, made a brief address, advocating such a bill.

A largely-attended meeting of the executive committee of the District W. C. T. U., was held January 28; Mrs. Mary E. Cohen was elected recording secretary in the place of Mrs. Lydia H. Tilton, resigned. A resolution was unanimously adopted, stating that "in all kindness the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia protest against the misleading prefix 'non-partisan,' used in the name of the new temperance society just organized at Cleveland, which seeks to attach to us the stigma of partisan." The resolution further states that while the W. C. T. U. has always been organically and constitutionally non-partisan, being composed of women of all political beliefs, they believed it consistent to follow the principle of prohibition displayed in state and national platforms. That this had led them in South Dakota to coöperate with the Republican party, and always with that party that pledges the most uncompromising hostility to the liquor traffic. In conclusion, the resolution protests against the new society's infringement upon their incorporate name.

IDA HINMAN,
Union Signal Reporter.

VIRGINIA.

WORK AT NORFOLK.

Notwithstanding La Grippe has reigned triumphant here for the past two months, reducing the numbers in attendance on our meetings, still we have kept steadily onward. A Loyal Temperance Legion has been formed, which has had a steady growth till it has reached over one hundred children, and a more enthusiastic set of youngsters you cannot find. They meet every Friday afternoon, and are in haste to have it come. They are led by four of our best and most consecrated young women, whose zeal is untiring. They recently gave us a very unique and interesting entertainment called "Mother Goose," which is full of temperance sentiment all through, and one of the best I ever saw. The genial Christian secretary of the Y. M. C. A. allows our ladies the use of their building and rooms for meeting and entertainments, and he said he had never seen the rooms so full as at the children's Mother Goose entertainment, and so pleased were all that they demanded it to be repeated, which was done with the greatest possible success, and now they are rejoicing in their full treasury.

The Y's, too, are doing good work. There is one at the Norfolk College, and then what we term the "Town Y." Both are doing well. The Town Y had a "Kaffee Klatch" a short time since, and realized $30 in one evening. The W. C. T. U. is all alive just now over its Boarding Home for Girls. This is in the line of preventive work, to save homeless girls from the pitfalls of a great city. The union is looking forward with great pleasure to the coming of the convention next fall, when we hope to have some of our gifted women with us. Alexandria, Richmond, Lynchburg, Staunton and Harrisonburg are all waking up to the temperance question through the influence of the W. C. T. U.

R. H. J.

NEW JERSEY.

ESSEX COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held in the hall of the W. C. T. U. at Watsessing, January 23, 1890, Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, president, in the chair. Nine unions were represented by eighty delegates.

Four papers were read: "How to Interest the Women of the Community in Temperance Work," "Young People's Work," "Salient Points of National Convention," and "Scientific Temperance Education."

The devotional exercises were of more than ordinary interest, conducted in the morning by Mrs. Robinson, a returned missionary from India, at present a member of Roseville union, in the afternoon by Mrs. Cramer, of Orange, sister of General Grant, whose husband was formerly minister to Denmark.

The work of the county during the past three months has been to secure signatures to the petition to be presented to our legislature this coming week for an educational bill. The question box developed thought upon the harmful influence of liquor sold in first-class groceries and in many drug stores. A young people's organization was formed in the evening by Mrs. Hammer.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we hereby pledge renewed loyalty to our Lord Jesus Christ, obedience to His laws, faith in His promises, greater diligence in seeking to know and do His will; that we will continue all lines of evangelistic and educational work as laid out by the National and state organizations; that we will refrain from criticisms of those who differ from us as to ways and means, but whose dominant aim, like ours, is to arouse the indifferent, reform the drunkard, and overthrow the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That we believe an injurious influence is exerted in our communities by so-called first-class groceries, and many drug stores where liquor is sold, and we will not patronize such establishments.

Resolved, That we re-affirm our allegiance to the National W. C. T. U., and refuse all affiliation with any principle that savors of compromise with the liquor traffic, and we will continue to present a solid front against the saloon power, whether sanctioned by high or low license.

Resolved, That we will urge upon the proper authorities the appointment of police matrons, and we will sustain the evangelistic and reformatory efforts of the department of prisons, jails and almshouses.

Resolved, That we will give increased interest to the work among soldiers and sailors, and endeavor to enlighten the communities as to the condition of affairs among them.

Resolved, That we consider it a privilege as well as a duty to subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL as the organ of our National Society, knowing that it gives us broader intelligence upon the many phases of our great reform than we can gain by reading any other periodical, and we will redouble our efforts to interest our unions in its circulation.

Resolved, That, realizing the responsibilities which will devolve upon American women in the future as citizens of this Republic, we will prepare for an intelligent ballot by informing ourselves upon the subject of franchise.

Resolved, That, as a county organization we express our thanks to the W. C. T. U. of Watsessing for its cordial and hearty welcome; to the friends who aided in providing refreshments; to the ministers who honored us with their presence and sympathy, and to all who have contributed to our comfort, thus enlarging our opportunities for usefulness as a Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

E. B., Rec. Sec.

NEW YORK.

LEWIS COUNTY CONVENTION.

The semi-annual convention of the county W. C. T. U. met at the M. E. Church in Lowville. The meeting was called to order at ten a. m., by Mrs. M. B. O'Donnel, our beloved county president. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Port Richmond, Staten Island, was present, and as state secretary she has proved by her zeal and efficiency one of the best of workers. Her wise counsel in our deliberations gave aid and enthusiasm to all present. The attendance of delegates was unusually small, owing to sickness, and inclemency of the weather.

The reports from local unions were very encouraging, giving evidence of a sure victory over the liquor foe in the near future. The clergy of our county almost unanimously work in harmony with the W. C. T. U., adding great power and widening influence in the work.

In the evening, Mrs. Boole addressed a large and attentive audience on the subject of "Woman's Mission," and Christian methods of pushing on the conflict to near and ultimate victory. She is one of the Ohio Crusaders, and her convincing eloquence is seldom equalled by the speakers of our progressive age. She is sent of God as a powerful instrument to lead our New York army in the foremost ranks in this noble work.

The I. O. G. T. here are a loyal band of co-laborers with the W. C. T. U., and they came to the evening session in a body. God bless them in the work!

DELIA I. ANDREWS.

TENNESSEE.

WORK AT NASHVILLE.

The work is progressing in Tennessee all along the line. Some of the unions are better attended than ever before. Our parlor meetings, especially, have always been interesting, and in every way a success. The first meeting for this year was held yesterday afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. Phillip Hill, about fifty present; a good program was carried out, to the edification of all, after which came a social talk, and refreshments were served. It was indeed a very enthusiastic meeting, and I think the good elder whom I met on my way to the union, would have changed his mind as to the cause being "dead," or even sleeping. He thought the saloons could never be closed, neither could a majority rule a minority, but praised the courage of the women who never faltered or wavered in a good work. I have found from observation that when men or women were not doing their duty the cause was always "a failure;" there was "nothing doing;" things were "at a stand still." There is no such word as fail with the Nashville unions; our word is "go forward."

IDA T. EAST.

MINNESOTA.

To the Local Presidents of the W. C. T. U. of Minnesota:

Let me urge upon you once more the necessity of appointing superintendents of the department for the promotion of social purity.

During the past two months Dr. Kate Bushnell has delivered a course of lectures in our state on social purity. Wherever she has been the people have been thoroughly aroused to the necessity of this work. She has done her part well. Let us take advantage of every inch of ground gained by her lectures, not only by holding it, but by active, aggressive work on our part. Appoint a superintendent in every local union, hold mothers' meetings, read the course of leaflets on social purity, prepared for these meetings, distribute literature, and in every other way possible try to purify the home and society at large.

H. A. TERWILLIGAR,
Minnesota Supt. Dept. Social Purity.

MONTANA.

WORDS OF CHEER.

We have thought our work in Montana almost too small to claim any of the room in THE UNION SIGNAL to report it, but as you desire to hear from us, we will try and take our place in line. Prison and hospital work is being done in some of the unions. In December the Helena union sent a large box of books and other literature to the state penitentiary at Deer Lodge. And we received a very hearty letter of thanks, which made us feel glad that any one had ever helped us to remember these shut-in ones. Special mention was made of Miss Casseday's name, and their gratitude to her.

The county almshouse in Helena is visited every Sunday, and services are held for the inmates, for which they express themselves as very grateful. We are looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to the coming of Colonel Woodford and of Miss Henrietta G. Moore, both of whom we expect shortly. We trust to accomplish something in our battle "For God and Home and Native Land."

MRS. H. V. WHEELER, Cor. Sec.

MICHIGAN.

INGHAM COUNTY CONVENTION.

The first convention of the W. C. T. U. in this county was held at the Central M. E. Church, Lansing, Mich., January 28 and 29; president, Mrs. M. H. Bowerman, of Williamston. Forty delegates, from Mason, Leslie, Williamston, Okemos, Aurelius, Lansing and North Lansing, came in response to a call from the president, who had arranged a very interesting program, the first page bearing the mottoes, "With Christ there is Union," and "We come to Unite;" and the text, "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled."

The report from each union showed an increase in membership and interest in the work. The president's address was full of encouragement, love of the work, and of many plans for the advancement of the county. She was reëlected for the next year, with Mrs. Porter, of Williamston, corresponding secretary; Miss M. Harrington, of Mason, recording secretary, and Mrs. Bailey, of Leslie, treasurer.

Several instructive papers were read, on "Tobacco and Narcotics," and "Sabbath Observance" by Mrs. A. Allen, of Williamston; "Literature and Flower Mission," by Mrs. C. F. Ballard, of Lansing; "Mothers' Meetings, White Cross and Shield," by Mrs. Wm. Colby, of North Lansing, was especially full of a mother's feelings, and suggestions how to train children. "Franchise," by Mrs. S. E. V. Emery, of Lansing, deserves special mention; her heart is so thoroughly in the work, and from her heart the voice came. We are favored in this county in having a superintendent of this department who is an authoress and lecturer of national reputation. We were also favored with the presence of Mrs. Benjamin of Portland, who brightened the whole session with spicy interludes, and taught us how to have our organization according to parliamentary law and loyal to Frances E. Willard, our non-partisan leader, and gave one of her famous parliamentary drills; also a lecture on "Our Line of Work," in the evening, which was well attended.

Wednesday evening Mrs. Bowerman, assisted by Mrs. G. R. Malone, gave a gold medal contest. The contestants all did so well, it was after much discussion by the judges that the medal was awarded to Miss Lillie Swartz, of Lansing. This closed a successful and profitable meeting which we hope and believe will benefit every union in the county, and encourage all the societies to work in harmony and with greater zeal the coming year.

MRS. C. F. BALLARD, Sec. pro tem.

MISSOURI.

A WORD FROM THE STATE PRESIDENT.

At the non-partisan convention at Cleveland, Ohio, it was stated that a letter of sympathy had been received from Memphis, Mo., signed by the entire W. C. T. U.

Now the "truth in the case" is this: A letter from the president (who did not sign) tells me that eleven women did sign the letter of sympathy, three of whom did not understand what they were signing, and are "very sorry." The author of the letter, and leader of the sympathy movement, is an aggressive Republican, as are the other signers. The leader had not attended the union for more than a year, and had done no temperance work in that time.

This is the peculiarity of this non-partisan movement everywhere. I believe that there is not a union from ocean to ocean where other than Republican women have introduced this controversy. The Prohibition women have never done it. Curious, is it not, that only Republican women should be non-partisan, and that only Republican papers should approve the non-partisan society? It is significantly curious, and curiously significant.

CLARA C. HOFFMAN.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

IN the Kansas notes by Mrs. Weatherby in THE UNION SIGNAL of February 6, "Lima" county should read "Linn."

MRS. MARY A. HITCHCOCK, president of Nebraska, writes that all literature bearing upon amendment work will be most gratefully received and distributed, if sent to her, at Fremont. She also notes with joy, the coming of Major and Mrs. Scott and Captain Van Etten, as helpers, and speaks of the work of the former in Fremont as being full of interest.

THE Plainfield, New Jersey, W. C. T. U., mourns the loss of one of its brightest and best members, Mrs. Frances E. Marsh, whose funeral services were held January 26.

BATH, Ohio W. C. T. U. recently held a Demorest silver medal contest. The church was crowded, the entertainment was pronounced a success by all. Theresa Shaw, twelve years of age, took the prize. The union charged an entrance fee of five cents.

THE Mason City, Ill., W. C. T. U., celebrated the Crusade anniversary in a grand meeting, with a most interesting program. They hold union gospel meetings the last Sunday in every month, at the different churches. On Christmas day they gave a free dinner to all the poor children of the town. About seventy-five were fed. The people sent in so generously that much food was left, and after selling a part of it, there were still eighteen baskets left, which were sent out to the poor people of the town. Within the last year the union has more than doubled its numbers, and this may be partly due to the fact that a large number of copies of THE UNION SIGNAL are taken, over fifty, altogether.

THE reform committee of the Woman's Club, of Elgin, Ill., gave the members and their friends the opportunity of listening to what is pronounced a "grand address" by Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, the National evangelist of the social purity department, on January 28. The following tribute appeared in the Elgin Daily News: "Dr. Bushnell spoke for two hours in an extremely interesting and delicate manner, interspersing her lecture with illustrations of her own personal work, and incidents concerning the rescue work in Northern Wisconsin. Every woman in Elgin who did not attend has suffered a persona. loss, and when Dr. Bushnell visits us again she will be most heartily received. The club room was more than filled; an adjoining apartment being thrown open and additional chairs secured."

MANY good words have come, unsolicited, from Iowa; pledges to increase the subscription list of THE UNION SIGNAL, and resolutions of loyalty to the principles and methods of the National W. C. T. U. From College Springs, Des Moines, Blanchard, Glenwood, Stuart, Danville, Coin, and West Keokuk, have come earnest messages of this kind. The following are some of these: "We declare our loyalty to the National W. C. T. U. We approve its course, and believe the organization has been divinely guided." "Our union of twenty-five members is loyal to the National Union. We had 'Facts in the Case,' and 'The Reason Why,' and wish all the unions in Iowa could have had them earlier." "We heartily and unanimously indorse the National W. C. T. U. in refusing to adopt a non-partisan constitutional amendment at its last convention, and as a local union will remain loyal to the National W. C. T. U. so long as it continues its present policy of not coercing the opinion of either individual or state."

A DES MOINES union, with a roll call of forty-four members, adopted the following:

WHEREAS, We have perfect freedom to work with our dominant party without restriction if we choose,

Resolved, That we hereby express our loving loyalty to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, recognizing no need for withdrawal or division, and deeply regretting the action of the Iowa delegation at the National Convention; and that so long as prohibition of the liquor traffic is right, the position of the N. W. C. T. U. is invulnerable, and until women are enfranchised we are emphatically, practically and politically NON—[Neumum.]"

THE secretary of Raub, Indiana, W. C. T. U. writes: "Our union has started a library. We have already nearly fifty volumes; there being no other public library in the place, it is highly appreciated. We expect soon to make an addition to it. We are preparing now a temperance entertainment called 'The Last Loaf.' We hope to celebrate our anniversary by having a good temperance lecture." Most of the women who live near enough to attend belong to the union, and nearly all the young men. They are trying to secure the older men as members.

GOSPEL meetings are held at the Jennie Casseday Mission, formed for work among the people of the shanty boats, at Cincinnati, Ohio, Sunday and Thursday nights, at 7:30 p. m.; Sunday-school at 2:30 p. m., and mothers' and children's meetings Wednesday at 3 p. m. On Christmas afternoon the first entertainment in the history of the mission was given to the children. A friend of the work writes: "There were fifty-two children and fifty-five adults present. The lessons for the past six months were gone over by the lady in charge, followed by the children in answering the questions quickly and correctly. Their singing was simply wonderful, when taken into consideration that six months ago the greater number did not know what a Sunday-school was. This school has grown from six scholars on July 21, 1889, to sixty now. Each child was given a handkerchief filled with candy, a toy, orange, apple, cake, and card or book. After the children had been dismissed, their parents were furnished a treat; when they, too, were given candy, oranges and apples, and cakes were cut and a good time was had by all, and all were sober on this day. There is a wonderful change down here."

A MEMORIAL meeting was held by the W. C. T. U. at Detroit, Mich., to pay tribute to the memory of Mrs. Martha A. Cushing, who was one of the Crusaders of that city, and one of the most honored and useful members of the union. A very full and rich program was carried out, and beautiful music was furnished. Mrs. Cushing literally died in active service, having read the Scripture lesson at the meeting addressed by Colonel Bain, on the afternoon of her death. Many workers and friends took part in the memorial service, and all bore testimony to this life of pure and unselfish aims and labors.

MRS. E. N. LAW, of Leroy, Mich., has done good work at Luther, Mich., recently, aiding the work of the Y. W. C. T. U. Nine signed the pledge, and there was much interest. Mrs. Law gives prohibition lectures and elocution and song services, and is equally interested in temperance work in behalf of both young and old.

THE Hamlet, N. Y., union has for a long time been honored by the comradeship of three of the oldest members of the W. C. T. U.: Mrs. Polly Smith, Mrs. Rebecca Warner, and Mrs. Lura Warner, aged respectively ninety-four, ninety-one and eighty-nine. Now one of the venerated trio has passed away, Mrs. Polly Smith, and her years of service in both church and temperance work are treasured in the hearts of the people. Appropriate resolutions were passed by the union. Among the beautiful words uttered regarding this aged saint are the following from one of her friends and co-laborers: "When over sixty years ago, a little band of faithful Christians formed themselves into a church, she cast her lot among them; lovingly, patiently she toiled on while her companions who walked by her side were called home one by one; still she lingered until only two beside heself were left of that faithful band. Now her labors are ended; she rests safe in the arms of Jesus. As I looked upon her peaceful form, her busy hands folded, the white ribbon fastened above the heart that always beat so truly for 'God and Home and Native Land,' I thought of the words spoken by one of old who said, 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord . . . they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.' Not many of us who linger behind will reach the advanced age of ninety-four, as did our loved sister, but let us emulate her virtues, follow her advice, work while life lasts, until the Master shall call us home."

A MOST enjoyable Demorest prize medal contest was held in the hall at Western Springs, Ill., Thursday evening, January 30. There was a large attendance, the music was good, and the recitations of a high order. The handsome silver medal was awarded, after some discussion by the judges, to Louis Walters, who recited "A German's Reasoning" in a manner that would have done credit to a much older orator. An effort will be made to continue these contests.

MRS. C. M. WOODWARD addressed a union meeting at Kountze Place, North Omaha, February 2, followed by a meeting for organization, February 3. Mrs. Woodward addressed the people of South Omaha, January 29, for the third time since December 1, with an invitation to return again. South Omaha union is doing earnest and effective work under the lead of Mrs. E. B. Towl, one of Nebraska's most zealous workers.

A GRANT of twenty-three Bibles in the German, Swede, and French languages has been made to the National W. C. T. U. from the American Baptist Publication Association, through Rev. J. P. Ash, Ottawa, Kansas. Mrs. Grubb, National superintendent of work among foreigners, is the grateful recipient. There is great need of the Bible, and especially of portions of the Gospel in this work, and this grant, which is the first of the kind to the department, is highly appreciated.

ONE of the efficient workers of the W. C. T. U., Miss Vandelia Varnum, gives the following as her method of work: First: She holds a series of meetings, never less than a week in a place. Second: A combination of the gospel and legal work, so that the people see their close relation; indeed, cannot tell which is which. Third: General pledge work. It is good for the young, and it does not hurt the old; it helps the intemperate, it softens the prejudices of the conservative, and it enlists many in the work who might not otherwise be won, and hundreds sign at every place. Fourth: Always open with a question box. All sorts of questions pertaining to every phase of the work are brought out. A worker is not responsible for the questions the people choose to ask, and hence they are not offended when topics are brought up to which otherwise they might take exception. It is an admirable way of getting the pulse of the audience and affords a means of distributing general information. Fifth: She always holds what are called conference meetings, sometime during the evening, calling out different ones in the audience for half-minute speeches. This furnishes any amount of amusement, commits people in public, and deepens the interest in every way. At first, only temperance people are asked to speak, but when the interest becomes deeper, sometimes such speeches are given as the following: A Republican arose, and said he had been pledging himself to temperance for years, and had been bolting at election, but for his part he was now through with that method. A Democrat on the seat in front of him rose and said, "Let me shake hands with you," and before that packed house these two men committed themselves to prohibition. Miss Varnum has spoken one hundred and thirty times since September 1, besides attending the National Convention.

Official Communications.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Hon. John P. St. John.
Miss Henrietta G. Moore.	Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward.
Mrs. Marian B. Baxter.	Mrs. R. J. Trego.
Rev. C. H. St. John.	Mrs. S. M. Perkins.
Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.	Mother Stewart.
Miss I. C. DeVelling.	Mrs. M. L. Wells.
Rev. W. H. Boole, D.D.	Mr. A. G. Wolfenbarger.
Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.	Prof. A. B. Huckins.
Major E. T. Scott.	Mrs. E. T. Scott.

For dates and terms of all the above, address the

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Colorado—Springfield, per Mrs. R. C. Johnston, for children's bands, 80 cents.

Connecticut—Meriden, Hon. Isaac C. Townsend, $100.

Illinois—Normal Park, Mrs. L. L. Gifford, mite-box, $7.60; Evanston, Mrs. T. C. Reiley, mite-box, $1.07; Hoopeston W. C. T. U., $1; Rockford, Mrs. M. L. Brown (veteran), $1; Newton W. C. T. U., mite-boxes. $5.85; Aurora W. C. T. U., $5; Quincy, Mrs. Elizabeth Leebrick (veteran), $1; Roscoe, Mrs. E. A. Lundy, 70 cents; Plainfield, Mrs. H. A. Wood, $3.65; Oakland Park, Loyal Temperance Legion, 90 cents; Chicago Loyal Temperance Legion, Leavitt St. Congregational Church, $1.34; Mrs. R. M. Clark, mite-box, $4; Mrs. H. R. Smith, mite-box, $2.03.

Indiana—Westfield W. C. T. U. sent $2 August, 1888, lost in mail.

Iowa—Vail, Mrs. A. Platt, mite-box, $2; College Springs, Mrs A. W. Stebbins, mite-box, $3; Washington, Mrs. Lizzie Duff, $5.25.

Kansas—Junction City, Mr. and Mrs. E. Gunn, 50 cts.

Maine—Union W. C. T. U., $25.

Massachusetts—Cohasset Loyal Temperance Legion, 57 cents; W. C. T. U. mite-boxes, $3.11; Becket, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Alger, $2.

Michigan—Sturgis, Mrs. J. A. Kyte (veteran), $100,

Minnesota—St. Paul Central W. C. T. U., $25; Minneapolis, Mrs. S. S. Sickels, $50.

Missouri—Wellsville Baby Band, $3; W. C. T. U. mite-boxes, $5.50; Sedalia, Mrs. E. E. Robison, mite-box $3.65; Palmyra Baby Band, $10.65.

Nebraska—Wakefield, Allie May Boyle, 10 cents.

North Dakota—Baby Band, Hillsboro, $1.

New Hampshire—Laconia, Mrs. Eliza Scott, $1.

New Jersey—Loyal Temperance Legion, Dudley, $4; Vineland, Mrs. E. C. Hardenburgh, $5.

New York—Fulton, Mrs. C. G. Case, $13; Spencer Baby Band, 40 cents; Syracuse Baby Band, $1.50; Merisfield Wealtha, Emma and John R. Ward, $1 each; Union Springs, mite-boxes, per E. L. Comstock, $11.50; New York City, Kate Sanborn, $12.

Ohio—Van Wert, Mrs. S. S. Webster; Savannah mite-boxes, $6.72; N. Ridgeville, Mrs. J. Hostlander, $1; Piqua, Mattie Weddell, mite-box, $4.43; Cadiz, Mattie Phillips, $1.

Pennsylvania—Moosic, mite-boxes, Loyal Temperance Legion, $6.10, entertainment Loyal Temperance Legion, $4.85; W. C. T. U. mite-boxes, $6.50.

Tennessee—Tullahoma, mite-box, Mrs. J. F. Maynard, $5.

Wisconsin—Hudson, Mrs. Huldah Nye, $1; Waukegan Baby Band and Cherub Band, $2.65; Mrs. I. B. Tobey, Mrs. Helen Berry, Mrs. M. J. Brown, Mrs. J. R. Lyon, Mrs. J. W. Lewis, Mrs. W. E. Partridge, Mrs. G. H. Brean, Mrs. W. H. Ellis, Mrs. Cyrus Newton, $1 each. Mrs. L. Warren, A. S. Sherman $2 each; others, $4.35; Racine, Baby Band, $2.90; Loyal Temperance Legion, $2.55; Industrial School, $1; J. R. Bickel, R. S. Robinson, Mrs. Conroe, Mrs. H. W. Hurlburt, Miss Emma Sage, Mrs. R. Skewes, Mrs. F. Jager, Mrs. H. Warner, Mrs. H. Morris, Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. S. Rees, $1 each; Mrs. J. P. Corse, Mrs. S. C. Johnson, $2 each; Mr. H. Mitchell, Mrs. E. E. Crosby, $5 each; others $5.70.

Vermont—Baby Band, St. Johnsbury, $2.

Sales, 85 cents.

The name of Mrs. A. E. H. Doyon, of Madison, Wis., was incorrectly given Dogan.

February 14, 1890. ESTHER PUGH.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

★ Star Offer Workers. ★

We give below the names of the friends who have thus far agreed to work under the star offer plan. Send for full particulars and join their number:

Mrs. M. E. Vail, Graniteville Mo.
Mabel Wilson, Pardeeville, Wis.
Mrs. J. F. Wilson, Corinth, Miss.
Mrs. H. H. Andrews, Virden, Man.
L. E. Allyn, Scranton, Ohio.
Mrs. L. A. Breckenridge, Mercer, Pa.
Mae C. Baker, Warsaw, Ind.
Mrs. A. P. Brong, Addison, N. Y.
A. V. Boulter, Brighton, Ill.
Mrs. L. A. Browne, Arkoe, Mo.
Mrs. M. E. Butler, Butler, Mo.
Mrs. R. T. Bond, Fayette, Mo.
Mrs. M. G. Crosby, Ransomville, N. Y.
Myrta A. Cole, Warren, Pa.
Mr. E. M. J. Cooley, Lincoln, Neb.
Mrs. E. J. Curtis, Madison, Wis.
M. S. R. Catkins, Rawson, N. Y.
Cora B. Day, Etchison, Md.
Mrs. Helen Durfee, Binghamton, N. Y.
Mrs. E. L. Edes, Plymouth, Mass.
Mary E. Fisher, De Land, Fla.
Mrs. H. H. Grover, El Dorado, Kan,
Mrs. E. M. Grant, Crowley, La.
Mrs. A. A. Green, Minneapolis, Minn.
Julia Hendrick, Greenville, Ill.
Mrs. A. E. Hershiser, Wakeman, Ohio.
Mrs. A. M. Hood, Big Rapids, Mich.
Mrs. S. L. Helfenstein, North Greece, N. Y.
Mrs. R. R. Hancock, Dubuque, Ia.
Jessie M. Himes, Normal, Ill.
Mrs. G. W. Key, Oak Park, Ill.
Abbie R. Keach, Olneyville, R. I.
Mrs. E. J. Lair, Shelbina, Mo.
B. S. Loomis, Pawlet, Vt.
H. M. Leonard, De Land, Fla.
Mrs. M. J. McCanon, University Place, Ia.
Mrs. John McNeil, Stowes Hill, N. Y.
Mrs. J. H. Molloy Ishpeming, Mich.
Sarah A. Moore, McCandless, Pa.
Mrs. Helen F. Parlin, Des Moines, Ia.
Miss Addie Porter, Warren, Ohio.
Mrs. L. C. Pitts, Olean, N. Y.
Mrs. L. B. Smith, Ottawa, N. Y.
Mrs. Iadora Spencer, Manchester.
C. T. Southward, Mt. Sterling, Ohio.
Mrs. C. M. Spears, Wessington Springs, S. D.
Cassie Stewart. Moorestown, Mich.
Gertrude Thompson, Spartansburg, S. C.

Information Wanted!

We give below a list of names, and tearfully ask some one to tell us where they live! One lady has three times ferociously commanded us to stop her paper by writing the order on the margin of her paper and sending it back. The yellow slip does not give the postoffice, and if our indignant friend thinks we are going to hunt through 80,000 names to find out where she lives she is greatly mistaken. We prefer to have her uncorked vials of wrath! If we can possibly find out where these people live we will stop the paper—short: Mrs. E. P. Cox, North street; Mrs. D. Simmerson, Mrs. W. E. Young, Mrs. C. S. Pringle, Mrs. L. M. Bailey, Mrs. Frank Cook, Mrs. Mary L. Seaman, Box 150; Mrs. J. E. Russell, Mrs. Eber R. Butler, Irene C. Raidy, Mrs. D. Waldron, 512 Gaudy street.

Senator Blair's "Temperance Movement" is absolutely non-partisan, non-factional, non-sectarian in its character; it includes the representatives of all methods of work, all shades of opinion, all sections of the country, all points of temperance annals, and is not limited by color or race. Send for the territory you would like to canvass. The plan of Senator Blair's "Temperance Movement" is broad and comprehensive. It is designed to cover the whole range of temperance discussion, from the first appearance of alcohol in the world's history, down to the latest opinions of the most eminent physicians; the entire range of temperance effort from the first philipic of Dr. Rush, and the first sign of Washingtonian agitation down to the white-ribbon movement and the political activities of 1888.

A publisher who wrote us for control of "Glimpses of Fifty Years" in his own state, said: "We have not seen the book, but having watched Miss Willard's career, we know that she NEVER DISAPPOINTS. The book will be in great demand from Maine to California." The following was fulfilled, the book is in great demand. Send for terms to agents if you want to make some money for yourself.
Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC { At Mt. Carroll (Ill.) Seminary, is complete and thorough. Expenses less than in large cities. Special course in Literature free. Send for an "Oread"

ASTHMA CURED. FREE A trial package by mail to sufferers. Dr. R. SCHIFFMAN, St. Paul, Minn.

CATALOGUE FREE For Agents, Illustrating Useful Household articles & good selling Novelties. LAUBE COOKER CO., PARK RIDGE, ILL.

New Hygienic Treatment. Hitherto there has been nothing like it. Strange that the discovery has not been made sooner. Send 2c. stamp for pamphlet. A. Miller, M. D., 172 Ashland Ave., Chicago.

WANTED ACTIVE PARTY-SALARY $100—to represent ASSOCIATION incorporated to supply, at co-operative prices, general merchandise and articles for home and family use, in each small city, town and place. Paid up Certificates $100.000 CASH. 80.000 members. CREDIT WELL RATED. References Exchanged. Empire Co-operative Association (P. O. Box 1610) N.Y.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure sick-headache.

Dr. Talmage.

This eminent divine possesses to a more than ordinary degree the power of arresting the attention and gaining the hearts of his hearers: the multitudes who flock to hear him preach, go in the confidence that they will be edified and instructed. The public regard with the same degree of confidence the announcements and most liberal offers of the prominent Soap Manufacturing firm of J. D. Larkin & Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and the quotation made by them in another column is most apropos as you will see by carefully reading the advertisement.

Why not make everyone happy now as well as at "Christmas time" by sending for this "Mammoth Christmas Box" the price of which is only six dollars. You will be ready for your Spring campaign of house-cleaning by having a supply of Boraxine and first class soap on hand, and the useful and beautiful gifts will keep the tempers of all sweet during the ordeal.

OUR BUSINESS SHOWED A LARGER INCREASE IN 1889 THAN FOR 18 PREVIOUS YEARS. WHY?

HERE'S A FEW REASONS!

(1) Very popular patterns of cloth. Styles shown only by us.
(2) Improved system of cutting, customer picking out his own shape from 10 examples, in addition to sending measures.
(3) 52 patterns, cut from cloth itself, to select from.
(4) Every garment guaranteed in all points—money promptly refunded for any cause.
(5) Entire outfit as shown above, sent FREE upon application, post-paid.
(6) Increase of our branch stores as far South as New Orleans, and West to Chicago, successfully competing for fine city trade.
(7) Thousands of people telling each other of our honorable treatment of customers, and excellent wear and fit of our clothing.

The promise for 1890 is very bright. We shall strive hard to deserve it.

PLYMOUTH ROCK PANTS CO.

Address all mail to Headquarters, 11 to 17 Eliot St. Annex, 695 Washington St., and 18 Summer St., Boston, Mass.
Branches: 285 Broadway, New York; 943 Penn. Ave., Washington, D. C.; 72 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.; 914 Main St., Richmond, Va.; 225 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md.; 110 Canal St., New Orleans, La.; 104 Montgomery St., Montgomery, Ala.; 39 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.; Burnside Bldg., Worcester, Mass.; Hotel Gilmore, Springfield, Mass.; 198 Westminster St., Providence, R. I.; Old Register Bldg., New Haven, Conn.; 106 No. Main St., Concord, N. H.; 170 River St., Troy, N. Y.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.

ALL ABOUT NEW STATE OF WASHINGTON Send stamp for Catechism. ESHELMAN, LLEWELLYN & CO., Seattle.

OREGON THE LAND OF BIG RED APPLES. The famous Willamette Valley. The best climate in the United States. Write for circulars to the Western Oregon Land Co., Monmouth, Polk Co., Oregon. J. G. CROUCH, Sec'y.

PROHIBITION HOMES How to secure them and where. Send for Prospectus East Tennessee Land Company; Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres. Full particulars free. Ad. A. A. Hopkins, Sec, 96 Broadway, N. Y. City.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

WHY
PAY RETAIL PRICES
WHEN YOU CAN
BUY AT WHOLESALE
WHATEVER YOU
EAT, WEAR OR USE.
WE HAVE NO AGENTS.
Write for full Catalogue Sent FREE.
H. R. EAGLE & CO.,
Farmers' Wholesale Supply House,
68 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

BABY CARRIAGES Direct from Factory, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Express charges prepaid to any place within 300 miles of Chicago. $3 to $8 saved on each carriage or you need not pay for them. Send 2c. stamp for illustrated catalogue. Thousands of carriages shipped yearly to families direct. The largest factory and finest goods in the world.
SENT C. O. D. G. L. Spencer's STYLE

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Central Music Hall, Chicago.

VAUGHAN'S CHICAGO PARKS FLOWERS, IN SEEDS, PLANTS, BULBS.

We grow the Largest Collection in the West of newest Chrysanthemums, new Hardy Lawn Plants, Hardy Bedding Roses, "Lincoln Park" Bedding Plants, in Cannas, Geraniums, Coleus, etc. (400,000 Tuberose Bulbs.) Many of these are not offered elsewhere. All are fully described in our new FREE Catalogue, the most Complete, Handsome and Conservative Seed Book of the year. For one dollar we send prepaid nine real novelties: Rose, Madam Hoste; Fuchsia, Mrs. Hill; Gladiolus, Snow White; Geranium, La Favorite; Dahlia, Camelliaflora; Carnation, Tidal Wave; Chrysanthemum, Snowball; one New French Canna; one Bulb Spider Lily, with CATALOGUE. Quick time from Chicago everywhere.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, 146 W. Washington St. CHICAGO.

SEEDS Plants, Roses, Shrubs, Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Grape Vines, Small Fruits etc.
EVERYTHING IN THE NURSERY LINE.
RAREST NEW. CHOICEST OLD.
Send ten cents for our illustrated catalogue of about 150 pages, containing a certificate good for ten cents in seeds, etc. Or send for our 32 page abridged catalogue and price-list free.
36 years. 24 greenhouses. 700 acres.
THE STORRS & HARRISON CO., Painesville, Ohio.

PAINLESS EFFECTUAL
BEECHAM'S PILLS
THE GREAT ENGLISH MEDICINE WORTH A GUINEA A BOX
For Weak Stomach—Impaired Digestion—Disordered Liver.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
PRICE 25 CENTS PER BOX.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
B. F. ALLEN & CO., Sole Agents
FOR UNITED STATES, 365 & 367 CANAL ST., NEW YORK,
Who (if your druggist does not keep them) will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price—but inquire first. (Please mention this paper.)

$1 MAY BE WORTH $50
To You if Rightly Invested!

$1 will absolutely save you a fit of sickness. You can't afford a fit of sickness. At the start sickness means nothing but weak vitality; you can get a little out of condition, and before you know it, you are sick. In nineteen cases out of twenty you entirely escape it if you try our Magnetic Shields.

Begin with our little Foot Batteries (insoles); they work wonders for you. Try one pair—only $1. In five minutes your feet and limbs will be warm. The current passes constantly through your body and in a week's time your whole system will be strengthened, those tired sick headaches will disappear, your aches and pains vanish, and you will bless the day you tried Magnetism. We are not asking you to buy our large Shields yet. Try just one pair of our Magnetic Insoles. That's all. Send size of shoe and $1 by mail; or 3 pair for $2. Our new book, "A PLAIN ROAD TO HEALTH," free.
CHICAGO MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

Buyers of Mantels, Fireplace and Tile work will consult their interest by visiting our rooms or sending us their address before purchasing. We furnish a mantel like cut for $25.00 Liberal commission to agents.
THE PAGE MANTEL & GRATE CO.
Charles L. Page, Pres.
Down town show room 22, No. 151 Monroe St., Chicago. See our blower attachment.

CORNISH ORGANS! PIANOS!
FREE on Test Trial anywhere. Any ORGAN or PIANO on your own TERMS.
No pay before you see and try
Send at once for our new 20pp. Illust'd Catalogue FREE to any address.
CORNISH & CO.
Drawer 2,
WASHINGTON, New Jersey.

STANLEY'S Send your own, and address of all book agents you know and we will send you a free copy of his RESCUE OF EMIN
J. S. ZEIGLER & CO., 115 Adams St., Chicago, Illinois. AGENTS WANTED.

Leads All its Competitors. It works either rags or yarn, is Simple, Durable, and Easy to Operate. Price, by mail, Plain, $1; Nickel Plated, $1.50. Satisfaction Guaranteed or money refunded. Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted.
C. W. GRIFFIN & CO., Franklin Falls, N.H.

Candy Free 1 Box Candy, 100 colored pictures 1 pack NEW cards and agents' circulars, all for 6 cents by mail.
Holley Card Co. Meriden Con

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF QUALITY UNSURPASSED TESTED STOCK COMPLETE
GARDEN FLOWER & FARM
PLANTS BULBS SEEDS TOOLS ETC.
READ OUR OFFERS BEFORE BUYING
W. W. BARNARD & CO. CHICAGO
6-8-N CLARK ST.
SUCCESSORS TO HIRAM SIBLEY & CO.
MAILED FREE

MAILED FREE A Catalogue of the Choicest mailing size TREES, FLOWERING SHRUBS, GRAPE VINES and Small Fruits.
The WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

Miss Willard recommends "The Faith that makes Faithful" 8 sermons by Gannett and Jones, $1.00 and 50 cents. Special edition mailed to UNION SIGNAL readers for 20c. Chas. H. Kerr & Co., 175 Dearborn St., Chicago.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

S. S. SINGING BOOKS.

"BEAUTIFUL SONGS:" Our latest, is being received with the most marked favor. Usually when tested with a dozen other books it is selected.

"LIVING FOUNTAIN:" New and very popular. Hundreds of the best schools have adopted it and praise it in unstinted measure.

"MORNING LIGHT:" — STANDARD. THOUSANDS of schools find just what they want in it.

People who prefer noble, warm, Christian sentiment to mere rattling rhymes, and want substantial, stirring and lasting tunes, find their choice in these books. 35 cents each—one sample copy for examination, only 20 cents.

Send for specimen pages of best Singing books for Choir, Singing School, Day School.

S. W. STRAUB & CO., Publishers,
243 State St., Chicago, Ill.

50c PRINTING OUTFIT and 10c MAGIC HAT RACK, ONLY 25c

To get Agents and buyers we will, for 60 days only, send these two valuable articles postpaid on receipt of 25c. silver or stamps. 3 sets 50c., 8 sets $1.00. THIS IS A WONDERFUL OFFER. Outfit used for setting up names, printing cards, marking linen, books, envelopes, papers, etc.; contains 3 alphabets neat type, type holder, indelible ink, pad, tweezers, all in neat case with Directions, full Catalogue and terms. YOU can make MONEY at printing or selling outfits. Agents Wanted. Catalogue Free. Address
INGERSOLL & BRO., 45 Fulton St, N. Y. City

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

Those Initials.
D. W. I.
C. A. I.
ETC.,

are bringing in a wonderful number of answers. It was not meant for a very puzzling puzzle—more as a stirring up process; worked firstrate; too! So many of the answers are extra good that we will have to award a large number of first prizes, although the offer was to give to one only. The paper will be sent free to those whose answers we use. Nearly all give the correct answers, some stumble over the

T. M. O. P. N.

and say "Too much of partisan nonsense." or some such answer. Here are some capital contrasts:

Before Subscribing.

"Don't want it.
Can't afford it.
Too many other papers now.
No time to read it."

After Subscribing.

No. 1.—
D. W. I., "Delighted with it.
C. A. I., Cordially admire it.
T. M. O. P. N., Truths many outside people need.
N. T. T. R. I., Nice time to recommend it."

No. 2.—
"Don't want information?
Can afford indifference?
Temperance mothers oppose prohibition news?
1. No time to restrain intemperance?
2. Never thus thoughtlessly refuse information."

No. 3.—
"The paper successfully
Deals with impurity.
Chases away ignorance.
Teaches mankind of politics non-sexual.
Nears temperance's triumphant reign—
Io!—"
Here are some other answers:

Don't Want It.

"Ought not to be without it.
Read a few copies and you will.
Shows a lack of interest in the grandest movement of the present time.
You would if you knew what was in it."

Can't Afford It.

NONSENSE!

"I would rather wear plainer clothing or use plainer food than do without THE UNION SIGNAL.

"It is a marvel of cheapness, and its quality is such that you cannot afford to be without it.

"Take it awhile, you'll then think you cannot afford to do without it. That is the way I feel."

Too Many Other Papers Now.

"Don't doubt it, but not like this.

"Drop one of the 'too many,' and replace it with THE UNION SIGNAL. You'll not regret it.

"Sure that all of them have the best of reading for your children? This paper is a pure one.

"Too many of the wrong kind. Yes. Get one of the right kind by getting THE UNION SIGNAL.

"But none, I am sure, that you would value as much. It makes my life possible, yea, pleasant, along with my Bible and home letter."

No Time To Read It.

"Better take time, and thereby be better informed on the Prohibition question.

"Plenty of short, pithy articles, notes and paragraphs. You wouldn't miss the time taken, and it would be well spent.

"You don't know the inspiration for good you are missing.

"What is time for but to improve ourselves and help others? Take some of the time wasted in idle talk or unprofitable reading.

"Get in sympathy with God and the best women of the land by reading THE UNION SIGNAL."

We give these answers and may give others, they are certainly practical and helpful. Don't take the first "No" for your answer. A strong fort was once destroyed because a cannon was aimed and fired steadily at one spot. It took some days to make a slight impression only, but the result was victory at last. Good natured importunity, try it!

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

DENISON, TEXAS.

Your kind remembrance, in the form of the very pretty pin inscribed thereon with the talismanic letters "W. C. T. U." is indeed welcome, and the first one in my humble judgment placed on the market which is worthy of a hold upon the fold of white-ribboners. SARAH C. ACHESON.

FOR CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, CATARRH, ALL PAIN AND ALL INFLAMMATIONS.
POND'S EXTRACT
IS THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE CHEST, AND THE COMFORT OF MOTHERS. BE SURE TO GET THE GENUINE.

HOLMAN'S PADS.
Holman's Liver Pads cure Malaria,
Holman's Liver Pads cure Biliousness,
Holman's Liver Pads cure La Grippe.
All druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of $2.00.
HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.,
81 John St., N. Y.

DELAVAU'S WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY
Dispels whoop, allays cough and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

A-CORN SALVE.
Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

DEAFNESS CURED And NOISES IN HEAD entirely overcome by Peck's Pat. Imprv'd TUBULAR EAR CUSHIONS Whispers, Conversation and Music heard. Comfortable; Self-Adjusting and Unseen. Successful when all other Remedies FAIL. SOLD ONLY by F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, Cor. 14th, New York. CALL or WRITE for ILLUST'D BOOK of PROOFS, FREE, NO AGENTS

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

AGENTS wanted. Household invention. Sells rapidly. Terms free. Low & Rewell Manufacturing Co., 135 Public Square, Cleveland, O

RIDGE'S FOOD The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Used everywhere. Not a medicine, but a steam-cooked food, suited to the weakest stomach. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co., (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

BABY CARRIAGES!

We make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can, therefore, do better with us than with a dealer. We send Carriages to all points within 700 miles of Chicago free of charge. Send for catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.,
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam.

For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express
A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $30.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

GHICAGO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR KINDERGARTNERS.
Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Principal,
Reopens Sept. 16th, 1889. For particulars apply to Miss Alice McRoy, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th, Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike.
G. H. La Fetra, - - - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting N. Y. Turkish Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

HEAVEN AND HELL, by EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, 416 pages, paper cover. Mailed prepaid for 14 Cents by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, 20 Cooper Union, New York City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS.
Room 91, No. 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
Hollow Tile and Fireproofing Experts.

$50 CUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

DR. SETH ARNOLD'S COUGH KILLER!
Cures Lung Affections.
"Dr. Seth Arnold's Cough Killer cured me of a severe lung affection which, according to good physicians in this state, had reached an incipient stage of consumption."—M. D. Stratton, Watertown, N. Y
Druggists, 25c, 50c and $1 per bottle.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

Send 6c. for sample Silk Dress Goods Chicago Silk & Dress Goods Co., 154 La Salle St., Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $2 15 FREE. Lines not under horses' feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y

$12.50 Buys a $65 Improved Singer 60 days' trial. Free Catalogue. Warranted five years. SEWING MACHINE OXFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

HARPER BROS. & CO., Grocers.
Established 1873. 90 State Street, Chicago. Opposite Marshall Field's. Send for Price List.
NO LIQUORS SOLD.

OPIUM Morphine or Whisky Habit cured in 11 to 21 days. Home or Sanitarium Treatment. Address The Compound Oxygen Ass'n, Ft. Wayne, Ind

PILES CURED IN 3 TO 6 DAYS.
Self-treatment at home. No surgery, no pain. Large package, $2 guaranteed to cure any ordinary case. Trial size $1. Treatise on Piles sent free. The Globe Medicine Co., Box 715 Cincinnati, O.

$60 SALARY $40 EXPENSES IN ADVANCE allowed each month. Steady employment at home or traveling. No soliciting. Duties delivering and making collections. No Postal Cards. Address with stamp, HAFER & CO., Piqua, O.

LADY AGENTS WANTED—ALSO MEN. Two immense new specialties; 1 lady made $27 before dinner, another $16 the first hour; extraordinary opportunity; proof free. Ad., LITTLE & CO., 214 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WARNER'S
"CORALINE CORSETS"
are the best-fitting and most satisfactory Corset made. For sale everywhere.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

CURLING IRON mailed for 10cts. To make new customers. Wood handle; non-conducting thumb spring; polished steel. Worth 50c. Big catalogue free. A. T. Evans & Co., Chicago.

INFANTS' And children's wardrobes made to order. Imported Madras dresses a specialty. Send 2c. stamp for samples and prices. H. J. SPRAGUE & CO., 43 and 45 Franklin St., Chicago.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHALS UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made. Circulars and prices on application to mf'rg's. A. M. HOWES & CO., 65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND.
Something new for comfort; suspends from the sides; adjustable strap; only one fastening. Highly indorsed. Agents wanted. Price 75 cents single one. Sent on receipt of price, postage prepaid. Circulars sent free. Waist measure, sizes 22 to 30. BLISS MFG. CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn.

BUYERS CATALOGUE SHOULD HAVE OUR 486 PAGE All kinds of Merchandise at WHOLESALE PRICES Write for Particulars. The Cash Buyers' Mercantile Union, 162 LA SALLE ST. Chicago, Ill.

SALESMEN WANTED AT ONCE.—A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line in the world. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For full terms address, Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., or Cincinnati, O.

